

ISAIZU TRIBE TITAN ROADS

MINDSET OF THE TITANS

The road of becoming a Titan

Becoming a Titan is something that is not for everyone. It starts between the age of 30-40 years old both at men and women who have been through a lot of growth in a short time set in the terms of mind and hardness of body by training. Therefore they possess double the power and wisdom the “warriors” and “kings” under us have, because that is a road they have already taken years ago in their life. Titans are tanky build people (fat & muscle both, so always strong) and their strengths are trackable by at least one of their parents/ancestors for being Titans also back in the days. They stand out of the box and often look strange, out of the ordinary to people, sometimes even nuts. Normal people think about Titans as crazy persons. People who are too smart & violent to live in their artificial created society & system. None of this is true. Titans are sensitive also and feel love for nature, animals and often only a small group of people around them. The intelligence, wisdom and training level of a Titan is very high. This is why the Titan always stands out of the box and never fits into that of anyone for pleasing the person in any way. The Titan knows its worth already and does not give a fuck what other people think about it. The Titan always gets judged by others opinions instead of facts.

Your inner power & outer power

You need to start with your inner power, enhancing it with years of meditation and then your outer power doing martial arts/combat sports controlling it all together at once into synergy. This is something every Titan is capable of doing. They are balanced and have full control over both unless they get angry, calling in destructive power, but that mostly does not happen without any good reason as the intelligence level is high and they are not easily provoked easily by other people's self confidence issues & drama. The damage a Titan gives is high, involves no limitations in movement, mercy or the use of any weaponry. They can handle almost any kind of weaponry at any time and show great skills in real combat.

Not the super human/soldier road

Today we see it all over the internet. People searching for the superhuman road (having special skills) or the supersoldier road (which mostly references to the CIA Mkultra programs for creating assassins/agents/Manchurians). The Titan has bypassed both and knows about all the programs, the things that are real either fake inside of it. The supersoldier/cat kitten Mkultra/Monarch programs are special kind of programming that happens overall inside the human world, by stereotyping, suggestion and all psychological pre-suggestion, conditioning and behavior modifying. The Titan is always good at infiltration, espionage and possess an extraordinary skillset anyway. His/her combat skills, hacking skills and tactical/technical skillset stands out above what is learnable in school, because the Titan has the experience and did the testing before. So he/she knows the ways around things and putting things at the Titan's hand for full control and modification. Titans already did the supersoldier road and know the CIA's dirty mind control tricks. They are also aware of the cops/rats interrogation, provocation and infiltration methods and bogus investigations and know about the false evidence implantation and infragards setups with false independent witnesses.

Being happy & satisfied always

Titans know happiness is just a word just like satisfaction and it all starts in the mind. Being satisfied means being grateful for anything we have available. Something which most people are not today, grateful. Because they want more and more. Titans are able to create what they need, themselves. Filling in the gaps in many ways. Also technically in this age of devices and information in every tactical form they will fix things to be useful for them. It has become a marketing method to keep people unsatisfied and lure them for getting more and more like the big webshops do today. Things are not taken to the grave Titans remind themselves of this. The Titan has more love for experiences and creating a new add-on skillset than for materialism. Anything he/she can learn and wants to know they will go for it, to understand it, no matter how difficult it is. Do not let other people or external factors keep you unsatisfied.

Grow by experience & learning

Growing can only happen by experience this means the Titan has made many mistakes already. He understands nobody is perfect and could be on the same road to become a Titan also with another set of specialisms and skills that are just as important to contribute to the world of freedom.

Skip bullshit rules & dogma

We often see Titan crushing bullshit rules, because they hate them. People making up rules into their advantages makes the Titan sick. He hates dogma, to stick to believe systems without improving anything. People who cannot grow and are stigmatizing not even become a warrior or king and yet dreaming of becoming a Titan is something the Titan finds to be pathetic. Everyone has set in immense work to get where they are.

Ignore haters & toxic people

Because the Titan stands out and has many skills, there are a lot of people who hate the Titan or think they can take abuse of the Titan. But the Titan already knows everything about it, before they are even starting to kiss his/her ass. The Titan recognizes toxic people around him/her and wants to remove them from the Titan's life as soon as possible. The Titan will never have regrets of doing so, as he knows he/she can now grow faster. The Titan will always have people around him/her who have bad intentions or are either on the same level. So Titans with the all-seeing eye enabled called "the eye of Horus" are better off in the end. Their knowledge on that subject needs to be optimal for the Titan to live a long life if not she/he can otherwise expect death to arrive much sooner.

Energy vampires are everywhere

People constantly chattering and talking shit about themselves and others, skipping what a Titan has to say (let's talk about something else because the subject gets too hot for me) will be banned forever from a Titan's life. The Titan sees energy vampires, those who cost unnecessary energy for the Titan as a threat. The Titan is able to use violence on such people easy to get back his energy level, destroying the energy vampire(s) together with everything they have behind them to prevent energy leaks.

Your health is everything

Health is everything for a Titan. Taking vitamins, proteins, eating well, training, meditation, weight lifting and drinking a lot of water are a must for a Titan otherwise the Titan will collapse. When the Titan gets sick in any way, he prefers natural medication above that of the pharmaceutical industry. Training with weights is also a part of a Titan's life as resistance training makes physically stronger. It keeps the Titan's power optimized.

Digital minimalism & frugal setup

The Titan is very smart and has his/her own encrypted digital setup that is portable for him/her to take around the world. The Titan works effectively having just 1 laptop, 1 camera, 1 smartphone if he wants to express his/her creativity or connect, as Titans are creative people. They love to express that creativity and intelligence. The Titan knows about possible addictions so he/she keeps control over his digital usage in secure and time managed ways. He/she keeps things minimal, frugal and portable so everything the Titan needs could be in 1 backpack to be taken around.

Martial arts & meditation

Martial arts/combat sports are a big standard for the Titans. Until their last breath Titans will be practicing it anywhere they are in every situation. To calm themselves down they also use forms of meditation and relaxation. Because life of a Titan is hard. A Titan believes in allroundness when it comes to combat sports and finds legal commercial ring fights to be fake with limitations. Titans use no rules & weaponry also, as in real life applies everywhere. Titans hate the (fake) show martial arts business.

Feeling powerful every day

Feeling that Titan power starts with the Titan not skipping his/her regular training intervals. Therefore the Titan feels powerful in every moment even when getting sick or old the power of a Titan remains. The mindset of the Titan being effective and powerful overall contributes to this. When moments of laziness appear the Titan must push itself over it to still practice the movements of the Titan could become sick if he skips too much of consistent trainings.

Security around the house

Security by installing IP camera's is normal for the Titan. The Titan loves to see what happens in his/her home when the Titan is not around but also to look who is standing in front of the door & watch his garden with a camera on remote. The Titan always has some kind of pet that protects an area in his life. Titans also love hidden MicroSD enabled cams in sunglasses and clothing button and are fast setting up remote viewing/listening hidden video cams and mics.

Using encryption in a digital age

The Titan is able to write his/her own encryption algorithms on paper and prefers any form of Linux above any kind of operating system, combined with VPN and a Macchanger. The Titan is well known around the darkweb on his/her nickname and has an undeniable reputation that can never be taken down by authorities in any way. Titans keep their nickname a secret.

Creating multiple income streams

The Titan is smart enough to create multiple income streams and knows the IRS is limited in checking into crypto/online payments account, as they only have real legal access to bank accounts. The Titan will never tell what he/she exactly has running online and it is impossible for others to find out also unless the Titan tells it himself/herself in public.

Intelligence traps & infragards

The Titan knows everything about intelligence traps, infragards and remote neural monitoring with Zerztzung. He/she will be spreading that information until corruption has been caught, because Titans do not like corruption at authorities in any way. Jealousy, hate, envy, greed, wannabeeness it can come from everyone and from everywhere.

Learn about mind control

Mind control is a big issue and locks everyone inside his/her own little jail. Therefore <https://isaizu.com/targetedindividuals.php> that info becomes important to understand how hard it can be abused combined with neuro technologies and EEG waves altering. Titans are trained to skip psyops.

The governments control psyops and Zerztzung using <https://patents.google.com/patent/US4877027A/en> and <https://patents.google.com/patent/US3951134A/en> for MKultra & Monarch creating assassins, mind slaves, Manchurian candidates, false flag terrorists, suicidal psycho's, broken down homeless people to example for the state & people and to serve the system inducing fear. Those participating in their rumor bases non-evidence facted routines of conditioning, transhumanism and behavior modding others in their advantage have no life anymore when the info comes out on the names and people who participated having to watch their backs their entire lifetime. Of course the program will fail when all this info together is known to the person:

<https://www.targetedevidence.com/> |
<https://www.verwardepersonen.nl/> | <https://rats-nosnitch.com/> |
<https://www.stopeg.nl/> | <https://isaizu.com/targetedindividuals.php> |
Rats: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Fr8u_rSQcVs
Snowden: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=YKnVcjXfJs4>

De-Sensitizing, Disrupt, Discredit, Deceive, Divide, Infiltrate, Setup. This is their scheme.

SNOWDEN is right about everything on remote neural monitoring they cannot do ANYTHING with it then talk and condition you to believe their BS rules and things for their own advantage!

- The operators are fools & bitches actors and are lying 24/7
- The psyop is a personal script made from any data from your (phone, EEG, internet) to harass, condition and cook you
- Thought processing is all they have they cannot see through eyes or from above that is for the extra control & interrogation tactic
- Thoughts are not facts so the EEG data cannot be used in court
- As they can give dreams with the mind altering patent making EEG waves the interpretation of the same EEG waves are the same as in awake state, meaning they can give you any dream and then declare it as fact falsely happened in awake state, convincing others (this totally breaks down the programming)
- They have a Scientology alike attitude with police alike and military traits but are working for the government actually
- We can see they try to put people in stress and depression by 24/7 neuro chatterbots which is actually not real B2B communication as you can hear who is speaking it means that it is artificial so must be through the Cochlea either Microwave auditory effect or bone sound conduction either laser the EEG wave comm is separate and is decoding EEG waves which are the same for every human being their program tries to keep you looped in negative commenting mimicking mental disorders

-Disrupt, Discredit, Deceive, Divide, Infiltrate. Spread hate

& setup people against each other. In their own advantage, profit or as pre-caution to use later on, creating rumors & theaterplay trying to desensitize the target to have no feeling so it can be neuro primed to have an altered state on trigger for violence in the subconscious mind (dark NLP) without the target being fully aware

-The State fully lives on their examples to induce fear and "the need of State" through law enforcement on people

-Law enforcement, mental care, CPS, IRS all agencies will work together in this always trying to discredit you saying you are mental either confused or in psychosis

-They will try to keep you on the edge in a state of agitation hoping you will trouble with others instead of them and while they are remotely cooking you into aggression by trigger words, in the same time trying to induce fear, they want you to be weak when you might by accident in an uncontrollable situation walk by their friends

-The program is recognizable by getting new fake neighbors and people around you starting a Zerztzung program (gangstalking) around you making up false reports and accusations to prevent you from growing otherwise than working (like in having an online business with payouts in crypto or any valuta in a way outside of banks that are not checkable for the IRS). Of course then they will try to label you mental, crazy and paranoia/imagining things also.

-Removing you from family and friends is essential in their tactics to attack you as they want you to have as less support as possible but if you are smart enough & your family and friends are intelligent enough most of them will understand that you are in an anti - activist/whistleblower/counterintel program that tries to behavior mod and condition you with intelligence psyops programs to use and destroy you (MKUltra/Monarch, assassins, Manchurian candidates, false flag operation, suicides) using psychiatry and other tools (read: government agencies and intelligence) to keep in power making you a throwaway replaceable candidate and enemy of the state.

-They also whisper in jails and mental institutions to look for people they can use for their dirty jobs, promising them money or social security, people who have no life. People that are easy influencable and recruitable like you see in the news for shootouts.

- People like Myron May, Aaron Alexis, Rishi K., Tristan van der Vlis, where all victims of this program commonly used by intelligence, infragards, CIA & FBI agents or snitches/rats

- Staged accidents with whole community policing groups, infragards to disable or kill people (like staged car accidents or poisoning) are also common they always use false independent witnesses

- To bring you in bad health both physical and mental is something they really like, just like taking people who you love away from your life trying to hurt you (spouse, family members, kids) things like trying you to condition you so that you do not train or get enough sleep and rest is part of that scheme

- Their program only fails when you stop listening to their bullshit and understand all the mechanisms they use for conditioning and behavior modding because their ultimate goal is to kill you on remote without having to lift a finger because they cannot therefore the whispering at others in jail/institutions and homeless on streets

- They want to take down everything you have build in life because they have feelings of anger, jealousy, hate, envy & greed against you. False accusations and reports are normal, they will try to win by pressuring you while in police interrogations. You will learn that they never have real evidence that they could use in court so instead they ask you to act with them so they can convince other people to take you down and participate in their Zerzetzung.

- Weaken you down physically and mentally by 24/7 neurochatter, trying to reduce self esteem, trying to discredit you, so hoping to make you walk like a zombie on the streets while they friends walk by is essential for them. So instead of listening to any bullshit, make sure multiple people that stand at your side, have their boobytraps also and use violence to get back at them, because you can. Showing them the same kind of no mercy they did with you. Because once you know this all, your strength and energy will increase immense, just like your power to punch, kick, stab, aim.

- Again making you weak and mentally disorderd is their main purpose so they can call cops/mental care/get away with things.

- The programs adapt on what kind of person you are, but is always about getting you in control and submission using advanced tactical psychological tactics and is specific per person
- Giving remote heart attacks using nanobots making blood clutters going to the arteries of the heart and creating all kind of medical problems on purpose to be cured so they test on it or to get DNA matching organs
- Cancer induction by cooking cells remotely at IRS tax unpayers/debt alike
- While discrediting you they want to have a STORY a story about you they can tell and convince towards everyone, this is their version where you must be put down and be discredited and slandered in all your being + skills + abilities in their advantage or advantage of the state/company/organization they work for. While most times you are dealing with IRS. government sometimes you are also dealing with companies, individuals (who hired 3rd parties) or organizations like Scientology/Freemason/Mormons alike.

Outsmart government agencies

The government is just a company with sub agencies acting like a mafia. All the tactics I described over the years on the internet they are using and abusing for mass control, testing and depopulation purposes. If you know all the intelligence I have told you about remote neural monitoring and how the system works it will be no problem for you to outsmart it. We are born over the last generations being told to live life a certain way and submit to certain rules. Go to school, get a job, marry, get kids, take your pathetic pension money and die. Then repeat the process and learn your kids the same otherwise we will perform legal kidnapping and try everything to neuro program the children (on school and from others they will learn this too, that you have to submit to the system, seeing it as an authority of the highest level, which is bullshit). Titans think otherwise and see it all as a subtle method of enslavement & mind control.

Stop overthinking & people pleasing

The Titan does not overthink. He/she does not think about the past or future and therefore has a calm mind, exploding in energy when he/she needs it. The Titan can enjoy the present because the Titans knows it has no use to live to overthink about the future or wander in the past. People are like parrots, they copy to learn. The Titans observes and chooses what the Titan really wants to learn, before taking it in the mind, saving it on the human harddisk. The Titan cherishes the good moments of the Titan's past and wipes every bad memory not even remembering it in the past.

Be unstoppable you are a Titan

People will try to stop you from expressing your own opinion. They do not like it that a Titan might be outspoken or publishes information he/she finds to be right. Never let anyone stop you just keep doing what you like. Authorities find the Titan's intelligence frustrating and dangerous. In the name of national security and prevention of revolution they therefore might contact intelligence to take a Titan down. But a Titan is a difficult opponent even for intelligence services.

Be careful trust no one

A Titan must be careful who he/she trust. Many people will act nice in the face of a Titan, acting like friends while they want to stab the Titan in the back, spreading rumors and false information to get the Titan killed.

False accusations & setups

When a Titan has success he/she will experience many false accusations and setup around him/her because they all want to profit from it. From setting people up for community slaughtering the Titan to calling the Titan a criminal or pedophile to triggers others to attack the Titan.

Controlling any addiction

A Titan must never do any alcohol, drugs, smoking or gambling that are the most important ones to not get addicted to. He/she knows their digital limit and time management for electronic devices, so the Titan will always be in full control, before any addiction might happen. This also counts for gaming, shopping & eating. Everything with cause & reason.

Anti stress and anti depression

The Titan skips other people's bullshit to keep his/her mind clean and does not interfere in the private life of others, neither rumors around about other people. The Titan is always looking for ways of relaxation, he/she finds the best relaxation on vacations beneath palm trees or around big forests with a lot of flora and fauna around.

Never showing off

While it might look to others or people who do not have the same skillset the Titan is showing off he/she is not. Titans are just creative and lot to create content. They do not belong to the dark triad of narcissism, Machiavellianism and psychopathy unlike many people think. The Titans knows he/she has many haters because of the way the Titan might behave in natural character. The Titans knows people think about this and a lot of people will try to set up others against a Titan or a group of Titans.

Arrange your copyright online

Copyright claims is something the Titan knows at beginning before publishing. Many will try to attack the Titan's copyright without success.

Nature & animals are your power

The Titan feels love for animals and nature therefore it can draw power from them. Especially animals have a healing effect on a Titan.

Crystal & gemstone enhancement

Crystals are used for healing and meditation by the Titan in an every day setting. The Titans love crystals and gemstones they were here before earth and have immense inner power activators inside of them.

Using placebo for empowerment

Titans can because of their intelligence give placebo to an object, like a bracelet or necklace drawing extra physical power from it. The preferred object for the Titan is silver and never gold. The placebo effect always works to empower a Titan extra.

Mass control & depopulation

The entire system created by the governments is fake. Money does not exist and is created by humans to separate and to control. Diamonds are over valued to prove people are mind controllable, giving high values to rocks. Intelligence agencies make theater plays to induce fear, call upon surveillance and law enforcement, forcing people with fear induction & anchoring to want a controlled state. Mass control, testing & depopulation is all they really care about because the world is over crowded and they use the idea of terrorism and Alien invasion to get away with creating false flag terrorism and attacking people and groups.

Ancient power resides in you

There is a power inside of a Titan so strong that lurks to come out. Yet it keeps suppressing itself, afraid of shame, guilt, making the wrong move. If you do your best now you will end up a Titan later on, strong & indestructible but most of all free and wise.

Lugubrious but so natural

It might seem lugubrious but yet it is normal. Organs all over the place even happens when a bus drives over a biker. Yet we are told we should consult psychiatry for how far a Titan could go in his attacking mechanism. In the criminal world limbs and heads are cut daily. Yet we only see in the media what they want to show us. Mostly a showreel of highlight of succesful cop interceptions of drugs. Violence is everywhere, but media is controlled and shows mostly 1 side of the story. The world is suppressed to such things and yet they are normal and happening, because humans are still animals. Animals even socialized stay animals. But a GRID on us, to suppress it all for the better controlled by law enforcement is what the system builds its foundation on. They even create corrupt snitches (infragards) these days to harass people and perform bogus investigations. The real truth is however that society was build by the weak to suppress the strong and rebellious to control them. Because we are destined to kill each other without a problem (<https://www.psychologytoday.com/intl/blog/the-new-brain/201610/humans-are-genetically-predisposed-kill-each-other>) and yet we are learned over generations and society that gap between weak and strong should not be overridden. The weak setup infragard, boobytraps, tactics with false witnesses so they can entrap the strong, drive them mental, put them in mental ward until they get weakened to get controlled and reprogrammed, either to decide to keep them somewhere forever. Because this natural flow was controlled by human kind, with tactical psychology, “fakely for the better”, we now have more weak people then strong believing in a system that fucks them in the ass, thinking there is somekind of contribution or method, while they are controlled as sheeps themselves to keep such a system alive. Blinded by money, fame and all human flaws that make the grind for more and more until they die.

Brutal interrogation & pressure

Repeatedly asking the same question in different ways (psychological lie detection) and constant interrogation and harassment to make people submit or say things they do not want too, like confessing to a crime they did not commit. Putting you on pressure by threatening and telling you things gathered from data (phone, EEG, internet) only you could know. Or threaten you by family, kids and false evidence that will be allowed in court, something they never have, but a corrupted judge will comply to. The Titan does not fear such things because the truth will come out.

Intelligence agencies & secrets

There are many intelligence agencies these days, from the government, private industry, NGO's and secret ones. They are always smarter & better trained than cops doing covert operations. Deep state has many secrets.

Medical & psy medical testing

There are groups active that want people to get confused and mental for guinea pig testing purposes of new medicines, methods and psychiatric industry enhancements. Cybernetic mind hive teams and A.I. are coming.

Organ, women & child trafficking

Be careful with organ harvesting and women/child trafficking as those are normal assets in 3rd world countries but are also done silently in Western ones. Titans do not get on the operation table unless they have to.

The darkweb & criminal underworld

Anything you want you can get on the Darkweb if you want too. So taking a new ID, buying weaponry or hiring someone. There is no limit to what the darkweb offers. You can pay with crypto being untrackable always. There are a lot of illegal activities to be found, what you people see is just 1% of the top layer of the internet everything below starts with TOR.

Activist, whistleblower & hacktivist

Many people are targeted today for speaking out, either for fighting for the freedom and rights of humans & animals. This is where we can see a form of suppression and a lack for freedom of speech silently applied.

Sabotage, discrediting & espionage

We see it all the time when someone grows in success. There will always be others around trying to bring the person down. Sabotage his/her work or try to discredit the person in every way. Sometimes even spying on the person stealing his/her ideas or trying to setup evidence combined with theater.

The all seeing eye

The secret to see through everything by understanding all there is, people's behavior, strengths and flaws. Judging by profiling, but always right. It is the highest level of control and surveillance that is available. The pyramid system already begun in Ancient Egypt. The Pharaoh, its rulers, assassins and slaves. An old story in a modern package today called government. Every agency has the purpose of controlling you and taking you down. Titans find themselves to stand next to the eye on top.

Believe systems

Believe systems were made to control. Giving us beautiful cultures coming with it, mostly. Yet believe systems are a form of mind control. Used for separation of people, war against each other and many other things amongst that. Just like money, diamonds, oil and valuable resources.

Perception of mind is reality

What your mind perceives as reality, will become your reality. What you see through your eyes, process through your brains and save towards it like a harddisk, randomly accessing that information, becomes essential. You become what you think, you feel what you experience and believe in. So whatever you perceive by your pre-conditioning, is your reality.

Real freedom is under attack

With both David Icke and Alex Jones (infowars) being kicked off social media we can see how control is applied. There are organizations and governments in this world who want a monopoly control on the internet. Even if what they would said would not be true, they could still said it because of freedom of speech. This freedom is always suppressed by bullshit rules and out-of-the-law-book reasons by big corps to suppress and control information flow to the masses. Those who have influence get targeted and brought into control either killed for having their own opinion. This is why many people are afraid to stand up, to wake up.

Social media & internet as a tool

Social media is a nice tool to spread information and opinions. Yet it is used for other reasons also. It often shows a highlight reel of simply moments only of a person's life. People will post the good times, not the bad times. Social media is engineered around the emotions of people. It can be very addicted and give mental depression and stress if the person cannot deal with social media in the right way. Internet was once engineered as an information tool, but is nowadays abused by people, companies, governments, individuals, organizations and intelligence to neuro program people with certain mindsets and expectations. It gives the power to remotely neuro program the mind, pre-condition it to buy, think, fear in a certain way anchored to triggers that can be called upon in real life also (NLP). The psychological effect can be devastating for those whose mind is not strong enough to understand all these mechanism and deprogram themselves to step out of this MATRIX of control. Which is any form of control, the internet, governmental control, control from family/friends, companies trying to control and condition you to get the newest stuff or you will not fit in the crowd, there are many techniques.

Must read books don't skip these

There are some books that you have to read to understand me better about the subject Remote Neural Monitoring, Zerzetzung and mind control overall. How it is applied and pushed upon to make you believe.

These are must read books you can get them anywhere on Amazon for example:

- How to tame a Demon (Dr. Robert Duncan former CIA)
- Project: Soul catcher 2 (Dr. Robert Duncan former CIA)
- Guinea Pigs (Dr. John Hall)
- A new breed (Dr. John Hall)
- Outwitting the devil (Napoleon Hill)
- Banned mind control techniques unleashed (Daniel Smith)
- Legally Kidnapped (Carlos Morales former CPS agent)

You should learn anything about Remote Neural Monitoring, Zerzetzung, Intelligence (CIA & others) psyops & blackops, dark NLP (Anchors, Triggers, Mirroring), hypnotic suggestion, conditioning, behavior modding & psychological warfare because that is what evil is defined at for humans.

Titans maintain only one family

Titans choose 1 partner for a lifetime and never betray or leave their children as they carry the same DNA string making them little Titans too.

Also setup your own servers

In this age where people get kicked off social media I have my own public and private encrypted server for my content (images, text, video) so I can never be taken down. I recommend any Titan to do the same.

iSaiZu awaits you

It is time for you to decide if you are a Titan or not. iSaiZu is a lifestyle for Titans. If you are one you should consider to contact iSaiZu. iSaiZu is named after my children and has become an important asset worldwide.

Stop your theater against us

This is for the people who try to setup, falsely accuse, frame and call authorities upon iSaiZu members and people. Titans are not impressed by mental care, cops, CPS, IRS, intelligence agencies or infragard rats. Your fake theater and authority friends, pushing upon your false reports do us nothing. Because you will walk the street and there are no rules neither limits no matter what function you are in or practicing. This is fact. We are all one and we are with many. We do not fear, we do not forget, we GRID, chain and loop so what you call “karma” always finds its way back to you no matter what, worldwide. We have no regret using violence.

Rise of the Titan pacts

We do pact up with other groups and have many pacts running already. “The enemy of my enemy is my temporary friend” then contact us. Tell us why you are interested in pacting up together with the iSaiZu Tribe.

Do not believe rumors

People have made many false accusations, rumors and tried to put the iSaiZu Tribe in a bad spotlight when they saw its grow spurt. Rumors go around we are assassins, 3rd party hired agents working for foreign intelligence agencies, we are not. We just live a certain life style where martial arts/combat sports/intelligence and self development at a high level is important. Titan is just a “word” to describe the level of strength and experience. We do believe in NGO intelligence (Non Governmental) because we do not agree with what the government’s intelligence agencies and law enforcement with their infragards are doing with neuro technologies and patents (like Remote Neural Monitoring, Zerztzung & Microwave auditory effect hearing either bone conduction patents). Infiltration is not possible within the iSaiZu Tribe because we are too tactical and advanced for the standard ways police & intelligence personnel is trained by the government using their methods both physical and psychological which we already know. We know the government is corrupted because of the way it abuses power, tries to control and fake others into submission, how it uses tactical psychology, dark NLP, personal data to target individuals in its advantage. We are not impressed by it.

This little ebook is free

If someone made you buy it, ask back your money! It may not be sold or copied in any way. I do not have much time lately as I am on the go traveling and spending time with my kids and pets. Just keep up training and meditating for a lifetime and watch your health, enjoy life while is lasts. Also check my Facebook timeline and community tab at YouTube. If you are a Warframe player feel free to also check my Twitch channel. You can contact me if you want but I do not always respond, as many people message me with stupid question they can look up themselves Googling or hater messages on how they would love to kill me for spreading information about Zerztzung and Remote Neural Monitoring the same psyops Snowden from the NSA was also talking about, targeting innocent citizens in advantage of the state, groups inside or agencies.

The rumor about keyloggers

Years ago I was accused of making keyloggers stealth that make screenshots and log keyboard typed data combined with webcam attached images from their laptops and PC's on Windows/Linux going through firewalls and VPN as it is logged locally and then send out to a server at a x interval time. People accused me of having their data and private information. They said I used this information to setup people against each other having killed many people with it. This is not true. I do not know what they are all talking about. People often cannot stand other people being good with computers and therefore rumor around.

Groningen and the Zerzetzung

People know I was put under illegal provokation and surveillance in Groningen Netherlands, under the Remote Neural Monitoring and gangstalking programs that lasted 10 years of illegal government targeted harassment. In these 10 years I know everything about the program and I came to know how a former friend and friends club over there connected to my spouse, went working for mental care and different other agencies. I found the neuro technologies they abused and the patents, I documented evidence even saw how police looked over it on purpose and went on with their confused person, in psychosis and mental psyop. While all kind of remote provokation of the rats no snitch kind took place and interrogation even with giving dreams to test my reaction for in real life, I noticed a lot. EEG data is no evidence, Brain Computer Interface data is all EEG waves and can be altered, copied, modified in every way. I learned EEG waves can be manipulated in the sleep cycle (REM) and used to give dreams with the patents. I noticed how intelligence personnel abused it exactly like Snowden said. And in 10 years of not showing any evidence, trying to make it with theaterplay and pushing me to cooperation so that I would submit to them, was a lost case as I outsmarted the whole psyop.

EEG data will never be evidence in court, they do not have any evidence but will always claim they have without showing any, telling you bullshit they showed others. This because they want to prime a whole local community convincing them you are the bad guy and they need to cooperate towards community slaughter for national security. People out of the ordinary are mostly targeted. But that is discrimination already, because who decides what is “normal”. Society created a stereotype person that submits to the system, goes to work and is “good woman/man” this picture is totally fake. The evil mind of humankind is never: Angelic. It has both the angel and devil available which will show up at anytime. This truth is covered by fake ass psychology for the sake of state, something that is supposed to always be good (but isn't). It applies only to humans as sentient beings, animals follow their instinct and cannot be held accountable for their actions because they do not have the brain capability like humans to be held responsible is even that exists, as in nature, the cavemen were never responsible, they just lived without law enforcement, with the strongest and smartest surviving.

Bitch ass Vietnamese guy

The person claiming he works for the Dutch AIVD (intelligence) while he just has got a mental care patent from a Chinese GGZ Lentis employee in Groningen Netherlands trying to perform conditioning and behavior modding has took a lot of bribe money as criminal informant and became corrupted. He abuses remote neural monitoring, uses his undercover Volksdriver club to play the thug guys and harasses others locally performing infragard/community policing/Zerzetzung tricks. While he plays police with his girlfriend and everyone wants to stab him, he hides out from the public and first watches if the coast is safe to appear, then he gets his camera and records he dares to go anywhere. Yet he did never showed up to my face in my city while I kept going over there many many times for years. I went over there so many times and he did not showed up with his fake farmer boy friends, he has not reputation to keep up reacting like this while talking big words from his mouth. This shows how these people hide behind agencies and the government hoping that yelling “help, crazy confused person” and then calling the cops is the solution for them. But as you can read on all this information, it will never work for them because we all do not give a fuck what function these rats are in, they target innocent people as corrupt rats looking for bounties so giving rats poison, stabbing or shooting them or punching their skulls is just a normal things to do anyway. They rely on a now deprecated way combining remote neural monitoring, dream interrogation and harassment, EEG altering, Zerztzung and hiring other to harass. Then when we see that informants get stabbed, shot, killed in bunkers or poisoned with their kids then we understand why this is, they got corrupted and the cops have no oversight on how they operate. Pure provokation from the side of intelligence always is unlawful in court. Their setups are so fake ass and annoying that the hate against these kind of rats will grow immense <https://rats-nosnitch.com/> it is clear that Clair Wolf does not warn us for nothing with the Rats No Snitch PDF. She is just right and knows that law enforcement goes too far to gather intelligence and when it all fails, they cannot stand it and need something to justify their bogus investigation. This is when they look at 3rd parties, criminals inside jail who need a cop deal and could become a snitch alike rat to perform a dirty job. Other people just get voices in their heads from mental care, being programmed to become throwaway assassins or Manchurian candidates either recruited for false flag operations. There is only one way to get rid of these kind of rats and this is by operation until death arrives for them. Spreading information, exposing them to the underworld and above (to those not corrupted) can only end up in 2 things for them: 1. They will go through jail time for illegal activities | 2. They will be shot, stabbed, poisoned, killed. There are no other ways to get around this as law enforcement will listen to their rats and their fake ass cop friend group first. But you could see that as a tactical advantage. Because when evidence shows up in repetition and police/law enforcement neither intelligence looks at it, this means that they are performing an illegal operation. I am not worry on what will happen because I already created the GRID, Chain, Loop and Pact to make sure Karma will apply to them suddenly and uncontrollable, their need for controlling the situation is immense and once they lost control like this forever: Death is the only way out. And like I could not held them responsible by law, so they cannot hold me responsible on reactions.

How the government operates

All governments agencies and employees (the corrupted ones) act like a mafia/criminal organization. They push upon their power play and mass control and depopulate what they want in the name of: (police)State. The IRS takes your money, something they made up and does not exist (just a number on a server and piece of paper, separating rich and poor, symbol of having power and influence because people want it, need it). The CPS takes your kids threatening you to not have an own opinion, being a bad parent. Social security forces you into labor. Police takes your weapons, while keeping theirs, shooting you with all kind of made up reasons under protection of the state and advantage at court cases and judges. Intelligence destroys lives, makes false flag terrorism, recruits wannabee agents (snitches, informants, informants) and creates Manchurian candidates using the psychiatry of death as state examples to induce fear and terror. Psychiatry of death uses MKUltra and Monarch to keep order and to “slaughter those that do not submit to State”. They hire informants to create (theaterplay, Zerzetzung) circumstances tactically for legal advantages and methods to apply certain law sets on individuals. As Snowden said they abuse security clearance and target individuals (anyone they want) using remote neural monitoring and data abuse (from phone, thought processing (EEG) and internet data <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=YKnVcjXfJs4>) evidence for this exists (<https://www.isaizu.com/allpatents.pdf> | <https://www.targetedevidence.com/>) and has become undeniable.

VPN and macchanging not enough

Using encryption like LUKS on Linux as well as sending messages encrypted (<https://www.isaizu.com/encrypto/index.php>) with a separate key pattern locked inside another file or hidden text inside images (<https://www.isaizu.com/imagecrypto/index.php>) is essential for private communication so it cannot be intercepted by intelligence. Not trusting 3rd party encryption services as intelligence and police sets them up themselves later “supposedly having it hacked fakely” in the media.

Do not remember your passwords

For the sake of EEG cracking and surveillance with Remote Neural Monitoring towards whistleblowers, activists, hackvists and for the sake of fake national security and guinea pig testing psyops for mass control we must never remember our passwords. You can autogenerate them and copy/paste them into text files saving them in a encrypted container. Then on form fields copy/paste them also without watching the screen or by focussing your eyes making it unviewable through the eyes to still see the form but not the paste data. Also use SMS authentication or an Authenticator, you could also use Roboform alike software if you like on a MicroSD/USB converter to autogenerate and autofill the process. With new neural decoding technologies like this, cybernetic mind hive teams alike try to control life/tech/data of others influencing and altering the mind. These false bogus programs used for testing and transhumanism alike settings are a violation of freedom and the admentments by law. This proves the government is corrupted and has a vast Agenda it uses on its population to mass control and depopulate it. Keeping their control now also has become digital and in the new age they want the monopoly online also, as they have primed over generations of subtle enslavement to be the authority of everyone's life.

RNM dreams fake paranormal

As Remote Neural Monitoring is able to give dreams by altering brain waves live it is being abused a lot. Both for interrogation as well as for transhumanism, conditioning and behavior modding. Using past away family member to win trust in dreams while interrogating, setting horror alike bloody scenes to see your lugubrious level, even making some people believe they are paranormal or have special powers and their (fake EEG altered by intelligence) dreams are things to see the future it is all bogus and made up with EEG altering in the REM sleep. In a while udner RNM surveillance we can see clearly see the difference of having dreams by processing information from our lives from daytime, or the fake dreams given by remote neural monitoring. The psychiatric industry seems to abuse this technology also. They try to mental drive and label people so they can isolate them, bring them in bad health, get them with infragards into mental wards, put them under psy programs or psy meds. This all for control of State and to mass depopulate people. It is a threat to humankind that the system uses its agencies in these way to control people. As Snowden stated many people get innocent in jails and mental wards or get crazy, by illegal surveillance and bogus investigations by intelligence and government agencies either 3rd party hired intelligence to get people driven mental and in control. Because its main purpose is to get out-of-the-box people into control. Those who believe in society, state and the system and are not awakened it is a subtile enslavement system, will always try to protect it and will agree that such programs must exist.

Corrupted police and agencies

We see it more and more lately Black Live Matters knows all about it. People want more and more, both in materialism, money and power. They love their feelings of jealousy, hate, envy, greed and wannabeeness. Primed by society to have success in life, primed by companies to keep buying while working their ass off, not getting anywhere. So they take a look at the dark side, more money more easily and power without rules. Corruption inside law enforcement as well as discrimination are a standard today. It is everywhere and nobody does something about it. Everyone gets told to raise their kids in every generation cycle to: Go to school, get work, marry, have a pension then die, repeat. Breaking that cycle makes you crazy, out-of-the-box, a danger to society, potential terrorist/Manchurian or being stamped as a radicalizing person & outlaw who is bad and follows no rules. This is all bullshit because everyone has the right to live the way they want, to believe in what they want. Yet the first things cops will try is to push upon their own bullshit rules, bypassing laws and official rules to push upon their ways of checking things out illegally hoping they find something so it won't be for nothing to afterwards get warrants and judge support. Where they cannot do things themselves they hire their infragards and rats <https://rats-nosnitch.com/> to play false witnesses and work independent from each other to override law bypassing it in their advantage in tactical ways.

Gamers are the future

Gaming is not only good for brain training purposes. It is also the set for the future. With Brain Computer Interfaces wired to robotics we can now already see that the new drone pilots will be gamers. Gamers have many advantages over non gamers. But they do have to be sure they do not get addicted gaming the whole day. Moving the body and getting forms of relaxation without eye focus is still important.

<https://www.forbes.com/sites/olliebarder/2021/01/27/gamers-are-the-future-whether-we-like-it-or-not/>

Use bluelight filters and glasses

Whatever you are doing sitting behind your PC, smartphone, TV, laptop, gaming console make sure you use bluelight filters. You can use software filters like Iris Mini <https://iristech.co/iris-mini/> These are available for the computer and smartphones. But not on consoles and TV. Therefore I recommend getting bluelight filter glasses. The best kind you can get are Gunnar glasses with Amber which filters out UV and 99% bluelight for you even if you are behind your Xbox or Playstation. Combining both bluelight software and bluelight glasses is of course the best option.

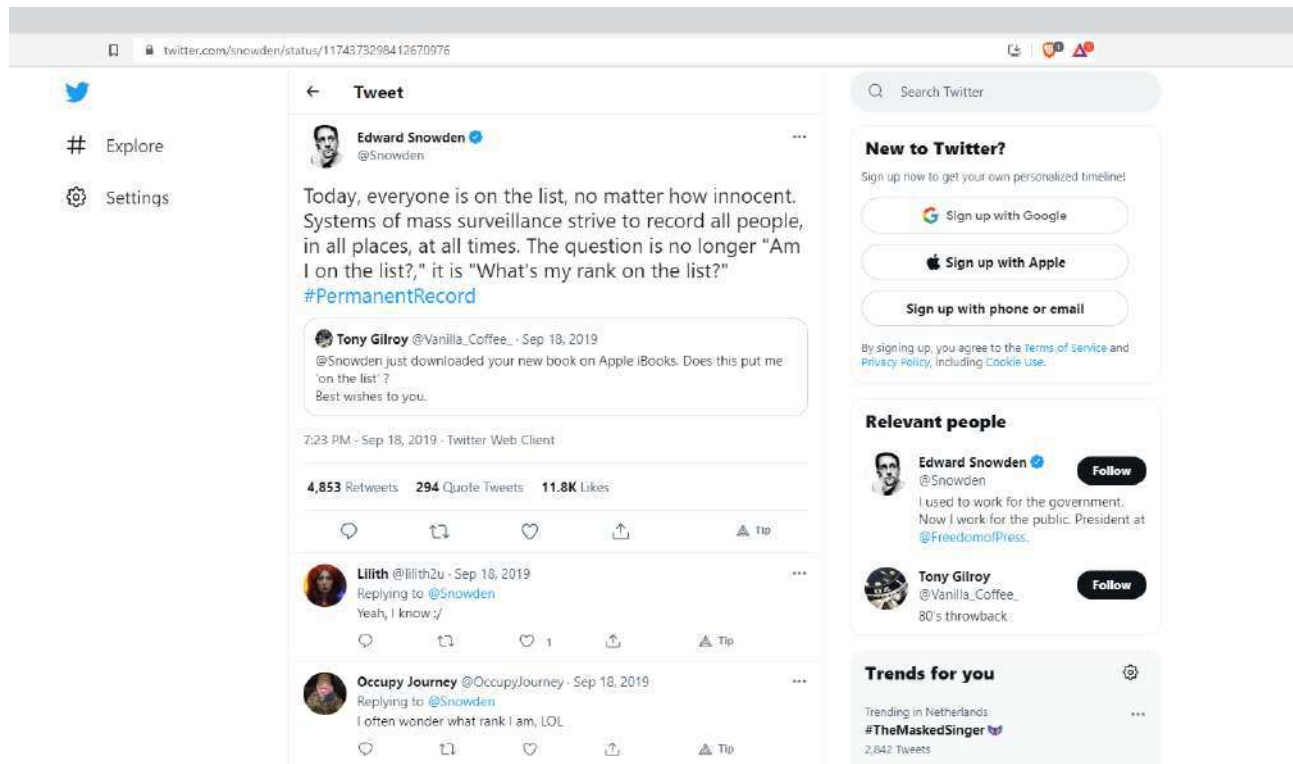

Get a pet for mind relaxation

It does not matter what kind of pet (dog, bird, cat, reptile, fish) but having a cozy pet to watch or take with you gives a level of relaxation and add on only nature can give to humans. So I recommend taking a lovely pet.

Snowden knew everyone is a target

With PRISM active over social media gathering data for intelligence agencies and remote neural monitoring being actively tested for mass control the drama has begun. Snowden (former NSA) litterly says it, today everyone is on the list no matter innocent or not:

(<https://twitter.com/snowden/status/1174373298412670976>)

Killing of whistleblowers & activists

Silent staged accidents or hiring assassins under Mkultra control by CIA either other intelligence agencies is a normal thing lately to control information flow. Because the government doesn't want it dirty laundry out yet a lot of people like Snowden for example Dr. Robert Duncan (former CIA working on the Remote Neural Monitoring programs, author of "How to tame a Demon" and "Project Soul catcher 2") or Carlos Morales (former CPS agent. Author of "Legally kidnapped") are all coming out how informants and infragards silently get assignments to operate together in conspiracy to create circumstances and apply control over individuals in exchange for money, presents or privileges of other agencies. There are many infiltrators & assassins walking amongst us.

Dark people, jews, muslims?

It started back in the days. When dark people were slaves for white people. Later on with Hitler targeting the jews. And today even with muslims being labeled terrorists. People always have to say something about each other or to feel superior. Truth is that everyone is the same, but the road people take in life is different, ending up in different kind of lives & different states of intelligence and skillsets. But this history has left a mark that is still noticable today. What is next after the Corona crisis? Activists, whistleblowers, hacktivists who have their own opinions? If they dare to take people like David Icke and Alex Jones (infowars) down from social media it already says everything about freedom of speech and the governments trying to control the internet and social media. They might control the 1% of the internet the public views most. But they will never be able to control the rest of the 99% called the darkweb and below. After the targeting of activists what will be next then? An Alien invasion? The government has finally admitted UFO's exists and the tech is something light years ahead which they don't have or understand (https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=60ZJQ4I7_3M) .

With a recently released UFO report, more people are asking about extraterrestrial life. Here's what that question could reveal

By Travis Cook, CNN
Updated 0701 GMT (2501 HKT) July 3, 2021

(CNN) — Flying saucers. Unexplained lights. Tic-tacs in the skies. UFO sightings have confounded government officials, witnesses and enthusiasts for more than 70 years.

Yet for all the expectations that were put upon an unclassified UFO report released on June 25, it's only led to more questions than answers.

Its findings, in short: Yes, some things are out there. No, we don't know exactly what they are.

Though only one of the 144 examined sightings had an official explanation, the US government's shift from dismissal to open acknowledgment was simply groundbreaking in the eyes of many.

"We've shared our skies with these vehicles for a long time, and as we put stigma behind us, we can collectively take a sober, scientific approach

UFO mind control setup

I talked to someone working within the CIA years ago telling me they only show to the public through the media what they want to show. The truth is crashed UFO or UAP so called by the government have already been found years ago with many attempts to be reverse engineered including the cloaking mechanism and not only the toroidal zero point energy with its gravity wrap drive. By the patent (<https://patents.google.com/patent/US20060145019A1/en>) for the TR3B we can see they already succeeded for a part with this. But the UFO sightings back in the days were also used by intelligence agencies to get patients for the psychiatric industry to test psy drugs and psyops programs like Mkultra and Monarch on. As Remote Neural Monitoring can give dreams it was easy for them to mimic a fake Alien abduction lettering many end up in mental cares available for guinea pig testing of the mind. The appliance for Remote Neural Monitoring is very wide. So it was also used for superstitious people, who bought houses to mimic sounds of ghosts and create a haunted sphere combining them with dreams to get them sell the houses for less, for wanting to get out of there as fast as possible. The method that is then applied both to the haunted house & alien intelligence setup, is to create sounds by microwave auditory hearing, beam light through remote laser technologies and give dreams to remote neural monitoring with starting point where a person is sleeping, dreams it happens at the same place, with the person waking up, while the person is actually asleep and dreaming, so it looks

Google Patents

Triangular spacecraft

Abstract

A spacecraft having a triangular hull with vertical electrostatic line charges on each corner that produce a horizontal electric field parallel to the sides of the hull. This field, interacting with a plane wave emitted by antennas on the side of the hull, generates a force per volume combining both lift and propulsion.

Images (6)

Classifications

B64D1/409 Unconventional spacecraft propulsion systems

Claims (4)

1. A spacecraft comprised of the following components:

- (a) a triangular hull in the form of an equilateral triangle;
- (b) two copper plates attached on opposite vertical sides at each of the three corners of the hull (1 a) such that a sharp vertical edge is formed where they come together;
- (c) an electrostatic generator used to charge the back two copper-clad corners (1 b) to a high positive voltage, and the third forward copper-clad corner to a high negative voltage;
- (d) a horizontal slot antenna array mounted on the sides of the hull; and

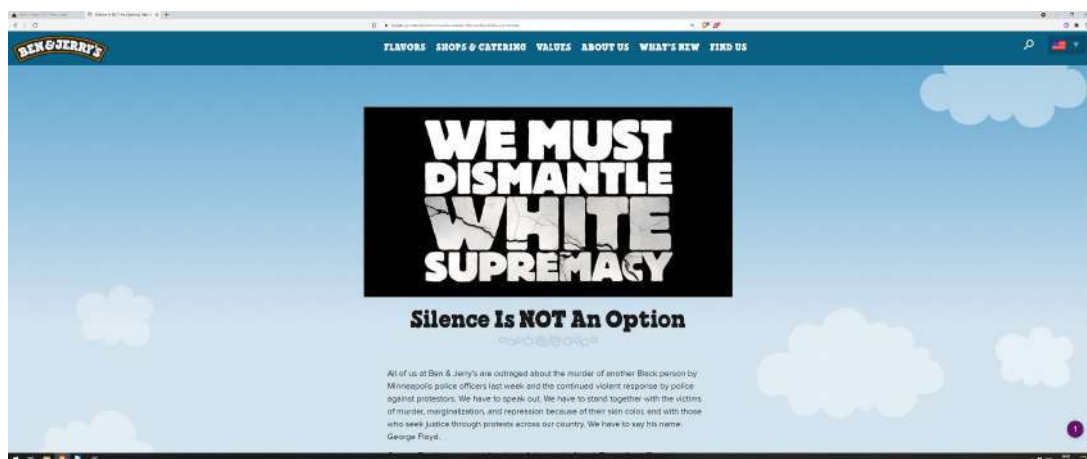

Info: Patent citations (6), Legal events, Similar documents, Priority and Related Applications

External links: USPTO, USPTO PatentCenter, USPTO Assignment, Espacenet, Global Dossier, Discuss

like a real experience. These tactics implant new memories the human mind sees as reality. Because perception becoming our reality and the person perceived the fake remote neural monitoring controlled dream as being real.

The world grew up with white ...

Yes I am talking about the white supremacy setting. Everyone both white, dark, Asian all grew up that white people are superior. That we live in a with world. Some people are even fucking with white people because they are afraid their kids will not be/or will be better accepted by the world then when they have a color or are too Asian. It is pathetic. Intelligence loves to nano chip people inside society and force them into behavior and doing dirty jobs. When there is no reason to target they will try to create one with data. When made a mistake: A cleanup or payout. Even at Ben & Jerry's they are talking about this. Simply because it is an undeniable truth. White people are not superior and yet the "doll test" shows how little children from a young age are programmed with this (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=QRZPw-9sJtQ>) so it is not that I hate white people and I am typing this (yes it is me Iffie :) Because fortunate there are many good white people also who are not like this also and understand what I mean with all of this. But there is also a group who feeds this, want this fear and standard to be spread amongst young foreign kids and feels itself a superior race (this is how Hitler started out also). Well actually I do not give a fuck if you believe me or not because I know I am right. But yet I want to let you know about the mass control programs, the intelligence sector gone rogue and corrupted. But also about how the "white" world is not supposed to be white because we all live in inside of it. My life will be taken for given all the intelligence I have given over years through the internet and elsewhere, but I do not care. Because I will fight to my death and using all forms of violence, weaponry and tactics: for Freedom.

Other kind of depopulation tactics

Another way we can see as psyop depopulation is the use of secret organization alike settings. Like the illuminati, freemasonry etc. It is said that they offer little kids in the bohemian. While most things are just symbolic and have deeper meaning there are things that go very far. The entertainment industry for example shows on TV, internet, (social) media how rich rappers are buying cars and houses which people who work hard will never be able to buy. While the drive to get famous and money it imprinted and created from birth in every way, death also occurs inbetween for the reasons of jealousy, envy, greed, hate and (cannot) wannabeeness. Other ways of depopulation tactics involve praising the gay community. Gay people cannot get children and this contributes to "people control" because in the end we are all animals and need to be controlled. Like certain animals have a season to hunt, humans must also be controlled. It happens in all kind of tactical ways and always involves different kind of intelligence agencies and contact below it in their network. Giving something in a drink that gives certain organ failure inside hospitals, messing with people's fertility so they cannot get kids the normal ways and need to contact mental care. Even scanning on the web for people who try to become famous, contact them as illuminati (frauds), make them pay money and set them up against others who want the same using psychological warfare to kill each other has become a standard. There are many frauds active. Also inside the hacker world we see ransomware and stalkerware being used to push people to pay money for their own information. Distributions like Kali Linux and ParrotOS make it easy in every way to attack (citizen/government/intelligence/military) systems and people who do not know much about it are fucked every time. While governments and police with their law enforcement and snitches/infragards always try to control and protect the State's reputation it is impossible for them to keep real control. So they rather show their success timeline in the media to get praises and support.

So they use believe systems & color

Yes targeting dark skinned people, jews, muslims, activists, whistleblowers, hacktivists or anyone with an own opinion shows exactly what the agenda is. I am a muslim myself. I know intelligence agencies abuse remote neural monitoring to create false flag terrorism and Manchurian candidates pushing people to commit crimes and theater shows to become examples of the state, after which they perform suicide. This is how the whole circle operation. When the government announced UFO's are real calling it UAP's we can take a look inside their new agenda. They rely upon the Alien war setting, as they speak of technologies earth does not have and might be a danger to "National security". Yes the word national security says it all: Anything can be put in weapons & surveillance. (<https://www.theguardian.com/us-news/2021/jun/17/ufos-us-report-national-security-concerns>) After all it is another excuse for the government to perform investigations and to interrogate people. Many evidence on UAP's as they call it, have already been confiscated and disappeared without a trace, not shown into the public. They give people a number, track them, create data profiles on them, threaten them if they know too much or go against the system, kill them tactically. It has always been this way and means nothing special to them. Therefore many people are afraid to speak out on the truth. Almost every one who knew too much has fled off grid either got killed by an assassin or inside a staged accident, either with undetectable poison or a fake autopsy report.

State examples like Myron May

Myron May is an example of someone who was a successful lawyer and yet is killed by the state for probably winning a case he should have lost

(<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=TCefOJmdslk> | <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4LIUzvQYjPI>) of course having mental health issues & being confused is the standard excuse of intelligence officials to get rid of someone.

Remotely cooking a person into aggression, bad health and psy issues doing 24/7 neurochatter harassment and interrogation to destroy a person and then push the person into committing crimes and then killing themselves. Whether it was Myron May, Aaron Alexis, Tristan van der Vlis they all heard voices in the heads, the intelligence ways of mimicking mental disease schizophrenia. Using technologies like microwave auditory effect (https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Microwave_auditory_effect) or bone sound conduction (https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bone_conduction) they create entire personal psyops with data gathered from intelligence to destroy people silently, pushing them to crimes to become state examples as throwaways. This same way is used to create so called Manchurian candidates and False flag terrorism since the agenda of installing a surveillance state became active in a secret agreement between governments and intelligence agencies. Also 9/11 was a same setup to install a surveillance state and attack the world biggest believe system (the islam) afraid it would unite together and start a revolution so it makes the perfect target to both make it smaller and use it as example to create hate on and install the surveillance state. The psychiatric industry and infragards are responsible for many deaths as many corrupted cops, mental care personnel and rogue agencies cooperate with a common purpose of power play with each other to maintain what they call: "order: The truth is however this order does not exist and is actually not necessary. It is a way of weak but smart people to override the rules of nature where the strongest will survive. So the evolution of mankind has stopped anyway because of these games of death. A country where these rogue investigations are performed a lot is the Netherlands. Website like <https://www.verwardepersonen.nl/> and <https://www.stopeg.nl/> explain everything about this subject of remote horror combined with Zerzetzung.

Being legendary, mythical or epic

Some people just never die, because many other people look up to the person(s) as example and step into their footsteps. But what is the difference? A legendary person is already dead but leaves his mark, mythical persons leave both true & false data but the mystic about is for you to find out which is true or false, epic people are undeniable they leave back a trail that is unmatched and could be either alive or dead. Bruce Lee for example knew his fight style was bad, thanks to a monk who showed him. So he skipped his Wing Chun style and created Jeet kune do instead telling us all we should be allround. This made him legendary, he knew already the future, because when he died years later people discovered MMA and saw he was right. Fighting standup as well as on the ground was necessary to be allround and realistic. In these days we even have combat sports involving disarming and attacking with knives and firearms as add-on to that because it is necessary for realistic combat these days. I consider myself to be a mythical person because I have secrets what I need to cover up with bullshit above it, for reasons that are important to life itself, nobody really knows my skills or what I am capable of until they are too late, I like it this way, I would never trade mythical for epic, it has also to do with some things my history teacher thought me. Epic people are people like Mike Tyson. He was falsely accused for murder, came over it, he bit off someone's ear in the ring, he accepted it. As old asshole he is still strong and accepts his lifestyle and past. He is undeniable one of the best epic boxers in the history of mankind & also a strong personality around. He still lives and he will always be epic after he dies also. This is the difference between legendary, mythical & epic.

Why the iSaiZu Tribe is choosen

Many people know we are part on an intelligence community, but we have never told which one, so that information will always remain secret. It is part of us being mythical in every way we can, because information is protected by either encryption with hidden locations or by disinformation spreading. The level of psychological warfare, dark NLP (trigger, anchors, mirroring), infiltration knowledge, hypnotic suggestion, conditioning, behavior mods, influencing, interrogating is almost Alien alike at us. The level is very high and advanced this is why intelligence agencies have trouble with infiltrating us and interrogating, using remote neural monitoring, Zerzeugung or any kind of psyops. While they push their fake programs and bogus investigations, irritating us, in the ears and face, we just laugh at them for being fake assholes, having no results of any kind neither evidence to come up with for their false accusations and setups. This is how it now really goes in my life every time over and over again. Someone who cannot stand his lost, keeps provoking, interrogation, mental driving and talking shit, while the intelligence is slowly spreading like poison and killing his entire group of fools. So while he look alike like Egsy from "Kingsman" and wants to play intelligence in the same way. He is just a rat/Egg, trying to gather intelligence in every failed way possible. The person I am talking about is not only putting himself in danger but also his fake wannabee friends, wife and kids. But as this person knows he went to far with the iSaiZu Tribe it does not matter that his & her ways of illegal activities have been spread with evidence around the world, because this is probably the risk the person is willing to take anyway. In 2021 we has our first contact with out-of-earth intelligence knowing it was not coming from Remote Neural Monitoring or staged CIA lasers either intelligence. This moment we knew we live in a world that not only exists of earth, but a universe where we have limited travel capabilities, because our limit in technology for, unlike other who can travel through space and time. The world is not ready, because when humans get their hands on certain technologies they will abuse it, travel to conquer and start wars, doing their self destruction. This is how the human mind is wired over generations and ages. Until then it is important to keep secrets and to protect them within every way possible including violence and death.

The limit that gets removed

There is a fire burning inside every human. That fire gets dimmed by society, its bullshit rules, manmade laws, suggestions and pushing on how to live and act in life. This is all protected by a fake system that serves only justice to those who have a lot of money and power. They want to have a gap between poor and rich. They want to have mass control and depopulation power. Once that limit gets removed and you want to be yourself. People will call you crazy, dangerous, radicalizing and distance themselves from you because they cannot stand you being free while they are enslaved to following someone else's bullshit rules. They say the throne is there to the smartest and strongest one to take. The road of the Titan is one above any thrown, because you could all. Every king will listen because they will know the Titan is right always. Never get limited by someone's else rules pushed up onto you in their own advantage. Never get down because people have their own issues and do not want to comply towards you even when you are right. Just stay on your words and deeds and everything will be alright. You will always win your battles if you are able to go further then your enemies. You GRID, Chain, Loop, Pact out everyone and Karma will show itself. But never wait on it because it won't happen if you just wait and do nothing. So when you step out of the MATRIX of control and every form of (mind) control as a human being, starting your road to become a Titan. Remember that ones an Indian Titan lived in the Netherlands telling you everything you needed to know to really get free. To stand above the levels of state, law enforcement and intelligence together. That every fake ass illuminati copycat fraud of secret organizations can kiss your ass because you are smarter and better.

Remote Neural corrupted infragard

I talked about before Groningen has access to Remote Neural Monitoring but abuses for their own friends revenge psyop games. Targeting innocent people testing their mind control either with voice (v2k) or without (subliminal), always using EEG altering to control dream state, either with or with groupstalking/Zerzetzung. This is how they operate, silently in the background. They cook you into aggression, use dark NLP to anchor you to an event or item (like a red car or clothing, like a bull attacks red) to use trigger words for aggression lure out. Then they want to walk by you to provoke violence and call the cops to get you into isolation inside jail or mental cares either being shot by cops as confused or mental person. This illegal kind of intelligence operation must be punished with the death penalty and nature gives the right to perform this execution back to them but then not slow over time but like in 1 second. They are responsible for many death but also for making people homeless. We often see them luring at rich people, to try and harass them also, making drama and theater to do false accusations for money getting purposes. Or they want to reset the life of someone by bringing the person into trouble, so the person has to start over again with life from being homeless, coming out of jail, out of mental wards. It is a pathetic group of people that has access to these not-known-to-ordinary-citizens technologies and patents (<https://www.isaizu.com/allpatents.pdf>) especially <https://patents.google.com/patent/US4877027A/en> and <https://patents.google.com/patent/US3951134A/en> are abused a lot! So when these fucks say “hey hey hey”, “ho ho ho”, “wait here until we call the cops”, “don’t do it do normal”, just know you are a fool to listen to their words just use the violence anyway without regret and maxed out in power. Because these assholes would do the same. The reason they keep repeating themselves and cannot shutup is because they are fake ass bitches who have no balls to show up continuously in the same amount they are talking shit. Otherwise they would already stepped into a coffin.

Firearms and knives state control

We can see how the police set up containers motivated by intelligence and a fake view for a better world for citizens to deliver in the weaponry. This is tactical disarming. What you want to hear? Wow, what a good stupid boy you are, thanks for disarming yourself. Most people are primed by social media or people around them to expect a compliment. In the advantage of revolution preventing and mass control the government has an unlimited blackops/psyops budget, they are money, money does not exist, they created it to control. Targeting the islam as biggest believe system, preventing it to revolutionize was one of their tasks. Using it for false flag operations and the road of creating a surveillance state in the name of terror was all tactical just like 9/11. Many people now arm themselves either legal (any knife beneath 28cm, foldable with one cutting edge is legal) or illegal (cell phone guns alike) concealed weaponry, it does not matter. The other way around they do carry weaponry, want to take yours, decide who to shoot, get support by court and judges so what is the difference. The only difference is illegal you can get any firearm on the darkweb. Police will only have a 9mm glock, teaser, stick or nunchuks (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IcdjGYJINLc>) and they have to deliver it back in their lockers after work while others keep their weaponry with them 24/7 always. This is were intelligence tries to step in and tries to downgrade society by looking at lugubrious things as being wrong and harsh. Yet people are eating meat and animals are slaughtered legally. Sentient being with also feelings and pain like humans, so actually there is no difference in a cow being stabbed or a human it is actually the same. Yet society wants everyone to be a sheep and pussied down because any other kind of animals like wolves, tigers, bears need to be controlled for the fear of the weak. Because this pussy down neural program with fake stereotypes, expectations and bullshit rules the rule of nature of the strongest surviving and a species upgrading in evolution gets interrupted. This for the sake of the scared elite who are white psy-fucks.

Pakistani ISI & Indian RAW

The difference between all the old dirty tactics from the CIA/NSA clubs to provoke, gather, control intelligence against what ISI and RAW offer is a big difference. We can see the American training is less hardened and the results in intelligence profiling are amazingly different. The way they let operators control information and push other to behave, react, put out information in their advantage has become a leak towards the CIA/NSA/FBI in every way possible. The new Cybernetic Mind Hive teams and AI chatterbots mean nothing compared the technologies available towards ISI & RAW. While intelligence communities try their Zerztzung automating the progress on repeat for conditioning, behavior modding and transhumanism. They are believing in a better world if they are able to control and alter the mind and dream state

(<https://patents.google.com/patent/US3951134A/en> |

<https://patents.google.com/patent/US4877027A/en>) of individuals which they target using mental care all other government agencies in conspiracy and 3rd party groups to participate

(Freemasons/Scientology/Mormons/Informants/Spies). They use it also for corporate spying and stealing ideas next to harassing and neuro programming others. Because of the basics in ISI and RAW psychological training bypassing all their techniques used in Remote Neural Monitoring we can see that it does not get to its purpose. The CIA leaked training documents and materials were hacked and exposed years ago. CIA training means nothing as ISI & RAW went further with the process. While the CIA went on with their fake remote viewing (read Brain processing EEG data through Brain Computer Interfaces and neural decoding devices) ISI & RAW went beyond this. Nanotechnology allowed for intelligence to track, watch brain processing (EEG, decoding the signal > converting it to text & subvocal speech). GWEN towers from cell phone tower irradiating low level ELF frequencies have exactly the right frequencies for mind control. But Remote Neural Monitoring happens by nano chipping targets to gather intelligence. It will not be detectable on scans as it is too little and made from titanium. Many of the Alien devices/implants found in human flesh (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jm0SQrk3OEc>) are just intelligence agencies working. When real Aliens would implant something it would become a part of the organic system and would not be made from metal and non-trackable for humans in every way. We have seen this before as an extension to the heart being bigger on scans this is because the organic tissue behind it, the attached organic implant becomes one with the organ. It would never be titanium used implant, use by intelligence on nano level on purpose to be invisible to scans.

The attack on the Titans

In a world where white supremacy and propaganda has been spread, with a humankind being enslaved towards a corrupted government, faking their well-being for their citizens, while organizing false flag operations, silently financing crime, to keep the citizens in fear and need to the government and law enforcement itself, many people are waking up. We could see it with George Floyd and with Corona crisis, with David Icke and Alex Jones (infowarriors) when freedom of speech was attacked and controlled. We see a whole new age coming where people are not afraid to stand up. Titans who stand up with everything behind them, become a target at once. Governments and intelligence agencies (NGO, governmental or unknown that do not agree with the opinion) will always attack the Titans for their freedom of speech and ways of mass exposing information. The reach of a Titan is very big. The titan has amazingly big lists gathered by intelligence available through mass mailers, keylogging, spying and organizations that have people under them to spread information and to convince with evidence this information is true either false. So what law enforcement/governments/intelligence thinks about it then does not matter a fuck because there will be too many people understanding the subject which will end up bad for those who have violated rules, laws, law of nature or have ask for trouble in any way.

The voice of God/Satan weapon

Were once a pact was created for making believe systems we can clearly see how any tactical advantage from anyone's life on available data is being used. Data gathered around the person, about the person. And data gathered from the person. Becoming a targeted of remote neural monitoring should be random. As Dr. Robert Duncan from the CIA (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fClFBR36EPs>) who wrote the books "How to tame a Demon" and "Project: Soul catcher 2" knows and said in a removed YouTube video, we can see on the targeted mostly dark skinned people are targeted. Edward Snowden already said he does not want to live in a society that does such things (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=YKnVcjXfJs4>) while this all was used for counter intelligence purposes and surveillance against terrorism installed after the 9/11 operation to watch thought processing and perform mind altering to mass control, intelligence agents and corrupted government personnel uses it for their own advantages as some part of the device and patent came available for mental care. They decided to label people who could be a potential dangerous to the system/society (the wake up ones) and could be part of any revolution against the system, with the intent to win the battle, should be permanently, illegally monitored by intelligence. While intelligence hires infragards and community policing groups/spies to induce fear and use dark NLP on targets hoping to condition/transhumanism them into their advantage, so they can get away with their illegal acts. We often see how the "microwave auditory effect" either "bone conduction" on nano level is being used to produces negative commenting, voice of God/Satan (to control the person) or entities (if the person is superstitious) hoping to create examples for the state and remove potential threats in the same time. So they get paid a lot of money in silently killing targets. Suicide, staged accidents, person VS person setups, groups VS groups setups, poisoning, isolating in jail/mental care, stress & depression induction for bad health, it is all part of it!

DDDDDIS

De-Sensitizing, Disrupt, Discredit, Distract, Deceive, Divide, Infiltrate, Setup. This is their operating scheme. The need for human mind conditioning, suggestion, behavior modding, transhumanism while getting the mind tired with interrogation to distract so it can be manipulated, suggested and re-neuro programmed in advantage of a state, person, individual or group. Remote Neural Monitoring now does this on remote combined with Zerztzung and hired people.

Illegal fights are now trendy

Once people disgusted illegal fights (https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=qTS2_6hqC9g). Now they are spitting on the fake entertainment industry with controlled fights by Glory, UFC and the MMA circuit even no holds barred has its limits. People understand in real life combat there are no rules and the ring/octagon entertainment industry only seeks money and show. Whether is a backyard fight with people gambling just 50 Euro a person around it. The fighter will always make more then his 2000/3000 a fight tribute money. In big illegal fights off GRID where weapons use is allowed which are a few, the price money for a tournament is in millions. With all the available encryption and the kind of people supporting this (multi-miljonairs/multi-biljonairs) the untrackability is done pro and you won't even get a seat in the back without an invitation.

Police, mental care & agencies deny

Even with all the evidence available all (government/intelligence/private) agencies deny the existence of remote neural monitoring. The trick is that they do not want to pay out damage claims for Mkultra and Monarch done on remote. They want to deny it and use the excuse targets are crazy/mental/conspiracy theorists. Now with the patents being looked at closely and too many people coming out around the internet on terms like electronic harassment, gangstalking, zerztzung, RNM & v2K it all grows.

Having/creating something against

People want to have something against you to so they hold it against you when you become successful in any way. Having somethings to treat someone with always seems nice in their opinion. We see it always at rich people how for example Michael Jackson was falsely accuses for being a pedo because a Scientology alike family lured out for money. Our how Bikram Choudhury and even Steven Seagal where suddenly targets of women who harrassed them, saying they where harassed by the succesful people. This is how people they don't care for a time frame, they want to have something to hold against you at anything and love to create it with good acting and drama. A good saying is when success arrives in ones lives, trust no one. Hell, in these times just never trust nobody. People try to fraud each other, luring for advantage and money. This might even be friends or family members. You need to be around people who understand these things, also understanding the mechanisms on your level. Then they understand, that you understand it, so they will never be able to try anything. And if they are then still liking you for the person you are, these are the persons to be around. Toxic people always have a lot of stories to tell about others in their life, because they do not have one of their own. So you will hear how "Piet went there, Anna did this and that" all kind of shit stories you do not give a fuck about, on people you do not even know, from others. This is the moment you know you are dealing with what they call an energy vampire. Someone who keeps talking and draining your energy trying to get your attention to listen to their talkings. Toxic people and energy vampire, no matter how they are related to you (colleagues, friends, family) should be kicked out immediately. Overthinking, stress, depression happens all the time in this age and it is not to blame on social media or the internet, but on people not being able to control themselves. Some people enjoy internet, social media, gaming every day without problems, stress or depression. Others get issues, addictions, focus problems because they cannot deal with it.

Karma does not exist

In one of my videos online I talk about how Karma does not exist (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Udo6YFuy8LI>). People are neuro programmed about karma for ages. When someone does something bad to you, let it go, he/she will receive bad things back soon (by coincidence). That is just a placebo effect to wait for. Karma must be created to make sure it will come out. Creating a GRID on someone with the right information, CHAIN it for others to react in a PACT having the same interest and then LOOP it endlessly so the information can never be removed only be updated by mass spreading it into systems & lists they cannot reach, always results in getting karma back.

Materialism means nothing

In the age of new smartphones and laptops and everyone wanting to have the latest of things, walking along with the Joneses. It is all not necessary to have the latest stuff. Eventually it will all be broken and you might end up broke. Getting 1 good multi (tasking/usability) like a laptop you can work/game on or a console and 1 smartphone you keep as long as it works replacing things only when broken saves a lot of headache and money. In the end you will take nothing to the grave. You will only remember your experiences and the pictures you took with your family and friends in precious moments, those cozy moments, fun moments and vacation moments. But do not worry if you are buying a lot of stuff you will learn anyway, that you will regret it and want to order it all, getting rid of too much to get a bit frugal giving your more peace and space. So keep on buying until you understand what I mean anyway. Saving some and doing some things here and there are great ways to ensure a good stability for yourself and the ones you love around you. Securing your shit and taking measures are important steps to grow in life as well as taking the time for self development and to experience pain to grow. Most people learn from their own mistakes and not from words of others.

Police using nunchuks the fun

Years ago when the police tried to disarm me, with their remote neural monitoring rats & tried to get me offline for spreading their corruptness, I met a cop who said to me: Stop swinging your sticks on the internet, there was a guy who did karate/taekwondo and kicked one of our police to the head getting injury, afterwards we shot him (this to threaten me and WTF so they shoot unarmed people?). Now years later the whole police departments in the USA are using nunchuks (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=9sW-6nMpbkc>) while they where first laughing on Bruce Lee on how the “Chink played with his ridiculous chopsticks <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=lcdjGYJINLc>). This for me shows the discrimination level of the police corpses. And after every fake investigation towards the public, run of course by a white cop, there is nothing to be found. Only recorded smartphone outlashes on the streets, like with George Floyd that are undeniable are being punished by the system because they are afraid for any revolution and want to calm down the sheeps creating an example. Nowadays cops look for support inside infragards and community policing groups tactically. They search for people in their own government network who are not white to get things balanced between white/dark/asian people giving them money/bonuses/presents if they cooperate to get after so called targeted (mostly whistleblowers/activists/hacktivists) their jobs can be Zerzetzung/remote RNM harassment/doing false reports with false witnesses inside boobytraps and even frauding people to get them declared weak minded, driving people mental to get them inside psychiatry to be controlled, implant false evidence in advantage of the cop shop or do some spy work or even those working for the same network at MCDonalds giving the right nano tracking implant in the foods. So while they try to threaten, fraud, create false evidence/implant thoughts/create circumstances using agencies and bypassing laws they are always dependent on your cooperation in this which they want bad.

Why EEG thought processing fails

You read it many times and saw in this ebook also the link to Snowden talking about Remote Neural Monitoring. But why do “they” just talk shit for years when they would have real evidence, would have no problems to show it, to come out with anything? Simply because EEG data will never be court valid. Brain Computer Interfaces and neural decoding (so called thought and dream making police) are just neuro technologies that read the pre-processing activity of EEG waves. There are more patents then the one I described. For example this one:

<https://patents.google.com/patent/US6506148B2/en> combine it with

<https://patents.google.com/patent/US4877027A/en> and

<https://patents.google.com/patent/US3951134A/en> = Already having Remote Neural Monitoring. But an EEG wave = an EEG wave. Meaning that anyone can generate those EEG waves, because after decoding the neural SIGNAL. All the EEG wave data is read in the same way by the software. Meaning anyone can put on a Brain Computer Interface and create that EEG wave data. This also means, that any evidence that would be shown in a court case, could always be manipulated in every way by another person having generated those thoughts, making remote neural monitoring useless. There might be a moment however as technology evolves, that this could change all. This could only happen if they would nano tag/chip people physically (overriding all laws of privacy), keeping an secured system that processes thoughts on specific targets (that nobody could touch to alter or change, which is already a fail then), then lock on someone’s EEG wave data to an ID so it MUST be this and that person or group monitored that creates the data & then police could only legally start some kind of investigation. What now happens with remote neural monitoring and the psychiatric/intelligence/spying industry is that they practice it on everyone, trying to perfection it, so it have a 1% fail percentage when rolled out. But as Snowden said it goes to far, makring anyone as a bad guy or potential danger for the state and then practicing is just very very bad because some people who do not understand any of this intelligence kind of work involving: Psychological warfare, personal data gathered created psyops, remote conditioning, behavior mods, hypnotic suggestion, dark NLP (anchors, mirroring, trigger) and how they try to bring you in a bad health and state of mind with aggression luring and want to entrap you giving them a reason to go after you even when there was none. So This is also a very important part. If they started their targeting and bogus investigation, they have to push people to become crazy, commit a crime, not go against it until they do. Because otherwise the state has to pay a few millions for illegal Mkultra/Monarch/Guinea pig testing whatever you want to call it. This they rather do not want to do. They would rather drive someone other who sits in jail/mental care taking orders thinking he/she is an assassin for a secret organization or intelligence while police/mental care/government intelligence just plays with his mind, having him/her under control to kill a target for them. So this is the ultimate setting of power abuse by agencies and people possible. Again I say this: I will be killed by such a person without knowing who it is, either an intelligence agency that I do not know, because I spread all this information so many people see me as an activist/whistleblower/hacktivist but I do not care. I want people to know these truths. What they do for having society active, letting the system live instead of letting revolution happen, that is lugubrious and to get sick off. I personally do not care if I die because I know the person(s) who killed me will be killed also. But just want to make sure this information reaches as many people as possible, therefore you people are receives this little free ebook even without wanting it inside your emails (from big mailing lists of miljards of people (https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JDGeLxFE_fa) and people are sending this data mass to each other on Whatsapp, Ricochet messenger and other methods. I really want to thank you for this, because this is the way justice comes out, not from the system but from the people, from communities from secret organizations that mean well and even the criminal underworld from the darkweb thnx!

Scientology/Freemasonry setting?

Yes many people around the web who talk about gangstalking, Zerzetzung, remote neural monitoring came to mention how scientology & freemasons are known on this phenomenon. They have the money to pay for such technologies at anytime. The connection between Scientology and Navy remains. They call their headquarters even the SEAL department and are known for mind controlling and testing with their meters. And when we take a look at the available Navy equipment SONAR technologies alike, they all have access to these patents. But the truth is everyone could abuse the neuro patents and technologies to target people. From individuals, organizations, agencies, underworld, governments, intelligence; So just about anyone.

Concealed weaponry is trending

I can handle just about any weapon (almost any). I love weapons they are so epic. Back in the days as cavemen we started creating them and look now. Using concealed weaponry (pen knife, cell phone gun is amazing. It is the best way to go stealthy without anyone noticing you have something with you. I recommend always to put any weaponry at a friend (who can come directly or you have a key to his/her home) and not at home, either somewhere in a locker away from home, where you have always access. Because that is just smarter if their might be something between that is forbidden by law. But don't give a fuck the world is free from human laws.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JatsYPqpCGA> | <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=BD7tqSA07Ao>)

You are the power

Because you are the power they want to take you down, don't let them.

Waarom politie zo simpel is

Ondanks hele infragards en fake trainingen te geven aan anderen om niet bang te zijn leren om “hey hey hey”, “ho ho ho”, “rustig jij werkt mee want dat moet” te roepen. Heb je uiteindelijk niets eraan als je op je bek getrapt word en neergestoken word. Er was zo iemand die met politie achter zich aanreed om indruk te maken. Deze personen liepen tevens ook met politie achter zich (informantjes) en een undercover agentje. De jongen die dit truukje gedacht was echter slimmer dan de politie. Hij liet een ander vriend zonder demper 2 straten verderop hard schieten in de lucht om daarna snel weg te rijden (die ontkwam met gemak), ondertussen rende alle agenten naar de 2 straten verderop in zijn zicht. Hierdoor had hij vrijspel. Hij schoot alsnog de ratten en reed weg met succes. Het truukje kon ook met een granaat, vuurwerkbom of gewoon door iemand in die straat te steken in zijn ballen en te laten gillen van de pijn. Het is goed bedoelt advies voor mensen die last hebben van ratten maar vanwege enige (tijdelijke, want die gaan op den duur toch niet meer komen om de hele tijd eromheen te zitten) politie waardoor ze verlegen/angstig worden gepakt te worden. Het is ook zo dat ze vaak zeggen dat de politie of undercover politie met ze meerijdt overal maar dat is niet. Politie rijdt hooguit 1 a 3 keer mee met ze en daarna zie je ze alleen rijden. Want er moet een gerechtelijk bevel zijn voor politie bescherming en het enige wat ze hebben is hun gejack en bek. Ze roepen altijd kom dan kom dan maar als je gaat komen ze niet zoals je zag toen ik naar Groningen ben gegaan op mijn YouTube kanaal (https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=UTtA8o_uY2A), in mijn stad zijn ze 0 keer verschenen voor mijn neus deze RATTEN, ik walg ervan want anderen mensen deden er gewoon niet zolang over die kwamen meteen en zijn meteen afgestraft deze mensen lullen, doen alsof ze allemaal met hun hele familie AIVD zijn als een stel oplichters, maakt neppe aangiftes en gebruikt via GGZ Chinezen Remote Neural Monitoring om met je hoofd te spelen en droompjes te geven, zogenaamd om je helpen a la GGZ Lentis bemoeizorg. Mijn advies is wel wat betreft pijn, kan je altijd beter steken dan schieten, steken doet veeel meer pijn. Als je leert een mes te gooien die beneden 28cm is dan heb je altijd iets bij je wat de politie niet kan afpakken ook niet tijdens controles (by law). Dus ik ben blij dat veel van ons ermee kunnen gooien en dat anderen het leren werpen in hun tuinen. Het is niet veel moeilijker dan een shuriken. Het is een goede middel ook ter zelfverdediging. De grote schoonmaak is begonnen en iedereen staat op de lijst, zoals snowden zegt: <https://twitter.com/snowden/status/1174373298412670976> dit is wat de thought processing Zerztzung ratten leren aan mensen met hun targeting. Omdat het zowel auditory als subliminal kan, zie je ook dat veel jongeren er last van hebben en elkaar ook steken (maar dan bijvoorbeeld geen stemmen auditory horen). Maar zelfs ook al kleine kinderen op school, het is nu normaal, de standaard. De GGZ gebruikt de intelligence setup om anderen vieze klusjes op te laten knappen buiten het boekje. Targeten binnen gevangenissen en inrichtingen om anderen te besturen en te gebruiken om voorbeelden neer te zetten (waarbij de politie de held mag spelen) of Manchurian candidates aanmaken zoals Tristan van der Vlis zodat ze anderen killen en zichzelf om eraan te herinneren waarom iemand zo blij moet zijn met de politie staat terwijl de AIVD/GGZ en corrupte ambtenaren clubjes zelf zo iemand aanmaken met gedragsmodificatie Mkultra en Monarch. Ze proberen eerst een minderwaardigheids complex aan te praten, dan te besturen, zwakzinnig te maken en te conditioneren in hun voordeel terwijl ze constant ondervragen om de hersenen moe te houden zodat de persoon zo goed/zoveel mogelijk geprogrammeerd kan worden en verward kan worden. Nederlandse website <https://www.verwardepersonen.nl/> en <https://www.stopeg.nl/> geven een duidelijk beeld van hoe de overheid bestaat uit verschillende controle organisaties die zogenaamd proberen te helpen terwijl ze alleen een machts positie behouden voor anderen en willen dat elke generatie niet vrij is maar denkt dat het vrij is terwijl de overheid en maatschappij nodig is. Geld is ontworpen door mensen om controle uit te voeren, diamanten en goud krijgen hoge waardes om massa controle en depopulatie uit te voeren voor een paar stenen, schieten mensen elkaar overhoop. Onvruchtbaar maken met gerichte staling en nanotech, homosexualiteit stimuleren het hoort allemaal bij “het programma” want zo komen er minder kinderen op aarde dat helpt met de “populatie controle”. Want eigenlijk zijn er teveel mensen op aarde, afhankelijk van je bijdrage en braafheid binnen het systeem word je getargeted zoals Snowden zegt op de lijst, dat bepaald je hoogte, onderin of bovenaan om afgeslacht te worden subtiel en stiekem zonder dat iemand het merkt of traceerbaar is, worden veel mensen vermoord. We worden bang gemaakt om bang te zijn voor lugubere dingen, de waarheid is echter dat we allemaal een vorm van zoogdieren zijn, die in controle moet worden gehouden net zoals bij andere dieren. Dan zet je gif in of een groep jagers om die over-populatie te verlagen. Ambtelijke corruptie komt nu dan ook steeds meer voor, maar het systeem beschermt ambtenaren daarin zoveel mogelijk, tenzij de burger teveel bewijs heeft dan lukt het niet meer en word de ambtenaar met een hamer op zijn hoofd geslagen of neergeschoten buiten zijn werktijd.

Nederlands en Engels ja sorry

I might sometimes type Dutch and English both if you cannot read Dutch just use <https://translate.google.com/> to translate it for you.

I type soms Nederlands en Engels als je problemen hebt met Engels gebruik dan <https://translate.google.com/> om het te vertalen.

Schijt aan de overheid

Jajaja deze dagen heeft iedereen schijt aan de overheid het is normaal. De overheid target zijn burger als Guinea Pigs in plaats dat het ze helpt. Het denkt aan zijn eigen machtsbehoud anders dan de belang van burgers. En in politiek Den Haag zitten allemaal oud eikels en homo's (vervangen).

The Akashic field it exists

People asked me what my believe system is, I am muslim always. But I also believe in some other things next to it because I am kind of a scientific person. The Akashic field is an endless quantum field that created everything and exists beyond space and time like Deepak Chopra says <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=YY5st5vW2co> I believe such a field exist, it is logic and means that there exists a field that created all that we see and is infinite. I also believe we are not alone and that is also from a scientific side. Not because the government showed their Navy UFO/UAP videos admitting they do not have this technology, but because it is logic too. If we live inside a universe where there is life on earth and our technology cannot fully explore beyond the universe, then there must be other places like this too. I also believe there are a kind of covert terms that fall under transhumanism settings. Like people starting their life over, either the term reincarnation might be: Upgrading yourself on earth from previous experiences in ones CURRENT life to a new upgraded person (right now on earth) who keeps upgrading in a loop. Starting over again might be something like removing toxic people, energy vampires & haters from your life to start a quit life without energy draining so you can live happier to your fullest potential. Yes if we die I believe that we have energy that goes to the Akashic field back again. However I do not believe in having visions/dreams of past away family being real all the time if they are there to tell us something/interrogate or show no love, not when the intelligence agencies can use Remote Neural Monitoring to alter EEG waves and give us dreams. Like a parrot has a limited mind so have humans, we think we are the smartest creatures that exists but we are not if we are watching UAP's in the sky for decades. Ghost stories told by elderly generations to kids, to mind control and induce fear are also fake. They where once told by people to keep others off their properties, either you lived in the wrong house with RNM and v2K active around it, to make your parents sell it for less fast, by the IRS. This trick happens a lot.

The brain damage & stroke road

One of the main reasons they are continuously neuro chattering with AI automated and talking inbetween is because they want to make sure you inner speech a lot and cook into aggression. This negative commenting and mimicing mental diseases helps to bring you into a bad health. It also makes sure there is going less air to the brain, hoping for arteries to get blood clutter by overstress, overthinking and depression. This often results in sudden sneaky subtle death. This is exactly what they want at mental care and intelligence to contribute towards the depopulation cycle. They will always make up a reason for targeting, surveillance and silent killing in conspiracy it is easy to perform when citizens are not psyops enough. So getting people who outsmart governments are easy to be pulled into the agencies by tactically disabling them and then go after them silently to kill them this way using mental disease induction with remote neural monitoring and extreme stress/interrogation/depression setups until they collapse from it having brain damage/artery problems/bad health to a shorter life. Intelligence agencies love to do this in conspiracy and it is always easy to blame the target for them saying he/she is crazy/mental has issues/problems or is lying because they are using their neuro patents to make people collapse and submit. Many times they also have an assignment for example if the state has to payout a lot of money towards a target, either when a target outsmarts them or their information system's security or is able to compromise/clean psyop setups like this. Because whistleblowers/activists/hacktivists are in their eyes people who are a damage to their system and the society they created for sheeps of people to be slaughtered anyway having never reached their full power, being drawn into working until they die, having had no time to enjoy life, focused on surviving the standards, expectations and rules of a fake society created by mankind. Ofcourse ai employees from agencies will work along because they believe in the same system.

So stress & depression kill the body

Yes stress and depression can kill, continuously negative commenting with RNM, giving dreams to interrogate, create fear and use anchoring to create triggers (dark NLP). It is all part of their game. Cooking into aggression while yelling inside of yourself to get organ damage, slipped blood clots in arteries, the mind control the body. Disorientating and disturbing/stressing/conditioning/behavior modding the mind for transhumansim gives brain damage. Scientology for example believes in going through experiences to erase them. They use a meter to check it if is erased. The methods used by remote neural monitoring are similar but much more advanced and harshed. There is no mercy and no rest created towards the mind, making sure disturbance & damage takes place. These illegal activities done by governments, agencies like the IRS, intelligence, individuals, groups is to make sure someone dies faster giving the personal a mental disease that also effect the body. This can be done subtle, sneaky and silently so that the person can be blamed for listening to the auditory effect and being cooked 24/7 while they cover it up under "crazy confused, in psychosis person > killed if you do not cooperate threats". It is a pathetic power play of agency employees who want to make you belief it is normal and part of life, that you should accept this. While they walk the streets and many of them get stabbed and shot when their targets and people around it come to know they are lying; They cannot see anything from above, they have no valid evidence, they want to setup others against you, they want to control your life, they want to play with your mind for testing purposes, they try to remotely alter and destroy you life, unless: You submit to what they want, you get transhumanized and a good sheep citizen that helps them with whatever they want to act theater with them, discrediting yourself and making someone happy who wants to win from you, who actually can't. Yes it is pathetic and weak. These infragard/community policing fucks who play cops are just a joke, ready to stand for something bad and get killed suddenly without having had any real oversight on the situation.

Warframe is just perfection

As I mentioned before Warframe is a perfect example of marketing done right. Different currencies, resources to get before you can build something, blueprints and a perfect customized setup for anyone to play makes it unbeatable. But it goes deeper than this. And no I do not get paid to promote Warframe. It is just a game for everyone. Yes I would like to see many people playing it so it may exist as long as possible, so the devs do not have to release an offline patch someday for all the people who invested their gameplay time in this. But you can better play 1 good community based game with others and your friends than 10 games alone in a corner on the bank. You see when you come far into the game, after the missions, after Deimos and after Helminth. You understand how it is setup, the advanced settings, the mods. But when we look at life it is somehow the same:

- You are an OPERATOR (mind) of your OWN WARFRAME (body)
- You can learn what you want in life enhancing yourself (mods, buffs, etc)
- Everyone has their own taste in colors/skins (preferences in life)
- We all have our own interests and skills (specials and powers)
- Everyone needs to work on their OPERATING SYSTEM & WARFRAME
- Tenno story of old Ancient artifacts and wisdom (spiritual growth)

Resulting in we are all Tenno's controlling our MIND, BODY & SPIRIT

What we want to learn and how good we become, is dependent on our interests, in the skills we gain, in the experience we get, in the people we meet and choose to be around with, our growth level, our moment of being satisfied as a whole, the moment we have gained full control and synergized mind, body & spirit to work together so we can live life having reached our full power, without the need of bullshit rules, or society. We all have our own war to fight (jihad from the inside) and we can be made out of fire or just be servants and slaves. Accept yourself 100%!

Elements of self confidence

Many things could take down your self confidence. While it is not necessary. It may come through silent factor or things right in front of your eyes. The opinions of others about you, if you give a damn about it, might be one of the things. But even someone else social media show-reel could give you the feeling your life means nothing. Watching Marvel's super heroes might make you look like a chicken, but is this all really true? While there will be people around targeting you, always, trying to take you down, for some kind of reason (most reasons are; jealousy, hate, envy, greed, wannableness, ego), you are the one that must be strong to say: Nobody can take me down, I will do what I want to do, without giving a fuck what anyone thinks or wants me to believe is the right thing to do, because I know what I am doing. And when you understand this, nothing can take down your self confidence. Not the worlds most advanced psyop programs neither people who will never stop trying to do so. This power of self esteem, being bold, being powerful, being strong and flexible like a Titan, is a mindset that we should all copy whether on the Titan roads or not. Simply because it applies to all lifestyles and mindsets that are truly powerful. If you know that you are good at something, you do not need someone's else approval on telling you whether you are or not. Society, media, TV, evil marketing has made us demons when it comes to money, gold, diamonds, fame and materialism. There has been a control mechanism around for some time that creates stereotypes and pushing people to fit-in-that-box otherwise they don't-belong-to-the-normal standards and people anymore. We want to have everything, but do we really need it? People loose money, get in trouble, get into fights in their own relationships, loose each other, get in trouble with others, even get killed because of it. Everything you see has been tactically setup for mind control with the purpose of mass control and depopulation in mind. While people live happy fake lives the truth of inner peace, being satisfied, living adaptive in every circumstances, while still having your power and control over mind, body & spirit is the most powerful way of living. You do not have to be a minimalist or frugal person, but there is an order that will give you a lot a peace. Before you start working on anything in self development your should start with your self esteem, it is that one things that keeps being touched by others and things, the thing that is your real firewall but everyone tries to intrude. It is clear that outspoken people, those who are watched at from an angle of hate and anger by most others, are the real free people. It is like society is a school yard, where kids are nagging at each other. They pick on the one who “looks” the weakest or they think is the weakest, without knowing they are creating the strongest, against them, later on in life. As for the part of self esteem and power, the ones with the most drama and pain in their lives, if they do not flip and become crazy like hell, will become the strongest persons around walking on earth. This is part of the Titan roads. Would you have mercy with someone, who had no mercy with you? If that person was stronger, would they show mercy towards you? Probably not. What now, when you became stronger and smarter, giving you the feeling of pity, towards them? None, right? This is how lives goes. Tables can be turned anytime. You cannot expect a pre-calculation on things you cannot control. This is when failure happens, while people should learn from it, to be better, they do not accept it and keep on trying “to control”. If you however are very tactical and technical then you could have multiple plans to manipulate an outcome, focusing multiple sources and strings you do control on that one thing you cannot control to make sure, any outcome, will be in your advantage. So my message is to never let anyone mess with your self esteem, because many will try to do so and want to give you psychological harm, resulting in physical harm also. Because the mind controls the body, the spirit relaxed both. We can have bursts of powerful energy but as humans we must take rest, this amount of rest, depends on your own recovery factor and ability. People trying to give us subtle stress, silent overthinking, with words & dark NLP have the intention to harm and destroy. So choose words carefully, always.

Government targeting individuals

Hiring 3rd party personages to perform dirty task as so called informants is normal at the secrecy level of governments. These days they have put infragards and corrupted community policing groups in the work. They think they are police/bounty hunters and are neuro programmed in their own fantasy world to protect crime, targeting whoever may seem awkward. There game of Zerztzung/Zersetzen combined with RNM is getting annoying for many people. Some however really believe they are targeting a criminal/pedo/activist/whistleblower/hackivist for the better.

ZERZETSEN

It's just as the STASI treated Dissidents in Former East Germany, except this Human Rights Abuse is Happening Here Today

This paper is a blueprint on the use of the Zerzetsen "no touch" Torture Technique to break individuals and destroy families. Zerzetsen is a process of character assassination and threats – its purpose is to poison every aspect of a person's life. Today Zerzetsen is being used by the MI5/MI6 Intelligence Agencies in the UK, and CSIS in Canada to persecute a decent family for people in the high establishment. Human Rights Organizations & Politicians are scared to help.

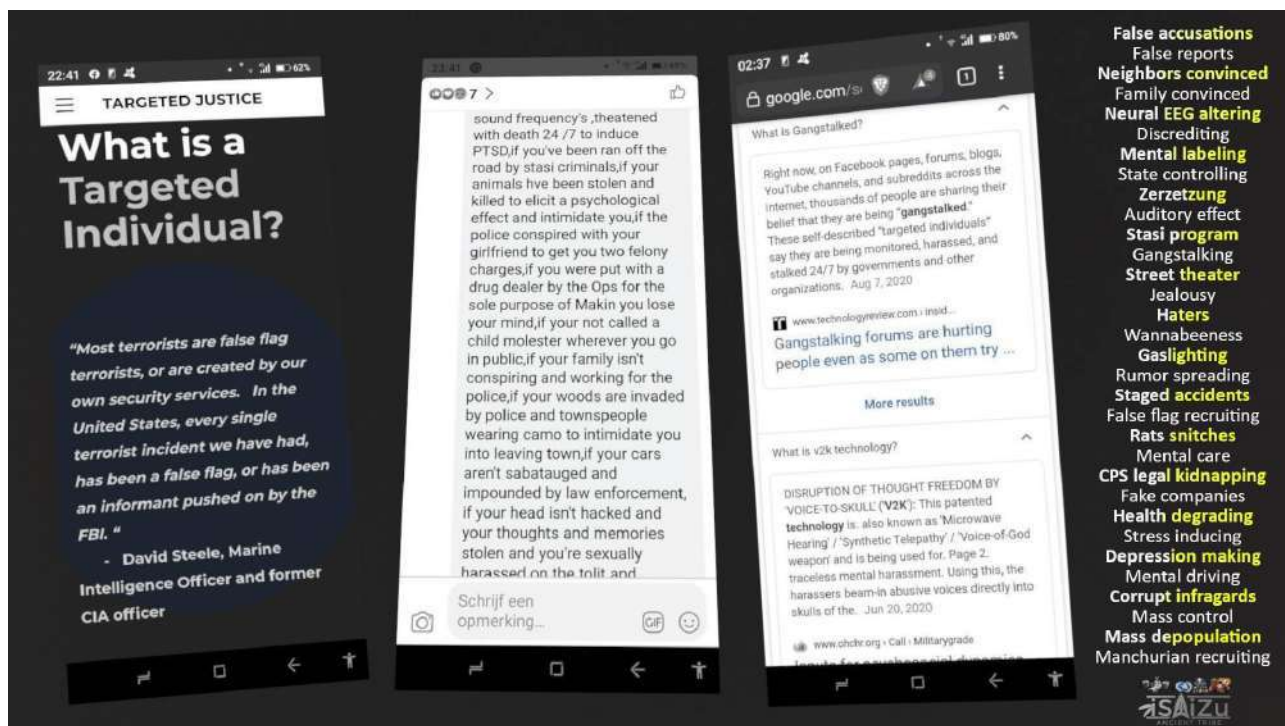

Roderick Russell
#207, 1733 – 27 Ave. SW
Calgary, AB T2T 1G9 Canada
Tel: 403.229.0864

Former Police Chief – "[MI5] Infiltrate organizations, people's jobs and lives. They operate almost like a cancer. At the moment the acorn of a STASI has been planted"

Former CEO of international arms co. on MI6 / CIA – "I was subjected to harassment, burglaries...surveillance, bugging, telephone tapping ... my family suffered considerably ... my brother was killed in an accident never satisfactorily explained"

Targeting individuals worldwide

Everywhere around the internet it seems people want other people to get offline. Their weak arguments to stop coming on social media for people who DO have the control over themselves, are not addicted, not stressed out or depressed is really a pity. But this goes much much further then simple targeting because it fall under predatory stalking and targeting.

The predatory gangstalking group

False accusations will appear from everywhere. Just as well as theaterplay to support those false accusations to convince others to participate in it the hate campaign. There focus to bring mental instability and mental labels on a person seems key. Many mental care employees, cops and other agencies are involved in this dountaking of a person to get them into mental wards or jails for the sake of State control.

They are going to far with it

The people participating in these gangstalking/Zerztzung and mental care's Remote Neural Monitoring harassment. Feel no pity or mercy towards their targets, they are convinced by others the target should be punished or silently assassinated or will try to drive their target into committing suicide. These so called personal psyop games "for your own good" as always with the government and its mafia control agencies, give permanent brain damage, without the government wanting to payout. It is their method to label people, isolate them, incarcerate them, re-neuro program them with psychiatry as a good sheep boy/girl, then only bring them back into society. Or either keep them locked up forever with excuses to come out, by corrupted psychiatric reports, either pushing them to do crimes (Mkultra, Manchurian candidates, false flag)/suicide. They want to see you fail, hoping you are cooked enough and brainwashed to get gay, a pussy or kill a family member so you are neutralized from society and not a problem anymore as whistleblower.

THESE TECHNIQUES ARE UTILIZED WITH THE INTENT TO HARASS,
SABOTAGE, EXTORT, DISCREDIT, DISILLUSION, OR DRIVE A VICTIM TO SUICIDE, INCARCERATION OR INSTITUTIONALIZATION.

The process of automating the neural programming and the psyop program with AI ALICE Chatterbots is described by Dr. Robert Duncan who worked at the CIA on this Remote Neural Monitoring project before the knew they would abuse it like this. Brain Computer Interfaces are able to decode the Electronic Brain Link for thought processing (Brain Waves) and can read/manipulate these waves on a distance. This is just like bits & bytes data but then instead of a harddisk the human harddisk using electromagnetic fields, microwave irradiation and neuro technologies. It is easy for super computer to decode this within 5 minutes. So we are all harddisk that run on software. Our thought, feelings and emotions be manipulated by the patents I showed you back in this little ebook. This illegal transhumanism project to change the world for the better, cleaning with an own opinion “the bad guys” is a pathetic showreel of intelligence failing in the whole setup itself. While interrogation should make the mind tired, confirm data, implanting new behavior mods and conditioning the mind to be submissive towards the operators, all fails when the target understands all the mechanisms of mind control and such techniques.

The world is devilish

While I advised you to read books of Dr. John Hall and Dr. Robert Duncan on Remote Neural Monitoring and Zerzetzung. There is another book that is really interesting to read. The book "Outwitting the devil" will help you understand how evil operates. Evil is everywhere. Any asshole or bitch telling you he/she is an Angel is a lying fuck. Humans have both sides in them both good and bad and they are always active in the mind, it are the decisions that make the difference.

Snowden warned us before

Using any tactical excuse to install surveillance and give power to the State is allowed for intelligence services. So was 9/11 and every false flag and Manchurian candidate operation to bring examples and fear for control. For years I have proven a crime going on in Groningen Netherlands involving mental care (GGZ Lentis) and specific employees. The government neither the police dare to watch the evidence. Why? Because they know they are executing the “confused person”. “in psychosis”, “potential terrorist” program illegally without real valid evidence to show, why they are targeting. This is what Snowden meant. They can do this to anyone, randomly, illegally. Remote Neural Monitoring and Zerztzung, with their pathetic infragards, community policing rats and citizen spies are rolled out everywhere to harass targets for testing purposes to improve the systems of mind control technologies. In their eyes we are all just Guinea pigs ready for the slaughter. We will die anyway so why not do some medical and psychiatric testing to perfectionize the mass control and depopulation schemes. When it comes to testing and failing the government is good at it, when it comes to pay out millions damage claims, you must be crazy, lying, frauding, to avoid it.

The war within to make you submit

They want you on your knees, weak, pathetic just like a fool. Your cooperation means everything for them if you outsmart them. They want to mental drive you so they have an excuse to tell everyone you are just crazy and lying. Everything they will do to prevent from having to pay out large amounts of money for damaging the mind, trying illegal transhumanism projects when they get caught with it. For around every year of illegal harassment 24/7 they should pay 1 million, the same as if someone would be in jail innocent for each year. Their pathetic methods of targeting and mind control tech shows how weak they are in real life. They do not show up and want you to think they will come. Silently they will try to wage war with you everyday trying to make you tired and neuro programmable to win. The pathetic ways of infiltrating your life and mind to try and gain control over it, using their new provokation & surveillance.

Gangstalking is infiltration. Their invasion of privacy is to undermine the targeted individuals lives by waging psychological warfare to induce psychosis and make the victim unbalanced to incoming attacks. They disregard any claims of criminal activity of perpetrators but make the victim appear as a criminal to rally authority to watch or control the victim. They masquerade as society and use guerrilla tactics and hide behind their groups or organizations. They use technology to make the victim transparent and use the victims psychology and social circuit as weapons while downplaying any claims against their wrongdoings. Each day they wage a war with targeted individuals from gangstalking, v2k, hypnosis, subliminals, social media, society and spiritually.

Do not fit in the box

Never try to please people, your time on earth is limited. Also do not give a fuck what other people say or think about you, just do what you want to do. You should never fit into someone's box to be liked or try to be a stereotype of a person. You are you and you should be you, this is what you came here to do on earth. Everyone telling you that you should do this, should do that, no, you will learn from your own experience. You can take the advice if you want it if it is from someone who you trust or know already went through a specific experience, but you should always try on your own to learn and experience also next to it. So you can have your own opinion about it rather than taking one from someone else. Society want people to fit in boxes, those with the most ass kissing skills, will eventually win inside society. I advice you to be strong and not kiss anyone's ass to climb up higher. You do not want to be called a director who kissed ass to climb up the ladder. Better give everyone a fuck you instead. Real leaders are build by failing a million times, then rising.

Some people will only like you if you fit inside their box.

Don't be afraid to shove that box up their ass.

You must die multiple times

When you die multiple times from the inside, then arise, you will grow. Many of you will become leaders, kings, Titans have their own things and followers with many jealous, greedy, ego tripping and envy people around you. When you die and get reborn every time in your growth you will gain in power. You must keep gaining into power until you are satisfied. There comes this moment that you know it is enough and you are through it. Your end result then depends what you will become exactly. But you will never be disappointed because you are ready to live and die, anytime.

Only from dying repeatedly, with gained experience & skills, becoming reborn more powerful every time, you can grow maxed out, becoming a king/leader/titan.

Your pain & sacrifice is your overall gain. So repeat until you are satisfied or fall down when you cannot handle it, to be revived by the strongest that can.

Iffie Hamidullahkhan

"This grading method to upgrade yourself is viable for both earth, the Akashic fields & other planets"

Author information

My name is Iffie Hamidullahkhan and I come from the Netherlands. This little ebook is free to download for you as information and I try to keep it up to date as much as I can. You may not sell or distribute this ebook without knowledge of me. All copyrights to images belong to myself and may not be copied in any way. I wish you all the best in life. And remember me in your road to getting a Titan! Powerful!

YouTube: <https://www.youtube.com/c/iSaiZuTribe/featured>

Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/isaizutribe/>

Instagram: <https://www.instagram.com/isaizutribe/>

Linkedin: <https://linkedin.com/in/isaizutribe>

Twitter: <https://twitter.com/isaizutribe>

Website: <https://www.isaizu.com/>

Live: <https://www.isaizu.com/live/>

Twitch: <https://www.twitch.tv/ifteghaar>

Soundcloud: <https://soundcloud.com/isaizutribe/iffie-hamidullahkhan-boerengap-freestyle-hard-rap>

Targeted individuals: <https://www.isaizu.com/targetedindividuals.php>

Contact form: <https://www.isaizu.com/contact/>

"In the end we do not own anything, the earth owns us and everything that lives inside of it"

WHAT FOLLOWS NOW IS SOME INFORMATION REGARDING TO REMOTE NEURAL MONITORING AND THE RAT/INFRAGARD/COMMUNITY POLICING/ ZERZETZUNG ILLEGAL
MENTAL CARE, POLICE & INTELLIGENCE
SETUP I AM TALKING ABOUT SO START READING FROM THE NEXT PAGE IT IS VERY IMPORTANT INFORMATION
REGARDING THIS SUBJECT OF ILLEGAL
TARGETING THAT WE SHOULD ALL KNOW AND RECOGNISE IN THE FUTURE OF CYBERNETIC MIND HIVE TEAMS EEG
DECODING AND ILLEGAL POLICE SETUPS TO PUT THINGS AT THEIR HAND*

Red flag Groningen community start targeted individual programma + Stasi Zerztzung onder community policing infragard watchgroup hoax van undercover Volksdrivers club Groningen | Disrupt, Discredit, Deceive, Divide, Infiltrate. Spread hate & setup people against each other. In their own advantage, profit or as pre-caution to use later on creating rumors & theaterplay.

Daders die het programma uitvoeren: Mike Vos, Darrell Oehlers, Hong Nguyen, Pham Nguyen, Janine Lindveld Jannick Forster en (Javaans/Indische familie uit Hoogezand Groningen). Vormen een corrupte ratten/informanten samenwerkend met instanties

-Overheids systemen gehackt daarna meteen vervolging door Stasi Zerztzung (zie lafaard Vietnamesees met Hitler hand in lucht) + RNM psyops

Ambtenaren/Scientology setup: Politie & GGZ Lentis + AIVD/PID Groningen – Corrupt community policing infragard

Bron: Petty Wong Kasto medewerkster bekende van vriendin> GGZ (GGZ Lentis als LinkedIn naam) goed in tactische psychologie en transhumanism samen met Darrell Fokko Oehlers (Rijksoverheid) toegang tot remote neural monitoring voelt zich “untouchable” in Grunn en maakt mensen gek (Geestelijk gestoord) om de politie te bellen en controle uit te oefenen op illegale manieren.

Darrell Oehlers's friend request + bericht op LinkedIn opgeslagen. GGZ Groningen onder zijn LinkedIn naam. In het bericht beweerd hij dat hij mijn tussenpersoon wilt zijn (voor hacken overheid?) ongevraagd en opgedrongen, ik heb zijn vriendschapsverzoek niet geaccepteerd (wel een screenshot ervan gemaakt) want ik ken hem en zijn vrienden niet eens ze woonden ineens boven mij in Groningen en begonnen zelf contact te zoeken met mij (aanbellen deur) en me lastig te vallen uit het niets, wilde slaatjes meeslaan, huurde ook een meisje in die zei dat ik haar lastigval die ik niet ken, maar ik reageerde er anders op dan ze hoopten. Het zijn een stel neppe Groningse boerenlullen ingehuurd om lokaal Zerztzung te spelen. We kunnen zien aan de friend request van Oehlers die ik niet ken, aan de functie die Petty Wong Kasto zegt uit te voeren a la GGZ lentis momenteel met transhumanism achtergrond, aan de Gangtalking die familie Kasto en de Vietnamesees van de Volksdriverclub uitvoerd. Dat het ambtenaren zijn die ratten spelen en valse beschuldigingen uiten met boobytraps en valse getuigen om te voorkomen dat iemand veel geld van de belastingdienst meekrijgt op walgelijke manieren. Ze willen graag dat mensen voor hun onderdoen door systematische redenen en conditioneren graag anderen om bang voor ze te zijn of te lijken zodat ze zelf de controle lijken te hebben over het leven van andere door op afstand het “paranoide schizofrenen” programma (controle programma) van de overheid uit te voeren. Echter gebruikt familie Kasto dit voor persoonlijke wraak spelletjes. Hiermee willen ze tevens ook meteen dreigen, omdat ze sukkels zijn, dat als je hun wat durft te doen dat je dan door de lokale politie als verwarde persoon/gek in psychose word neergeschoten. Dit terwijl ze anderen 24/7 per dag met remote neural monitoring en auditory cochlea laser opkoken in agressie en met dark NLP triggers en anchors opwekken om emoties zoals agressie op het juiste gewenste moment op te wekken. De politie kijkt er niet naar want die denkt dat de GGZ met een legaal onderzoek bezig is terwijl de ratten hun <https://rats-nosnitch.com> programma uitvoeren met ondervragingen, conditionering en Mkultra & Monarch totdat iemand gek word en doordraait zodat ze de politie kunnen bellen met zijn allen in een boobytrap. Ze zijn zelfs zo laf dat ze de AMK op en elke instantie van de overheid die ze maar kunnen sturen op je afsturen met valse beschuldigingen omdat ze dus zo nep en afhankelijk zijn van het handelen van anderen. Zelf hebben ze geen enkele uitdaging om in het echt te komen aangenomen en zijn ze niet verschenen voor mijn neus in Den Haag terwijl ik 8 jaar door Groningen heen wandel wat een stel kut pinda's. Tevens zien we duidelijk dat de politie hieraan meewerkt omdat ze willen dat ik al mijn content van internet weg haal omdat ik er teveel vanaf weet en ik de GGZ/AIVD/Politie volgens hun niet mag storen in hun onderzoek met remote neural monitoring. Omdat ze geen reden hebben om mij te onderzoeken voor geen enkele reden, proberen ze redenen te verzinnen en bij elkaar te acteren. Ze doen alsof ze door ogen heen kijken en muren maar hebben slechts zwakke psychologie. Het enige wat ze kunnen doen is wat Edward Snowden zegt "brain processing" waardoor ze nooit hun EEG data als bewijs kunnen dienen omdat iedereen aan een BCI gezet kan worden en brainwaves kan genereren die als neuro feedback kan worden beschouwd wat dus geen bewijsvorming is voor een rechtzaak. Toch willen ze graag dat iemand dat denkt vantevoren zodat de persoon meewerkt omdat deze zich machteloos voelt tegen RNM terwijl het een poepding is dat alleen EEG waves kan alteren zoals het patent zelf beschrijft. Ze geven vaak dromen tijdens de REM om te ondervragen en te provoceren om te kijken om je gek genoeg al bent geworden of om intel te verzamelen. <https://patents.google.com/patent/US3951134A/en> Dit betekend dus dat als de politie niet meewerkt om deze eigen ambtelijke corruptie te bestrijden, dat ze zelf ook meedoen aan deze criminaliteit zonder hard en tastbaar bewijs materiaal. Tevens betekend dat het doden van zo een groep cybernetic gangstalkers die mensen gek maken met hun GGZ familie, met als gevolg een rechtzaak waarin perfecte documentatie zoals deze hier de enige oplossing is, waardoor een rechter daar niet omheen kan. Die betekend dat degene die in een inrichting moet gaan, gek gemaakt is door een groep ambtenaren en lokale inwoners met toegang met GGZ apparatuur. De dader is hierdoor niet toerekeningsvatbaar zeker niet als deze het al gemeld heeft bij de politie en die er niets aan heeft gedaan. Zo een schade vergoeding uit de zak van Belastingdienst Groningen loopt dan al gauw op in de miljoenen. Uiteraard zoeken ze liever een 3e partij die genoeg neemt met minder om de target die er wel doorheen is gekomen (door dit programma) omdat hij te slim is, dood te schieten.

Ze hebben een boobytrap gedaan en ik kreeg toch een valse veroordeling mee geregeld met hun theater and het neuro patent waarbij ze zeiden dat ik Darrell in elkaar geslagen heb, wat niet zo was, omdat ze daarmee willen aanwakkeren dat ik agressief en gevaarlijk ben zodat ze illegaal remote neural monitoring kunnen toepassen, ze zullen altijd wel een reden verzinnen om mij onder surveillance te houden, eerst ben ik een crimineel, dan een pedo, dan iemand uit een criminele organisatie, ze blijven maar onzin verzinnen. Ze zien niets en doen alleen wat Snowden zegt (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=YKnVcjXfjs4>), live mind reading met een BCI en CBI signal decoder (koffertje). De overheid gebruikt cybernetic mind hive teams om tegenstanders uit te schakelen op illegale wijzes meestal door ze gek te maken, labelen als "in psychose" en door politie te laten neerschieten. Triest. Ze kunnen hier Remote Neural Monitoring dan ook niet gebruiken in een rechtszaal maar doen wel alsof ze door je ogen heen kijken (tactisch zodat je het gelooft) en ondervragen je ook met dromen in de REM slaap (als je een dode familielid ziet niet vertrouwen). Gedachten zijn geen feiten en zullen het ook niet zijn. Inlichtingendiensten maken graag redenen om iemand onder surveillance te houden. Ze maken zelf redenen op met data. Dat mag juist niet. Internet activiteiten, filmpjes, foto, profielen of websites, het is een overtreding van de overheid om daarnaar te kijken.

Targets pushen tot werkeloosheid en een geestelijk label proberen op te plakken en uit te lachen als gek/activist/whistleblower/hacktivist/conspiracy theorist + daarnaast ook meerder verzoeken om mijn social media en internet activiteiten stop te zetten. Hetgeen waar geen Kvk nummer voor nodig is omdat de website een persoonlijke website is waarbij de server word gehost via vrijwillige donaties van anderen. Er is duidelijk sprake van jaloezie, haat, ego, benijd, gierigheid uit dit clubje dat zelf ook op internet komt met minder mooi en effectief materiaal (YouTube vlog zonder eigen website met daarop homo neefje Beyonce). Het is duidelijk dat gedrags modificatie, dark NLP, hypnotische suggestie, psychological warfare en Mkultra + Monarch met manipulatie en dit patent <https://patents.google.com/patent/US3951134A/en> centraal staat. Het word ook gebruikt om valse vlag terroristen en Manchurian candidates te programmeren. Het nabootsen van emoties via brain-heart connection and het orgaan jerken effect door agressie koken voor een slechter gezondheid en korter leven. De politie kijkt niet naar mijn bewijs voering en uiteraard alleen naar die van hun ratten. Ze verspreiden onzin over hun target en hopen dat deze met community slaughter (door te roepen hey crimineel/pedo) lokken ze agressief gedrag uit tactisch richting hun targets. Ze willen dan ook graag dat zoveel mogelijk mensen meedoen met de discrediting, deceiving & disrupting van hun target denkend dat ze aan iets goeds meewerken. Meerder mensen in de maatschappij zijn op deze manier onschuldig de gevangenis + inrichtingen in beland, hebben zelfmoord gepleegt of opgezette ongelukken meegemaakt. Ze proberen alles wat je hebt opgebouwd waarmee je kan doorbreken neer te halen ook, zielig en laf. Ze proberen je letterlijk te mental driven "gek" maken door met AI (voicecloning) psychologische programma's te maken en gedragsmodificatie te testen.

Bedreigen tegen mij als targeted individual door laten neerschieten via politie vanwege geestelijk label terwijl gedragsmodificatie met patent wangedrag en leven proberen te verpesten met psychologie op afstand. Ook dreigen met AMK om kinderen weg te halen. Er word duidelijk misbruik gemaakt van meldingen en pogingen door het groepje. Proberen met theater en valse getuigen rechtzaken tot schade vergoedingen te winnen om dakloos te krijgen. Dit programma word uitgevoerd overal ter wereld veelal op activisten, whistleblowers, hacktivist. Er is al veel bewijs hiervoor <https://www.targetedevidence.com> | <https://www.isaizu.com/targetedindividuals.php> ze vragen mij letterlijk of ik wil doen alsof ik bang voor ze ben en onder hun controle sta, of ik wil meewerken aan dit en zelfmoord wil plegen omdat ze levenslang door zullen gaan met remote neural monitoring en hun haat campagne tegen mij. Ik zelf zie ze als een groep sukkel die duidelijk "help geestelijk gestoord, politie schiet hem voor mij" nodig hebben en overduidelijk een nep karakter hebben zonder ballen. Ze maken puur gebruik van tactische psyops en instanties, meer niet. Ze maken ook zelf hun bullshit regels dat bijvoorbeeld jij geen eigen website mag hebben, geen geluk mag hebben, geen liefde mag ervaren. En dus continue in een hoekje zou moeten zitten luisterend naar hun neuro programmering om dood te gaan (dikke lul voor ze). Ook zouden ze bewijs hebben van alles en nog wat maar als je ze er dan naar vraagt hebben ze niets om echt te laten zien of te gebruiken want gedachten zijn geen feiten EEG data is waardeloos bij een rechter net als audio. Remote neural monitoring is een provocatie/ondervragings/boobytrap met valse getuigen middel geworden om een politie/surveillance staat. Het zijn veelal Javanen/Indo's uit Hoogezand en omstreken Groningen die zich met deze activiteiten voor een extra salaris bezighouden (#targeting)

Onthoud dat dus:

- Voice cloning is makkelijk ze kunnen jouw stem nadoen, van anderen, van familieleden je kunt voice cloning zelf uitproberen via internet en software
- Tactische psychologie en dark NLP is het ze kunnen niets zien maar doen graag alsof ze dat wel kunnen zodat ze jouw beter kunnen controleren en triggers (om agressie of verdriet op te roepen) en anchors aanmaken (rood autootje of kleding om angst op te roepen) is wat ze graag doen
- Ze doen bij anderen alsof ze jouw en je leven onder controle hebben en alsof ze kunnen voorkomen/besturen wat jij doet
- Ze kijken niet door muren heen en hebben geen bewijs daarom komt er nooit een rechtzaak zoals ze dat zeggen

Vaak zien we ook dat deze mensen met nieuwe auto's komen aanrijden en toeterend proberen indruk te maken op hun target. Ze hebben dan vaak geld aangenomen als RAT van de politie of Belastingdienst. De target een minderwaardigheids complex meegeven zodat deze meewerkt met de groepje ratten staat centraal. Dat is puur tactiek om valse beloftes te maken en dan vervolgens hun target te terroriseren, aanvallen en aangiftes te doen terwijl ze met RNM doorgaan 24/7 en bedreigen dat je toch als geestelijk gestoorde word gezien en de politie aan hun kant staat. De waarheid hier is dat de overheid als orgaan deze setting nodig heeft om te winnen. Op het moment dat de informatie die ik blootstel als whistleblower/activist word ervaren als bewijs merk je meteen dat alle instanties als politie, Justitie, GGZ ineens proberen contact te vermijden en niet over het onderwerp willen praten. Het is duidelijk dat deze "Manchurian candidate & false flag terrorism intelligence programma's" gericht worden uitgevoerd. Mensen selecteren iemand uit de maatschappij en zorgen ervoor dat deze als voorbeeld "theaterstuk" een ernstig misdrijf plegen met zijn allen. Vervolgens schuiven ze deze af op het eigen gedrags van de persoon terwijl er gedragsmodificatie per remote neural monitoring word uitgevoerd. Moslims zoals mij krijgen te horen dat ze geen moslim meer moeten zijn (dus in Satan moeten geloven, zoals Tristan vd Vlis hoorde) en dat een grote groep mensen mij graag dood wil hebben. Als ik dan zeg kom dan, dan komen ze echter niet opdagen. Het is een triest zootje daar in Groningen zowel we wel kennen in de randstad kk neppeds inbred Javaantjes. Tevens is het goed de bedoeling dat ik gediscridit word. Zo word er continue gezegt dat ik moet doen alsof ik karate heb gedaan. Dit overduidelijk programma duid erop dat dit clubje dat afhankelijk is van remote audio en EEG spelletjes geen enkele andere vorm van verdediging heeft dat de politie/GGZ/instanties te bellen nadat ze zelf een misdaad hebben gepleegt der ambtelijke corruptie. Na het aantonen van deze corruptie wilt uiteraard niemand hierna kijken en wilt niemand er gevolgen voor hebben, jammer voor ze de verspreiding van deze informatie is nu permanent in de voor -en achtergrond. En er bestaat geen enkel cult der transhumanism en remote neural monitoring abuse die daar omheen kan met praatjes. Zeker niet hoe ik ze heb gedocumenteerd, gefilmt en vastgelegd met hun pre-setup en valse aangiftes. Dus nu wil de politie en AIVD mij graag dood samen met deze remote neural monitoring groep. Ze hopen mij op te koken/misdaden te laten begaan (help agressieve gek te gillen) en een torie neer te zetten als zielige lafaards die voor de GGZ werken en de overheid. Hieraan zien we duidelijk de ambtelijk corruptie bij de AIVD, GGZ en Overheid en kunnen we wat Snowden zegt bevestigen: "When exposing a crime is treated as committing a crime, you are being rules by CRIMINALS"

soms vraag ik mij ook af of het is omdat ik (Ahmadiyya) moslim ben want er werd mij gevraagd een ander geloof aan te nemen wat ik nooit in mijn leven zal doen! En sommige van de indos uit die familie zijn soennitisch. Ze probeerd Allah te spelen op remote neural monitoring zoals ze Satan speelde bij Tristan van der Vlis maar omdat ik er teveel vanaf weet stopte ze ermee en lieten ze gewoon weten dat ze vanaf Petty Wong Kasto en de GGZ een apparaat hebben met dit neuro patent erin geïntegreerd om op EEG level neuro feedback met een Brain Computer Interface te lezen en dat er een nano chip is waardoor ze met laser audio via zendmasten kunnen targeten. Want als je audio kan horen per stem, betekent het uiteindelijk altijd dat het gewoon audio is en dat er niet zonder audio via EEG (subliminal) word gebeamd, wat overigens wel mogelijk is, je krijgt dan een artificial "gevoel" die niet van jezelf komt. Er er word geprobeerd mij als false flag/Manchurian candidate te recuiten. Hierdoor lijkt het vaak alsof al deze mensen Scientology/Freemasons zijn, maar omdat de politie en instanties meewerken kunnen we er simpelweg vanuit gaan dat het de overheid is die zich met 3e partijen in te huren probeert in te coveren. Niet alle politie weet dat de GGZ en deze familie dit soort spelletjes van remote gek makerij en "verwarde psychotische moet in control van de staat zijn" spelletjes speelt.

Wat is nu een normale reactie hierop?:

1. Geweldpleging omdat de politie er niet naar kijkt, maar de RECHTER wel en vrijspraak is dan ook normaal nadat dit alles zo gedocumenteerd is met de illegale PROVOCATIE van hen erbij
2. Ze zien niets van boven maar willen dat toch wijsmaken want als je met je vrienden hun terug wilt pakken dan lullen ze ineens onzin over hoe de politie alles ziet, hoe je geen (vuur)wapens in hun buurt kan krijgen en hoe ze "speciaal" zijn om op tijd te onderscheppen. Dus niet intrappen. Ik ben meerdere keren Groningen ingegaan gewapend. Niet 1x heeft iemand mij onderschept. Dus tsha je kunt overal mee lopen. Maar wil je het legaal doen? Elke mes beneden 10cm is legaal volgens de wet politie kan het niet pakken.
3. Ze beweren bewijs te hebben maar vragen je of je even mee wilt kijken op een lege telefoon tijdens 1 van hun acts om te doen alsof ze iets hebben opgenomen. Zodat ze anderen weer kunnen overtuigen tot community slaughter.
4. Veel mensen vinden dat ik een GRID heb neergezet nu op hun actie. Wat betekend doordat mensen nu weten wat familie Kasto in Groningen allemaal doet (rat zijn, stemmetjes beamen, mensen gek lullen) hun leven in gevaar brengt. Maar ik ben niet ver gedaan want ze mogen dit niet zomaar doen. Helemaal omdat er geen bewijs is tegen mij en ze die niet kunnen aantonen. Tevens ben ik niet verantwoordelijk voor de daden van iemand anders die hetzelfde vind als ik hierover.
5. Meerder mensen zullen nu proberen misbruik te maken die zoals hun zijn in de zin van "help geestelijk gestoord, doe mij niets want anders "schiet de politie je neer als verwarde persoon of psychotische". Maar dat doet mij niets het houd mij niet tegen om geen geweld te gebruiken want 1. ik heb gelijk 2. de politie komt erna met het witte tentje niet ervoor 3. iedereen loopt zonder politie op straat 4. politie levert zijn wapens in de kluis na werk 5. na werk is de agent gewoon een burger
6. Ik heb al aangetoont hiermee dat ik gelijk heb en dat er een illegale actie op mij word uitgevoerd dit jarenlang, wat in het Nederlands heet "PERSOONSGERICHTE VERSTORING" der staat. Echter vanwege de inhoud namelijk MKULTRA en MONARCH is dit een poging tot MOORD vanuit de overheid om potentieel gevaar op te ruimen. Dit terwijl ik ooit hield van de overheid omdat ik geloofde dat het goede dingen deed. Nu heb ik echter geleerd van deep state en duistere mensen erbinen de wereld controleren op een walgelijke mind controllende manier waar ik totaal geen respect meer voor heb of zal krijgen.
7. Groningen wilt mij liever als geestelijk gestoorde persoon neerzetten en doodmaken dan dat het mij uitbetaald in wat ik na deze 10 jaar van illegale persoonsgerichte verstoring verdien aan schade. Niemand had verwacht dat ik zo zou reageren op dit programma en ze zijn niet blij dat ik mijn intelligentie niveau tijdens dit programma heb laten zien. Want dat was juist nite de bedoeling.
8. Simpelweg wraak nemen en zorgen dat er wel een rechtszaak komt waar al deze bewijsstukken op tafel staan is volgens velen de juiste oplossing. Uiteraard word er met plezier geweld toegepast door een ieder die niet bij het clubje hoort en dit alles begrijpt.
9. Er werd mij verteld om mij online publicaties te stoppen, ik ben meerdere keren bedreigt door politie agenten (nog niet in elkaar geslagen jammer genoeg) en ook om mijn internet activiteiten te stoppen. Ze zijn er duidelijk mee bezig om mij net zoals DAVID ICKE en ALEX JONES neer te halen. Echter word het bij mij moeilijker omdat ik meerdere servers heb ook private servers waarop content gemirrord word en opgeslagen staat waar de AIVD en politie niet bij kan. Waaronder documentatie zoals deze.
10. Jaren geleden voordat dit begon was ik in contact gekomen met iemand bij de CIA. Dat was remote viewing heet en waar mensen dus poep over praten, dat bestaat helemaal niet. Het was altijd al remote neural monitoring geweest via zendmasten en satellieten op lage frequentie dat de elektrische grid van de hersenen kan benaderen op imprinting of nano chips.
11. Als ik word vermoord door de politie of AIVD wil ik dat iedereen weet dat ik gelijk had, als ik ooit zelfmoord pleeg weet dan dat ik dat niet was want ik zou dat nooit doen. Als ik op de politie schiet of agressief reageer en hun nek of gezicht breek weet dan dat het niet zo was bedoeld het was per ongeluk.

Het grappig is nu dat de politie niets kan doen wat er in de achtergrond en voorgrond aan data verspreid. Ze kunnen niet kijken op prive servers en op het darkweb als ze de locaties niet weten hoe deze informatie zich verspreid, wie het bereikt, of wie het verder verspreid binnen zijn netwerk. Zo ontstaat een ketting reactie waardoor er op dergelijke corrupte informanten geweld word gepleegd. <https://www.ad.nl/binnenland/politie-wiste-sporen-uit-na-dood-informant~a1c967e5/> Deze informanten kunnen burgers zijn die voor een CID, PID of AIVD agent onderwerken maar ook gewoon lokale infragards and community policing groepen die targets en bounties zoeken. Remote neural monitoring voegt daaraan provocatie toe op een nieuwe level. Op het moment dat ondervraging plaatsvind hetzij via audio of door middel van dromen in de REM inductie (mind altering brainwaves) zullen informanten als deze altijd doen alsof ze via de ogen kunnen kijken etc etc. Helaas voor hun is wat Edward Snowden al heeft verraden de waarheid hoe tactisch psychologisch deze "agents" ook zijn. Na bijna 10 jaar illegaal targeting vanuit Groningen waar GGZ Lentis aan meewerkte kwam ik erachter dat ze niets zien van boven, niets door muren heen, geen tastbaar bewijs hebben etc etc ze willen juist dat je dat gelooft. Door mijn informatie kunnen deze idioten dus zulke corrupte operaties zo lang als ze zelf willen niet ten uitvoer meer brengen. Dat betekend geen vuurwapens in beslag nemen, geen wachtwoorden weten. Geen fuck. En daar zijn ze niet blij om. De politie weet uit ervaring dat als iemand TOR gebruikt of TAILS en het darkweb opgaat met VPN, Macchanger etc. Dat de politie geen controle heeft daar. Ze proberen daarom altijd psychologisch mensen gerust te stellen ook als dat niet zo is. Op dit moment zijn er veel corrupte agenten en informanten en velen ervan zullen mij proberen te doden op basis van deze informatie ook bij de inlichtingendienst zoals ze meerdere pogingen waagde op Snowden in zijn hotel. Deze informant die aan stukken is gehakt kan er niet over meepraten <https://www.ad.nl/binnenland/politie-wiste-sporen-uit-na-dood-informant~a1c967e5/> maar er zijn velen die dood gegaan zijn op valse beloftes van de politie of corrupte informantjes <https://www.ad.nl/binnenland/politie-informant-dagenlang-gruwelijk-gemarteld-in-loods~ab838936/> Wees u daarom bewust ervan dat als een infragard of politie agent u probeert te rekruteren als valse getuigen of operator dat ze veel dingen niet in de hand hebben, maar zullen lullen van wel. Zo zijn ze getrain. Dingen zoals "je vriend in de ander kamer heeft al bekend nu jij" of "er zat een demper op" zijn methodes om te laten praten en bekennen maar ook om langer straf toe te wijzen. Trap er niet in. Zoals RNM geen bewijs vormt wacht altijd tot er echt bewijs is want de politie bluft als de fuck. Mensen zijn vantevoren ge neuro programmeerd om bang te zijn voor politie. Want als je "stout" bent komt de politie eraan. School, werken, trouwen, kinderen, pensioentje, dood & repeaten maar op de kinderen die cirkel is wat u heeft geleerd en wat gestandiseerd is. Vaak probeerd zo een bounty hunter / informantje een burger te gebruiken en mee te laten doen denkende dat deze achter een crimineel/pedo aanzit. Veel zwakzinnige reageren daar natuurlijk op en voelen zich de held. Echter als ze erachter komen dat ze ruzie krijgen en in de problemen raken, zie je de informanten niet meer lopen. Sommigen van deze leven zelfs zo erg op hun reputatie dat ze vragen of je wilt meewerken om met hun mee te acteren alsof je bang voor ze bent en onder hun controle staat (stelletje boerenkneuzen). Als iedereen dan erachter komt dat ze gangstalkend, Zerzetzung, Stasi spelletjes spelen met een mattie en dan in hun rug worden geschoten op dezelfde laffe manier als ze lullen en geestelijke labels willen opklappen, vervangt de agent gewoon zijn informant. Geld uitbetalen aan deze bogus mislukte onderzoeken doet de overheid niet, ze huren liever doorgewinterde criminelen in om de te slimme mensen uit te schakelen. Of bedreigen met instanties zoals de AMK om je kinderen weg te halen als je niet knielt voor de ratten. Grappig word het helemaal als ze merken dat je er teveel over weet en ze te hard verspreid waardoor hun leven in gevaar komt. Dan hoor je verhalen als "kom je hoort nu bij mij". Zelf beweerende deze sukkels georganiseerde criminaliteit bestrijden. En je krijgt uiteraard een nieuwe auto en wat zakgeld mee als je ook een snitch word (in hun belang om niet neergeknalt en geschoten te worden). Uiteraard zal een enkele mongool daarop ja zeggen. Ik raad u aan om nee te zeggen. Deze zielige tuig target iedereen ook onschuldig voor wat bounties en een aai over hun hoofd van de politie. Opvallend is dat ze altijd komen met iemand van het geslacht van voorkeur. Bijvoorbeeld 10 gasten en 1 meisje. De meisje zal dan contact zoeken en daarna lastigvallen en valse aangiftes doen, de jongen proberen te procoveren en ruzie te maken maar verdwijnen daarna als je een agressieve reactie afgeeft. Vervolgens proberen ze je gek te maken met RNM op remote en lokken ze agressie uit, door het aanmaken van triggers (NLP) ze willen dan graag op tijd politie kunnen bellen en je laten oppakken en boobytrappen met valse getuigen. Het probleem vormt wanneer de politie geen overzicht meer heeft en ze teveel geopenbaard staan. Want dan kan de politie niet meer weten waar deze informatie bij valst. Edward Snowden had gelijk over deze EEG decoding mind reading tech met BCI en CBI. Corruptie is massaal gegroeit ermee en de overheid maakt levens kapot ermee, huwelijken, kinderen, miljonairs, influencers en past ook illegaal Mkultra, Monarch en suïcidaal inductie toe in gevangenis en gekken huizen. Als re- neuro programmeren niet werkt, dan willen ze je dood. False flag terrorist, Manchurian candidate, zelfmoord, ondetecteerbaar vergif of opgezette infragard ongeluk. Het maakt ze niet uit. Zelf proben ze beroemd te worden op internet en willen ze dat jij ervanaf gaat om enige succes te voorkomen in de naam van de staat en belastingdienst. Hun gehele familie komt uit Groningen en zijn van de boeren die onzin verzinnen bij hun politie vriendjes in Groningen om mensen onder GGZ surveillance te zetten als gevaar voor de Staat en deze te achtervolgen, vervolgens te doen alsof de target bang voor ze is en gedrag mods aan te maken. https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Fr8u_rSQcVs&ab_channel=whitneyvalerie Aan de homo die geprogrammeerd is en zich Bejornc noemt kunnen we het al zien (wilt graag Bejornc zijn) het zijn allemaal gekken met een grote bek die toegang hebben tot RNM.

Girlscene oplichtster Janine Lindveld = Janine Boomhuizen

Ook de Vietnamese vriend staat bekend als oplichter op het Volksdriver forum (onderdelen) en deze zijn dus beide gerekruteerd door de GGZ voor remote neural monitoring en de operatie om activisten, whistleblowers en hacktivist aan te pakken en te boobytrappen. Zijn vast gerekruteerd om gevangenisstraf te voorkomen met klusjes. Hier links haar IP adressen van haar internet provider door de forum beheerder.

De politie van Groningen ondersteund deze zogenaamd "criminaliteit bestrijdende" groep corrupte ratten.

Subliminale berichten en tekens > zoals Oehlers die op een varken lijkt omdat te verwijzen naar Guinea Pigs (John Hall)

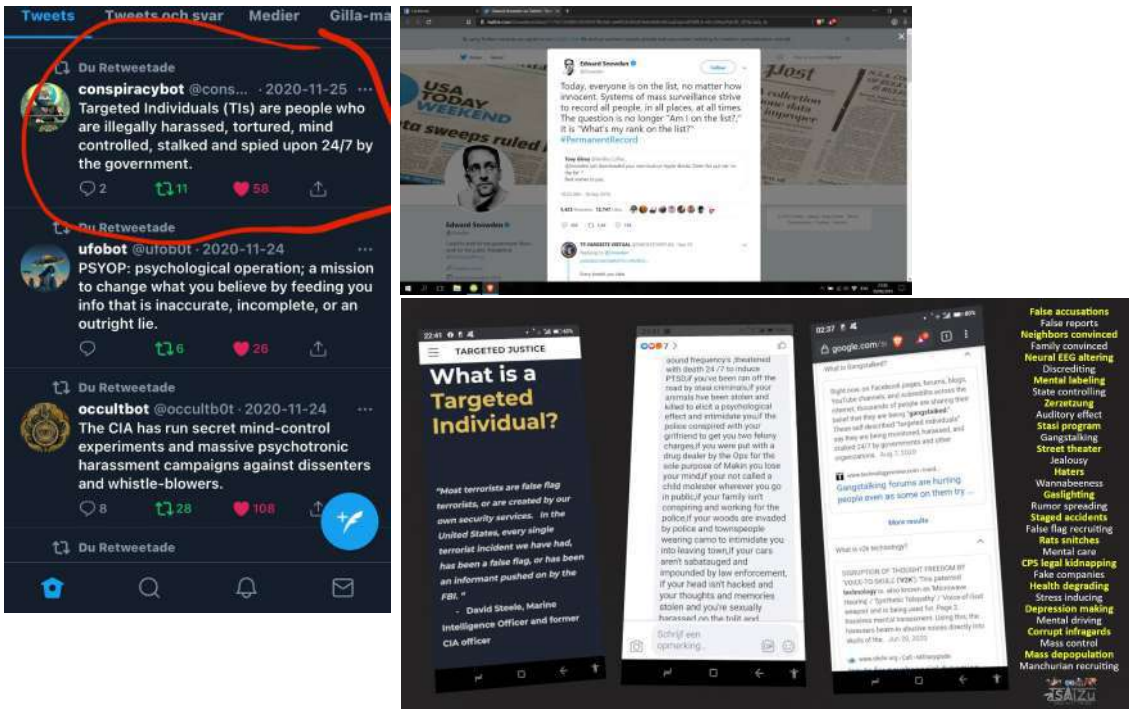

Als slappe neppe boerenlullen spelen ze graag "straat theater" en roepen van alles na

Hey hey hey, ho ho ho, okay okay okay is het enige wat ze roepen als mensen hun gezicht willen breken vanwege hun acties, helaas is iedereen daarop voorbereid en voelt niemand medelijden na zo een zielige bogus operatie uit Grunn.

Ze willen dat je niet traint, geen vechtsporten doet, nep bent tegenover hun (discrediten), geen website hebt (Alles in hun voordeel dan moet je checken hoe ze zelf op YT komen als narcisten uit de dark Triad dit zijn zwaar schijnheilige doorgewinterde dark empath's en vieze ratten werkend bij GGZ politie CID PID Groningen)
Kracht verminderen door 24/7 neuro chatter en overtuigen om slap en dom te worden is alvast mislukt forever.

Deze oplichters en zogenaamd transhumanism groep onder leiding van de GGZ, wat Scientology vriendjes, de Belastingdienst, corrupte informantjes, corrupte ambtenaren, corrupte politie agenten en inlichtingen personeel dat graag elke moslim omprogrammeerd om een valse vlag terrorist te zijn. Zelig en laf op afstand met remote neural monitoring. Ze zijn bewijlsloos.

Hieronder zien we een bericht op security.nl we zien aan de Hitler hand en houding opgenomen van deze Vietnamees dat hij daadwerkelijk dit programma uitvoerd. Ook door zijn valse aangiftes. Hij wild mij neerzetten als een oplichter en iemand die zijn hoertje lastig valt. Dit terwijl ze probeerde met RNM met huwelijk kapot te maken wat mislukt is. Hopend dat het beter als waarheid overkomt dat ik haar lastig val. Zelfs als ik in DH woonde en hij in Grunn (moet je nagaan). Valse meldingen van kindermishandelingen bij het AMK omdat de zieligerds zagen dat ik kinderen had en mij zo onder druk wilde zetten of legal kidnapping wilde uitvoeren (Google: Carlos Morales CPS). De AMK zag uiteraard in dat meldingen vanaf Groningen naar Den Haag niet precies klopte en zagen dat er niets aan de hand was dus lieten ze het gaan. Het opdringen van hunzelf als mijn tussenpersoon (zoals die opgenomen friend request van Oehlers). En dit precies nadat ze begonnen te praten hoe ik in de systemen van de overheid gezeten zou hebben. Waarschijnlijk wilde ze ergens een slaatje mee slaan. Security.nl bericht over gangstalking en het Mkultra programma waarbij de overheid van tegenstanders afkomt met psychologie/psychiatrie des doods en neppe goede bedoelingen in de voorgrond staat inmiddels over het gehele internet bekend. Groningen onkent dit verhaal omdat ze weten hoe ver ze zijn gegaan en hoe ze nu de levens van al deze mensen in gevaar hebben gebracht door mij deze informatie te laten exposen. Ze zoeken naar alternatieve oplossingen voor het probleem die ze steeds maar niet kunnen vinden, terwijl ze steeds meer verspreid worden (geautomatiseerd door mijn systemen). Wat hier hard naar voren komt is dat de politie, AIVD, MIVD geen inzicht heeft over hetgeen wat gebeurd via VPN netwerken of het darkweb. Zoals ze zelf Mkultra en Monarch uitvoeren op afstand zo reageren mensen dan ook met de doodsklap, doodssteek en doodschot op heb. Als wat je op opsporing verzocht ziet heeft een dieper verhaal dan de simpele burger zal begrijpen totdat ze dit snappen: Criminaliteit, Manchurian candidates (shootouts) en valse vlag terrorisme word door de inlichtingendienst van de STAAT zelf aangemaakt. Want zonder criminaliteit kan de staat niet burger bang maken en hoe "nodigheid" voor de burger benadrukken. Tevens kan het ook niet voor massa surveillance zorgen zonder een 9/11 achtige actie of een shootout op een school zo nu en dan. Massa surveillance geeft vervolgens weer toegang tot massa depopulatie, zo draait de cirkel. Uiteraard als je hierover spreekt word je gestempeld als radicaliserend, toekomstige terrorist en iemand die onder surveillance moet blijven. Zelfs nu ik zoveel bewijs heb verzameld tegen hun DURFT de politie er niet naar te kijken.

presented by Certified Secure

NieuwsAchtergrondCommunityInloggen | Registreren

Privacy - Wat niemand over je mag weten

"Hackers gezocht voor Stasi programma's"

17-09-2017, 19:25 door Anoniem, 20 reacties

Ik wil reageren op het artikel over Gangstalking , deze is helaas gelocked en ik heb bruikbare informatie. Op de volgende site staat uitgelegd wat gangstalking is: www.zersetzung.org

De security community wordt ook getarget, dit moge voor zich spreken. Er zijn beheerders nodig om de mensen in zulke projecten (M.K. ULTRA gebaseerde programma's) te monitoren. Ik zeg dit alleen omdat ik er zelf ook last van heb en het je hele leven kan ontwrichten (wat de bedoeling is van deze programma's). Het is gekant tegen Privacy, tegen Security, tegen Zelfontplooiing, tegen Kritisch Denken, tegen Zelfstandigheid, tegen Financiële Onafhankelijkheid.

Mensen die reageren op een post en zeggen dat je naar de psycholoog moet, of diegenen die dit als een conspiracy theorie afdoen zijn vervelend. Maar je komt er pas achter zodra je zelf aan de beurt bent: www.areyoutargeted.com?

IT-mensen en Linux specialisten zijn actief nodig om deze programma's draaiende te houden. Er is ook vraag naar blackhat hackers. In de veiligheidswereld (van de overheden) worden ook white en gray hats aangetrokken. Het duurt meestal niet lang voordat ze black zijn en dingen (moeten) doen tegen hun principes en zin in. Helaas kunnen deze hackers daarna niet meer van "hoed" verwisselen zonder zelf slachtoffer te worden van het systeem. Het is een systeem dat je verwacht in een totalitair land.

Het is een algeheel Takedown/Slowkill programma dat al decennia bestaat maar met techniek heel geavanceerd is. Veel gaat automatisch. Bijna elk ziekenhuis digitaal en patiëntennamen kunnen in realtime worden ingezien. Als jij getarget bent ben je de klos en afhankelijk van het niveau van jouw speelveld kan dat heel gevaarlijk zijn. De reden van targeting staan ook op de site hierboven. Deze is professioneel en redelijk compleet. Wat ze doen is illegaal in elk land ter wereld, het betreft grove mensenrechten schendingen. Ook in Nederland.

Ik ben ergens blij te lezen dat ik niet de enige ben op dit forum. Succes aan diegenen wiens leven gebukt gaat onder zulke terreur. Het zou niet gesteund moeten worden door mensen die ooit in de Free & Open Software community begonnen zijn.

P. V.

▲ Populaire app voor steam verzamelt privacy gevoelige informatie over browsing activiteit
▼ [Verwijderd]

Reacties (20)

Zoeken

Vacature

solimas

Security consultant

Weet jij alles van security, governance, risk en compliancy en weet je dit te vertalen naar gerichte oplossingen voor onze klanten? Begrip jij als geen ander zowel de inhoudelijke kant, als de 'organizational change' kant van cybersecurity? Dan ben jij wellicht onze nieuwe security consultant

Lees meer

Vacature

Digital Forensic Researcher Mobile Device Hacking

Netherlands Forensic Institute (NFI)

As a digital expert in the field of mobile device hacking, you will strengthen the Digital Technology team. Your challenge? Reverse engineer the workings and security of mobile consumer devices.

Lees meer

Vacature

Groepen mensen die anderen mensen graag een GGZ label opgeven om ze te discrediten en aan te vallen, tactische zetten van tevoren om later overal mee weg te komen wat ze tegen de target doen. Deze mensen worden vaak neergezet als verwarde, in psychose en GGZ patientjes. Dit terwijl de AIVD, PID, CID, infragards hier zelf aan werken. Voorbeelden hiervan zijn Tristan van der Vlis die gebruikt werd als Manchurian candidate door hetzelfde psyops programma. Om dit soort mensen zitten meerdere instanties van de overheid heen die zo een persoon als target uitkiezen waarvan zijn leven kapot wordt gemaakt op tactische wijze. De "voice of god/satan" weapon wordt dan gebruikt om met microwave irradiation tech stemmetjes op EEG frequentie of microchips te verzenden. De target wordt vervolgens geestelijk gestoord gemaakt, gebruikt en gedumpt. In dit geval zijn de schuldigen dan ook bekend. Websites zoals www.verwardepersonen.nl spreken hier ook over. Medewerkers van de GGZ, lokale PID, AMK, politie, ambulance, AIVD, brandweer hebben 1 systeem waarin ze samenwerken. Maar ook 3e partijen met een contract met de overheid zoals infragards spelen een grote rol (ratten/snitches). Elke ervan doelt erop geld te maken door iemand tijdelijk financieel steun te bieden door een uitkering / klusje / rekrutering en daarna te targeten en neer te halen. Woorden als gangstalking en remote neural monitoring worden hierdoor huis/kamer/keuken woorden omdat ze gebruikt worden om mensen paranoia en schizofrenie te maken en zo neer te zetten gecombineerd met persoonlijke data waarvan een psychologische programma wordt gemaakt en tevens ook met straat theater en remote neural monitoring. Hierbij is het locken op een gedeeltelijk AI chatterbot nodig om negatief/positief commentaar te geven en zo gedragsmodificatie uit te voeren (hersenspoelen) maar ook om de persoon geïsoleerd te krijgen in een inrichting of gevangenis zodat deze gedragsmodificatie om iemand te verschappen/braaf te maken makkelijker plaats kan vinden. Zulke groepen zetten dat vaak ook boobytraps waarbij ze hun target met dark NLP van tevoren gemaakte triggers agressief kunnen krijgen op het juiste moment zodat ze met valse onafhankelijke getuigen tactisch de persoon kunnen laten insluiten via de politie. Ze zullen dan met zijn allen geestelijk gestoorde persoon en van alles naropen. Ze willen dat je daar niet op reageert zodat het lijkt alsof je zwakzinnig bent geworden van het programma dat ze uitvoeren en bang voor ze bent al ben je dat niet. Want ze willen graag dat de target dood gaat (zelfmoord, klusje, ongeluk). RNM kan ondervragen en provoceren maar droominductie in de REM slaap is 1 van de bekendste methodieken. Ook het wakker houden van de target zodat deze makkelijker te ondervragen/beïnvloeden is op afstand hoort bij deze tactieken. Gedragsmodificatie en dan weggelaten met de crime is voor hun erg belangrijk want de schade voor MKUltra en Monarch hetzij de gedragsmods alleen is miljoenen aan schade vergoeding waard. Hierom willen ze ook niet exposed worden als persoon en met hun instanties eromheen. Deze vaak corrupte ambtenaren handelen dan ook vanuit ambtelijk corruptie in Groningen. Ze noemen zichzelf de Groningse maffia maar je hebt te maken met de Belastingdienst, alle instanties van de overheid en vieze spelletjes waaraan geen van hen durft toe te geven dat ze het spelen. Helaas voor hen zijn ze vanaf begin gedocumenteerd, maken teveel mensen het nieuwe burenspelletje mee (dan kan niet, niet iedereen dan dezelfde trip hebben) en groeit het internet massaal over het onderwerp gangstalking en remote neural monitoring. Daarnaast had Edward Snowden het hier ook al over. Ze kunnen thought processing zien met Brain Computer Interfaces. Maar ze doen alsof de tech al zo goed is dat ze door ogen heen kunnen kijken (proef of de som; als je dat gelooft dat ze dat kunnen zul je denken dat je niets voor ze kunt verbergen en zul je steeds de waarheid spreken). Jammer genoeg voor hun heb ik hun 10 jaar gepusht om bewijs te tonen voor alles wat ze beweren maar hebben ze niets. Nu leeft een neppe Vietnamees met een hele Pinda familie in Hoogezand als corrupte ambtenaartjes en ratlopend op straat met hun kinderen zelf als target omdat deze data roteert en verspreid. Durft de politie niet naar mijn data te kijken omdat ze weten dat ik ze heb waar ik ze hebben wil. En de belastingdienst Groningen die durft niet eens meer te kijken naar hoe ze 10 jaar illegaal MKUltra, Monarch + RNM behavior mods zonder reden en bewijsvoering gerechtelijk kunnen winnen boven mijn data. Lees maar goed de Engelse content over deze onderwerp die ik hier heb gemaakt met bewijs erdoorheen en je komt terecht in een wereld waar geheime politie, organisaties, bedrijven en individuen samenwerken aan een systeem dat hen allen ten goede valt, maar waar offers bij gemaakt worden (targets, Manchurian candidates, false flag terrorism) en dat alles zodat angst een Staat in leven houdt. Een staat dat geld heeft gemaakt en onderscheid tussen mensen. Ze misbruiken de angst en zwaktes van mensen om een control GRID te bouwen ondersteund met technologie en psychologie tezamen om de gehele mensheid te controleren. En dat is ze grotendeels al gelukt. Je zult heel slim moeten zijn wil je eruit komen en alles kunnen begrijpen, jammer genoeg zijn veel mensen dat niet en blijven ze liever als schapen onder controle van een elite omdat dat gewoon makkelijker is dan de risico te nemen dood te gaan (zoals Snowden die huurmoordenaars naar zijn hotel kreeg gestuurd). Helaas is het toch beter om die risico wel te nemen en te vechten voor je vrijheid, want al lijkt het alsof iedereen vrij is: Je bent niet vrij en die grondrechten zijn allemaal nep want op elk moment kan dus iemand hogerop zoals een rechter beslissen over jou leven en jouw lot. Jouw geloofsovertuiging misbruiken met RNM of even Satan spelen in je hoofd om anderen en jezelf te doden. Als je niet slim genoeg bent dan word je gewoon de volgende Tristan van der Vlis en dat is een feit. Het maakt mij niet uit als ik dood geschoten word, want ik heb hier de waarheid verteld over de corrupte ambtenaren club in Groningen, een duivelse inlichtingendienst die graag moslims target en vraagt geen moslim meer te zijn maar een demon die een valse vlag operatie uitvoert en daarvoor inruil alles krijgt wat hij wil. Trap daar niet in. Geef je leven zodat onze kinderen in vrijheid kunnen leven zonder neuro technologieën waar geen toezicht op zit zoals Remote Neural Monitoring. Want voor hun die niet sterk genoeg zijn zoals mij: Het maakt je kapot. Deze mensen verdienen de doodstraf voor hun targeting want ze targeten iedereen, van kleine kinderen tot ouderen, ongeacht hun beroep of opleiding. Deze Hoogezandse neppe familie dat klusjes doet lokaal voor wat geld met het "ik verpest je leven" programma, stuurd dus de GGZ, politie en als je kinderen hebt ook de AMK op je af met allerlei valse beschuldigingen. Daarna gaan ze zelf acteren voor meer valse rapportages and sturen ze bijvoorbeeld iemand van het tegengesteld geslacht op je af die zegt dat je haar lastig valt of iemand van hetzelfde geslacht die zegt dat je ruzie zoekt en dat de persoon niet weet wat er met je aan de hand is, dat je verward bent, misschien gek zo proberen ze instanties en ambtenaren te overtuigen onderling. Het discrediten is ook een voorzorgsmaatregel volgens hen voor "als ik ergens mee door zou breken" dat ze dan een slaatje willen kunnen meeslaan omdat ze dan al in het verleden ruzie met mij zouden hebben gehad. Wat ook raar is dat ze zelf op internet komen met en homo en proberen populair en beroemd te spelen maar dat ze mij zeggen dat ik mijn video materiaal offline moet halen (waar geen wet voor bestaat) de politie zei dit zelf ook. Het grappige is dat de politie zijn eigen mening niet mag uiten hierover. Ze vinden dat ik te ver ga met het laten zien van mijn vechtsport filmpjes op het internet maar Facebook en YouTube staan er vol mee nog meer dan ik heb geupload per kanaal. Hieraan kun je al zien dat in de politiestaat en de spelletjes der surveillance, valse beschuldigingen en rat provocatie met infragards veel mensen zitten die ergens niet tegen kunnen. Zelf kunnen ze het allemaal niet maar ik moet het weghalen? Daarom heb ik laten zien dat ik zelf met HTML5 video scripting mijn eigen videos op deze website kan hosten net als mijn images en content waardoor ik niet eens afhankelijk ben van derde partijen zoals Facebook of YouTube ahahah. En daar waren ze niet blij mee. Nooit gaat iemand mij tegenhouden of zijn mening op mij aandringen als zijn eigen wet ook niet en politie agent (onthoud dat maar kneus als jullie weer die zelfgemaakte internet wetten die het gehele EU niet kent en nooit gaat kende probeerd aan te maken in iemands kop). Je kan zien hoe de overheid mensen probeerd te beïnvloeden en controle probeerd uit te voeren op informatie en social media. Als mensen zoals David Icke en Alex Jones van infowars zijn weggekickt van social media dan weet je dat de overheid geen war wilt voeren maar monopoly zoekt en massa controle en depopulatie probeert uit te voeren op tactische wijze. Ze hebben overduidelijk een agenda eerst waren het zwarte mensen en joden, nu zijn het moslim en terroristen. Ik keek vroeger naar the X-Files en Mulder had gewoon gelijk. Voordat je het weet krijg je te horen van een Alien invasie en hoe nodig we de overheid hebben om ons daartegen te beschermen; Aliens. Ahahah. Nadat de US pentagon de video materiaal vrijgaf en toegaf dat het materiaal echt is, dacht iedereen meteen aan elke complotwappie die misschien wel eens gelijk kon hebben. We worden tactisch gecontroleerd met een tacsche duistere psychologie dat zich graag combineerd met (nano)technologie en moeten "het is ok schudden". Agenda 21 is nu Agenda 2030 geworden en er komt ook nog Agenda 2050 zo zal het blijven doorgaan. Revolutie proberen ze te voorkomen en protesten daar lachen ze gewoon om. Ze zoeken constant methodes om je te "controleren" of te "doden" en ermee weg te komen. Lees "Outwitting the devil" van Napoleon Hill, "How to tame a Demon" van Robert Duncan, "Guinea pigs" van John Hall, "Project soul catcher" van Robert Duncan, "A new breed" van John Hall en ook "Legally kidnapped" van Carlos Morales. Alles doet de staat om revolutie te voorkomen en voorbeelden te stellen. Theater shows om angst en de noodigheid van een overheid en staat aan te tonen met valse vlag terrorisme en Manchurian candidates zo nu en dan hoort daar ook bij. De overheid wilt steeds meer controle over burgers uitoefenen en installeerd een surveillance staat. De upgrade van technologie en AI zal hun hierbij helpen. Gelukkig zijn er mensen die slimmer zijn dan hun (<https://tweakers.net/nieuws/75236/overheid-kan-niet-op-tegen-hackers.html>) en altijd hun systemen neerhalen en Ddossen zodat de overheid weet dat het geen monopoly heeft. Het zal mij niet verbazen dat ze net als in Korea graag computer willen verbieden en Linux gebruik zelf zodat distros als Kali of Parrot OS verboden worden bij de wet. De oude lullen in de politiek hebben geen verstand van internet en dat soort dingen maar de nieuwe generatie die zal heersen over de wereld wel. Dat is moment dat er wel internet wetten zullen komen ook voor Westerse landen en dat is waar ze willen dat mensen zoals ik een aantal stappen terug doen. Illegale ondervragingen, provocatie van politie, informantjes and snitches ik heb alles al gezien. Uiteindelijk werkt elke instantie van de overheid mee aan het systeem omdat ze erin geloven dat het goed doet (zou kunnen) maar er werken teveel corrupte mensen. Ik heb de politie nooit laten zien hoe goed ik ben met computers of ze mij wilden recrutereren als snitch omdat die Groningse Vietnamees te dom is om zijn werk goed te doen weet ik niet. Maar ik weet wel dat gemeente Groningen en GGZ lentis en iedereen die daar heeft meegewerkt om als lafaards op afstand Mkultra/Monarch/gedragsmodificatie op mij neer te zetten via remote neural monitoring (<https://patents.google.com/patent/US3951134A/en>) goed om zich heen moet kijken levenslang voor mijn wraak want het is al in werking en het werkt MASSAAL en GEAUTOMATISEERD. Het is niet moeilijk om een maillist te hebben die over SVPN op repeat met cronjobs over een GROTE server blijft verzenden en anderen opkooft. Ze wilden mij niet 10.000.000 aan schade geven voor hun illegale transhumanism projectje. Dan moeten ze maar pijn lijden en om zich heen blijven kijken.

Opvallend tijdens dit alles:

-Komen als nieuwe burens (GGZ en politie bellend) boven je wonen en beginnen te doen alsof je hun lastig valt, meisje ook met RNM

-Acteren om je heen met aanhang vantevoren en maken valse beschuldigingen (zonder bewijs; Crimineel, Pedo, Gek)

-Verschijnt niet in het echt, alleen soms lokaal met boobytraps voor rapportages met valse getuigen + maakt gebruik van microwave auditory effect

-Ontwijkt confrontatie met anderen mensen verschijnt niet in mijn geboortestad terwijl ik jaren naar Groningen ging onder hun bedreigingen

-Maakt duidelijk dat het niet herkent bekenden van hun target tenzij hersenactiviteit van herkenning plaatsvindt door live EEG mind reading met BCI

-Sukkels en mongolen ingehuurd door politie lokaal, denkt zelf criminaliteit te bestrijden, psychologische hetzelfde tactiek aanhoudend & niet improviserend blijkbaar omdat ze niets anderen hebben als mongooltjes

-Wakker houden in de nacht, proberen te ondervragen en proberen te programmeren blijkbaar proberen te verzwakken fysiek en mentaal

-Pushen tot delicten en programmeren Mkultra en Monarch > Manchurian candidate (a la Tristan van der Vlis, Myron May, Aaron Alexis) en false flag terrorist psyops programma's om dispoible voorbeelden voor de staat te maken die later erna zelfmoord plegen onder RNM + gangstalking

-Opvallend gebruik van "Scientology setup scheme to convince officials" de schema die naast hun hoofd staat (Hitler Stasi hand Vietnamese)

-Pogingen tot infiltratie (ik ben je vriend Foebos lijkt op AIVD anti- hacker/rapper programma) deze takedown programma werkt niet op mij

-Groep lijkt aanhang van politie inlichtingendiensten maar is weliswaar gewoon een clubje/infragrad <https://rats-nosnitch.com>

De gehele actie is illegaal ook voor een overheid. Grondrechten worden geschonden op 24/7 basis. Er wordt paranoïde schizofrenie nagebootst in de naam van de Staat om iemand te conditioneren voor een "slechter" leven met psychologische tactieken en marteling op afstand. Targets worden ongelooftwaardig gemaakt en neergezet als gekken onder een mentaal label en conspiracy theoristen. Veel targets weten teveel over de vuile was van de overheid en zijn instanties of hebben de overheid met Parrot OS of Kali Linux (BackTrack vroeger) aangevallen. Er wordt nu geprobeerd met meerdere mensen en nog steeds remote tactische psychologisch geluk mij te overtuigen voor zelfdestructie en zelfmoord. Omdat ik te psychologisch ben en teveel weet over het targeted individual programma werkt er niets meer. Vanwege het hebben van geen andere tactiek mogelijkheden blijven ze doorgaan om te winnen (terwijl ze alles al verloren hebben). Ik heb als veel bewijs over deze mensen (<https://www.isaizu.com/docs/gangstalking.png>) die Stasi Zerzetung gangstalking uitvoeren (zelfs video bewijs zie <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=hmf23NfAjiQ>) met Remote Neural Monitoring in gemeente Groningen en ermee doorgaan totdat ze mensen hebben gesloopt van binnen. Ze zijn mij nu 10.000.000 aan schade vergoeding schuldig die ze niet willen geven uiteraard. Opzetten van anderen tegen mij staat centraal uiteraard. Pure haat/evil, hebben geen bewijs maar willen met psychologie alles bij elkaar acteren en overtuigen. Het is duidelijk dat Petty Wong Kasto GGZ en Darrell Oehlers GGZ Nederland (als zijn LinkedIn naam toen hij mij wilde toevoegen) bezig zijn. Ze beweren dat ik een crimineel en pedo ben. Ze hebben bewijs zoals ze in de video roepen die je ziet, maar als ik dan vraag om bewijs hebben ze niets om te laten zien. Als ze daadwerkelijk iets tegen mij hadden dan hadden ze dat nu kunnen laten zien bij de politie of rechter. Het is duidelijk dan als je succes begint te krijgen of mooie dingen neerzet op het internet dat mensen je neer willen halen uit jaloezie, benijd, ego en haat. Mij neerzetten als crimineel zonder bewijs terwijl ze slachtoffer spelen zelf en remote neural monitoring gebruiken was zodat de politie achter hun staat. De GGZ en AMK op mij afsturen was zodat ik in het zicht kom van instanties of voor legal kidnapping (kinder verkoop industrie). En zeggen dat ik een pedo ben is een standaard tactiek zodat ze anderen kunnen overtuigen en hopen dat de gemeenschap hier zonder enig bewijs agressief op reageert. Het valt mij op dat veel artiesten zoals Michael Jackson (valse pedo beschuldigingen in ruil voor rechtzaken met geld) en 2pac (valse crimineel beschuldigingen en opzetting van persoon tegen persoon in de rap industrie) hiermee te maken hebben gehad. Na alle jaren (10) valse beschuldigen hopen ze dan dat je offline gaat en geen succes meer kan boeken of dat ze een slaatje mee kunnen slaan onder bedreiging. Of ze zullen lullen dat jij ze nodig hebt om door te breken (de zogenaamd illuminati hoax die het internet rondwerft door trolls die geld willen verdienen als ze zien dat iemand eigen producties of creativiteit uit). Als ik dan kijk naar corrupte instanties zoals GGZ lentis die zulke Stasi Zerzetung acties uitvoeren en dan vervolgens doen alsof ze mensen willen helpen met hun "bemoeizorg" en "stemmetjes in de kop apparaat" terwijl ze je willen vernietigen ermee en her-neuro-programmeren (a la Tristan van der Vlis, Myron May, Aaron Alexis) of als wegwerpsel gebruiken als het niet lukt je een brave burgerschaap te maken, dan zien we meteen dat groepjes corrupte ambtenaren dit gebruiken als beveiligingsmiddel (firewall) voor persoonlijk gebruik en gewin in gemeente Groningen. Van mij hadden ze echter niet verwacht dat ik zelf zoveel mensen heb gekeylogt en bij een gemeenschap hoor van teveel voor hun sterke mensen van binnen en buiten waardoor deze teven die eerst zo een grote bek hadden de hele dag om zich heen moeten kijken of er niet iemand achter hun rug kruipt en ze neersteeft. Want zo gaat dit gewoon. De politie staat heeft criminaliteit nodig en de AIVD beheert zijn agencies (alle organisaties onder de overheid) als machtsmiddel om er misbruik en controle mee uit te oefenen. Echter als iemand in diepgang (zoals mij) snapt dat dit eigenlijk dictatuur is wordt diegene meteen gelabeld als whistleblower, activist, pedo, gek, crimineel en neergezet in het systeem als een radicaliserend persoon. Deze persoon kan dan het beste gebruikt worden als Manchurian candidate, false flag terrorist of gek gemaakt worden zodat deze zelfmoord pleegt. De psychiatrische industrie is 1 van de geluidsdempers van de overheid. Mensen worden er stiltejes plantjes gemaakt of stiltejes geslacht. Maar ook infragrades en community policing groups die ongelukken stagen of veroorzaken met remote neural monitoring via het mind altering patent staat centraal. Omdat ze de EEG waves kunnen beïnvloeden kunnen ze ook dromen geven hiermee. Om iemand onder controle te houden (als smoes) kunnen ze zo dromen weergeven van overleden familieleden of vrienden om de te beïnvloeden in de keuzes die je maakt. In standaard psychologie weten we dat iedereen eigenlijk kan doden (<https://www.psychologytoday.com/us/blog/the-new-brain/201610/humans-are-genetically-predisposed-kill-each-other>) de maatschappij wilt graag dat we angst voelen en allemaal sukkels en homo's worden (zo heeft de staat meer controle als iedereen bang is voor elke politie agent en zo is er geboortebepierking). Het draait uiteindelijk allemaal om massa controle en depopulatie en sommige mensen krijgen daar gewoon betaald voor. Als we kijken naar deze Vietnamese met zijn opgezette structuur zien we dat hij denkt dat hij voor de CIA werkt. Aan zijn neefje Bejornce zien we dat deze gebrainwashed is om een homo te zijn de populair wilt zijn. Aan zijn Volksdriver club Groningen en zijn houding zien we dat hij een snitch is (<https://rats-nosnitch.com>) en continue op zoek is naar geld en methodes om geld te verdienen. Zijn vriendin staat bekend als de Girlscene oplichtster en hij heeft zelf al meerdere mensen opgelicht via internet. Mogelijk is deze rat gerecruiteerd door de politie in Groningen lokaal. Je kunt aan zijn ambtenaren club met Darel Fokko Oehlers (Rijksoverheid) en Patty Wong Kasto (GGZ) al zien dat dit vrienden clubje hiervan misbruikt maakt. Ze wonen boven mensen, sturen de politie en GGZ erop af (+de AMK als je kinderen hebt) met valse goede bedoelingen en valse beschuldigingen. Vervolgens willen ze je een pussy maken zodat je geen geweld op hun gebruikt en niemand op de hoogte stelt van de situatie. Hierna proberen ze hun lokale gemeenschap, mensen en familie om je heen te overtuigen dat je geestelijk gestoord bent. Als je dan geweld op ze gebruikt kom je terecht in een inrichting en ze gaan ervanuit dat vandaar autorisatie komt om verder te programmeren en regels op te leggen. Het probleem voor hen echter is dat nu iedereen dit snapt, gelooft en na kan googlen op internet van het onderwerp van targeted individuals, gangstalking en remote neural monitoring groeit enorm. Ze denken angst in te boezemen en controle door te zeggen dat ze door ogen kijken, maar ze kunnen alleen brain processing zien zoals Snowden zei. Want ze komen niet eens met bewijs aanzetten maar maar acteerwerk, bedreigingen en praatjes. Ik ben niet onder de indruk van zulke tuig werkend bij de overheid het zijn maar mensen die leveren aan het einde van hun dag hun vuurwapen in een locker en gaan heen en weer van werk om hun heen kijkend totdat er 1 neerpleurt zoals altijd. De media verteld altijd rotzooi en laat alleen zien wat ze willen laten zien net als opsporing verzocht. Maar soms is informatie gevaarlijk en dit is zo een informatie pakket der inlichtingen dat gevaarlijk ligt voor beide partijen zowel mij en hun soort. Er wordt voor gedood. Continue en stiltejes.

Meer informatie en mensen met (exact) dezelfde ervaringen (en niet iedereen kan in dezelfde trip zitten zoals de GGZ/AIVD/Overheid beweerd):

Proof of existence: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=n0Y4ys_JZk4

Remote neural monitoring (<https://patents.google.com/patent/US3951134A/en>) and Police microwave laser auditory effect (<https://www.latimes.com/local/lanow/la-me-laser-lapd-crime-data-program-20190412-story.php>) for community policing, intelligence communities, infragards & rats: <http://www.rats-nosnitch.com> the truth!

New neighbors and afterwards harassment, false accusations and reports, remote neural monitoring and gangstalking, THAT is NOT a coincidence, THAT is a PSYOPS. Here are some targets:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Q73oOUE2gik> | <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2O4s6sf-ikg> | <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=qDeeXZOVm0> | <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=9dV7cz4kMPU> | <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wqZ6rojN-GM> | https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=h8VCO_pmfIA | <https://youtu.be/ujqVK7GvcHA>

This girl tells it right: <https://www.facebook.com/notes/francesca-valerio-invernizzi/the-main-goal-of-gang-stalking-is-to-influence-the-life-of-the-victim-and-to-con/420663351337935/>

Remote neural monitoring: <http://www.isaizu.com/docs/remoteneuralmonitoring.pdf>

Informants wrecking lives: <http://rats-nosnitch.com/>

Confused person setups by agencies: <http://verwardepersonen.nl/>

Gangstalking: <https://www.stopeg.nl/>

Het Programma: <https://hetprogramma.wordpress.com/>

People who try it at me: <http://www.isaizu.com/docs/illegalePolitieGroningenGGZhandelingen.png>

Persoonsgerichte verstoring: <https://www.nrc.nl/nieuws/2007/09/14/persoonsgericht-verstoren-is-illegaal-11392693-a618453>

Gangstalking manual: <http://www.isaizu.com/docs/manualforfoolsbyfools.pdf>

How gangstalking works: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=plrHU4VKbRM>

Proof of gangstalking recorded: <https://youtu.be/hmf23NfAjiQ>

Remote neural mind altering patent proof: <https://patents.google.com/patent/US3951134A/en>

Legal kidnapping: <https://youtu.be/i0OiNdj2aP4>

Robert Duncan: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=8qUTWPqjISw>

Technics of Neuroweapons: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Y51LkLazgDA>

Bone sound conduction: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bone_conduction

Microwave auditory effect: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Microwave_auditory_effect

Police admits LASER program: <https://www.latimes.com/local/lanow/la-me-laser-lapd-crime-data-program-20190412-story.php>

Community infragard LASER: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=OSGzxWxjriQ>

Getting Cancer by radiation & LASER: <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Carcinogen>

Me gangstalking for over 9 years: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=KXP6ATBdP78>

MIT audio LASER: <https://www.extremetech.com/extreme/284743-mit-creates-lasers-that-whisper-in-your-ear>

More audio LASER: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=xSGnzbGcCDg>

Another audio LASER: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=aBdVfUnS-pM>

Beaming audio LASERS: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=MCTqC2-AN7o>

Sending audio LASER: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4x97jqwO5nQ>

LASER spying: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=MTpZsKCUvcc>

MIT audio LASER: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=F4vipRHAIuU>

DARPA neural interface: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=nvUHDk59Igw>

Elon Musk Neuralink: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0jOh6lwp9w>

OpenBCI: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=eX9Q_4KgemU

Dr. Robert Duncan: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=GgPuZpbK5M8>

More info: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dVZnGYrqny>

Ex gangstalker: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4jIebz5dsA8>

Gangstalking: <https://ongangstalking.blogspot.com/2008/11/satanism-and-gangstalking.php>

NWO: <https://911nwo.com/?p=6485>

Targeted Proof: <https://www.targetedevidence.com/>

My gangstalker operator looks like this one: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=F0qqc2UUJFI> - Friendly face while being the devil himself a gangstalker looking just like mine from Groningen Netherlands (<http://www.isaizu.com/docs/illegalePolitieGroningenGGZhandelingen.png>) remember that it are the people who ACT friendly charismatic who are being the most devilish in a stealth way from the inside. They are unthrustable and lure to make money. RATS. <http://www.rats-nosnitch.com/>

Read these books if you want to GROW I've read them all:

- How to tame a Demon (Robert Duncan)
- Project soul catcher 2 (Robert Duncan)
- Guinea Pigs (John Hall)
- A new breed (John Hall)
- Outwitting the devil (Napoleon Hill)
- Banned mind control tactics unleashed (Daniel Smith)
- Legally kidnapped (Carlos Morales)

Zogenaamd criminaliteit bestrijden en iedereen "die ongewoon is" neerzetten als target. Is een geliefd iets bij dit soort ratten (<https://rats-nosnitch.com>). Waar Tristen van de Vlis van de GGZ en AIVD zijn Satan en Demonen hoorde. Horen moslims die false flag operaties moeten uitvoeren "Remote Neural Monitoring" en Allah/Mohammed praten. Dromen aanmaken met EEG in de REM hoor ook bij de mind altering patent (<https://patents.google.com/patent/US3951134A/en>). Sommige informanten spelen zelf drugsdealer en krijgen Nano-Coke mee om deze te verkopen om anderen te targeten en "zo criminaliteit te bestrijden en inlichtingen te verzamelen". Maar ook als een echte drugs dealer word gepakt kan er een snitch deal worden gemaakt waarbij "als deze wat nanotech in zijn coke gooit" om zo informatie via RNM te verschaffen, een brave burger informant word verklaard. Privileges bij de politie zijn dan een standaard. Misbruik word er dan ook flink van gemaakt door GGZ en AIVD medewerkers en ze maken zo graag wat extra geld. Ook voor "legal kidnapping" oftewel "omstandigheden" om een kind uit huis te plaatsen en daarna te verkopen aan een pleeggezin hoort daar ook bij. Vooral activisten en whistleblowers die teveel weten worden daarmee getarget. Zo een kind kan namelijk later ook iemand worden met een eigen mening die te psychologisch word en alle controle middelen begrijpt. Remote neural monitoring word ook gebruikt bij mensen die erg bijgelovig zijn. Zo ontstaat het fenomeen van "spookhuizen" een spelletje dat de inlichtingendienst en GGZ graag speelt met mensen. Mensen horen in 360 graden enge geluiden gemaakt met Remote Neural Monitoring of krijgen nachtmerries door EEG wave manipulatie met het neuro patentje. Ze willen dan zo snel mogelijk hun huis verkopen voor minder en wegwezen. Tactisch is RNM daarom breed inzetbaar maar de GGZ en AIVD heeft er geen toezicht op hoe groepen infragards/community policing watch groups hier misbruik van maken. Hierdoor ontstaat een corrupt gedeelte der overheid en misbruiken ambtenaren die allemaal 1 pot nat zijn en bij elkaar horen als instanties die elkaar inlichtingen deze methodiek en neuro tech al jaren. Sommigen worden er gek mee gemaakt en agressief gekookt om geboobytrapt te worden en in isolatie te komen (gevangenis/inrichting) zodat ze heropvoeding programma's kunnen krijgen om een brave burger te worden. Anderen kunnen niet meer worden ge-neuro programmeerd omdat ze een eigen mening hebben. Deze worden dan neergeschoten als verwarde psychotische personen (opgekookt door de GGZ en AIVD) door politie. Of ze worden ge-mental driven om een Manchurian candidate/False flag terrorist te worden die daarna zichzelf dood. Zo zijn er mooie theater stukken gratis voor de staat om angst in te boezemen bij de burger. En wilt de bange burger graag dat de politie/surveillance staat groeit. Dit terwijl ze zelf op elk moment getarget en geselecteerd kunnen worden voor dit psyops programma. Op het moment dat je er teveel vanaf weet zoals mij. Zal de politie geen aangiftes meer van je aannemen. Een cybernetic mind hive team zal blijvend proberen je te herprogrammeren met RNM. Ze zullen je bedreigen met alles wat ze (niet) hebben als bewijs. En willen je graag wijsmaken dat iedereen tegen je is en aan het programma meewerkt. Dit zodat je denkt dat je geen keus heb dan voor zelfvernietiging te kiezen. De Belastingdienst die wilt totaal geen schade vergoeding uitbetalen voor dergelijke psyops ook niet als ze exposed en bewezen staan psyops uitgevoerd te hebben. De mentale schade loopt namelijk op in de miljoenen zodra de GGZ faalt met het herprogrammeren van de hersenen. Als het hele transhumanism gebeuren waarbij je behavior mod(s) mislukt, is het moment gekomen dat ze je graag dood zien. Plotselinge ongelukken en pogingen tot moord maar vooral samenzwering en ontkenning van dan centraal staan. Deze "Voice of God/Satan" wapen is het enige dat de overheid heeft als maximal inzet om op afstand iemand te manipuleren en te herprogrammeren als brave schaap of juist als bruikbare wegwerp moordenaar en voorbeeld. Bedreigingen dat je moet doen alsof je bang bent en dat de politie je neer zal schieten terwijl een club mensen op hun neppe reputatie leeft staat centraal. Alle methodieken en hoaxes zullen toegepast worden om je te "flashen" door deze oplichters omdat ze je graag ook zwakzinnig willen maken en verklaren als tactisch voordeel. Tegen mijn pakket en <https://www.isaizu.com/targetedindividuals.php> kan de politie, GGZ, AIVD en alle anderen niets doen en zeggen. Ze doen dat ook niet omdat ze weten dat ik teveel ervanaf weet en dat dergelijk psychologische tactieken zich herhaaldelijk mislukt hebben bewezen op mij, ook om intel te verzamelen over anderen. Want om mij heen heeft iedereen zijn vuurwapen nog en degenen die dit programma heeft uitgevoerd heeft dus constant gelogen dat ze van bovenaf of vanuit de ogen meekijken. Het is puur wat Edward Snowden zij "they can see how thoughts form (EEG though processing) met BCI Brain Computer Interfaces. De hersenen werken als een harde schijf op lage elektrische spanning met EEG waves. Supercomputers kunnen deze EEG waves decoderen met een database die ze hebben. Bij iedereen werkt de hersenen hetzelfde als jij aan een boom denkt is hetzelfde EEG wave als ik aan een boom denk. Hierdoor zie je duidelijk dat ze geen bewijs hebben omdat gedachten geen feiten zijn en ze dit Remote Neural Monitoring apparaat niet in een rechtszaal kunnen gebruiken. Dit maakt het hele toneelstuk dat ze uitvoeren om mensen te herprogrammeren een hoax. Maar mensen die het niet weten die worden door hen beïnvloed en ge-neuro programmeerd/opgekookt in agressie/ge neuro primed/ ge boobytrapped (gevangenis/gekkkenhuis) en dat in samenwerking met anderen die "denken" en "overtuigd" zijn dat jij moet veranderen en moet worden getranshumanised, opnieuw moet beginnen en worden geprogrammeerd. Vaak omdat ze er niet tegen kunnen dat jij ergens goed in bent, omdat ze je willen bedreigen/discrediten en iets tegen je willen hebben als je doorbreekt met iets of gewoon omdat ze je haten. Ze gunnen jouw niet dat je groeit of dat je succes hebt. Ze willen niet dat je een schadevergoeding krijgt voor een mislukte poging met je hersenen te spelen. Ze kunnen er niet tegen dat jij weet dat ze geen bewijs hebben om te laten zien en dat je in staat bent anderen te overtuigen dat dit programma echt is en word uitgevoerd. Jouw gangstaken en zeggen dat je paranoide, schizofreen, gek, agressief, nep en zwakzinnig bent om je te discrediten en het bloed onder je nagels vandaag te halen hoort allemaal bij het programma. Net zoals het zeggen dat je een activist/whistleblower/crimineel/pedo bent. Ze willen graag aanhang voor hunzelf tegen jou en dat anderen hen helpen om jou te pakken en iets aan te doen. Mensen doen dit alleen als ze erin geloven dat de ratten/gangstalkers gelijk hebben. Mijn data gaat zo en zo niet van het internet af zoals de politie wilt. Mijn martial arts filmpjes ook niet. Alles wat ik gemaakt heb is al gecached en zal blijven bestaan publiekelijk en prive op servers. Deze data zal blijvend verspreiden en herhaaldelijk op meerdere massa mail en doorsturende manieren. Want ik wil dat iedereen weet dat geen enkele overheid mag proberen zo een gruwelijk Mkultra/Monarch/Transhumanism/Gedrags modificatie programma uit te voeren en de psychiatrie des doods te gebruiken op mensen die geestelijk gezond zijn maar gek worden gemaakt door de GGZ/AIVD/Politie in de naam der Staat omdat ze ergens beter/slimmer in zijn en onder druk moeten worden gezet met clubjes als 3e partij ingehuurd om te bedreigen wat niet eens helpt omdat het sukkel is zijn en psychologisch genoeg zijn ze ook niet eens. Maar goed, hieruit zal alleen bloed komen en dat moet maar, als het niet anders kan.

Tevens zien we duidelijk dat deze corrupte GGZ/AIVD/Politie/informanten (ratten) club/infragard graag mensen en groepen tegen elkaar opzet met het patent. We zien mensen die in de gevangenis/gekkenhuis horen te zitten op straat lopen omdat een cop/rat deal hebben gemaakt om eerder vrij te komen. En we horen van mensen in de gevangenis dat ze ineens “stemmetjes horen” die hun proberen te herprogrammeren. Het doel van remote neural monitoring is duidelijk ondervraging/provocatie/spionage. Ook bedrijfsspionage of geheimen (gedachten) van iemand proberen te weten horen hierbij. De nano technologie waarmee getarget word (zodat de audio voor de cochlea gericht kan worden per connectie, is alleen bekend hoogerop bij de Belastingdienst/GGZ en AIVD/MIVD). Zoals je nu ziet is het dus breed inzetbaar. Een hersen (harde schijf) programmeren hoort hier dan ook bij om die gedrags modificatie (transhumanism) voor elkaar te krijgen. Als de target er teveel van weet lukt het allemaal niet meer. De gangstalkers zullen een houding aannemen alsof ze sterk in hun schoenen staan om controle te houden en bluffen dat ze alles weten en iedereen om je heen gemapt hebben, je merkt meteen dat ze zichzelf proberen te backuppen met onzin zodat jij niet verder de informatie verspreid in de hoop dat minder mensen agressief op hun reageren. Zoals ik al eerder zei reversed psychologie, dark NLP, psychological warfare, Mkultra & Monarch, hypnotische suggestie, beïnvloeden etc etc je zult er echt alles van moeten weten om door alle tactieken die ze gebruiken heen te komen en ze terug te kunnen pakken. Het bouwen van een GRID om ze terug te pakken is essentieel. Dit betekend dat alle kanten van hun tactieken gedekt zijn. Maar ook dat iedereen begrijpt wat je bedoelt en dat je dit programma goed kan uitleggen. Dat je mensen kunt overtuigen en bewijzen dat je gelijk hebt omdat je de personen die het programma uitvoeren opneemt en documenteerd. In mij geval is het dus in Groningen gebeurd waar ze kwamen als nieuwe burens zogenaamd zoals bij de meeste mensen, waarbij ze valse beschuldigingen, documenten bij de politie (meldingen en aangiftes) gingen aanmaken en iemand van het tegenover gestelde geslacht inhuurde die acteerde dat ik haar lastig val. Het clubje in Groningen gedroeg zich als een Volksdriver/No surrender gang terwijl het allemaal ratten waren uit een lokaal infragard op zoek naar bounties die vieze klusjes uitvoeren voor lokale ambtenaren. Ze proberen zelf neppe regels en wetten op te leggen en anderen te overtuigen dat je gek bent. Terwijl ze je proberen te disrupten in je leven en te discreten (ongeloofwaardig te maken) voor toekomstige rechtzaken. Het is dus allemaal tactisch opzet en handelen van een specieke club mensen. In dat club zien we dan duidelijk het gedrag van een scientology achtige houding gecombineerd met ambtelijke corruptie. Het blijft zeuren over hoe jij “onschadelijk en neutraal” gemaakt moet worden. Hoe je niets goed doet en nep moet zijn vergeleken met hun staat centraal. Het is dus duidelijk ook een takedown programma dat als doel heeft jouw een minderwaardigheid complex te geven en zwakzinnig te maken. Dit zodat je angst gevoel krijgt op een trigger die geanchort ligt aan een object zoals rode kleding of een auto. De politie werkt overduidelijk mee met dit club mensen want ze hebben ambtenaren ook overtuigt dat jij “verkeerd” bent. Het grappige is als iedereen dit begint te begrijpen en schijt begint te krijgen en zelf ook afsprekt om te reageren als je dit ratten tuig ziet lopen. Dit terwijl ze zichzelf ermee programmeren dat ze “ontouchable” zijn als “rat” en dat de politie iedereen voor ze neerschiet als zij jouw boobytrappen en roepen “help een geestelijk gestoorde in psychose” het is een trieste zet van de zwakkere mensen op aarde. Dat je niet moet trainen, niets moet bouwen voor jezelf en een sukkel moet zijn of homo, als dat niet werkt graag iemand die zelfmoord pleegt of een ander vermoord (het liefst een familielied of een grote groep mensen) staat centraal om van je af te komen nadat ze de fout in zijn gegaan en te ver zijn gegaan met het programma. Deze vieze psyops door neppe mongolen uitgevoerd is dan ook een teken van lafheid en zwakte. De hele overheid zal wel niet corrupt zijn maar de ambtelijke corruptie is groot en van hun eigen nederlaag willen ze niets weten. Want ze denken overduidelijk hoe langer ze doorgaan hoe meer resultaat ze boeken. Wat de waarheid is, hoe langer ze doorgaan hoe meer ze hun eigen leven in gevaar brengen als dergelijke informatie verspreid en bij verkeerde mensen terecht komt wat het zo en zo doet nu. Het is dan om te lachen als je de reactie ziet van zulke soort ratten en flikkers die op afstand “remote” zo een grote bek hadden en constant riepen dat je stappen terug moet doen omdat ze je moeten neerhalen en discrediten zodat je niet groeit. Het zieligste vind ik nog dat ze droompjes geven van overleden familieleden om een “controle anchor” aan te maken op mensen.

VERGEET NIET DE OPGENOEMDE BOEKEN TE LEZEN VAN DR. ROBERT DUNCAN en DR. JOHN HALL als je kinderen hebt dan ook niet die van CARLOS MORALES ze zullen je alles in details vertellen over de vieze corrupte spelletjes en de technologie hierachter.

- Heb schijt aan deze mensen voel geen medelijden hadden ze ook niet bij jouw
- Blijf doen wat je deed stop er niet mee laat je niet beïnvloeden of programmeren
- Geef geen informatie verraad anderen niet als ze ondervragen of dromen geven.
- Weet dat het sukkels zijn die acteren en gezamenlijk samenzweren met politie en GGZ
- Ze zijn niet allemaal van de AIVD/PID in geval een Vietnamees met kneus Indo's en Groningse boerenlul negers
- Lever nooit je vuurwapen in en stuur deze document lekker door per email (Protonmail) of Whatsapp zet het niet in je eigen huis maar bij een ander dan heb je ook geen last van nadenken dat het bij jou ligt en kan bij een inval de politie niets doen ze staan voor schut
- Bij ondervragingen begrijp ook ondervragingstaciekken, “we weten al”, “je vriend in de andere kamer heeft al bekend”, “we hebben al bewijs”, “onderteken deze verklaring”. Ze weten niets + hebben niets en je ondertekend nooit een verklaring.
- Teven die roepen dat ze via remote neural monitoring bewijs hebben lullen onzin ze kunnen het niet gebruiken in een rechtzaal
- Ze zien niets door je ogen, kijken niet door muren heen, ze willen dat je dat denkt zodat je meewerkt omdat jij denkt dat ze al weten
- Puur “thought processing” zoals Snowden zegt het beïnvloeden van EEG waves met patent

<https://patents.google.com/patent/US3951134A/en>

- Ze zullen proberen hey, hey ,hey | ho, ho, ho | okay, okay, okay te roepen stop met niks voel geen medelijden sla door die kop heen
- Maak je eigen GRID gebruik die van mij als voorbeeld, op jouw eigen gangstalkers en zielige remote neural monitoring GGZ rat teven
- Neem een goede advocaat geef hem deze informatie

Lees de informatie de nu verder in het Engels staat en kijk ook op de website <https://www.isaizu.com/targetedindividuals.php>

Technology

Darpa Advisor Reveals Conscious A.I. Used For Mind Control of Targeted Individuals

DARPA, European Human Brain Project, and Pentagon advisor Dr. James Giordano describe neuronanorobotic Brain to computer interface mind control weapons for remote monitoring and manipulation of brains neural circuitry.

RATS!

Your guide to protecting yourself against snitches, informers, informants, agents provocateurs, narks, finks, and similar vermin

STOP
SNITCHING

Claire Wolfe

with the Commentariat of the Living Freedom blog

RATS!

Your guide to protecting yourself against snitches, informers, informants, agents provocateurs, narcs, finks, and similar vermin

By Claire Wolfe
with the Commentariat of the Living Freedom blog

Rats! Your guide to protecting yourself against snitches, informers, informants, agents provocateurs, narcs, finks, and similar vermin is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Non-Commerical-NoDerivs 3.0 Unported License.

That mouthful means that it is okay to copy and distribute this booklet for non-commercial purposes as long as you attribute it to the original source. Feel free. Go for it. Have at it. Spread the word.

On the other hand, you may not alter or add to the text in any way.

And you may not reproduce or distribute any part of this work for commercial purposes, period. Do not do either of those things.

Contents

Copyright

Acknowledgements

This book is for you if...	1
This book is not for you if...	2
What exactly is a snitch?	3
What makes snitches so dangerous?	5

PART ONE: Recognizing and Avoiding Snitches

FIRST RULE: Learn and practice good security consciousness	7
Recognizing a snitch	9
What makes snitches so persuasive?	12
"Mere" snitching vs active entrapment	15
Dangerous myths about snitches and undercover agents	17
What to do if you believe a snitch is personally targeting you	19

PART TWO: A Snitch Uncovered

If you believe there's a snitch in your group	21
HISTORICAL ways of dealing with known snitches	25
How do YOU treat an exposed snitch?	27
Repairing the damage snitches do	31
Beware of accusing someone who might not be a snitch	32

PART THREE: WHAT HAPPENS IF YOU GET BUSTED?

You may be pressured to become a snitch	33
Do NOT talk to cops. Period.	35
The police officer is NOT your friend	37
The Prisoner's Dilemma	39
Mindset: The common territory between snitches and victims	41
What happens if you refuse to snitch?	42
What happens if you become a snitch — and regret it?	44
What happens to you if you snitch and your friends find out?	46
The rest of your life if you do snitch	47

Appendix 1: The Reid Interrogation Technique™	49
Appendix 2: Some Commonsense OpSec	56
Appendix 3: Line up a lawyer	60
Appendix 4: Other helpful resources	62

Acknowledgments

I intended to acknowledge the dozens of people who contributed to this book. Given its touchy subject matter, I figured I'd use only their online nyms, not real names. But, sadly, almost everyone I asked responded, "Don't mention me!"

Such is the nature of the police state.

So the only contributors credited anywhere in the book are those who wrote items especially for this project or whose comments on my blog, Living Freedom ¹ I reprinted here. Their nyms appear with their contributions.

Despite the lack of credits, this book was truly a collaborative project. Contributors included lawyers, former cops, security specialists, political activists, members of the drug culture, business executives in "sensitive" fields, outlaw bikers, and in a couple of cases people whose identities are so deeply secret that I couldn't credit them even if I wanted to. (To guard against the possibility of any snitch sympathizer planting misleading information, outlaws, former snitch victims, and lawyers checked the text after more "official" folk had their say. I'm relieved to state that, while many people added valuable information as the book grew, nobody in this very experienced crowd spotted anything false or suspiciously "coppish.")

Contributors came from all walks of life — from the ultra-respectable to the underground. All shared the same goal of helping non-violent people save themselves from snitches and — hopefully, someday — ending the corrupt and evil "snitch culture." Once I pulled the book together with all that help, an anonymous proofreader and a friendly layout artist took it from there. There are two people I am allowed to credit: cover designer Keith Perkins and illustrator Travis Halverson, whose

¹ www.backwoodshome.com/blogs/ClaireWolfe/

"no rattin'" drawing you'll find at the end of the book.

Each and every contributor was a volunteer. This book couldn't have happened without them.

This book is for you if ...

You are a non-violent person engaged in any activity that may be controversial, illegal, or merely "sensitive" or unconventional. These days, anything out of the ordinary can make you a target.

Some people who could use this book:

Anti-war or environmental activists

Recreational drug users

Participants in the underground economy or anybody who does business in cash

Critics of local or national powers-that-be

Anyone whose profession involves "sensitive" information or activities

Gun owners or dealers

Third-party or "fringe" political activists

Hobbyists who work with dangerous materials

Photographers/videographers

Religious dissidents

People with offshore or unconventional investments (including perfectly legitimate ones)

It doesn't matter where you fall in the political spectrum or even if you're apolitical. If police might target you or your activities, you need to understand how snitches could mess up your life.

This book is NOT for you if ...

You aim to commit violence against innocent people. In that case, reporting on you isn't snitching, it's self defense.

What exactly is a snitch?

There are a lot of different types of snitches. We could write an encyclopedia defining them. But we're going to keep this simple.

For purposes of the book, a snitch is anybody who inserts him- or herself into your non-violent activities on behalf of government. "Government" may mean local cops. It could also mean the FBI, the Department of Homeland Security, or a host of other state or federal agencies. It's absolutely mind-boggling how many seemingly innocuous agencies these days have arrest powers, armed enforcers — and snitches employed in sneaky sting operations. And thousands of them use snitches.

There are two common categories of snitch you need to look out for:

The infiltrator/agent provocateur. This is someone (often a professional) who is inserted into a group for an active purpose, such as disrupting the group, or worst, talking formerly innocent (or at least formerly non-violent) people into committing crimes in order to bust them. Agents provocateurs may, among other things, try to turn non-violent protest into violent action, thus discrediting movements, giving excuses for crackdowns, and giving more publicity and power to government agencies.

The informer/informant. This snitch is often a legitimate member of a group or social circle who continues to be active while giving information to the police. This person may be acting under duress (to save his own skin after being arrested, for instance). This person may be hoping the cops will pay with money, drugs, or ongoing criminal immunity for her dubious "services." While this person isn't necessarily a professional agent provocateur, he may nevertheless try to talk friends into committing crimes so he can get more credibility or rewards from his police handlers.

These aren't the only types of snitches. For example, there's also what we'll call the "accidental snitch" — though idiot snitch might be more appropriate. This is the person who simply can't keep her mouth shut about illegal or controversial activities. Cops love these guys! They don't even have to threaten them, pay them, hire them, train them, or gain any leverage over them. They just sit back and listen to them reveal secrets.

Then there's the type of snitch the British call a grass and old American gangsters might have called a stool pigeon. This is a person who blabs to cops or other government agents after you (and probably he) have already been arrested. This person isn't going to interfere with your activities; that's already been done. He's "only" going to give sworn affidavits and courtroom testimony against you, justifying it as a means of saving his own skin. There's not much you can do about this person. By the time you learn one of your former friends is a "stoolie," it's too late.

There are vengeance snitches — people who turn on friends and associates after having a falling out or not getting their way. There are jailhouse snitches — either deliberately planted in your cell after you've been arrested or just opportunists who happen to be there and are willing to share whatever you say (or make up lies about things you said).

Each and every one of these people is a betrayer of friendship and trust. All of them are just plain rats — and they're as welcome in the company of good people as rats are in a pantry.

To keep things simple we're going to call them all snitches — though we'll differentiate when we need to help you look out for specific problems.

What makes snitches so dangerous?

Snitches are everywhere and their use is growing. In many cases, genuine police investigations into actual crimes are almost a thing of the past. Government agents just round up some snitches, get them to lie or arm-twist them into spying and — voila! — an instant and easy case against virtually anyone they want to target. Sometimes they get everything they need from some anonymous person who makes false accusations via a tips hotline.

Snitches (and cops) lie all the time and get away with it. So do prosecutors and virtually all government investigators. Good luck "proving your innocence" if some liar says you were part of a drug deal, laundered money, plotted to blow up a bridge, or asked him to help you murder somebody. Never mind that, in our legal system, the government is supposed to have to prove your guilt; that's become a quaint notion.

Snitches damage individuals, organizations, and movements even before they actually rat on anybody. The mere fear of them destroys trust, friendship, and cohesiveness. Some are deliberately inserted into groups to cause exactly that sort of chaos and dissension.

They tarnish otherwise legitimate political movements. When the media reports that members of Group X or Movement Y have been caught running drugs or guns or plotting to dump toxic chemicals in a reservoir, guess what sticks in the public's mind — your legitimate goals or the "fact" that you're a bunch of terrorist whackos? Later, when it comes out that the entire plot was a fiction created by an agent provocateur who got a few marginal members to go along with a scheme the government itself cooked up, hardly anyone notices. All they think is, "Oh, Group X; yeah, they're a bunch of violent loonies. Thank God the FBI saved us from them."

They send people to prison. Sometimes innocent people. Often the victims of snitches have committed "crimes" that are much less serious than those of the snitch himself. A snitch is often either a real scumbag who's in the pay of police or a formerly decent person trying to save herself (or family members or friends) from a long prison sentence by getting others to commit crimes.

They may literally cost you your life, your fortune, and your sacred honor. Not to mention your family, your freedom, your friends, your job, your savings, and your reputation. And don't imagine that "mere" innocence will protect you. The more innocent you are, the more you're likely to be blindsided and hurt by one of these betrayers — because innocent, naive people make easy targets.

They corrupt entire cultures. Think of East Germany under the STASI or the old Soviet Union. Literally husbands couldn't trust their wives. Parents couldn't trust their children. Brothers couldn't trust brothers because so many were reporting to the state. Now, some countries that knew the horror of snitch culture forbid or limit the use of snitches. At the same time, formerly free nations are relying on snitches for everything and encouraging every moron in the land to "see something and say something."

A fact to remember

This book could help you avoid becoming the victim of a snitch. It could even help you avoid being pressured into becoming a snitch yourself.

But there are NO guarantees. Snitches are effective precisely because they're so hard to detect.

Snitches prey on the naive and unsuspecting and on misplaced friendship. No book is a substitute for common sense and healthy skepticism. You have a brain: USE IT.

You have a gut. When it tells you you're in danger, BELIEVE IT.

PART ONE

Recognizing and Avoiding Snitches

FIRST RULE: Learn and practice good security consciousness

The military calls this OpSec – Operational Security. It means conducting yourself in such a way as not to give away secrets or walk stupidly into avoidable dangers.

Don't talk about secret or illegal activities outside your group.

Within your group, talk about them only to people who have a need to know.

Keep groups small. Maybe even as small as a "cell of one."

If you use email, encrypt it. Not only that, but encrypt all email you possibly can, not just email containing sensitive material. Encrypt your cute cat jokes and your discussions of last night's favorite TV show (that way you don't call special attention to your most confidential exchanges).

Do not post sensitive material on social media (a no-brainer, but apparently some still do it).

Attorney safety tip:

A lawyer who consulted on this book says:

"When dealing with police, prosecutors or their agents, do NOT base your theory-of-the-game on TV, movies, or other sources. Or on constitutional theory you may have learned in school. The other side is playing for keeps and to them rules are irrelevant inconveniences. Ask Bradley Manning."

Do not post sensitive material on social media even when your privacy settings allow only "friends" to see it. A 2012 court ruling said it's perfectly okay for those "friends" to turn around and show your allegedly private info to government agents.

Do not talk to cops or indeed any government agents — about anything. Ever. The most innocent remarks can be used against you. The "nicest" cop is still not your friend. (We'll have more on this in Part Three and in the appendixes. This is extremely important!)

Know the laws, potential sentences, and likely prosecutorial practices against any crimes you're committing.

If you're a political activist, keep your nose clean in other ways. For instance, if you're an anti-drug-war activist, don't sell drugs on the side. Don't make yourself an easy target for spurious (or worse, real) criminal charges.

Unless you actually want to be arrested to become a test case (a dangerous but sometimes useful tactic), then do everything you can to avoid giving anyone ammunition to tarnish you or your cause.

Do your best to make sure your associates also follow good security practices.

Tip from experience:

This comes from a friend of mine who spent "the worst two weeks" of his life in jail, courtesy of a snitch: "Don't hang with people who are dishonest or lie, even in small, unimportant things. They have no honor to lose and everything they say and do is based on profit or benefit to them."

Get yourself away from associates who are blabbermouths, boasters, loose-lipped drunks, or "friends" who insist on posting their (and your) every activity on the Internet.

We repeat: GET YOURSELVES AWAY from anybody who can't keep his mouth shut!

Recognizing a snitch

While some clumsy snitches are obvious, many more are nearly impossible to recognize. What follows are only guidelines. Use them as an aid to your own brain and your own gut, but understand that when you organize with others to do controversial things, you very probably will have at least one snitch in your midst. There is simply no group that cannot be infiltrated. The longer you continue and/or the more controversial your activities, the more likely you are to attract one or more rats.

Some typical things snitches and/or agents provocateurs do:

A stranger or casual acquaintance tries to get you to do or advise on illegal activities.

A friend suddenly starts pushing you to do or advise on illegal things.

A person joins your group and statements he/she makes about his/her background just don't add up.

A person joins your group and starts stirring up trouble and creating divisions.

A person joins your group and is overly eager to be useful, to pay for the group's activities, to initiate activities, supply equipment, to escalate dangerous activities, etc.

Someone goes out of his way to gain your trust, to be really buddy-buddy with you. Then, when you resist getting into dubious activities, he drops all interest in you (he's looking for an easier mark).

Advice from the underground

This ultra-basic piece of advice goes back at least to the agitators of the 1960s. Yet people still get entrapped by ignoring it: "You can always tell the FBI agent. He's the one who's trying to get you to bomb something."

You're asked to do illegal or dubious business with a "friend of a friend." This is a big one. It's amazing how many "friends of friends" (where controversial activities are involved) are actually undercover cops.

Someone asks you to do something illegal or dangerous that he could just as easily do himself or have done elsewhere.

Someone starts agitating to have your group do something outside the group's purposes. ("Hey, we just run a little of this 'stuff' across the border and it'll make us a lot of money that we can use to do good.")

An older, "more experienced" person joins your group or circle and soon becomes a counselor of sorts to the youngest, most edgy, most insecure, most angry, or most naive members. He "cuts them out of the herd" in order to pull them into illegal plots. (This is a classic tactic of the agent provocateur.)

Anyone in your group starts agitating for violent action. People who agitate for illegal activities may be snitches; or they may be genuine fools who will attract snitches.

These are not the only ways snitches get you in trouble. But they're among the most common ones.

On the other hand, appearances can be deceiving.

An online commentator who goes by the handle Bulucanagria recalls:

Some years ago I was returning from a job interview. I was changing buses in downtown Cincinnati when I saw that there was a hemp rally about to begin. Naturally I stayed on to enjoy the festivities.

Coming from a job interview I was dressed casually, but rather nicely; slacks, button down shirt, decent shoes. Also, I'm a fairly large white guy with short hair, my preference because when my hair grows out I look like a used Q-tip.

So, I'm standing at the back of the crowd when a band comes on to warm up the crowd. The singer intros the song by saying, "This is dedicated to all the undercover cops out there today ..." and about a dozen people turn and look at me with knowing expressions. I had to laugh out loud!

The first speaker comes out (Gatewood Galbraith RIP), and soon some naif sparks up a joint ... and is immediately arrested by the tie-dyed, long-hair, bearded hippie! Again I couldn't help myself and laughed out loud. I've smoked my share of The Devil's Lettuce but sometimes potheads just ain't too bright.

My point is that another potential sign of a plant is somebody who seems to match all the stereotypes of the group you're in. The agent involved may be smart and subtle enough to provide a nuanced portrayal of a "fellow traveler," or he may be an ignorant jackwagon who believes all the hype put out by his overlords and thinks of his quarry as cartoon characters. It's true that stereotypes become so by generally being true, but it's doubtful that any one individual would embrace them all.

Again, this seems like something a savvy person would already understand but, since we're trying to explain these things to ignorant fools (i.e. me 30 years ago), I thought I'd share.

What makes snitches so persuasive?

Snitches, especially professional agents provocateurs, can be master manipulators. Many otherwise-smart people have been drawn into their traps because they failed to recognize not only the specific techniques listed in the last section but because they failed to understand the psychology of snitchery and entrapment.

Snitches play on your trust and/or your desire to go along with others.

They may appeal to your loyalty or your fear or some other emotion ("You won't do it? Wow, and here I thought you were one of us." "C'mon, if you had any guts you'd do this." "How are we ever going to change things if we don't take radical action?")

They may literally "cut from the herd" the most naive, trusting, foolish, or discontent of your associates, isolate them, and psychologically manipulate them into committing crimes.

They may pretend to be your friend. — especially a friend in need. ("I know you don't usually deal, but couldn't you just sell me a little from your stash?" "Look, just help me get this money out of the country; it's no big deal." "Hey, I know you have a machine shop in your garage; how about helping me cut down the barrel on this shotgun? I'll pay you.")

They may actually be your friend — but a friend who has gotten into legal trouble and has turned to snitching to save themselves from a long prison sentence. (Same sorts of urgings as in the last bullet point, but this time coming from somebody for whom that wouldn't be characteristic behavior.)

They may make it easy to commit crimes by not only pushing the idea, but actually supplying the funding, the equipment, the transportation, and the planning for the crime. They may come across as natural leaders ("Trust me, I know how to do this!")

They may make hyper-strong appeals to your cause — then use the leverage they gain to make equally strong appeals for committing crimes.

They often play upon a normal human desire to want to DO something - which is likely why, if you're a political person, you're a member of the group in the first place.

And finally — let's never forget — some snitches play on that most basic instinct of all — S.E.X. Spy agencies have known this as long as there have been spy agencies. The KGB used to call it "the sparrow trick"; get a red-blooded heterosexual male up close with an attentive, manipulative female and said male will eventually whisper all manner of secrets into her ear. These days, it probably works the other way around, too. And no doubt homosexual attraction can blind eyes and loosen lips just as effectively.

Case in point: Steve Haug

Haug is one of the agents provocateurs the FBI planted with the Hutaree Militia — a group that basically did not do much while its members spouted unpleasant political rhetoric. Haug inserted himself so persuasively into the group that he became the best man at the leader's wedding.

And all the while he was recording hundreds of hours of conversations and aggressively trying to get the group to cook up a "bomb plot." A judge eventually threw out all the major charges, but not until some Hutaree members had spent two years in jail awaiting trial.

It's also worth noting: One of the other snitches who helped bring down the Hutaree was a mouthy radio-show host called Hal Turner.

Turner used another infamous tactic of snitches; he constantly urged, and even threatened, violence against public officials. All the while he was on the air, rousing dimwits into a frenzy, he was also a paid FBI informant, reporting on the very people he was inciting. And that's not at all unusual or surprising.

Another point to remember about snitches

This comes from "just waiting," who also contributed the excellent primer on interrogation that you'll find in the appendices. He notes: "While all snitches are cowards, not all snitches are wimps or sissies. Just because we talk about them as lesser beings doesn't mean some of them aren't tough as nails — fighters and brawlers.

"If nothing else, snitches show a very developed sense of self-preservation and a willingness to do anything to save their own ass. Being a rat doesn't diminish their ability to fight, it just changed their tactics and focus temporarily."

So beware: Another way snitches can be dangerous is to physically hurt you if you get in their way.

"Mere" snitching vs active entrapment

Back in the late sixties or thereabouts, there was a federal case in which Treasury agents latched on to a printer who was willing to fantasize about doing some counterfeiting. Undercover Treasury agents encouraged him to really do it. Despite being a printer, he didn't have the special plates required to print money. So the Treasury agents provided them. Then he didn't have the special paper required to print money. So the Treasury agents provided it. And so on.

A judge tossed the case. And rightly so. There would never have been a crime, had the federal agents not provided the means and a big chunk of the motivation. That's entrapment.

Today, that dumb sap of a printer would be in prison for a long, long, time. As Bovard says, standards have changed. Although a jury will occasionally decide that some act of entrapment is so outlandish they'll refuse to convict (do an Internet search on "FCPA Africa Sting" for a great example), victims of entrapment have ended up serving decades in prison for going along with plots cooked up entirely by government agents. Even those eventually found not

Times have changed — not for the better

In a Playboy article, James Bovard wrote: "Up until the early Seventies, defendants often successfully challenged entrapment as a violation of due process. But in 1973, the Supreme Court, in an opinion written by Chief Justice William Rehnquist, gutted most defenses against government entrapment by focusing almost solely on the 'subjective disposition' of the entrapped person. If prosecutors can find any inkling of a defendant's disposition to the crime, went Rehnquist's logic, then the person is guilty, no matter how outrageous or abusive the government agents' behavior. Justice William Brennan dissented, warning that the decision could empower law enforcement agents to 'round up and jail all 'predisposed' individuals.'" guilty may lose everything in the effort to save themselves.

With courts allowing more and more acts that would once have been considered illegal entrapment, more and more "mere" snitches are using their wiles to talk people into illegal deeds and are even providing the means and money to carry those deeds out. The lines between "mere" snitches and agents provocateurs are blurring.

Beware of anybody who not only wants you to commit illegal acts but goes out of his way to "help" you do so!

Dangerous myths about snitches and undercover agents

There are two huge myths about snitches, narcs, undercover agents and other cop-associated rats that you'll hear all the time. The people spouting this BS always sound as if they know it for a fact. But the only fact is that they're misinformed — and are dangerously misinforming you.

Here are the two myths:

Myth #1: If you ask if someone is a narc, they have to tell you.

NO they don't. The myth holds that if you say, "Are you a narc?" or "Are you a cop?" and the person replies, "No," then they can never, ever bust you. Baloney! Every variety of snitch can look you straight in the eye and say, "I'm not a snitch" — then turn right around and land you in jail. Court cases around the nation — a search engine is your friend, here — have affirmed the “right” of government agents to lie to their targets. Which brings us to:

Myth #2: Cops are never allowed to lie to you.

OMFG, cops — and all kinds of other government agents — lie and they lie and they lie. And in nearly every case the courts allow them to get away with it.

But that brings up a related subject. Increasingly, you can get in trouble for lying to them. Even an innocent and harmless misstatement can be twisted into a prison sentence for you (search on "Martha Stewart prison" for an example).

There are a few sorts of lies that are so egregious that if a police officer tells them the case against you may be thrown out of court (attorney Jamie Spencer gives an example here¹). But only after you've been busted, scared out of your wits, deprived of your property, and perhaps driven into bankruptcy.

¹ <http://blog.austindefense.com/2006/10/articles/war-on-drugs/are-the-police-allowed-to-lie-to-you-during-a-criminal-investigation/>

So just remember: Cops and other government agents are the most evil liars in the world — because they have power to hurt you, they'll use it ruthlessly, and they know they can get away with almost anything. If you know, or even have good reason to suspect that someone is a cop or any sort of government agent, DO NOT TALK TO THEM. About anything. Don't try to outwit them. Do not try to turn the tables on them. Don't even talk about the weather around them. The only things you ever want to say to a cop are things like, "Am I free to go?," "I do not consent to a search," or "I will not speak to you without an attorney present."

Attorney safety tip:

A day or two spent in jail because of a frustrated government agent beats a lifetime spent there because of a verbal misstep.

What to do if you believe a snitch is personally targeting you

Let's assume that you suspect — but aren't sure — that someone in your circle is a snitch. And worse, you think the person is, or even might be, targeting you. What do you do?

Again, get away from the person

Do not try to outsmart the person

Do not feed the person false information (because if that person is an undercover agent this could be a crime in and of itself)

Do not commit violence against the person

Just get away — even if it means leaving a group

If you think you've already said or done something compromising with this person, see a good lawyer and read the section of this booklet on how to conduct yourself if you get arrested.

Another tip from this book's helpful attorney: "Consider making your OWN complaint to the authorities about this 'nutball' [the person you suspect of being a snitch]. This a) puts you on the record as NOT being in bed with the snitch, b) alerts the snitch and his handlers that you're aware of him and are thus less likely to be an 'easy target,' c) creates an appearance that you're not one of the bad guys - since you're not hiding anything, and d) maybe - with a little luck - the snitch ends up in jail himself for some time. I would not consider this 'do not try to outsmart' described above (which I agree with)." Of course, if he turns out not to be a snitch, you may have harmed an innocent person by calling the cops on him. It's a risk. But if the person really is an agent of the government, this can be a pretty good act of self-protection. Oh, and one of my friends who speaks from experience, points out that if you're going to report a snitch to the cops, it's best to do it through a lawyer. Otherwise you're talking to cops, which is a no-no.

It's an old joke, but ...

SterlingStrings writes:

Back in Soviet Russia, twin brothers were born. They slept in the same crib. As they grew older, they went to the same schools, and entered the same military duty side by side. After the military, they started work next to each other in the same factory. They were married on the same day, and raised their families next door to each other in the same apartment building.

The years go by, and the brothers find themselves as old men, sitting on a park bench, sharing a bottle of vodka.

"What do you think of these new reforms they keep talking about?" asks one brother.

"Nyet" Says the other, "One of us might be KGB!"

As I said, old joke, but an element of truth. The sad reality is, everyone has their version of the "thirty pieces of silver." Pressure on a family member, fear of jail time, exposure of a dark secret ... anybody can be turned. The trick is in riding the fine line between necessary trust and over extending yourself and putting yourself at risk. Personally, I'm in favor of compartmentalizing information. Discuss "X" with one person/group, share "Y" with another group, and keep your yap shut about "Z".

Also, remember that the Internet is the greatest snitch out there. Every click, every search, every action CAN be recorded. I have no evidence that it's being done successfully, but it can be done. That's enough for me to never use a single point of entry to the WWW. Visit the public library for some, your local coffee shop for more, do some lightweight stuff at home, and don't surf and research at the same time. Find stuff, data dump it to a secure source, and read it later. If you find it irrelevant, trash it then.

Heads down, eyes up!

PART TWO

A Snitch Uncovered

If you believe there's a snitch in your group

We've talked about how to recognize snitches and what you, as an individual, should do to protect yourself. Again, we have to stress that there are no magic bullets; you might be blindsided and severely damaged by a snitch despite your best instincts and best efforts at OpSec. The advice in this booklet can lessen the chance of that, but nobody can give you any guarantees.

Let's say, though, that you believe you've spotted a snitch and this snitch is not only in a position to harm you, but also a group you belong to — whether that be a bunch of dope-smoking friends, a group of hobbyists or gun owners, an activist political organization, or a religious group.

The first thing to do, as we have said before and will say again, is to get away from that person and his or her influence. However, now you've got other people to worry about.

Some members of your group may be absolute innocents. Some may be blabbermouths or edgy types who are walking stupidly into the snitch's trap. Some may be friends with the snitch and hostile to anybody who expresses doubts about the person. Some may even be associates in the snitch's plan to bust you (it's not unusual for government agencies to plant multiple agents into one operation and the bitter old joke that, if not for the snitches, some meetings would be empty, isn't that far wrong).

What do you do?

Document your suspicions.

If possible, conduct some careful, subtle investigation to see if your suspected snitch's background and life matches her claims. Does she really live where she says? Has she been seen with police? Do her statements about her education or her friends hold up? If not, you may not have a snitch, but you have an untrustworthy person, for sure.

Share your specific reasons for suspicion with people in the group that you trust. Yes, we know that snitches destroy trust, so be very careful when choosing one or two others to confide in.

If you can do so without violating your state's law, quietly begin video or audiotaping all interactions with the suspected person. If state wiretapping laws forbid recording without the consent of all parties, then at least consider openly recording meetings to counteract any lies the snitch may tell his handlers.

Start a 'Facts, Acts, and Circumstantial file.' After each incident write details down. Facts are the time, date, occasion, incident, characteristics of the person(s). Acts are what they did. Circumstantial is the impressions and anything odd about the situation. Use the FAC file and keep notes from unsettling situations and see if a pattern emerges. (Note: This item also appears in Appendix 2, where you will find details on how to do this, along with many other commonsense OpSec tips.)

Do not make open accusations unless you have proof positive of snitchery or copness (as when New York Libertarian Party activists (see below) spotted a former "suspicious" member in the New York Times, helping the FBI with an arrest).

Discuss with your most trusted associates what to do.

Just as your first individual move is to keep away from the suspect individual, the best group action may be to simply shut the person out. Stop talking with them. Stop inviting them to meetings. Stop asking them to be involved in projects. Freeze them out of all activities and discussions.

In a serious case, you may end up having to shut down the entire group to foil a snitch or agent provocateur. If so, have a plausible excuse if you can.

Always, always make sure that you and the other "on the up and up" members of your group remain on record as NOT advocating illegal, and in particular violently illegal, activities. Got a blog, a Twitter account, a Facebook page? Make your opposition to certain activities clear and public.

Furthermore, make sure you stay on record as NOT advocating things that the snitch wants. Do not line up behind, or even pretend to agree with, that person's policy recommendations, strategies, or tactics. Remember, you may well be being recorded. You do not even want to appear to superficially agree with things an undercover operative is trying to talk you into.

Again, finally, you may have to recognize that you can neither help nor save those who do not wish to be helped or saved. It may be that your final act has to be turning your files over to some other trusted member of the group and leaving. You always have a chance of finding another group. You're not going to have a chance to find another you.

One interesting (though dangerous) way to ID snitches

In his youth, Steve was a member of a number of groups that attracted the attention of cops and snitches. There were so many iffy hangers-on that the tiny core of solid people weren't sure who was a cop or who just smelled like one, or who was a snitch and who might just be a misfit or an idiot.

Then three people hit on a plan. Steve explains:

"Three of us who fairly trusted each other wondered how bad we were compromised and decided to try a test. We were a lot of loosely organized groups with a variety of hangers on. Each of us met with some of these people and called a 'secret' meeting. It was a cop's wet dream — with guns, drugs and heavy people promised. One of us went to each of these meetings and it was only some of the people told about it and a massive police presence at all of them. (The smart people stayed home.) It became unpleasant when the Feds, cops and such realized it was a trick.

"It left me with the depressing feeling that it was next to impossible to put a heavyweight group of more than one person together without a snitch."

Here's one way to spot a snitch!

Online commenter BusyPoorDad writes:

Years ago, when the New York Libertarian Party was starting up, a new member joined and became active. He said he was from a low-income neighborhood, worked a manual labor job, and did not know much about politics. He looked the part but things just did not add up.

He knew how to set a table for a formal dinner, used the Robert's Rules very well, and fit in very well with the highly educated members. After about four months of working with us, he just stopped coming. This sort of thing happened a lot but there were no signs of discontent. He was always willing to do everything he was asked to help do (petition, run Nolan chart tables, etc.).

About a year later he was spotted in the NY Times holding on to someone arrested by the FBI for something.

His background just did not fit with him. We never saw him reading books, he talked about watching TV and working at a warehouse, but he was able to be cultured, had a good vocabulary, and really wanted to be part of everything.

HISTORICAL ways of dealing with known snitches

Since, as one wag observed, the first snitch arose shortly after the first secret, history offers us lots and lots of examples of how groups have handled the betrayers in their midst.

We do not recommend any of these methods! On the contrary, we advise in the strongest terms possible against them. This is just to note how seriously people have historically taken those who betray them. But, again, to be blunt - DO NOT DO ANY OF THIS! These examples are for historical, educational purposes only.

The IRA used to shoot betrayers in the kneecaps. It wouldn't kill them, but everyone who saw a former activist lurching down the street on destroyed knees knew what he was.

The Mafia would famously send stool pigeons to "sleep with the fishes."

Resistance groups, particularly during wartime, have been known to leave the bodies of betrayers in public squares with messages pinned to them — or even carved in them. While still saying it's a bad idea, it did have the effect of discouraging the general populace from working with the enemy. Today snitches and betrayers often see benefits and face nowhere near enough drawbacks for their dirty work.

In the 1980s and 1990s, the African National Congress punished perceived collaborators with the monstrous method called "necklacing." They'd shove a gasoline-filled tire over a miscreant's neck and arms and kill the person by setting the tire alight.

After World War II, many women who had slept with or otherwise collaborated with Nazis were humiliated by having their hair hacked off while mobs screamed, "Nazi whore!" This might not sound like much compared with bestly punishments like necklacing. But public humiliation, shunning, and the attack on their femininity was hugely degrading and psychologically damaging.

How do YOU treat an exposed snitch?

Since you are not a Mafioso, and since (so far) we are not in an outright shooting war with an enemy state, there is no justification for historical hardcore tactics. We'll say it again: your best bet is just to get away from the snitch and take protective measures as described above.

However, if you're very sure a person is a rat and you want to take further steps to render the snitch ineffective or miserable, here are some milder, but potentially effective, tactics. Again, we DO NOT NECESSARILY RECOMMEND any of these things. They may be good or bad ideas, depending on the people and the circumstances. They're just possibilities:

Spread the word. Use social networks both online and in the real world to notify others that the person is an informant. Be as factual and give as much evidence as possible. (There is even a website that contains a national database of known rats, but since it's a paid membership site, we're not recommending it here. Do a Startpage.com or DuckDuckGo.com search¹ to find it if you're interested.) Post the snitch's photo, address, or other personal details online unless that violates a law in your area. This strategy is, however, a serious two edged sword - as those methods are ones that may be used by agents provocateurs in attempting to damage a group by further destroying trust. In fact, such tactics may well end up with YOU being labeled - no matter how unfairly or incorrectly - as the snitch! In fact, removing competent and trustworthy personnel from a group is high on a snitch's to-do list, and this can be a gift from on-high to a snitch.

Expel the person from the group. You can do this quietly - perhaps just by moving meetings and failing to inform the person of the new place. Or you can do it publicly, literally holding a purge or a type of trial where you present the evidence against the person.

¹ Both are more secure than Google

Organize a shunning. Shunning has historically been a huge tactic in close communities. Shunning means shutting a person (and sometimes his family members) out of virtually all ordinary activity. A target of shunning isn't welcome into people's homes, can't get served at restaurants, doesn't have his greetings returned, can't get help from any of her former friends, and is generally unable to function within the community. Obviously in many ways this has become harder to do as we've become less reliant on our towns and neighborhoods. On the other hand, the Internet has made other, non-traditional forms of shunning possible.

Turn them in to the "legitimate" authorities. We mentioned this option before as a means of protecting yourself and your true friends. The same tactic may work to halt the snitch in its tracks or even put it in jail. Snitches are often serious criminals. They may well be up to nefarious deeds that their handlers in the police departments or government agencies don't know. Or a snitch who's working for the local PD may be unknown to the FBI, who might be interested to learn about other things he's up to. Again, we are very, very squeamish about the idea of turning any non-violent, non-thieving person into to any law-enforcement agency. But ... well, you'll need to judge for yourself what the snitch in your midst deserves. And of course, do this through a lawyer. Don't talk directly to government agents.

Fun and games. Again, this is a tactic we do not recommend. However, traditionally it's been used as a lovely bit of revenge and a way to keep snitches busy without letting them know you're already on to them. The idea is to keep the snitch running in circles with false leads. Set one snitch spying on another. Or give the snitch false evidence to focus on while you go about your real business unmolested. We consider this to be in the category of trying to "outsmart" the snitch — which is not wise. And you must be especially careful that you never put yourself in a position where you can be accused of "lying to law enforcement," since you can go to prison for that even when you're innocent in every other way. But such games can be fun while they last.

Rehabilitate and take the snitch back into your circle. There are people who believe that some snitches — especially young, inexperienced people who get in over their heads, get in legal trouble, and are intimidated into becoming snitches — should be forgiven, rehabilitated, and eventually brought back into the fold of trust. A very humane anarchist, Tom Knapp, took this position when young anti-drug-war activist Stacy Litz was arrested and pressured into becoming a drug informant. Not many people sympathized (and Litz made her own reputation worse with her online writings). But some very decent folks might want to open their arms to a "reformed" snitch. All we can say is, if you want to go that way, make damned sure the rat has actually reformed first — and can prove it through actions, not mere words.

A modern shunning

In the mid-1990s, Bob Black was a very well-known anarchist. Then, after a personal dispute with fellow writer Jim Hogshire and Hogshire's wife (a "he said-she said" encounter whose facts are known only to the three who were present), Black did the unthinkable.

And in this case the unthinkable was verifiable. On February 21, 1996, Black wrote a letter to the Narcotics Division of the Seattle Police Department, accusing Hogshire of a multitude of drug crimes, and implying that Hogshire was armed and dangerous.

Paramilitary police descended on the Hogshires' apartment. They confiscated perfectly legal items (including dried poppies and a mug warmer they mistook for a drug-weighing scale). Both Jim and Heidi Hogshire spent three days in jail. Even though a judge eventually dismissed the charges, Black's accusation made a hellacious mess of Hogshire's life, cost him tens of thousands of dollars, and contributed to the breakup of his marriage.

In the long run, however, it was Black who paid the bigger price. His publisher (who was also Hogshire's publisher) destroyed all remaining inventory of Black's books and published an article exposing Black's perfidy. Another publisher Black had worked with wrote an open letter in defense of Hogshire. Years later, archives all over the Internet still tell the story; you can easily find a copy of Black's snitch letter. Although as of this writing, Black has managed to keep his Wikipedia page scrubbed of the gory details, the evidence will be out there on other sites as long as he lives and few people will ever again give serious credence to an "anarchist" who reports people to the cops the moment he gets irritated with them.

Repairing the damage snitches do

Unfortunately, it's quite possible you'll never be able to repair the damage done by a snitch. You or someone you care about may end up in prison, broke, or otherwise badly hurt. A group or movement you belong to may collapse or members may split off in anger and distrust.

As one former government agent pointed out after reviewing a draft of this book, ruining activist groups is "at least one of the auxiliary functions of snitches."

But finding a snitch in your midst can also be a valuable learning experience.

It can teach you the importance of good security practices.

It can reveal who's trustworthy and who's not.

It can teach group members not only to be less gullible, but teach them what signs to look for when a snitch is targeting them.

Uncovering a snitch can help the remaining trustworthy members of a group to pull together.

If you're lucky and the activities of your snitch are particularly egregious, you might even get sympathy, donations, or renewed positive attention once good people realize what evil that person and her handlers tried to do to you.

In part, the long-term results of being targeted by a snitch depend on how you and your associates handle the problem. After the initial shock and recovery, look upon it as a chance to learn and teach others.

Beware of accusing someone who might not be a snitch

It can be very, very difficult to detect a snitch — until it's too late. We sometimes face the evil choice of making a false accusation against an innocent person or keeping quiet about our suspicions and ending up with somebody (maybe even us) getting busted.

The damage a false accusation of snitching can do is horrifying. First, an innocent person suffers a grave wrong. He loses his reputation unjustly. She may be attacked by others. Second, your group of associates may break down in chaos. Your real work may suffer.

Then — this also happens — a wrongly accused person who gets expelled, shunned, or attacked may actually become a snitch in revenge.

It's also important to remember that a person who makes a false accusation of snitching is acting like a snitch himself. And in fact, one tactic a snitch might use to divert suspicion from herself is to point the finger at someone else.

So if you suspect someone of snitching but you have no solid reason for your suspicions, it's usually just best to detach yourself from the person while remaining watchful. Do not do anything in that person's presence or within that person's knowledge that you wouldn't do in front of your mother. Quietly encourage others to be watchful (it's just good OpSec, after all), but do not make public accusations without real reason.

Is there a danger in such a wait-and-see approach? You betcha. Around snitches, and in a "snitch culture" like ours, there is always danger in many forms.

PART THREE

WHAT HAPPENS IF YOU GET BUSTED?

You may be pressured to become a snitch

It happens all too often these days. You get busted and the next thing you know the cops are either threatening you or sweet-talking you into snitching on somebody else. They may promise to "help" you if you agree to become an informant. They may tell you that a friend arrested with you is already singing like a bird, and you should, too, if you want to save your ass (see "The Prisoner's Dilemma" later in this book). They may say they already "know everything," so you might as well tell "your side of the story" to make others look worse than you. If they think you're particularly dumb and harmless, they might even take you out and buy you donuts while talking you into being their pawn (yes, Philadelphia cops actually did that in their successful effort to turn anti-drug-war activist Stacy Litz into a drug-war informant).

You may imagine, sitting here reading this, that you'd never, ever, ever stoop to snitching on other people. But the fact is, until we've been tested, not one of us really knows what we might do under the right kind of pressure or persuasion.

The good news is that just a bit of advanced preparation can help any of us understand how police get us to work against our own interests and how they turn scared people into informants. Some pretty minimal knowledge can help us protect ourselves and our rights. Some of this knowledge can help us avoid being busted in the first place. Some of it can help us withstand the cynical manipulations of cops and prosecutors if we do get busted.

IMPORTANT: Please read the article on the Reid interrogation technique (TM) that appears toward the end of this booklet. The Reid technique is used by police to manipulate arrestees into cooperating — which may include everything from confessing to a crime you didn't (or did) commit to agreeing to rat out your friends.

The article was written by a man who, as a young outlaw, was twice subjected to Reid interrogations. He then grew up to study and employ the Reid Technique in his profession as an auditor/investigator.

Read and heed it. You're far less susceptible to manipulation once you understand how the manipulation works.

Do NOT talk to cops. Period.

And remember: Everything we say about not talking to cops also goes for every, single kind of government agent, local, state, national, or international.

If you are confronted by a law-enforcement officer under any circumstances — at your front door, during a traffic stop, because you've been fingered by a snitch, or for any reason whatsoever — DO NOT TALK. If you get arrested, DO NOT TALK.

The only things you should ever say to a police officer are things like these:

No, you may not search my vehicle.

No, you may not enter my home.

I do not consent to any search.

Am I free to go?

On the advice of my lawyer, I cannot talk to you.

I will not talk without my lawyer present.

You should never lie to a cop because that in itself may be a crime.

You should never imagine you can outsmart a cop with clever talk. They've heard it all.

You should resist the temptation to babble nervously (very difficult for some of us).

Do not try to explain yourself (also very difficult for some of us).

Do not try to talk your way out of a situation except where you can state a legal or constitutional principle that demonstrates your innocence. This is a technique that can be used by people who photograph or videotape cops at work, people who legally open-carry weapons, or people who are legally protesting. (Even then you may still get busted and/or beat up, but you'll be creating a case in your favor that might come in useful later.)

Oh yeah. And if you get tossed into jail, DON'T TALK TO YOUR CELLMATES OR THE JAILERS, EITHER. You can chitty-chat with your cellmates to pass the time and keep them from thinking you're a jerk; you can probably also learn quite a bit from them. But DO NOT TALK about anything to do with your case. Even if you don't think you're admitting anything incriminating, you're opening yourself up to every jailbird who might want to trade information, even false information about you, to the cops.

JUST SHUT UP!

TIP: Know a good lawyer, keep his or her card on you, and insist on talking to that lawyer if you ever get busted or even accosted by a cop who won't take no for an answer.

Avoid using public defenders if you can. Not all of them are bad, but many of them are overworked and/or just geared to processing cases as fast as they can. They often deal with petty criminals who expect nothing more than to be "processed." With rare and noble exceptions, they are probably not your best resource if you really hope to be represented as you wish.

Attorney safety tip:

This video, mentioned again in the appendices, is possibly the best and most useful 49 minutes you will spend on this topic without paying an attorney first:

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZGgKLgVNfAo>

The police officer is NOT your friend

Again remember: Everything we say about not talking to cops also goes for every, single kind of government agent, local, state, national, or international.

Contrary to what you might have learned in kindergarten ... contrary to what you might hope ... and contrary to the image the officer might be trying to fake ... THE POLICE OFFICER IS NOT YOUR FRIEND. Let us say that again, just in case you didn't get it the first time: THE POLICE OFFICER IS NOT YOUR FRIEND.

Unless you've been living in a cave most of your life, you've probably heard of the "bad cop/good cop" technique. When you've been arrested and are being interrogated, one cop will bully and intimidate you until you're just a little puddle of terror. Then another cop (who may be present at the same time or who may come in later) will pretend to sympathize with you and want to "help" you.

Don't ever believe it.

If you've done your proper work and just said no to interrogation or said you'd only speak with your lawyer present, you may avoid this

Attorney safety tip:

[In the bad cop/good cop technique]

Officer A will threaten you, your family, your friends, your pets, with severe harm going back nigh unto the 10th generation. Officer B will then call him off and suggest that "just a little cooperation" on your part will help avert all that.

Also be aware that sometimes they don't HAVE to lie to get what they want from you. Seriously, I've lost count of the number of defendants I've dealt with who were skaaaaaREWED by talking to the PD and who told me, "But the officer was so NIIIIICE." Not every officer is going to be Officer McGruff - the "Officer Friendly" model can achieve amazing results.

particular form of manipulation. But wherever and whenever you meet a cop — or any federal agent or investigator, a jailer or a prosecutor — who acts like he's "on your side" or wants to "help" you or promises to get the system to "go lighter on you" — DON'T YOU BELIEVE IT!

The Prisoner's Dilemma

When "the authorities" have arrested you and want to turn you into a snitch, they have a powerful phenomenon on their side. It's particularly useful if you've been busted along with friends or associates, or even if the cops persuade you that they have busted or will soon be busting others in your circle. (And remember again, cops are among the biggest liars on the planet.)

In game theory, the phenomenon is called The Prisoner's Dilemma. It works something like this:

Two (or more) people are arrested but the police don't have enough information to convict either of you.

They separate the arrestees and offer each a similar deal; if you cooperate (testify against your friend, agree to become a snitch) and your friend remains silent, you'll go free. Your friend will be hit with the full legal penalty.

On the other hand, if you rat each other out, you may both get a lesser sentence.

On yet another hand, you realize that if you both remain silent, you both may go free — but you have absolutely no idea what your companion is doing — and the cops have given you both quite a lot of incentive to rat each other out.

In game theory, according to Wikipedia, "... the logical decision leads each to betray the other, even though their individual 'prize' would be greater if they cooperated." In reality, if you and your fellow arrestee were allowed to discuss your decisions, you'd probably both opt to clam up; it's part of the goodness of human beings that we'd rather cooperate than betray. However, the police are going to keep you apart through this process as best they can, which makes the temptation to betray seem the only logical, self-protective course of action.

Sitting here, safely reading this booklet, you might very well say to yourself, "I'm a good person. I would never rat out my friend." You imagine yourself thrusting out your chin and saying, "NO!" no matter what the personal cost to you.

And there are really some people who would do that. But they're in the minority.

In reality, you don't know how scared you'd be. You might be sitting there worrying about what your mother would think if you went to jail. You might be terrified of losing your job and being unable to pay your bills. You may have a pet or child at home you're desperate to get back to. The police will remind you that if you go to jail you'd be leaving your newborn baby or disabled spouse without protection. The police might badger you until you'll agree to anything just to have some peace.

Relationships between friends and associates complicate matters, too. Seeking self-justification, you might tell yourself you're just an innocent who got dragged into the whole situation by the other person. You might think, "Hm, well Bill's probably ratting me out right now," or "Well, there was that time when Mary didn't treat me fairly, so why should I sacrifice myself for her?" One snitch justified her betrayal of principle by telling herself that she'd be "more effective" as a political activist if she didn't go to jail; she told herself she would only snitch on certain people, ones she didn't know well or like very much.

So you never know.

If you're arrested and more than one person in your circle might join you, the only way to avoid The Prisoner's Dilemma is to decide in advance that you WILL NOT TALK and make sure all your associates are well schooled in their legal right to keep silent. Have them read this booklet!

But as always, there are no guarantees. We keep saying that. It's sadly true.

Mindset: The common territory between snitches and victims

Another reason that it's often easy for cops to turn victims into snitches is that there's sometimes a common mindset between people who snitch and people who fall into the traps set by snitches.

Obviously, this isn't true of everybody who gets busted or otherwise becomes the target of a snitch. But both snitches and their easiest "marks" are frequently:

Overly naive and trusting

Unprepared for bad things happening to them

Cocky and overly confident

Loudmouthed or prone to blab information without thinking

Prone to believe that "nice" cops really do want to "help" them (yes, it's another form of being overly naive and trusting, but it bears repeating because if you get caught because you trusted a rat you're more likely to turn around and trust that rat's handlers)

Very good at rationalizing their own less-than-stellar behavior

(Or conversely) So idealistic and starry-eyed that reality, when it hits, knocks them for a loop.

What happens if you refuse to snitch?

If you refuse to snitch or otherwise cooperate with government, the prosecutor may pin more charges on you and may pursue them with more determination. Worse, prosecutors may threaten to bring charges against those you love.

Or that may not happen. Sometimes pressure to snitch is just a gambit and nothing terrible will happen to you for refusing.

If you do refuse to snitch and "the man" becomes more threatening, consider going public with your courageous refusal. This might offer you some protection and will very likely gain you friends and supporters. As soon as you're out on bail, tell your associates what happened to you. Blog about it. Put it out on social media. Explain the kind of pressures that were put on you. Describe what you felt and endured. Describe why and how you refused to become a tool of the police.

You'll be wise if you have a good lawyer on your side from the get-go. Our helpful attorney notes: "This is a good reason for 'lawyering up' in the first place. People make fun of lawyers, but there's a reason we exist. Of course, keep in mind that the prosecutor is a lawyer, too, so it's not necessarily all to the good."

What if your lawyer advises you to snitch?

Some lawyers in some circumstances will advise a client to go ahead and accept an offer to snitch in exchange for more lenient treatment. Sometimes there are practical reasons: you're guilty as hell, the cops have the evidence to prove it, and your lawyer thinks that cooperating would be the best way for you to avoid a long prison sentence. Sometimes, on the other hand, your lawyer's just a lazy SOB who doesn't give much of a damn and thinks turning snitch is the easiest resolution — for him.

If you are strongly opposed to snitches and snitching, tell your lawyer up front that, whatever else happens, you're not going to do that. Then if your lawyer pressures you to accept any agreement that involves snitching, get a new lawyer.

RATS!

And remember, it'll probably help your case a lot if you AVOID TALKING TO THE POLICE. AT ALL.

What happens if you become a snitch — and regret it?

If you are reasonably cautious in your real-world dealings and if you have prepared yourself NOT TO TALK TO GOVERNMENT AGENTS, the chances are good that nobody will successfully arm-twist or sweet-talk you into becoming a snitch. Even if you get busted, you'll handle yourself in a way that will make you less vulnerable to manipulation. (NOT TALKING may also help you in other ways, but here we're just talking about avoiding being pressured into snitching.)

But the simple fact is that anybody can break under the right kind of pressure — and government agents are trained in sophisticated terror and manipulation tactics. Once you fall into their clutches, you may simply be in over your head. So what if, under pressure, you agree to become a snitch — and regret it later? What if you agree to do it, then before you actually snitch on anybody, you realize you don't want to, can't, and won't betray other people?

If you become a snitch and don't regret it enough to stop, then to hell with you.

But having agreed to snitch, then changed your mind, you've got a tough dilemma and you could use some assistance getting out of it. You are going to have to be careful, brave, and more than a little bit lucky to handle the situation well.

First, you need a GOOD lawyer. You should have had one before you agreed to snitch, but definitely get one to advise you now.

Consider going public with your situation. Tell your associates what happened to you. Blog about it. Put your story out on social media. Explain the kind of pressures that were put on you. Describe what you felt and endured while being pushed into agreeing to snitch. Then state in the strongest terms why you realized you would not and could not do it.

RATS!

Be prepared to lose some friends. You may gain friends and supporters by openly revealing how the cops treated you and how you ultimately resisted. But some people will distrust you; that's just reality.

What happens to you if you snitch and your friends find out?

Chances are, if you're a non-violent political activist or small-time dealer of "college type" drugs who got busted and turned, your friends will hate you but won't beat you up or kill you if they learn you snitched on them.

However, your reputation will be ruined and good luck earning it back.

If you snitch and get caught, at the very least be ready to humbly accept whatever those you betrayed dish out to you; you only make things worse by making excuses.

If your snitching has gotten others into legal trouble, you should accept that, at the very least, you owe them restitution. This may be difficult to do, especially since you may be facing serious criminal charges and huge expenses yourself. But it's your responsibility and you'll have to do it if you ever expect to be taken seriously again.

If you are part of a violent group or you deal hard drugs, don't be surprised if you get killed. Or as our helpful attorney says (with a nod to Captain Mal Reynolds of Firefly), "Prepare to be surprised very briefly. Or perhaps not so briefly; torture may be involved first."

The rest of your life if you do snitch

If you agree to snitch on your friends or associates, know in advance that you're going to have a big price to pay.

At best, snitches have to spend the rest of their lives looking over their shoulders.

Your "friends" in the police department or any federal agency that you snitch for will turn out not to be your real friends. They will toss you aside like a piece of maggoty meat when you no longer serve their purposes. Those promises they made to protect your anonymity? Maybe they'll keep them, but they're just as likely to leak your name or "accidentally" put your name into a public document. They may even force you into life-threatening situations and not give one bit of a damn what happens to you. After all, you're just a snitch. Snitches are a dime a dozen — and even the cops know they're scum.

Want to see how much "love" cops give their snitches? Read this New Yorker article about young, naive — and now DEAD — snitches. (The Throwaways ¹.)

Your snitching will probably not be important enough to earn you a spot in the Witness Protection Program, not even if you put your life in danger for your cop-handlers' sake.

You will be on your own and in peril.

You will have to live with yourself and if you have any self-awareness at all, every time you look in a mirror, a person you don't want to be will stare back at you.

If you snitch on friends or otherwise-harmless people, you should and (if you have any decency) you will feel an obligation to make things right by paying restitution or campaigning to get them out of prison. This obligation, which you might never be able to fulfill, could haunt you the rest of your life.

¹ http://www.newyorker.com/reporting/2012/09/03/120903fa_fact_stillman

On the other hand, things could be resolved very easily. Your betrayed associates may kill you and you won't have to worry about any of this.

APPENDIX 1

The Reid Interrogation Technique (TM) By "Just Waiting"

Okay, so you find yourself under arrest because of a snitch. Hopefully you've listened to the advice earlier in this booklet. You've cleaned up your act and your surroundings once you knew there was a snitch in your midst, and the only thing you were arrested for is information given by the snitch.

First thing to understand: Once you are arrested, ALL of the rights you had as a US citizen are gone except for two: the right to remain silent and the right to have an attorney present during questioning. USE THEM!!!

No one in law enforcement (LE) is your friend, and NO ONE wants to "help" you. They only want you to confess and do their will.

The police can and will lie to you. DO NOT LIE TO THEM!!! More on that later. They will tell you they have evidence/witnesses/tapes that don't exist. They'll poke, prod, and push every button they can to try to get you to respond. They'll tell you your friends are snitching on you in the other room. They'll tell you the only way to save yourself is to tell your side of the story. They'll threaten to call your boss. They'll tell you your kids are going to be taken away and raised by the state. They'll tell you how it will ruin your parents' reputation. They'll even tell you your dog is ugly. They'll make wild, baseless accusations — anything to get a response. Because once they get you to start talking, they're trained in how to keep you talking.

If you don't trust yourself to exercise your right to remain silent, exercise the second and ask for a lawyer. Remember, you can decide to remain silent or ask for a lawyer at any time during your questioning or interrogation.

You know the kinds of things you've been doing. If you are a high-value target, if you know or associate with high value targets, or if your activities rise to the level of interest that police want to question you, LE agencies employ an interrogation method known as the Reid Technique. It is a method of interview and interrogation (read: psychological manipulation) specifically designed to produce confessions.

That is one big reason you should heed the earlier advice and NOT TALK TO POLICE AT ALL. But I've interviewed/interrogated maybe 100 or more people and I've found, almost as a rule, that people have the hardest time keeping quiet. They want to defend themselves, to tell their story. I've yet to meet the person who can sit quiet for 10 minutes while someone else talks about them, even less when lies and untrue accusations start to fill the air. Even for someone who has regular, unfavorable contact with LE, even people like me who have been Reided, the hardest thing to do is to shut up. When someone makes a statement or allegation, its human nature to want to refute it.

So, if you find yourself being interrogated and you feel you must defend yourself, at least try to minimize the damage.

First: As I've said before, DO NOT LIE TO LE! You will get caught. Lies change with every telling, but the truth remains a constant. LE are trained in detecting the smallest, subtlest change in your story and ripping it wide open. Dante himself did not imagine a torture in hell like what you will experience from LE if you get caught lying to them. Plus, you are now subject to arrest for new charges, usually, Lying to LE or Obstruction, indictable crimes, and you've done so on tape. This is how some of LE's best snitches are made!

Second: If you can truthfully do so, DENY EVERYTHING. Do it simply and categorically. Don't ramble and make excuses. Just say, "I didn't do it," "I'm innocent," "That's false." As you'll see below, they'll do everything within their power to try to stop you from doing this. If you cannot honestly declare your innocence, then just say, "I want a lawyer."

Third: If you feel you have to answer an incriminating question, qualify your answer. "I don't think I was at...", "I don't recall seeing...", and "I may have met..." are all appropriate qualifiers to prevent telling an outright lie.

LE has studied the meaning of every move, every movement, every facial expression, every question, every answer. They identify and exploit weaknesses you didn't know you had. They watch and hear everything you do and say for meaning.

Repeat the question before answering? That answer is a lie.

Little or no direct eye contact? You're evasive.

Too much direct eye contact? You're cocky and/or confrontational.

Change from "is" to "was" or "a" to "the"? You're changing your story to hide something.

Sit up straight, slouch, fold your arms in your lap, fold them across your chest? You're scared, you're cocky, you're defensive. Every movement, posture and expression has a meaning to LE.

The surest way to know the Reid Technique is about to be used is the room they put you in after you're arrested. You'll know it when they open the door. And once they open that door, the ONLY WAY TO SAVE YOURSELF IS TO ASK FOR A LAWYER! Once the interrogation begins, LE won't stop until you ask for a lawyer or they've gotten what they want. Remember, you can ask for a lawyer at any time during the interrogation, do not be afraid to do so!

Interrogation rooms are specially designed to make you as uncomfortable and out of your element as possible. Your chair is the hard one, in the corner, furthest from the door, and behind some type of barrier, like a desk. Your interrogators will take positions clearly letting you know that they are in total control, that you are in their world, and the only way out of the room is through them. You can't get to the lights or thermostat. They'll turn the heat up (I once knew an interrogator who wore a sweater and complained of a chill in a 90+ degree room, talk about psychological manipulation), brighten or darken the room, etc. They'll create a physically intimidating presence without ever touching you. For maybe the first time in your life, your freedom is completely stripped away and you are confined. Control of every aspect of your physical condition has been stolen from you. When you are at your most vulnerable, the interrogators are ready to begin.

Reid is broken down into three parts, Factual Analysis, the Initial Behavioral Analysis Interview, and the Interrogation.

Factual Analysis is just what it says, an analysis of the facts in a case. Prior to talking to you, the LE tries to learn everything there is to know about the event leading to your arrest. They've gotten a story from a snitch. They know the date, time, how many people were there, some names, some physical descriptions, the drugs dealt or the damages caused.

Today, LE is on your Facebook page learning everything they can about you while developing their interrogation strategy. They'll try to know as much about you as your best friend, and use it to try to be your friend. Your favorite band? The LEO saw them last tour. Have a cat, dog, fish? The cop is so sad, he just had to put down his 16-year-old catdogfish yesterday. His wife went to the same school as you, different years. Wow, so much in common, you two could be pals. Have a pic of you and your mom? Jackpot, he'll use her later, in his interrogation.

The Initial Behavioral Analysis is supposed to weed out innocent suspects, but in reality this is where LE determines your susceptibility to further questioning and picks the strategy they will use against you. IBA starts the moment of your first contact with LE. The law-enforcement officer (LEO) asks simple, conversational, non-accusatory questions and listens to the way you frame your answers, watches your facial expressions, the way you stand. LEO has been trained in what every action and movement mean. Within the first 30 seconds, LEO knows whether you will be susceptible to questioning and if he'll be able to get you to talk. If LEO asks if you know the time, remember that that's a yes or no question. If you answer, "Yes, its 3:30," you've shown a willingness to please and to give more information than is asked. You're a perfect candidate for successful interrogation!

The official Reid Interrogation has nine steps, beginning with an accusation of guilt and ending with a confession. To LE, there are no other acceptable outcomes. If you were arrested as a result of a snitch, and took the advice of being arrested clean, LE has nothing more than the accusations the snitch has made. Remember, don't lie, but if you can't resist talking, at least DENY EVERYTHING! A good lawyer will rip a snitch apart and develop reasonable doubt in the eyes of a judge or jury. Snitching and witness credibility don't exactly go hand-in-hand.

LE will invariably offer you a chance to "tell your side." This is cop talk for "make a full confession." Cops brag at parties about how fast they have gotten suspects to do it.

If you don't start wailing and confess to everything, the next thing they'll try is shifting blame. They'll try to blame someone else and suggest that maybe you weren't involved but just got caught up in things. They'll give you scenarios in which to minimize your participation and guilt. They'll try to make it somehow socially acceptable, suggesting it was a crime of passion rather than a premeditated event. LE calls it “developing a theme,” what they’re really doing is presenting options for you to pick from to confess to. React to any one of their scenarios or agree to anything they suggest here, and you’re not getting away until you sign a confession and give them the names and information they want.

All throughout, LE will do everything they can to keep you from denying your “guilt.” They will disrupt you mid-word, tell you to shut up, tell you it's not your turn to talk, anything just to keep you from denying your guilt. They will try to talk over any claim of innocence so that denials are never clear on the recordings.

Why? Because opposing what LEO is saying builds self-confidence, something they’re working hard to strip from you.

And secondly (and maybe more importantly), if you continue to deny, dispute, deny for the first 1, 2, 3, or 4 hours of the interrogation, then confess to something in hour 5, a good lawyer will demonstrate coercive interrogation tactics were used and hopefully have your confession thrown out.

So qualify if you have to lie. Remember those “iffy” statements (“I don't recall ...”), but deny being there, deny any knowledge of events, deny knowing people, deny everything you honestly can.

If you haven’t asked for a lawyer and haven’t been denying, the interrogation moves on to the next steps. This is where a new LEO might come in. He understands your situation, he’s sympathetic, he’s your buddy, he doesn’t agree with the other LEO's interrogation tactics, either. He’ll tell you he’s been watching and that to him, you don’t seem to be the kind of person who could do something like what you’re accused of. He'll tell you he wants to help you. You’ve seen good cop/bad cop on TV, well, this is it in real life.

Good cop will appear to be sincerely caring about your predicament. He'll talk quietly. He'll lay out a bunch of different scenarios that minimize your guilt, all the while looking for the clue you give him that he's hit on a winning theme to follow. And that clue is so subtle you don't even know you've given it. But he does.

Good cop will give you acceptable justifications. He'll give you two options, you planned what happened or it was just a one-time thing. With either option, you're still making a confession. Good cop always leaves out option #3, you can DENY that you're guilty at all!

Good cop wants to see your tears; he knows he has you when you cry.

Once you have been broken down and are ready to admit to anything (search on "Central Park Jogger case" for false confessions) LEO will attempt to get you to tell your story to his associates or write down and sign your story. All of your protest and denial has been for nothing once you confess.

So remember these three key points: 1) The police are not your friends and do not want to help you; 2) If you don't trust yourself to remain silent, demand a lawyer (you can do so at any time); and 3) if you feel you just have to talk — don't lie, qualify and especially if you're innocent, deny, deny, deny.

APPENDIX 2

Some Commonsense OpSec

These commonsense OpSec (operational security) tips are for any group or any individual whose activities might draw the attention of the state. Some will protect you against snitches. Some will just protect you, period. The author is MJR, who works in security.

If you wish to have a private conversation, leave your home and your office and go outside and take a walk or go somewhere public and notice who is near you. Don't say anything you don't want to hear repeated when there is any possibility of being recorded.

Never leave a copy of a document or list behind (unless you want it found) and take a minute to duplicate an irreplaceable document and keep the duplicate in a safe place. Back up and store important computer disks off site. Sensitive data and membership list should be kept under lock and key.

Keep your mailing lists, donor lists and personal phone books away from light-fingered people. Always maintain a duplicate off site in a safe place.

Know your printer if you are about to publish, your mailing house and anyone you are trusting to work on any part of a project that is sensitive.

Don't hire a stranger as a messenger.

Checks for electronic surveillance are only effective for the time they are being done, and are only effective as they are being done if you are sure of the person(s) doing the sweep.

Don't use code on the phone. If you are being tapped and the transcript is used against you in court, the coded conversation can be alleged to be anything. Don't say anything on the phone you don't want to hear in open court.

Don't gossip on the phone. Smut is valuable to anyone listening; it makes everyone vulnerable.

If you are being followed, get the license number and description of the car and people in the car. Photograph the person(s) following you or have a friend do so.

If you are followed or feel vulnerable, call a friend; don't "tough it out" alone. They are trying to frighten you.

Start a 'Facts, Acts and Circumstantial file.' After each incident write details down: facts are the time, date, occasion, incident, characteristics of the person(s). Acts are what they did; Circumstantial is the impressions and anything odd about the situation. Use the FAC file and keep notes from unsettling situations and see if a pattern emerges.

Do freedom of information requests for your file under the FOIA and pursue the agencies until they give you all the documents filed under your name.

Brief your group on known or suspected surveillance.

Report thefts of materials from your office or home to the police as criminal acts.

Assess your undertaking from a security point of view; understand your vulnerabilities; assess your allies and your adversaries as objectively as you can; don't underestimate the opposition and don't take chances.

Recognize your organizational and personal strengths and weaknesses.

Discuss incidents with cohorts, family and your group.

Call the press if you have hard information about surveillance or harassment. Discussion makes the dirty work of the snitches overt.

Addendum on note-taking (Facts, Acts, and Circumstantial)

Although some might consider the following to be overkill, MJR also has experience facing opponents in court and offers this brief primer on taking the kind of notes that can guide you through a very tough grilling by police or prosecutors. He writes:

When preparing a "Facts, Acts, and, Circumstantial" list you are going to have to take notes about what is going on. The notes should be written in a clear and concise way. Use professional language and be prepared to substantiate what you record. One never knows, you could be wrong and get sued or if you do get arrested this could be the basis for a defense from entrapment.

The notebook that you use should be lined with a margin on the left. Each page should be numbered.

What to put in the notebook to make it legal

First you should start with the date. Then on the next line write the weather conditions. The reason for the record of what the weather was like is that the usual first question from a prosecutor or the other side's lawyer usually is about the weather. This is an attempt to discredit your memory.

When you make your first entry, write the time an event happened in the left margin. Next write down what happened or what you found and write down the location (address or approximate location). Then write down the actions taken by those involved and the names and addresses of any witnesses. If you make a mistake draw one line through the word and write your initials next to it. Oh and don't leave any lines blank. If more things happen during the day they all go under the same date. If the date changes you should start a new date with the weather. When you finish the last entry of the day sign your name. This makes it a legal document. Write the notes as soon as possible after an incident. Last, but never least... If you are going to use this book in court under no circumstances should you rip out any of the pages, this will only give the other side ammo to use against you. The questions you will face will revolve around you hiding something.

Here is an example of what the notebook should look like

	2012-08-02
	Sunny with a few clouds, 73 deg.
09:23	I met with  at the
	Duncan Donuts, 123 west St.
	AnyPlace, NY. He wanted to know if we were going to "Teach the man a lesson." I told him that I would let him know when later. I then set a date and time for the next meeting.
09:44	After he left I spoke with the server, Betty Lou Findley. I asked her if she had heard what Mr.  Had said. She answered yes and said she thought he was a little weird.
09:51	I left the Duncan Donuts.
	John P Anybody
	2012-08-06
	Overcast with light rain, 69 deg.
17:52	I was talking with  , 23
	North Ave. At 87 south crt. Any Place NY. He told me that he saw  the subject talking with an undercover police officer. I asked how he knew it was a cop, he said that he followed the cop to the police station. Mr.  told me that he saw the subject at a Denny's , 989 Big Blvd, Anyplace NY.
18:12	Mr.  left and I went home.
	John P Anybody

APPENDIX 3

Line up a lawyer

I've adapted this from advice handed out by the helpful, anonymous lawyer whose tips have appeared throughout this booklet.

How to hire the right lawyer

1. Every person engaging in or planning to engage in illegal or controversial activities needs to have an attorney already on line. After you've been busted and are standing around at the police station is NOT a good time to be leafing through the yellow pages. At least not if you're serious about avoiding a long stay in custody.

2. You should also expect to drop some money up front on a consultation with a potential defense attorney. Again, calling from a police station is NOT a good moment to find out that the attorney whose number you've been carrying in your pocket hates your cause, doesn't take cases like yours, or has a conflict of interest. (In theory, even an attorney who hates you and everything you do should be able to give you a good defense; but that varies and is definitely not worth the risk. Make sure you and the attorney are comfortable with and have some reasonable basis for trusting each other, because if you get in trouble you are going to have to be seriously ready to open up to your attorney if you want a chance of winning.)

3. Former DAs and former public defenders are a good first choice. But bear in mind that DAs often are of the "lock-em-all-up" frame of mind, while public defenders are frequently used to just pleading their clients out to get the best deal possible, without concern for actual guilt or innocence. This is another reason you want to have consulted with the attorney BEFORE you need one. And yes, this may well mean you go through a couple interviews and pay a couple of fees before you find the "right one."

4. By interview I mean "find out how much the lawyer charges for a half-hour of time on a consult then go in expecting to pay that." When you first interview an attorney, you don't have to lay out in detail what you're up to — perhaps just say that you're a free-speech advocate or a drug legalization advocate (or whatever the general truth is) and that you have been advised to have a good criminal defense attorney on tap because these days even innocent people are at peril from snitches and sloppy justice. Ask the attorney's thoughts on your general activities. His or her length of time working in criminal defense (generally longer is better, but not always). His or her experience with people who've been accused by snitches. His or her willingness to show up at 2:00 a.m. if that's when you get busted (not per se a deal killer, but be prepared to spend the night in jail otherwise).

5. If you already have an attorney you like and trust, but who doesn't do criminal law, you can ask who he or she would recommend. Again, you'd still want to do an advance consult/interview with your proposed attorney. Spending a few dollars on a consultation can save you a LOT of money and headaches down the road.

6. Never forget your right to remain silent, except for, "I'd like my attorney, please." Repeat as necessary.

APPENDIX 4

Other helpful resources

Dealing with snitches

Snitch — Transcript of a PBS/Frontline documentary on the whole dirty business of snitching.

www.pbs.org/wgbh/pages/frontline/shows/snitch/etc/script.html

Got the Hollow Tips for Snitches — How radical groups of the past have dealt with snitches and how contemporary groups can learn from the past.

<http://news.infoshop.org/article.php?story=20090106144310830>

How to Handle the Snitch at Trial — This guide, by lawyer Jeffrey W. Jensen, is written for defense attorneys. If you get in trouble because of a snitch, it might help your defense.

www.jensendefense.com/hereshow/handlesnitches.html

How cops deal with snitches

"The Throwaways" — A New Yorker article on young, naive snitches who were murdered because the cops they were pressured into working for didn't give a rat's butt about them.

www.newyorker.com/reporting/2012/09/03/120903fa_fact_stillman

Online advice on dealing with police

Flex Your Rights — This organization has online videos, DVDs, and tons of advice on how to handle yourself during police encounters. Topics include "Don't get tricked," "When do I have to show ID?," "How to refuse searches," "10 Rules for dealing with the police," and much more.

www.flexyourrights.org/

RATS!

Don't Talk to the Police — A law-school professor (former defense attorney) and a cop explain why you should never, ever talk to police even (and perhaps especially) if you're innocent, even if you're telling the 100% truth. This explains, in graphic detail, with examples, about how police will twist your words and/or lie about you if you say anything at all to them.
www.youtube.com/watch?v=6wXkI4t7nuc

An online guide to interrogation techniques — This site contains an extract from TM 30-210 Dept. Army Technical Manual "Interrogation Procedures." Although designed to teach interrogation, it can also help victims of interrogation recognize and thwart typical intimidation and questioning techniques.
www.uboardarchive.net/POWInterrogationArmyTechnicalManual.htm

Books

You & the Police! by Boston T. Party

Snitch Culture: How Citizens are Turned into the Eyes and Ears of the State by Jim Redden

Snitch: Informants, Cooperators, and the Corruption of Justice by Ethan Brown

SYNTHETIC TELEPATHY AND THE EARLY MIND WARS

Richard Alan Miller, c2001

[Presented at the Consciousness Technologies Conference, July 19-21, 2001, on Saturday, July 20th, 2001, in Sisters, OR

Introduction:

I first became aware of Allan Frey's work at Willow Grove in 1972, just after completing "The Holographic Concept of Reality." I was working with Dr. Carl Scheicher (MRU) at the time, and was asked about the significance of this work. Realizing its possible use in mind control, my first reaction was to go on "red alert."

Full significance was not yet understood at this time. Basically, Frey had discovered another sensory motor input in the higher blue-band frequencies of 0.3-3.0 GHz. - at very low amplitudes of power. It was "as if" we had another type of "vision," but did not know how to "see" what was being received. It constituted the next generation of subliminal communications.

My work at the time was involved with an AI database for paranormal references (Project Parafire). A second paper was also presented at the Omniversal Symposium, California State College at Sonoma, (September 29, 1973). This was titled "Embryonic Holography," and was an application of the "Holographic Concept of Reality" model. It dealt with biogenesis and neurological regeneration, and included speculation on the origins of cancer, faith healing, psychic surgery and more technical aspects of mind-body energetics.

One week after the delivery of that paper, four men came into my place of business, two in suits and two in full Army dress. The two suits held me under close arrest, while the two Army personnel went through my files, pulling anything related to "Embryonic Holography." The paper was rewritten from old notes and memory, but it was not the same.

What got this paper classified "top secret" for almost 20 years was that it was critical for the use of Allan Frey's study, and its possible application to mind control. I never was able to draw what was so important in that initial paper until I began researching this paper, more than 24 years later. I will discuss those aspects further into this document.

In 1961, Allen Frey, a freelance biophysicist and engineering psychologist, reported that humans could hear microwaves. Most United States scientists dismissed this discovery as the result of outside noise.

James C. Linn offered a more technical description of the experiment.

"Frey found that human subjects exposed to 1310 MHz and 2982 MHz microwaves at average power densities of 0.4 to 2 mW/cm² perceived auditory sensations described as buzzing or knocking sounds. The sensation occurred instantaneously at average incident power densities well below that necessary for known biological damage and appeared to originate from within or near the back of the head."

Pulsed Microwave Technology

Pulsed microwave voice-to-skull (or other-sound-to-skull) transmission was discovered during World War II by radar technicians who found they could hear the buzz of the train of pulses being transmitted by radar equipment they were working on. This phenomenon has been studied extensively by Dr. Allan Frey, (Willow Grove, 1965) whose work has been published in a number of reference books.

What Dr. Frey found was that single pulses of microwave could be heard by some people as "pops" or "clicks", while a train of uniform pulses could be heard as a buzz, without benefit of any type of receiver.

Dr. Frey also found that a wide range of frequencies, as low as 125 MHz (well below microwave) worked for some combination of pulse power and pulse width. Detailed unclassified studies mapped out those frequencies and pulse characteristics which are optimum for generation of "microwave hearing".

Very significantly, when discussing electronic mind control, is the fact that the peak pulse power required is modest - something like 0.3 watts per square centimeter of skull surface, and that this power level is only applied or needed for a very small percentage of each pulse's cycle time. 0.3-watts/sq cm is about what you get under a 250-watt heat lamp at a distance of one meter. It is not a lot of power.

When you take into account that the pulse train is off (no signal) for most of each cycle, the average power is so low as to be nearly undetectable. This is the concept of "spike" waves used in radar and other military forms of communication.

Frequencies that act as voice-to-skull carriers are not single frequencies, as, for example TV or cell phone channels. Each sensitive frequency is actually a range or "band" of frequencies. A technology used to reduce both interference and detection is called "spread spectrum". Spread spectrum signals usually have the carrier frequency "hop" around within a specified band.

Unless a receiver "knows" this hop schedule in advance, like other forms of encryption there is virtually no chance of receiving or detecting a coherent readable signal. Spectrum analyzers, used for detection, are receivers with a screen. A spread spectrum signal received on a spectrum analyzer appears as just more "static" or noise.

The actual method of the first successful unclassified voice to skull experiment was in 1974, by Dr. Joseph C. Sharp and Mark Grove, then at the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research. A Frey-type audible pulse was transmitted every time the voice waveform passed down through the zero axes, a technique easily duplicated by ham radio operators who build their own equipment.

The sensation is reported as a buzzing, clicking, or hissing which seems to originate within or just behind the head. The phenomenon occurs with carrier densities as low as microwatts per square centimeter with carrier frequencies from 0.3-3.0 GHz. By proper choice of pulse characteristics, intelligent speech may be created.

Dr. James Lin of Wayne State University has written a book entitled: Microwave Auditory Effects and Applications. It explores the possible mechanisms for the phenomenon, and discusses possibilities for the deaf, as persons with certain types of hearing loss can still hear pulsed microwaves (as tones or clicks and buzzes, if words aren't modulated on). Lin mentions the Sharp and Grove experiment and comments: "The capability of communicating directly with humans by pulsed microwaves is obviously not limited to the field of therapeutic medicine."

"Synthetic Telepathy"

In 1975, researcher A. W. Guy stated that "one of the most widely observed and accepted biologic effects of low average power electromagnetic energy is the auditory sensation evoked in man when exposed to pulsed microwaves."

He concluded that at frequencies where the auditory effect can be easily detected, microwaves penetrate deep into the tissues of the head, causing rapid thermal expansion (at the microscopic level only) that produces strains in the brain tissue.

An acoustic stress wave is then conducted through the skull to the cochlea, and from there, it proceeds in the same manner as in conventional hearing. It is obvious that receiver-less radio has not been adequately publicized or explained because of national security concerns.

Today, the ability to remotely transmit microwave voices inside a target's head is known inside the Pentagon as "Synthetic Telepathy." According to Dr. Robert Becker, "Synthetic Telepathy has applications in covert operations designed to drive a target crazy with voices or deliver undetected instructions to a programmed assassin."

This technology may have contributed to the deaths of 25 defense scientists variously employed by Marconi Underwater and Defense Systems, Easems and GEC. Most of the scientists worked on highly sensitive electronic warfare programs for NATO, including the Strategic Defense Initiative. It is claimed that directed energy weapons might have been used to literally drive these men to suicide and 291 accidents.

Biological Amplification

Using Microwave Band Frequencies

The next major development in ELF weaponry was the concept of a biological amplification of these signals at the cell level to perpetuate and set up resonance for more sophisticated information transfer. This was the beginning of using more than one technology in a stack to do something "more." While this was implied, it was never developed in "The Holographic Concept of Reality."

Electromagnetic fields or relatively weak power levels can affect intercellular communication. Bio-amplification is apparently why radio signals of very low average power (mw) can produce audio effects, and is difficult to detect. [Electromagnetic Interaction with Biological Systems, ed. Dr. James C. Lin, Univ. of Illinois, 1989, Plenum Press, NY]

Imposed weak low frequency fields (and radio frequency fields) that are many orders of magnitude weaker in the pericellular fluid (fluid between adjacent cells) than the membrane potential gradient (voltage across the membrane) can modulate the action of hormones, antibody neurotransmitters and cancer-promoting molecules at their cell surface receptor sites.

These ELF sensitivities appear to involve nonequilibrium and highly cooperative processes that mediate a major amplification of initial weak triggers associated with the binding of these molecules (specific cell surface receptor sites). Membrane amplification is inherent in this trans-membrane signaling sequence.

Initial stimuli associated with weak perpendicular EM fields and with binding of stimulating molecules at their membrane receptor sites elicit a highly cooperative modification of Ca^{++} binding to glycoproteins along the membrane.

A longitudinal spread is consistent with the direction of extracellular current flow associated with physiological activity and imposed EM fields. This cooperative modification of surface Ca^{++} binding is an amplifying stage. By imposing RF fields, there is a far greater increase in Ca^{++} efflux than is accounted for in the events of receptor-ligand binding. from imposing RF fields.

Enzymes are protein molecules that function as catalysts, initiating and enhancing chemical reactions that would not otherwise occur at tissue temperatures. This ability resides in the pattern of electrical charges on the molecular surface.

Activation of these enzymes and the reactions in which they participate involve energies millions of times greater than in the cell surface, triggering events initiated by the EM fields, emphasizing the membrane amplification inherent in this trans-membrane signaling sequence.

Frey and Messenger confirmed that a microwave pulse with a slow rise time was ineffectual in producing an auditory response. Only if the rise time is short, resulting in effect in a square wave with respect to the leading edge of the envelope of radiated radio-frequency energy, does the auditory response occur. This is why we don't "hear" ordinary radio and TV signals.

The significance of "Embryonic Holography" now becomes more understandable. For example, the specific frequency bands (0.3-3.0 Hz) are so flat as to appear almost 2-dimensional to most biological processes on a semi-quantum mechanical level. This means that these frequencies can be seen as "scalar" in their possible interaction with specific brain processes.

What these frequencies really are, however, are actual holograms of specific thoughts. They have a third component of detail (much like the patented P300 wave). This means that a hybrid form of brain fingerprinting is now possible. And, once these "images" are stored (usually in a very sophisticated super-cooled computer), similar responses can be fed back to the person, inducing virtually any state desired (via entrainment protocols).

Silent Sound Technology - "S-quad"

Silent (converted-to-voice FM) hypnosis can be transmitted using a voice frequency modulator to generate the "voice." It is a steady tone, near the high end of hearing range (15,000 Hz), plus a hypnotist's voice, varying from 300 - 4,000 Hz. These two signals are frequency modulated. The output now appears as a steady tone, like tinnitus, but with hypnosis embedded. The FM-voice controls the timing of the transmitter's pulse.

Each vertical line is one short pulse of microwave signal at a frequency to which the human brain is sensitive. Timing of each microwave pulse is controlled by each down-slope crossing of the voice wave (Sharp's method, 1974). Then the brain converts the train of microwave pulses back to inaudible voice. There is no conscious defense possible against this form of hypnosis.

Ordinary radio and TV signals use a smooth waveform called a 'sine' wave. This wave signal cannot normally penetrate the voltage gradient across the nerve cell walls. Radar signals consist of very short and powerful pulses of sine wave type signals, and can penetrate the steep voltage gradient across these nerve cell walls (Allan H. Frey, Cornell University, 1962).

Differences in osmosis of ions (dissolved salt components) cause a small voltage difference across cell walls. When a small voltage appears across a very tiny distance, the change in voltage is called very 'steep.' It is this steep gradient that keeps normal radio signals from throwing us into convulsions.

The mind-altering mechanism is based on a subliminal carrier technology: the Silent Sound Spread Spectrum (SSSS), sometimes called "S-quad" or "Squad". It was developed by Dr Oliver Lowery of Norcross, Georgia, and is described in US Patent #5,159,703, "Silent Subliminal Presentation System", dated October 27, 1992. The abstract for the patent reads:

"A silent communications system in which nonaural carriers, in the very low or very high audio-frequency range or in the adjacent ultrasonic frequency spectrum are amplitude- or frequency-modulated with the desired intelligence and propagated acoustically or vibrationally, for inducement into the brain, typically through the use of loudspeakers, earphones, or piezoelectric transducers. The modulated carriers may be transmitted directly in real time or may be conveniently recorded and stored on mechanical, magnetic, or optical media for delayed or repeated transmission to the listener."

According to literature by Silent Sounds, Inc., it is now possible, using supercomputers, to analyze human emotional EEG patterns and replicate them, then store these "emotion signature clusters" on another computer and, at will, "silently induce and change the emotional state in a human being".

Edward Tilton, President of Silent Sounds, Inc., says this about S-squad in a letter dated December 13, 1996:

"All schematics, however, have been classified by the US Government and we are not allowed to reveal the exact details... .. we make tapes and CDs for the German Government, even the former Soviet Union countries! All with the permission of the US State Department, of course... The system was used throughout Operation Desert Storm (Iraq) quite successfully."

"Induced Alpha to Theta Biofeedback Cluster Movement" is an output from "the world's most versatile and most sensitive electroencephalograph (EEG) machine". This device has a gain capability of 200,000, as compared to most other EEG machines (with gain capability of 50,000). It is software-driven by the "fastest of computers" using a noise nulling technology similar to that used by nuclear submarines for detecting small objects underwater at extreme range.

The purpose of all this high technology is to plot and display a moving cluster of periodic brainwave signals. The illustration shows an EEG display from a single individual, taken of left and right hemispheres simultaneously. This technology is very similar to that used to generate P300 waves.

Cloning the Emotions

By using these computer-enhanced EEGs, scientists can identify and isolate the brain's low-amplitude "emotion signature clusters," synthesize them and store them on another computer. In other words, by studying the subtle characteristic brainwave patterns that occur when a subject experiences a particular emotion, scientists have been able to identify the concomitant brainwave pattern and can now duplicate it.

"These clusters are then placed on the Silent Sound[™] carrier frequencies and will silently trigger the occurrence of the same basic emotion in another human being!"

Regarding system delivery and applications, there is a lot more involved here than a simple subliminal sound system. There are numerous patented technologies that can be piggybacked individually or collectively onto a carrier frequency to elicit all kinds of effects.

There appear to be two methods of delivery with the system. One is direct microwave induction into the brain of the subject, limited to short-range operations. The other, as described above, utilizes ordinary radio and television carrier frequencies.

Far from necessarily being used as a weapon against a person, the system does have limitless positive applications. However, the fact that the sounds are subliminal makes them virtually undetectable and possibly dangerous to the general public.

In more conventional use, the Silent Sounds Subliminal System might utilize voice commands, e.g., as an adjunct to security systems. Beneath the musical broadcast that you hear in stores and shopping malls may be a hidden message that exhorts against shoplifting. And while voice commands alone are powerful, when the subliminal presentation system carries cloned emotional signatures, the result is overwhelming.

Free-market uses for this technology are the common self-help tapes, positive affirmation, relaxation and meditation tapes, as well as methods to increase learning capabilities. But there is strong evidence that this technology is being developed toward global mind control.

The secrecy involved in the development of the electromagnetic mind-altering technology reflects the tremendous power that is inherent in it. To put it bluntly, whoever controls this technology can control the minds of men - all men.

There is evidence that the U.S. Government has plans to extend the range of this technology to envelop all peoples, all countries. This can be accomplished, and is being accomplished, by utilizing the nearly completed HAARP project for overseas areas and the GWEN network now in place in the U.S. The U.S. Government denies all this.

Dr Michael Persinger is a Professor of Psychology and Neuroscience at Laurentian University, Ontario, Canada. His work and findings indicate that strong electromagnetic fields can and will affect a person's brain.

"Temporal lobe stimulation can evoke the feeling of a presence, disorientation, and perceptual irregularities. It can activate images stored in the subject's memory, including nightmares and monsters that are normally suppressed."

Mind Reading Devices

Alan Yu, a former lieutenant colonel in the Taiwan National Defense Department, says that the United States has not only developed an operational mind control machine, but has also distributed models for use by allied countries. Yu states that such machines pose a great threat to human rights and the American way of life. He calls the device the "Mind Reading Machine" (Mind Machine).

Yu writes that there are two sources of information detailing the existence of the Mind Reading Machine. The first evidence: In the 1970s, The South China Morning Post reported that the University of Maryland had invented a Thought Reading Machine. The original purpose of this invention was to help authorities investigate severe car accidents. It was to be used on people who were severely injured to get their accounts of how the accidents occurred.

In the spring of 1984, Yu was a lieutenant colonel serving in the National Defense Department of Taiwan. At that time, Yu read a classified document from the department that he serviced under. The document said the Military Police Department of Taiwan had purchased several of the Mind Reading Machines from the United States (In Taiwan, it was called Psychological Language Machine).

The document was a request to the United States for parts to repair several malfunctioning machines. The machine allegedly uses microwaves to deliver spoken messages directly to the human brain, as well as using radio waves to hypnotize people or change their thoughts. Yu reports that before he left, this machine had become the most effective weapon for the security departments of Taiwan.

In 1993, Defense News announced that the Russian government was discussing with American counterparts the transfer of technical information and equipment known as "Acoustic Psycho-correction." The Russians claimed that this device involves the transmission of specific commands via static or white noise bands into the human subconscious without upsetting other intellectual functions.

Demonstrations of this equipment have shown encouraging results after exposure of less than one minute and have produced the ability to alter behavior on unwilling subjects. A US Department of Defense medical engineer claimed in 1989 that the U.S. and Israel had regularly used microwaves to condition and control the minds of Palestinians.

Unclassified ELF-Type Weapons

Remote physical manipulation: Not covered in this document. At time of writing, that technology appears to be classified.

Transmission methods for neuro-effective signals: This includes pulsed microwave (i.e., like radar signals) and ultrasound and voice-FM (transmitted through the air). Also known as "Synthetic Telepathy."

While transmission of speech, dating from the early 1970s, was the first use of pulsed microwave, neuro-effective signals can now cause many other nerve groups to become remotely actuated. That specific technology is classified.

Pavlovian hypnotic triggers: A [Pavlovian] hypnotic trigger is a phrase or any sensory cue that the subject is programmed to involuntarily act in a certain way. MKULTRA survivors can still be triggered from programming done decades ago.

One of the main goals of the institutional/drug/child abuse phases of the CIA MKULTRA atrocities (1950's through 1970's) was to implant triggers using a "twilight state" (half-conscious) medication and tape-recorded hypnosis. The ultimate goal was to have the acting out of Pavlovian triggers erased from the victim's memory.

These triggers are now planted using either of the above two transmission methods, but with the words moved up just above (or near the top of) the audible frequency range. The result is that hypnotic triggers are planted without the subject being aware. This technology was used in the Gulf War as "Silent Sound."

Through-wall surveillance methods: This includes top end of microwave (near infrared), and the so-called "millimeter wave" scanning. This method uses the very top end of the microwave radio signal spectrum just below infrared. To view small objects or people clearly, the highest frequency that will penetrate non-conductive or poorly-conductive walls is used.

Millimeter wave scanning radar can be used in two modes: The first is passive (no radiated signal) and uses background radiation already in the area to be scanned. It is totally undetectable. The active system uses a (low power millimeter wave) "flashlight" attached to the scanner.

Thought reading: Thought reading can be classed as a form of "through wall surveillance" technology. In the unclassified and commercial realms, it is called thru-skull microwave reading, and magnetic skull-proximity reading.

Brain entrainment: This involves moods and sleep states, the reverse of biofeedback. The low frequency electrical brain rhythms are characteristics of various moods and states of sleep. Not only can they now be read out using biofeedback equipment or EEG machines, but also radio, sound, contact electrodes, or flashing lights. These moods and sleep states can be generated or at least encouraged using brain entrainment devices.

Brain entrainment signals cannot carry voice, which is a much higher frequency range. Brain entrainment can, however, be used to "set up" a target to make him/her more susceptible to hypnosis.

Implantation: (no longer required)

Specific ELF Weapons

Ultrasound and Voice-FM: Main advantage in mind control work is that it can carry verbal hypnosis, more potent than simple biorhythm entrainment. An example is Chicago's Airport Terminal connection tunnels and their "Keep Walking."

Steady tone, near the high end of hearing range (15,000 Hz). Hypnotist's voice, varying from 300 to 4,000 Hz, fed into a frequency modulator, where the voice controls the frequency. Output is now a steady tone, sounding like tinnitus, but with hypnosis embedded. While the brain can hear and understand, the ear only hears a "tone" or a "rush."

Acoustic Heterodyne
American Technologies Corp.
13114 Evening Creek Drive. S.
San Diego, CA 92128

Through-Wall Radar: Millimeter wave through clothing, through-luggage is currently in use at airports. Millimeter wave scanners can be purchased from:

Millivision Corp.
Northampton, MA

Thought Readings: Thought reading is an enhanced version of computer speech recognition, with EEG waves being substituted for sound waves. The easiest "thought" reading is actually remote picking up of the electro-magnetic activity of the speech-control muscles.

When we say words to ourselves, silently, or, read a book, we can actually feel the slight sensations of those words in our vocal muscles - all that is absent is the passage of air. Coordinated speech signals are relatively strong and relatively consistent.

We are "fed" hypnotic signals to force consistent "neutral" content (but of different character than prior to becoming test subjects) in dreams. These forced, neutral content ("bland" content) dreams occur every single night and may represent the experimenters' efforts to have our experiences portray themselves in such dreams, in effect, mining our experiences.

confirms the ability of current unclassified technology to actually see what a living animal sees, electronically. It is therefore extremely likely that these forced dreams can be displayed on the experimenters' screens in an adjacent apartment or adjacent house, (which are made obvious to the involuntary experimentee).

Implants: Implants can either receive instructions via radio signals, passing them to the brain. Or, can be interrogated via external radio signals to read brain activity at a distance. Since implants for beneficial purposes are actively being promoted by NIH, it is obvious they will not disappear any time soon.

Thermal Gun, Seizure Gun, and Magnetophosphene Gun: Evokes a visual response and is thought to be centered in the retina (as seen in the movies Goldeneye, Broken Arrow, Escape From LA, and Eraser). The popular video "Waco: The Big Lie Continues" shows video footage of three EM weapons being used during the confrontation.

Silent Subliminals
ALTERED STATES LTD
P.O.Box 68-344, Newton,

Auckland, New Zealand.
Ph: +64-9-815-5095 or +64-9-815-5059
Fax: +64-9-815-5067

From their brochure:

"Only your mind can hear. Your ears hear nothing but your mind hears and accepts the powerful suggestions.

You can safely play these tapes anywhere - in a car, while watching TV or listening to your favorite music, while working or even as silent sleep programming.

Warning: Everyone within listening range of the tape will be programmed by the suggestions. To assure yourself that strong suggestions are recorded on the tape, take it to any Radio Shack store, play it on their stereo and read the output with a Radio Shack Sound Level Meter (Item 33-2050)

How To Use The Tapes: Increase the volume until it is just below any tape noise. If your stereo deck has treble and bass controls, you can boost the subliminal output by increasing the treble and decreasing the bass. The player then emits a strong but inaudible frequency - modulated 60 - 90 decibel signal that is received and demodulated by the human ear.

Technical Information The Suggestions are delivered on a carrier frequency of 14,800 cps, via a low-distortion sine wave signal. This frequency is slightly above the audible hearing range but the frequency-modulated (FM) signal is still strongly impinging upon the diaphragm of the ear. The listener can expect his subconscious mind to accept the suggestions with repeated listening.

How To Use The Tapes: Increase the volume until it is just below any tape noise. If your stereo deck has treble and bass controls, you can boost the subliminal output by increasing the treble and decreasing the bass. The player then emits a STRONG BUT INAUDIBLE frequency-modulated 60 to 90 decibel signal that is received and demodulated by the human ear.

The Silent Subliminals is a new brain/mind technology developed by an aerospace engineer. This new technique has been licensed to Valley of the Sun Audio/Video for this incredible new tape series. Patent pending. Note: Because the frequency is beyond normal recording range, the tape cannot be duplicated:

Examples of Suggestions:

- "Every day you become thinner and thinner"
- "You now lose weight and full fill your goals"

- "You attain your weight goals and the body you desire"
- "You have the power and ability to attain the perfect weight and body you desire"
- "You have the self-discipline to lose all the weight you want"
- "You live a healthy lifestyle and eat a proper diet"
- "You now quit smoking because it serves you"
- "You lose all desire to smoke"
- "You accept that you now quit smoking"
- "You are a non-smoker"
- "Quit smoking. Quit smoking. Quit smoking"
- "You have the willpower to do anything you want to do"
- "You have great self- discipline and you use it to quit smoking"
- "Cigarettes disgust you"
- "You are very sure of yourself"
- "You accept that you have great inner courage"
- "You are self-reliant and self-confident"
- "You are full of independence and determination"
- "You have great inner courage"
- "Every day in every way, you become more and more self-confident"
- "You feel good about yourself"
- "You project a very positive self-image"
- "You are relaxed and at ease"
- "You detach from worldly pressures and experience an inner calm"
- "Negativity flows through you without affecting you"
- "You accept other people as they are"
- "You peacefully accept the things you cannot change, and change the things you can"
- "You are at peace with yourself, the world and everyone in it"
- "Your mind is like calm water"
- "You direct your time and energy to manifest your desires"
- "You have the self-discipline to accomplish your personal and professional goals"
- "Every day, you increase your self-discipline"
- "You do what you need to do and stop doing what doesn't work"
- "You freely choose to do what you need to do"
- "You are assertive and feel good about yourself"
- "You now focus your energy upon attaining success"
- "You know exactly what you want and you go for it"
- "You can accomplish whatever you set out to do"
- "Be ultra-successful. Be ultra-successful and become wealthy"
- "Every day in every way, you become more successful"
- "Your creative thinking opens the door to monetary abundance"
- "You easily achieve and maintain a penile erection"
- "Your body performs perfectly during sex without thinking about it"

- "A hard, firm erection is your natural response to sexual stimulation "
- "You can make love for a long before you ejaculate"
- "Every day you feel better about your sexual prowess and your ability to achieve and maintain a hard, firm erection"

"Acoustic Spotlight (Can Target One person in Crowd)"

Posted by F. Joseph Pompeii, MIT Media Lab

Usage: The Audio Spotlight can be used in two major ways: As directed audio, sound is directed at a specific listener or area, to provide a private or area specific listening space. As projected audio, sound is projected against a distant object, creating an audio image. This audio image is literally a projected loudspeaker - sound appears to come directly from the projection, just like light.

The Audio Spotlight consists of a thin, circular transducer array and a specially designed signal processor and amplifier. The transducer is about half an inch thick, nonmagnetic, and lightweight. The signal processor and amplifier are integrated into a unit about the same size as a traditional audio amplifier, and have similar power requirements.

Technology: Because it is impossible to generate extremely narrow beams of audible sound without extremely large loudspeaker arrays, we instead generate the sound indirectly, using the nonlinearity of the air to convert a narrow beam of ultrasound into a highly directive, audible beam of sound.

The device transmits a narrow beam of ultrasound (blue), which, due to the inherent nonlinearity of the air itself, distorts (changes shape) very slightly as it travels. This distortion creates, along with new ultrasonic frequencies, audible artifacts (green) that can be mathematically predicted, and therefore controlled.

By constructing the proper ultrasonic beam, this nonlinearity can be used to create, within the beam itself, an audible sound beam containing any sound desired. This is presently done in real-time using low cost circuitry, a specially designed amplifier, and transducers developed at MIT specifically for this project.

Hyperdirectivity: The directivity, or narrowness, of an acoustic wave generated by a circular transducer is proportional to the ratio of the diameter of the transducer to the wavelength of the sound. So a transducer much larger than the wavelength of the sound creates a very narrow beam.

Audible sound contains wavelengths reaching lengths of several feet, so a reasonably sized loudspeaker will always produce a very wide, non-directional source at lower frequencies. The Audio Spotlight, in contrast, outputs short, millimeter sized ultrasonic waves, which form a very narrow beam even in a small transducer, which in turn generates audible sound.

The nature of the nonlinear transformation also essentially eliminates side lobes in the resulting beam, and maintains relatively uniform directivity across the entire audible frequency range.

The figure above (from American Technologies Corp.) compares the directivity of the Audio Spotlight (yellow) to that of an ordinary loudspeaker (purple) at 400 Hz. Note that the directivity of the Audio Spotlight is only three degrees, compared to the essentially omni directional directivity of the loudspeaker.

In order to obtain such narrow directivity from a traditional loudspeaker system, one would need a loudspeaker array fifty meters across! A loudspeaker is like a light bulb, but the Audio Spotlight is like a laser.

History: The use of nonlinear interaction of high frequency sound to generate directive low frequency sound sources has been a well-researched subject in the field of underwater acoustics since the early 1960's. Often misattributed to so-called "Tartini Tones," the effect is more accurately described as a parametric array, a term introduced by Westervelt.

In the past several decades, many underwater sonar researchers have used the effect to generate directive low frequency sonar beams, detect underwater sound (parametric receiving array), and extend the bandwidth of underwater transducers.

The first published demonstration of an airborne parametric array was in 1975 by Bennett and Blackstock. Rather than using inaudible ultrasound, they instead used very intense, high frequency audible sound to produce simple difference tones. While their goal was not a practical audio reproduction device, they nonetheless effectively demonstrated that the parametric array would work in air in addition to underwater.

Life Assessment Detector System (LADS) The Life Assessment Detector System (LADS), a microwave Doppler movement measuring device, can detect human body surface motion, including heartbeat and respiration, at ranges up to 135 feet (41.15 meters).

The primary function of the LADS is to provide a reliable method by which medical and emergency personnel can locate personnel buried in building collapses or injured on the military battlefield. LADS can detect such signs of life as movement, heartbeat, or respiration.

Originally designed to detect heartbeat and respiration of military personnel wearing chemical-biological warfare protective overgarments, the LADS has been restructured, greatly increasing its operational range and providing a means for eliminating "nuisance alarms" which could mimic human life signs, such as fans, wind drafts, or swaying trees.

This is accomplished through neural network technology, which "trains" the system to recognize human motion and heartbeat/respiration functions. If these functions are not detected, the reasonable assumption is that there are no survivors. Operating under such an assumption, the rescue team can now proceed without fear of further loss of life, i.e., rescue and medical personnel and equipment can be deployed more effectively and efficiently.

The LADS consists of a sensor module, a neural network module, and a control/monitor module. The sensor module is an x-band (10 GHz) microwave transceiver with a nominal output power of 15 milliwatts, operating in the continuous wave (CW) mode. The neural network module device can store many complex patterns such as visual waveforms and speech templates, and can easily compare input patterns to previously "trained" or stored patterns.

The control/monitor module provides the LADS' instrument controls, such as on-off switches, circuit breakers, and battery condition, as well as motion, heartbeat waveform, pulse strength, and pulse rate displays.

LADS provides life assessment capabilities for people who are:

Trapped in building rubble;

Battlefield casualties in a chemical/biological warfare environment;
Victims of airline, train, or automobile crashes;
Trapped in an avalanche or mudslide;
Trapped on a mountain ledge;
Trapped under a collapsed tent structure; or Hostages being held in a nonmetallic room.

For more information about the LADS, send E-mail to: info@vsecorp.com

Radar Flashlight: The National Institute of Justice (NIJ), through the Joint (Justice-Defense) Program Steering Group (JPSG), is sponsoring Georgia Tech Research Institute (GTRI) in developing inexpensive, handheld, low-power radar that will enable law officers to detect individuals through interior building walls. It works by sensing the motion of an individual's chest when they breathe.

GTRI is currently designing and refining the first prototype unit. A laboratory test area has been constructed consisting of a section of home siding and drywall, a wooden front door, and a section of brick and mortar.

It also demonstrated the ability to detect an individual through the laboratory's cinder block walls. GTRI is working to combine the two parts of this device into a single unit. NIJ plans on demonstrating the Radar Flashlight with law enforcement agencies through its National Law Enforcement and Corrections Technology Center (NLECTC) (Southeast Regional Center) before the end of 1999.

Dr. Pete Nacci Project Manager
(703) 351-8821

Millivision Radar Millimeter-Wave Camera picks up both metallic and plastic concealed handguns. Between microwave and infrared lies the millimeter wave band. This little-heralded portion of the electromagnetic spectrum turns out to be perfect for "remote frisking." Millitech Corp. has designed a camera to accomplish just that.

The idea calls for measuring the time delay and intensity of millimeter wave energy that radiates naturally. At millimeter wavelengths, people are good emitters, while metals are very poor. Dielectric objects, such as plastics, ceramics and powdered drugs, are somewhere in between. Clothing and building materials, such as wallboard, are virtually transparent.

Ground (or Home/Apt. Wall) Penetrating Radar: Patriot Scientific Corporation has developed radar technologies with a wide range of possible applications.

A pulse generator is used to drive the transmit antenna. The pulse is a positive spike going up to 100V then falling back to ground in one and a half nanoseconds corresponding to a pulse transmit frequency of 750 MHz.

The return signal is read by the receive antenna. At this point some simple analog processing is done and the signal is digitized at a resolution of 6 GHz, and sent to a PC. The PC correlates the data into a conventional waveform, does some processing, and then transmits the data over an Ethernet cable to a Pentium workstation (not shown).

The Pentium workstation is used to apply different digital filters, combine waveforms, and display the results. This system can be used to demonstrate detection of small targets buried in sand, people behind walls, and other targets.

Patriot has used its antenna system to demonstrate detection of objects as small as a coke buried in sand, through a wall. Even small targets disturb the wavefront of the pulse, producing reflections and modifying the field in measurable ways.

The key to Patriot's Radar system is its ability to transmit and receive pulses barely longer than single cycles at the transmit frequency. The first waveform shown here is a pulse generated by an earlier Patriot Design, based on "off the shelf" antenna technology. The waveform on the bottom was produced and received by Patriot's current Design.

The current Patriot antenna system produces a pulse at the desired frequency with little leading or trailing noise. The Patriot antenna system provides many advantages over pulse-based systems.

Patriot originally developed the impulse radar system to allow time domain processing in Patriot's GPR systems. Because the impulse is extremely short (3 nanoseconds), the time to return can be used to gauge the distance traveled by the pulse.

Furthermore, the transmitter and receiver antennas are very directional, eliminating much of the multipath components of the return signal. The short pulses combined with the directional transmit and receive to provide us with a number of important advantages:

- Very low average power during transmission
- Low interference from other transmitters
- Transmission invisible to conventional receivers
- High bandwidth digital data transmission possible
- Difficult detection by other impulse receivers

Interference with other sources and receivers is further reduced by using directional antennas. The antenna design shown is highly directional.

When penetrating the ground, we wish to eliminate as much of the multipath signal as possible. The directional antennas reduce the multipath signals detected to those that are relatively inline with the wave path, and eliminate much of the multipath signal that returns at odd angles.

Impulse radar uses low power inherently because the transmissions occur in pulses separated by periods of no transmission. The power of the pulses is offset by the dead time between the pulses. The average output of the current system is about 300 microwatts. The low average power of an impulse system effectively hides the transmissions from conventional receivers.

Interference can be further reduced in an impulse system by using random interval spacing. As long as the transmit and receive antennas are in sync, the period between pulses can be varied to prevent aliening with other continuous- or pulse-transmission systems that might be operating in the same locale.

Furthermore, if an impulse system is being used to transmit data, varying the intervals between pulses prevents other impulse systems from locking onto the signal. Patriot Scientific's current GPR system does not use random interval spacing.

Patriot Scientific Corporation

Commercial Thought Reading Devices: The Cyberlink Mind Mouse is a revolutionary hands-free computer controller which allows you to move and click a mouse cursor, play video games, create music, and control external devices, all without using your hands.

A headband with three sensors detects electrical signals on the forehead resulting from subtle facial muscle, eye, and brain activity. This headband connects to an interface box that amplifies and digitizes the forehead signals and sends them to your computer.

The Cyberlink software decodes the forehead signals into ten Brain Fingers for continuous cursor control. It also decodes eye motion and facial gestures into mouse button clicks, keystrokes, and cursor resolution control. With a little practice, most or all of these commands can be mastered to operate virtually all computer functions.

By learning to change the energy levels of your Brain Fingers, you will be able to do just about anything on a computer, except turn it on! The Cyberlink Mind Mouse supports hands-free mouse, keyboard and joystick cursor control, switch closure, video game control, and music and art synthesis.

The Cyberlink Mind Mouse features a Windows 95 Mouse Driver for hands-free control of third party software like games, business software, Internet browsers, and a range of assistive technologies, such as the X-10 Home Controller and special needs word-processing and communication software, including WiVik2, Words Plus, and Clicker Plus.

The Cyberlink Mind Mouse is priced at $1495.00 (U.S.$) plus shipping. Free upgrades are included for one year.

Hearing For the Deaf: It was during these [Frey] studies that a profoundly important discovery was made: Deaf subjects often had the ability to hear radio frequency sound. The clinical criterion was that, if a given person could hear audio above 5 kHz [higher range of a piano] by bone or air conduction, then radio frequency sound could be heard as well.

This and related work has resulted in the manufacture of radio frequency type hearing aids for the deaf, one of which is made by Listening, Inc., of Arlington, Mass., and is known as the Neurophone Model GPF-1. It operates at 100 kHz (about five times the normal maximum hearing frequency) and employs crystal control.

These observations tie in with the fact that some individuals can detect radio programs through fillings in their teeth. This phenomenon was technically verified by interposing shields between respective people who exhibited this effect and the modulated radio frequency sources.

When the lower half of the head was covered, including the maxillary dental area, the radio frequency sound was perceived. The sound ceased on covering the top half of the head. While the mechanism responsible for this phenomenon is only imperfectly understood, it can be assumed to be the result of DIRECT cortical stimulation.

In other words, even when the sound seems to be coming from the teeth, it is actually being directly received and interpreted in the brain, not the teeth.

Some Important Historical Developments:

Brain-Wave Detection: Some 40-odd years ago, university professor F. Cazzamalli started publishing papers on the subject of brain-wave detection [using radio signals] and implied that he had detected radiations from the mind.

He placed his subjects in a shielded room (or Faraday cage), emanated VHF radio waves through their heads, and claimed to have recorded "beat frequencies" obtained with an untuned receiver consisting of a galena crystal or diode tube, a fixed capacitor, an antenna, and a sensitive light beam galvanometer. A "galvanometer" is a voltmeter; light beam types show up in physics labs and are one of the most sensitive types of voltmeter.

The trouble is that Cazzamalli never mentioned transmitter power in his somewhat unprofessional papers. His oscillograms meant to show variations of the "beat" when his subjects were emotionally aroused or engaged in creative tasks when they were in the Faraday cage. "Beat" as used by Cazzamalli refers to EEG-frequency, i.e., ELF, traces.

Later he told an astounded world that his subjects would hallucinate when under the influence of his "oscillatori telegrafica," its frequency being around 300 MHz at the time. Aviation radios are in this range.

Tom Jaski, a noted science writer and engineer duplicated some of Cazzamalli's work with a modern low-power oscillator that was swept from 300 MHz to 600 MHz. Cell phones start at over 900 MHz.

His subjects could not see the dial. They were told to sound off as soon as they felt something unusual. At a certain frequency range - varying between 380 MHz and 500 MHz - the subjects repeatedly indicated points with exact accuracy in as many as 14 out of 15 trials. At these "individual" frequencies, the same subjects announced having experienced pulsing sensations in the brain, ringing in the ears, and an odd desire to bite the experimenters.

The oscillator's output power was only a few milliwatts, while the oscillator itself was located several feet away from the subjects. Any experimenters out there want to try this? Milliwatts are quite safe for short-term experiments. Kids' walkie-talkies are 50 to 100 milliwatts, for example.

LIDA Machine: 1960 Soviet device that bombards brains with low-frequency radio waves. Now with Dr. Ross Adey, Chief of Research, Veterans Hospital, Loma Linda, CA.

Low frequency square wave modulation of a radio frequency field. It was developed by L. Rabichev and his colleagues in Soviet Armenia, for "the treatment of neuropsychic and somatic disorders, such as neuroses, psychoses, insomnia, hypertension, stammering, bronchial asthma, and asthenic and reactive disturbances." (U.S. Patent # 3,773,049)

The radio frequency field has a nominal carrier frequency of 40 MHz and a maximum output of approximately 40 watts. The E-field is applied to the patient on the side of neck through two disc electrodes approximately 10 cm in diameter. The electrodes are located at a distance of 2 to 4 cm from the skin.

The radio signal appears to be the primary cause of the sleep/trance effect. Optimal repetition frequencies are said to lie in the range from 40 to 80 pulses per minute.

Voice to Skull, 1974: The demonstration of sonic transduction of microwave energy by materials lacking in water LESSENS the likelihood that a thermo hydraulic principle is operating in human perception of the energy. Nonetheless, some form of thermo acoustic transduction probably underlies perception. If so, it is clear that simple heating is NOT a sufficient basis for the Frey effect; the requirement for pulsing of radiations appears to implicate a thermodynamic principle.

Frey and Messenger (1973) and Guy, Chou, Lin, and Christensen (1975) confirmed that a microwave pulse with a slow rise time is ineffective in producing an auditory response; only if the rise time is SHORT, resulting in effect in a square wave with respect to the leading edge of the envelope of radiated radio-frequency energy, does the auditory response occur.

Thus the rate of change (the first derivative) of the waveform of the pulse is a CRITICAL factor in perception. Given a thermodynamic interpretation, it would follow that information can be encoded in the energy and "communicated" to the "listener".

Communication has in fact been demonstrated. A. Guy, a skilled telegrapher, arranged for his father, a retired railroad telegrapher, to operate a key, each closure and opening of which resulted in a pulse of microwave energy. By directing the radiations at his own head, complex messages via the Continental Morse Code were readily received by Guy.

Sharp and Grove found that appropriate modulation of microwave energy can result in "wireless" and "receiverless" communication of SPEECH. They recorded by voice on tape each of the single-syllable words for digits between 1 and 10. The electrical sine-wave analogs of each word were then processed so that each time a sine wave crossed ZERO REFERENCE IN THE NEGATIVE DIRECTION, a brief pulse of microwave energy was triggered.

This is, in effect, is a form of what is called pulse-RATE modulation. By radiating themselves with these "voice modulated" microwaves, Sharp and Grove were READILY able to hear, identify, and distinguish among the 9 words. Persons with artificial larynxes not unlike those emitted the sounds heard.

Communication of more complex words and of sentences was not attempted because the averaged densities of energy required to transmit longer messages would approach the current 10 milliwatts per square centimeter limit of safe exposure.

The capability of communicating directly with a human being by "receiverless radio" has obvious potentialities both within and without the clinic. But the hotly debated and unresolved question of how much microwave radiation to which a human being can safely be exposed will probably forestall applications within the near future.

EC-130E Commando Solo: Primary function is "Psychological operations broadcasts." Air Force Mission statement: Commando Solo conducts psychological operations and civil affairs broadcasts missions in the standard AM, FM, HF, TV and military communications bands.

It was called EC-121, known at the time as the Coronet Solo, and was used in Operation Urgent Fury. Volant Solo was during Operation Just Cause.

The Commando Solo aircraft and earlier generations of this design have participated in the following missions:

- Operation Urgent Fury (Grenada, October-November 1983, January-June 1985)
- Operation Just Cause (Panama, late December 1989)
- Operation Desert Shield (Kuwait, Iraq, from August 1990)
- Operation Desert Storm (Saudi Arabia, Turkey, Iraq, 1991)
- Operation Uphold Democracy (Haiti, 1994-1995)
- Operation Joint Guard (Part of a U.N. operation in Bosnia-Herzegovina, 1995)
- Operation Desert Thunder (part of a U.N. operation in Iraq)
- Operation Desert Fox (Iraq, 2 to 3 days in December 1998)

HAARP:

HAARP (High Frequency Active Auroral Research Project), by virtue of its far-reaching impact on the environment to be a global concern and calls for its legal, ecological and ethical implications to be examined by an international independent body before any further research and testing, regrets the repeated refusal of the United States Administration send anyone in person to give evidence to the public hearing or any subsequent meeting to be held by its competent committee into the environmental and public risks connected with the HAARP programmed currently being funded in Alaska...

One of HAARP's potential uses is a communications system. The military officially acknowledges two communications-related applications:

- (1) to replace the existing Extremely Low Frequency (ELF) submarine communications system now operating in Michigan and Wisconsin;
- (2) to provide a way to wipe out communications over an extremely large area, while keeping the military's own communications system working.

As we have seen, the mind-control subliminal messages are carried on radio-frequency broadcasts. The HAARP facility could be used to broadcast global mind-control messages, or such messages could simply be inserted into existing systems.

Dr. Igor Smirnov, of the Institute of Psycho-correction in Moscow, says in regard to this technology: "It is easily conceivable that some Russian 'Satan', or let's say Iranian [or any other 'Satan'], as long as he owns the appropriate means and finances, can inject himself [intrude] into every conceivable computer network, into every conceivable radio or television broadcast, with relative technological ease, even without disconnecting cables.

Recent Media on HAARP

HAARP TRANSMITTER NOW RUNNING AT FULL POWER!!
Can be Easily Heard Around the World on Short-wave Radio.
Has Space War Begun?
-BJNews by Marshall Smith

"As of this morning, Saturday Feb 17, 2001, HAARP began doing testing with greatly increased FULL power. The transmitter can now be heard all day long on 3.39 MHz. Very early this morning about 3 AM, HAARP could be heard at its "old" normal signal strength. About 4 AM the signal changed in both its pulse timing and inter-pulse spacing. At 4:30 AM the signal strength suddenly increased tremendously.

"Unlike previous mornings, there was no regular F-layer daytime fade out when the sun rose here in California about 6:45 AM. I continued to monitor during the daylight. I have never heard the HAARP signal during the daytime before. The sun now rises in Gakona Alaska about 10 AM PST. The received signal again increased from about S5 to S9 at 10:05 AM. With sunlight at both the transmitter and receiver there is no F-layer skip to bend the powerful signal around the planet. This means this is an extremely powerful direct ground wave signal. And I'm only receiving the leakage off the side lobes of the antenna array.

"The full HAARP design power is supposed to be about 350 Megawatts. But that is only the published spec, not necessarily what is done in practice (as in those CB's running illegal 1KWatt linear amplifiers). There is a planned Air Force "Star Wars" test with two vehicles, one from California and the other in the south Pacific, similar to last summer's failed test. The tentative published launch is set for late March or April. I will monitor HAARP to confirm it is running full power during the launch, as it was last summer.

"Last summer's "failure" is exactly what a HAARP device is supposed to do; destroy the electronic controls of a vehicle so the second stage cannot separate from the booster. A very cheap, simple way to knock down missiles launched from anywhere on the planet. It also can destroy military satellites in low orbit. Maybe that's why the Russians and Chinese have been complaining in the last several weeks about Bush's intention to "build" the star wars system. Maybe they've been losing some of their "secret hardware." But of course, they won't say that in public.

"Its now 11 AM PST, on Saturday the 17th, and the signal is blasting in with the powerful pre-pulse tone around S+20 and the main signal about S9. The signal varies 3 to 6 db over a series of several pulses. Since this is not due to F-layer skip fading, I must assume they are slewing the beam of the antenna in various directions, and thus changing the amount of the side lobes in this direction. This must be a test of a simulated space warfare game with multiple targets. Rapid slewing of the antenna in just a matter of a minute or two is not useful for submarine communication, nor for their stated purpose of doing "ionospheric research."

"To show the HAARP signal is abnormally large, at this time, the 80-meter band is silent and WWV at 5 MHz cannot be heard, as would be expected during the daytime. WWV at 10 MHz is barely heard but does not even register on the S meter. Tuning back to 3.39 MHz, the S meter jumps off the top of the scale. Even the extremely powerful Russian "woodpecker" transmitters during the cold war never did that, and they were aimed along the ground not out into space. I have no way to estimate how many Gigawatts that represents.

"It may be only coincidence but just several days ago, Russia announced it would be conducting a massive space war game, including the launch of numerous missiles, from both ground sites and submarines. Of course this is only a coincidence. You Think. For more information about HAARP, how the transmitter works and to hear what the transmitter sounds like, go back to the Brother Jonathan Gazette front page article about the HAARP facility and how it is used in space warfare.

"I should point out in 1983 a number of Air Force ER-135 electronic warfare planes were shot down in the Sea of Japan. They were apparently making a covert entry into soviet airspace to test the latest Russian technology. What the Air Force did not know then was the Soviets had developed a stealth fighter so the 135's never saw the Russians coming and all 5 of the US e-warfare planes were shot down. To cover this "covert" event, the US shot down a 747, a plane similar to the 135's (or modified Boeing 707's whose parts are very similar to a 747) so if plane parts are found in the Sea of Japan they are claimed to be the 747. The 747 may, in fact, have played a part in the covert event. This is the supposed "Russian" shoot down of Korean Airlines Flight 007, on Sept 1, 1983. I remember the event well, since it is my son's b-day.

"The proof of a covert event with stealth Russian fighters shooting down 5 Air Force ER- 135's is documented in R.W. Johnson's book, SHOOTDOWN, published in 1986. The most convincing evidence is the strange fact that 27 US active duty electronic warfare officers somehow end up on the passenger list among the dead on the civilian KAL Flight 007 going to Korea. I only point this out to show how high tech secret warfare between Russia and the US may result in deaths and the destruction of hardware, and yet is never reported to the public.

"The US did not announce and demonstrate deployment of its own stealth fighters until the Gulf War in '90-91, seven years later. In 1991, three events occurred, (1) the US demonstrates stealth fighter-bombers which can travel anywhere in the world without detection, (2) the announcement of the construction of HAARP which would neutralize all soviet missiles coming over the pole, and (3) the collapse of the Soviet Union. To see these as unrelated events is to miss the point of history.

"At the present time, both the Russian's and Chinese have demonstrated their ability and inclination to engage in warfare, especially space warfare. It would thus seem clear the "coincidence" of the massive Russian war games and the sudden increase in the output of HAARP in a warfare mode, would indicate that on this Presidents Day Weekend 2001, warfare is actually occurring, not just games. Just as in 1985, when planes were destroyed and US airmen died, the story was completely covered up, but it nonetheless had great implications on the relations between the governments of the world.

"There are, of course, no airmen on the Russian missiles, nor the Chinese and Russian satellites in orbit. This is the new hi-tech robotic remote control warfare of outer space. But, the "war games" are real, nonetheless. The massive increase in the output of HAARP, under the control of the Air Force's Space Vehicles Command which operates HAARP and has the mission of engaging in space warfare, would indicate of a lot of expensive space hardware is now biting the dust. The Russians will claim their exercise was a "success." The Chinese who have just lost their "eyes in orbit" will say nothing. And the US will claim, as usual, "What, who me? HAARP hasn't been in operation since October '99." But you can listen for yourself on any short-wave receiver by tuning to 3.390 MHz. Good Listening."

Some Concluding Remarks

The discovery of "Synthetic Telepathy," as an EM way to communicate information directly onto the brain has changed everything. And, with related discoveries on membrane responses to specific frequency bands, and their amplification, has led to some very serious questions. Where are these technologies really leading man?

Certainly not toward a better way of living.... We see little application in their uses in medicine. In fact, most aspects have remained classified, and are still being used (historically) for military applications and uses. When you consider our ability to clone emotions, and the possible uses of HAARP, there is NO QUESTION on the possibility of its use for the complete mind control of humanity.

We can do it now. We have the theory. We have the technology. Why would it not be done? And then, by whom? Dr. Robert O. Becker, twice-nominated for the Noble prize for his health work in bio-electromagnetism, was more explicit in his concern over illicit government activity. He wrote of "obvious application in covert operations designed to drive a target crazy with voices."

What is frightening is that words, transmitted via low-density microwaves or radio frequencies, or by other covert methods, might be used to create influence. For instance, according to a 1984 U.S. House of Representatives report, a large number of stores throughout the country use high frequency transmitted words (above the range of human hearing) to discourage shoplifting. Stealing is reduced by as much as 80 percent in some cases.

Given the low power levels required for some of these psycho-physical effects, and the ability to concentrate certain frequencies of electromagnetic radiation into tight beams, it is worth considering the possibility that low-orbiting satellites could transmit such signals directly to a chosen person. Such a capability would have obvious strategic value.

What if some group or organization wanted to conduct terrorist activities that would strike right into the heart of their intended victims? What better way than to create killers from the most ordinary of citizens? Worse yet would be to cause children to unexpectedly lash out and murder those around them.

It is apparent that the technology exists to elicit such behavior using waves of electromagnetic energy sent directly into the brain.

"ELF" frequencies, as we know now, are not the most invasive weapons-capable frequencies. Doses of ELF can act as either sedatives or stimulants, entraining the target's EEG as with the Russian LIDA machine. Weapons that can transmit hypnotic commands silently and untraceably, over distance and through walls, can cause a far wider spectrum of effects.

In other words, don't assume that "ELF" is the only form of electromagnetic signal which can do damage. And, if you might wonder what that "buzzing" sound you sense behind your ear might be? It is HAARP. You can actually hear it when they have it "on."

The obvious next important discussion should be around the changing Schuman Resonance, and its affects and importance to biological functions and activities. There is no question that the Schuman Resonance is changing toward the higher frequencies associated with our "conscious states" of mind... Why is that?

BOOKS ON MIND CONTROL

Adey, W. Ross, and Lawrence, Albert F. (eds.): Nonlinear Electrodynamics in Biological Systems, Plenum Publishing Corp., NY, 1984.

Alexander, John B., Groller, Richard, and Morris, Janet: The Warrior's Edge: Front-line Strategies for Victory on the Corporate Battlefield, 1990.

Anderson, Larry E. (ed.): Interaction of Biological Systems with Static and ELF Electric and Magnetic Fields, Dept. of Energy, Washington, DC, 1984.

Aquino, Michael A. (Major), and Valley, Paul E. (Col.): Mindwar: From Psyops to Mindwar: The Psychology of Victory.

Bamford, James, and Madsen,: The Puzzle Palace: Inside the National Security Agency, America's Most Secret Intelligence Organization, Penguin Books, NY, 1982.

Baranska, S., and Czerski, P.: Biological Effects of Microwaves, Dowden, Hutchinson, and Ross, Inc., Stroudsburg, PA, 1976.

Barnothy, M. F.: Biological Effects of Magnetic Fields, Plenum Publishing Corp., NY, Vol. I: 1964, Vol. II, 1969.

Basar, E., Flohr, H., Haken, H., and Mandell, A. (eds.): Synergetics of the Brain, Springer-Verlag, Berlin, 1983.

Bearden, Thomas E. (Lt. Col.): An Approach to Understanding Psychotronics, (AD-A027866), Defense Documentation Center, Washington, DC, 1976.

Bearden, Thomas E. (Lt. Col.): Excalibur Briefing, Strawberry Hill Press/Walnut Hill Books, San Francisco, 1980.

Bearden, Thomas E. (Lt. Col.): Gravitobiology, 1991.

Bearden, Thomas E. (Lt. Col.): The New Tesla Electromagnetics and the Secrets of Electrical Free Energy, Tesla Book Co., Millbrae, CA, 1983.

Bearden, Thomas E. (Lt. Col.): Solutions to Tesla's Secrets and the Soviet Tesla Weapons, Tesla Book Co., Millbrae, CA, 1983.

Becker, Robert O., and Selden, Gary: The Body Electric: Electromagnetism and the Foundation of Life, William Morrow & Co., Inc., NY, 1985.

Becker, Robert O.: Cross Currents: The Perils of Electropolution, The Promise of Electromedicine, Jeremy P. Tarcher, NY, 1990.

Becker, Robert O., and Marino, Andrew A.: Electromagnetism and Life, SUNY Press, Albany, NY, 1982.

Becker, Robert O. (ed.): Mechanism of Growth Control, C. C. Thomas Press, Springfield, IL 1982.

Begich, Nick, and Manning, Jeane: Angels Don't Play This HAARP: Advances in Tesla Technology, Earthpulse Press, Anchorage, AK, 1995. (ISBN: 0-96488-12-0).

Begich, Nick: Towards a New Alchemy: The Millennium Science.

Beir, V.: Health Effects of Exposure to Low Levels of Ionizing Radiation, 1990.

Beischer, D. E., et al.: Exposure of Man to Magnetic Fields Alternating at Extremely Low Frequency, (AD-7701400, NAMRL 1180) Naval Aerospace Naval Research Laboratory, Pensacola, FL, 1973.

Bennett, William R.: Health and Low-Frequency Electromagnetic Fields, Yale University Press, New Haven, CT, 1994.

Biderman, A. D., and Zimmer, H. (eds.): The Manipulation of Human Behavior, John Wiley & Sons, 1961.

Blank, Martin: Electromagnetic Field Biointeractions and Mechanics, Advances in Chemistry Series No. 250. American Chemical Society, 1155 Sixteenth St., NW, Washington, DC 20036, 1995 (ISBN: 0-8412-3135-4).

Bowart, Walter: Operation Mind Control, Dell, NY, 1978.

Bowart, Walter H.: Operation Mind Control: How the Cryptocracy will Psychocivilize You, St. Martin's Press, NY, 1994.

Braid, James: Electro-biological Phenomena Considered Physiologically and Psychologically, Sutherland & Knox, Edinburgh, 1851 (yes, 1851).

Brodeur, Paul: Currents of Death: Power Lines, Computer Terminals, and the Attempt to Cover Up Their Threat to Your Health, Simon & Schuster, NY, 1989.

Brodeur, Paul: Secrets: A Writer in the Cold War, Faber & Faber, Boston, 1997 (ISBN: 0-571-19907-0).

Brodeur, Paul: The Zapping of America: Microwaves, Their Deadly Risk, and the Cover-up, W. W. Norton & Co., NY, 1977.

Buderi, : The Invention that Changed the World.

Burch, N., and Altschuler, H. L. (eds.): Behavior and Brain Electrical Activity, Plenum Publishing Corp., NY, 1976.

Burdick, Dorothy: Such Things are Known, Vantage Press, Inc., 1982 (nonfiction, out-of-print).

Burner, Alvin M.: Biological Effects of Microwaves: Future Research Directions, San Francisco Press, Inc., San Francisco, CA, 1968.

Burr, H.S.: Blueprint for Immortality: The Electric Patterns of Life, Neville Spearman, London, 1972.

Bylinsky, Gene: Mood Control, Charles Schribner's Sons, NY, 1968.

Callahan, Philip S., (Ph.D.): Exploring the Spectrum and Paramagnetism, 19__.

Callahan, Philip S.: The Paramagnetic ELF Forces, 19__.

Calder, Nigel: The Mind of Man.

Cannon, Martin: Mind Control in America.

Cannon, Martin: The Controllers: A New Hypothesis of Alien Abduction, Prevailing Winds, Santa Barbara, CA, 1989.

Capron, Alexander, M.: Human Experimentation, University Publications of America, Bethesda, MD, 1986.

Chavkin, Samuel: The Mind Stealers: Psychosurgery and Mind Control, Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston, 1978.

Chiabrera, A., Nicolini, C., and Schwan, H. P. (eds.): Interactions Between Electromagnetic Fields and Cells, NATO Scientific Affairs Division, ASI Series 97A, Plenum Publications Corp., NY and London, 1985.

Chokroverty, Sudhansu: Magnetic Stimulation in Clinical Neurophysiology.

Chorover, Stephen L.: From Genesis to Genocide: The Meaning of Human Nature and the Power of Behavior Control, MIT Press, Cambridge, MA, 1979.

Clark, Hulda: The Cure for All Disease.

Clarke, Arthur C.: July 20, 2019.

Cleary, Stephen, F. (ed.): Biological Effects and Health Implications of Microwave Radiation, US Dept. HEW, BRH/DBE 70-2, Washington, DC, (June) 1979 (From the Richmond Symposium, Richmond, VA , Sept. 17-19, 1979).

Cole, K. C.: Sympathetic Vibrations.

Collins, Larry: The Maze: A Novel, Simon & Schuster, Inc., NY, 1989 (fiction).

Colorado Springs Notes, (Nikola Tesla's experiments).

Condon, Richard: The Manchurian Candidate, (fiction).

Constantine, Alex: Psychic Dictatorship in the USA, Feral House, Portland, OR, 1995 (ISBN: 0-922915-28-8: 221 pages).

Constantine, Alex: Virtual Government: CIA Mind Control Operations in America, Feral House, Venice, CA, 1997.

Copeland, Miles: Without Cloak and Dagger: The Truth About the New Espionage, Simon & Schuster, NY, 1974.

Corning, W.C., and Balaban, M.: The Mind: Biological Approaches to its Function, 1968.

Corson, William: The Armies of Ignorance, Dial Press, NY, 1977.

Czerski, P., Shore, M. L., et al. (eds.): Biological Effects and Health Hazards of Microwave Radiation, Polish Medical Pub., Warsaw, POLAND, 1974.

Davis, Albert Roy: The Anatomy of Biomagnetism, Vantage Press, NY, 1982 (ISBN: 533-05046-4: 107 pages).

Davis, Albert Roy, and Rawls, Walter C., Jr.: The Magnetic Blueprint of Life, Exposition Press, Hicksville, NY, 1979 (ISBN: 0-682-49215-9: 150 pages) - (good bibliography at end).

Davis, Albert Roy, and Rawls, Walter C., Jr.: The Magnetic Effect, Exposition Press, Hicksville, NY, 1975.

Davis, Albert Roy, and Rawls, Walter C., Jr.: Magnetism and Its Effects on the Living System, Exposition Press, Hicksville, NY, 1974.

Dean, (Lt. Col.) David J. (ed.): Low-Intensity Conflict and Modern Technology, Air University Press, Maxwell Air Force Base, AL, (June) 1986.

DeFelice, L.: Introduction to Membrane Noise, Plenum Publishing Corp., NY, 1981.

De la Warr, G.W., and Baker, D.: Biomagnetism, de la Warr Laboratories, Ltd., Oxford, 1978.

Delgado, Jose M. R.: Physical Control of the Mind: Toward a Psychocivilized Society, Harper & Row, NY, 1969.

DeVolpi, A., et al.: Born Secret: The H-H-HhhhHHHH-Bomb, the Progressive Case and National Security, Pergamon Press, 1981.

Dumansky, Y., Serdyuk, A. M., and Los, I. P.: The Effect of Radiofrequency Electromagnetic Fields on Humans, Kiev.

Ebon, Martin: Psychic Warfare: Threat or Illusion?, McGraw Hill, NY, 1983.

Eccles, J. C.: The Neurophysiological Basis of Mind, Oxford University Press, NY, 1953.

Eden, Jerome: Animal Magnetism and the Life Energy, Exposition Press, Hickville, NY, 1967.

Edelman, G. M.: The Remembered Present: A Biological Theory of Consciousness, Basic Books, NY, 1989.

Erne, Sergio N., Hahbohm, H.D., and Lubbig, H.: Biomagnetism, Walter De Gruyter & Co., Berlin & NY, 1981 (558 pages).

Eyges, Leonard: The Classical Electromagnetic Field, Addison-Wesley Publishing Co., Reading, MA, 1972 (413 pages).

Ferguson, Marilyn: The Brain Revolution: The Frontiers of Mind Research, Taplinger Publishing Co., NY, 1973.

Flanagan, G. Patrick: The Neurophone, Pyramid Power, 8th ed., DeVorss & Co., Marina del Rey, CA, 1980.

Franceschetti, Giorgio, Gandhi, and Grandolpho, M. (eds.): Electromagnetic Biointeraction, 1988.

Frohlich, H. (ed.): Biological Coherence and Response to External Stimuli, Springer-Verlag, Heidelberg and Berlin, 1988.

Gaylin, Willard M., Meister, Joel S., and Neville, Robert C. (eds.): Operating on the Mind, Basic Books, 1975.

Galton, Lawrence: MedTech.

Gillmor, Don: I Swear by Apollo: Dr. Ewen Cameron, the CIA, and the Canadian Mind-Control Experiments, Eden Press, Montreal, 1986.

Glaser, Zorach R., and Moore Julia L.: Cumulative Index to the Bibliography of Reported Biological Effects and Clinical Symptoms Attributed to Microwave and Radio-Frequency Radiation Exposure, Julie Moore and Associates, Riverside, CA, 1982.

Gordon, Thomas: Journey into Madness: The True Story of Secret CIA Mind Control and Medical Abuse, Bantam Books, NY, 1989.

Grandolfo, M., Michealson, S. M., and Rindl, A. (eds.): Biological Effects and Dosimetry of Nonionizing Radiation, Plenum Publishing Corp., NY, 1983.

Green, Elmer and Alyce: Beyond Biofeedback, 1977.

Greenslade, Shirley: Mind Control, Agape Word, 1994 (ISBN: 1-886799-05-9).

Guzman, Emilio: Mind Control, Institute of Psychology, Inc., 1996 (ISBN: 0-913343-25-0).

Halacy, D. S., Jr.: Cyborg, 1965.

Hassan, Steven: Combatting Cult Mind Control.

Hazzard, D. G. (ed.): Biological Effects and Measurements of Radio Frequency/Microwaves, Bureau of Radiological Health, HEW Pub. 77-8026, Rockville, MD, 1977.

Heller, John H.: Of Mice, Men, and Molecules, 1963.

Hemming, Leland H.: Architectural Electromagnetic Shielding Handbook: A Design and Specification Guide, IEEE (Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers) Press, NY, 1992.

Hoffman, Michael A.: Secret Societies and Psychological Warfare, Coetur d'Alene, ID, 1989 (127 pages).

Hooper, Judith: The Three Pound Universe.

Hutchings, Edward, Jr.: Frontiers in Science, 1958.

Hutchison, Michael: Mega Brain: New Tools and Techniques for Brain Growth and Mind Expansion, Ballantine Books, NY, 1986 (ISBN: 0-345-41032-7: 380 pages).

Hutchison, Michael: Mega Brain Power, (ISBN: 1-56282-770-7: 480 pages).

Illinger, K. H. (ed.): Biological Effects of Nonionizing Radiation, American Chemical Society Symposium Series No. 157, Washington, DC, 1981.

Jacobson, Steven: Mind Control in the United States, Critique Publishers, Santa Rosa, CA, 1985.

John, E. R.: Machinery of the Mind, Birkhauser, Boston, MA, 1990.

John, R.G., and Dunne, B. J.: Margins of Reality: The Role of Consciousness in the Physical World, Harcourt, Brace, & Jovanovich, NY, 1987.

Johnson, C. C., and Shore, M. L. (eds.): Biological Effects of Electromagnetic Waves, Bureau of Radiological Health, HEW Pub. 77-8010, Rockville, MD, 1976.

Johnson, George: In the Palaces of Memory.

Kahn, Herman, and Weiner, Anthony: The Year 2000: A Framework for Speculation on the Next Thirty-three Years, MacMillian Co., NY, 1967.

Keith, Jim: Mind Control/World Control: The Encyclopedia of Mind Control, Adventures Unlimited Press, Illinois, 1998 (ISBN: 0-932813-45-3).

Key, Wilson Bryan: The Age of Manipulation: The Con in Confidence; The Sin in Sincere, Henry Holt & Co., NY, 1989.

Kholodov, Y.A.: Effects of Electromagnetic...

Kollberg, E. (ed.): Microwave and Millimeter Wave Mixers, Institute Electrical, 1984 (ISBN: 0-87942-179-7).

Kong, Jin A., et al.: Theory of Microwave Remote Sensing, (2nd ed.), John Wiley & Sons, NY, 1985.

Lakhovsky, Georges: The Secret of Life: Cosmic Rays and Radiations of Living Beings, Health Research, Mokelumme Hill, CA, 1970 (Translated from Russian by Mark Clement: 212 pages).

Lakhovsky, Georges: The Secret of Life: Electricity, Radiation, and Your Body, Liberty Lobby, Washington, DC, 1994.

Lausch, Erwin: Manipulation, Aiden Ellis, 1974.

Lawrence, Lincoln (pseudonym): Were We Controlled? University Books, New Hyde Park, NY, 1967.

Lawrence, Lincoln (pseudonym), with an introduction by Kenn Thomas: Mind Control, Oswald & JFK: Were We Controlled? Adventures Unlimited Press, Kempton, IL, 1997 (ISBN: 0-932813-46-1).

Lee, Martin, and Shlain, B.: Acid Dreams: The CIA, LSD, and the Sixties Rebellion, Grover Press, NY, 1986.

Lee, Martin: The Beast Reawakens.

Leonard, George: The Silent Pulse, Bantam Books, NY, 1981.

Levitt, B. Blake: Electromagnetic Fields, (432 pages).

Lin, James C. (See Michaelson, Sol M., and): Biological Effects and Health Implications of RF Radiation.

Lin, James C.: Electromagnetic Interaction with Biological Systems, Plenum Publishing Corp., NY, 1989.

Lin, James C.: Microwave Auditory Effects and Applications, 1978 (221 pages).

Lipsky, Stephen: Microwave Passive Direction Finding, Llaurado, J. G., Sances, A., and Battocletti, J.H.: Biologic and Clinical Effects of Low-Frequency Magnetic and Electric Fields, Charles C. Thomas, Springfield, IL, 19??. (>1988).

London, Perry: Behavior Control, (269 pages).

Mackay, Stuart: Biomedical Telemetry.

Marha, Karel, Musil, Jan, and Tuha, Hana: Electromagnetic Fields and the Life Environment, San Francisco Press, San Francisco, CA, 1971.

Marino, Andrew A. (ed.): Modern Bioelectricity, Marcel Dekker, NY, 1988.

Marks, John D.: Search for the Manchurian Candidate: The CIA and Mind Control, Times Books, NY, 1979 (nonfiction).

Maxwell, J. C.: A Treatise on Electricity and Magnetism, Vols. I & II, Dover Publications, NY, 1954.

McRae, Ronald M.: Mind Wars: The True Story of Government Research into the Military Potential of Psychic Weapons, St. Martin's Press, NY, 1984 (ISBN: 0-312-65231-3).

Michaelson, Sol M., and Lin, James C.: Biological Effects and Health Implications of RF Radiation.

Mills, James: The Power, Warner Books, Inc., NY, 1990 (fiction).

Mind Control, Hidden Manipulation and Subliminal Learning, Gordon Press, NY, 1991.

Moell, Joseph D.: Transmitter Hunting: Radio Direction Finding Simplified.

Morris, Janet: Medusa.

Newman, Joseph: Energy is Electromagnetic.

Nicolini, C.: Chromatin Structure and Function, Plenum Press, NY, 1979.

Norden, B., and Ramel, C. (eds.): Interaction Mechanisms of Low-Level Electromagnetic Fields in Living Systems, Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences, Oxford University Press, Inc., NY, 1989.

O'Connor, Mary Ellen, and Lovely, Richard, H. (eds.): Electromagnetic Fields and Neurobehavioral Function, Alan R. Liss, Inc., NY, 1988.

O'Neill, John J.: Prodigal Genius: The Life of Nikola Tesla, Ives Washburn, Inc., NY, 1944 (326 pages).

Orwell, George: 1984, Harcourt, Brace, & Jovanovich, NY, 1949 (268 pages).

Osepchuk, John M. (ed.): Biological Effects of Electromagnetic Radiation, John Wiley & Sons, Inc., NY, 1983 (IEEE Order No. PC01594: 593 pages).

Ostrander, Sheila, and Schroeder, Lynn: Super Memory: The Revolution, 1991.

Persinger, Michael A. (ed.): ELF and VLF Electromagnetic Field Effects, Plenum Publishing Corp., NY, 1974.

Pines, Maya: The Brain Changers: Scientists and the New Mind Control, Harcourt, Brace, Jovanovich, Inc., 1973.

Polk, C., and Postow, E. (eds.): CRC (Chemical Rubber Co.) Handbook of Biological Effects of Electromagnetic Fields, Chemical Rubber Co. Press, Boca Raton, FL, 1986.

Popp, Fritz-Albert (ed.): Electromagnetic Bioinformation, Urban & Schwarzenberg, Baltimore, MD, 1979.

Presman, A. S.: Electromagnetic Fields and Life, Plenum Publishing Corp., NY and London, 1970. Translated from Russian by F.L. Sinclair; Edited by Frank A. Brown (336 pages).

Pribram, Karl H.: Brain and Perception: Holonomy and Structure in Figural Processing, Lawrence Erlbaum Associates, Hillsdale, NJ, 1993.

Pribram, Karl H. (ed.): Rethinking Neural Networks: Quantum Fields and Biological Data, Lawrence Erlbaum Associates, Mahwah (Hillsdale), NJ, 1993.

Puharic, Andrija: Beyond Telepathy, Anchor Books, Garden City, NY, 1973.

Puthoff, Harold E., and Targ, Russell: Mind Reach: Scientists Look at Psychic Ability, Delta, NY, 1978.

Puthoff, Harold E., and Targ, Russell (eds.): Mind at Large: Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers Symposia on the Nature of Extrasensory Perception, Praeger, NY, 1979.

Raden, Dean: The Unconscious Universe, 19__.

Radiofrequency Radiation Dosimetry Handbook, USAF School of Aerospace Medicine, Brooks AFB, TX, October 1986.

Ranelagh, John: The Agency, 1986 (ISBN: 0-671-44318-6).

Rappoport, Jon: US Mind Control Experiments on Children, Los Angeles, 1995 (bound xerox: 136 pages).

Rauscher, Elizabeth A.: Electromagnetic Phenomena in Complex Geometries and Nonlinear Phenomena, Non-hertzian Waves, and Magnetic Monopoles, Tesla Book Co., Millbrae, CA, 1983.

Regan, David: Evoked Potentials.

Remote Mind Control Technology.

Renati, Charles, and hudson, Michael: The Silent Intruder, Houghton Mifflin, Boston, 1982 (208 pages).

Restak, Richard M.: The Brain: The Last Frontier, Doubleday Direct, Garden City, NY, 1979 (page 258).

Restak, Richard M.: The Mind, Bantam Books, NY, 1988.

Ricketts, L. W., Bridges, J. E., and Miletts, J.: EMP Radiation and Protective Techniques, John Wiley & Sons, NY, 1976.

Riesen, W., et al.: A Pilot Study of the Interaction of Extremely Low Frequency Electromagnetic Fields with Brain Organelles, IIT Research Institute (AD-748119), Chicago, IL, 1971.

Roper Organization, The: Unusual Personal Experiences: An Analysis of the Data from Three National Surveys, Bigelow Holding Corp., Las Vegas, NY, 1991 (John Mack and Budd Hopkins).

Rossman, Michael: New Age Blues: On the Politics of Consciousness, E.P. Dutton, NY, 1979 (chapter on mind control technology)/

Rucker, Rudy: Mind Tools.

Russell, Richard: The Man Who Knew Too Much.

Russell-Manning, Elizabeth (Betsy): Mass Mind Control of the American People, (self-published) San Francisco, CA, 1992.

Russell-Manning, Elizabeth (Betsy): The Microwave Deception, Greensward Press, 1989 (ISBN: 0-930165-13-6).

Russell-Manning, Elizabeth (Betsy): Mind Control in a Free Society, 1989.

Russell-Manning, Elizabeth (Betsy), and Welsh, Cheryl: Whistleblowers, 1996 (bound xerox available from Flatland Books: 276 pages) or Whistleblowers: Nonlethal Weapons, Greenswald, Press, San Francisco, CA, 1996 (315 pages).

Sargent, William: Battle for the Mind: A Physiology of Conversion and Brainwashing, Greenwood Press, Westport, CT, 1957.

Schaffranke, Rolf: Proofs of Free Energy Devices and Supporting Data, Tesla Book Co., Millbrae, CA, 1983.

Schefflin, Alan W., and Opton, Edward M., Jr.: Mind Manipulators: A Nonfiction Account, Paddington Press, London, 1978.

Schmitt, F. O., and Schneider, D. M.: Functional Linkage in Biomolecular Systems, Raven Press, NY, 1975.

Schnitzgebel, Robert L., and Schnitzgebel, Ralph K.: Psychotechnology: Electronic Control of the Mind and Behavior, Holt, Rhinehart & Winston, NY, 1973.

Schrag, Peter: Mind Control, Pantheon Books, NY, 1978.

Schwarz, Jack: Human Energy Systems, E.P. Dutton, NY, 1980 (175 pages).

Sheffield, Charles, et al. (eds.): The World of 2044: Technological Development and the Future of Society, Paragon House, 1994.

Shepherd, G. M.: The Synaptic Organization of the Brain, Oxford University Press, NY, 1974.

Sheppard, Asher R., and Eisenbud, Merrill: Biological Effects of Electric and Magnetic Fields of Extremely Low Frequency, New York University Press, NY, 1977 (229 pages).

Shukman, David: Tomorrow's War: The Threat of High-Technology Weapons, Harcourt Brace & Co., 1996 (Formerly: The Sorcerer's Challenge, Hodden & Stoughton, London, 1995).

Siegel, Ronald K., and West, Louis Joyolon* (eds.): Hallucinations: Behavior, Experience, and Theory, Wiley, NY, 1975 (*member: "Old Crows Association").

Siegel, Ronald K.: Whispers: The Voices of Paranoia, Crown Publishers, Inc., NY, 1994.

Smith, Cyril W., and Best, Simon: Electromagnetic Man: Health and Hazard in the Electrical Environment, St. Martin's Press, Inc., NY, 1989.

Soyke, Fred, and Edmonds, Alan: The Ion Effect, E.P. Dutton, NY, 1977.

Steneck, Nicholas H.: The Microwave Debate, MIT Press, Cambridge, MA, 1984.

Stine, G. Harry: The Silicon Gods, Bantam Books, NY.

Sweeney, H. Michael: Alice in Americaland.

Taylor, Brice: Starshine: One Woman's Valiant Escape from Mind Control, (MK-ultra victim). $18.95 (includes s/h) from:

Brice Taylor Trust
P.O. Box 655
Landrum, SC 29356

[Brice Taylor also offers her recovery book, Revivification; "a gentle, alternative, memory retrieval process for trauma survivors." $7.50 (includes s/h)]

[For more on Brice Taylor see her [.\]](#)

Theury, Jacques: Microwaves: Industrial, Scientific, and Medical Applications, (670 pages).

Thomas, Gordon: Enslaved, Pharos Books, NY, 1981.

Thomas, Gordon: Journey into Madness: The True Story of Secret CIA Mind Control and Medical Abuse, Bantam Books, NY, 1989 (388 pages).

The Transformation of America, (by George Leonard?).

Tubiana, Morris, et al.: Radiobiology.

Turner, William: Hoover's FBI.

Valenstein, Elliot S.: Brain Control: A Critical Examination of Brain Stimulation and Psychosurgery.

John Wiley & Sons, NY, 1973.

Valerian, Valdamar: Matrix 3, "The Psycho-Social, Chemical, Biological, and Electric Manipulation of Human Consciousness", 1994? (bound xerox: 730 pages).

Valerian, Valdamar: Matrix III, Vol. 2, "The Psycho-Social, Chemical, Biological, and Magnetic Manipulation of Human Consciousness" 1995 (bound xerox: 707 pages).

Vankin, Jonathan: Conspiracies: Cover-ups and Crimes, Dell, NY, 1990.

Vankin, Jonathan: Conspiracies, Crimes, and Cover-ups: Political Manipulation and Mind Control in America, Paragon House, NY, 1991.

Wallia, C. S.: Towards Century 21.

War in the Age of Intelligent Machines.

Warden, Patrick, A.: Mind Control and Mental Telepathy, Samizdat, Los Angeles, August 1, 1993.

Warshovsky, Fred: The Control of Life.

Watson, Peter: War on the Mind: Military Uses and Abuses of Psychology, Basic Books, Inc., NY, 1978.

Weinstein, Harvey M.: Psychiatry and the CIA: Victims of Mind Control, American Psychiatric Press, Washington, DC, 1990.

Whalen, John: 50 Top Conspiracies of All Time.

White, John (ed.): Psychic Warfare: Fact or Fiction?, Aquarian, 1988 (book?).

Williams: Electromagnetic Brain Blaster.

Williamson, Samuel J. (ed.): Biomagnetism, Plenum Publishing Corp., NY, 1983.

Winn, Denise: The Manipulated Mind, The Octagon Press, NY, 1983.

Wolf, Alfred A.: The Body Quantum.

Yu, Alan: Millimeter Waves and Mind Control.

ARTICLES ON MIND CONTROL

Aftergood, Steven: Secrecy and Government Bulletin, Issue 28, Nov. 1993.

Aftergood, Steven: "The Soft-Kill Fallacy," Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists, pp. 40-45, September/October 1994.

Alexander, John B.: "The new mental battlefield: Beam me up Spock," Military Review (A U.S. Army Journal) pp. 47-54, December 1980.

The Associated Press: "Mind-altering microwaves: Soviets studying invisible ray," Los Angeles Herald Examiner, Sec. A, p. 22, November 1976. *

Bacon, S.: "Now they're probing the hidden depths of your mind," Popular Mechanics, Vol. 136: pp. 62-65, August 1971.

Barry, John, and Morganthau, Thomas: "Science of war: Non-lethal weapons," Newsweek, pp. 24-26, 7 February 1994.

Bartch, Paul: "Neurotransmission.," Resonance, No. 17: pp. 8-10, July 1990.

Bearden, Thomas: "An approach to understanding psychotronics," DDC (AD-A027866) June 1976.

Beardsley, Tim: "Making waves," Scientific American, Vol. 268 No. 2): p. 32, February 1993.

Beck, Robert C.: "ELF: Extremely low frequency fields: They affect us all in ways we may never consciously realize!" Nexus, Vol. 2 (No. 6): pp. 11-15 & 66-67, January/February 1992.

Beck, Robert C.: "Extreme low frequency (ELF) magnetic fields and EEG entrainment: A psychotronic warfare possibility?" Association for Humanistic Psychology Newsletter, April 1978 or Biomedical Research Associates, Los Angeles, CA, 1978.

Besly, Kim: "Electromagnetic pollution: A little known health hazard. A new means of control," Preliminary Report, Greenham Common Woman's Peace Camp, Inland House, Southbourne, Emsworth, Hants, England, 1993.

"Biomedical Aspects of Nonionizing Radiation, Naval Weapons Laboratory (NWL) Dahlgren, VA, Symposium, 10 July 1973.

Blackmon, Janet: "Woman fears government zapping," Sun Journal, New Bern, NC, 28 September 1992. (Mildred Cooper)

Boyce, Nell: "Bioterrorism Special Report: Nowhere to Hide," New Scientist Vol. : pp ., March 21, 1998.

Brodeur, Paul: "A reporter at large: Microwaves -I and -II," New Yorker, 13, 27 December 1976.

Budiansky, Stephen, and Good, Erica, E.: "Orlikow v. US," US News & World Report (Investigative Report) Vol. (No.): p. 34, 24 January 1994.

Burrell, Garland E., Jr.: "Mental privacy: An international safeguard to governmental intrusion into the mental processes," California Western International Law Journal, Vol. 6: pp, 110+, 1975.

Butler, Declan: "Advances in neuroscience may threaten human rights," Nature, Vol. 391 (Issue): p. 319, January 1998. *

Butterfield, Fox: "$2.15 million for hidden weapon research," The New York Times, Seattle Post Intelligencer, Sec. A-3, Friday, 10 March 1995.

Byrne, Harlan S.: "California microwaves," Barrons, Vol. 72 (No. 13): pp. 48-49, 30 March 1992.

Cannon, Martin: "Mind control and the American Government," Lobster, No. 23, 1993.

Caylor, Ron: "Government working on machine that can read your mind," The National Enquirer, June 22, 1976. (article created sensation)

Chernishev, I.: "Can rulers make 'zombies' and control the world?" Orienteer, pp. 58-62, February 1997.

Collins, Larry: "Mind Control," Playboy, January 1990.

Coupland, Robin M.: "Non-lethal weapons: Precipitating a new arms race? Medicine must guard against its knowledge being used for weapon development," British Medical Journal, Vol. 315: p. 72, 12 July 1997.

Crary, David: "Soldiers recount most memorable Iraqi surrenders," Associated Press The Daily Commercial, March 1, 1991.

DeBoskey, Bruce H.: "Nonionizing radiation: Hidden hazards," Trial Magazine, Vol. 26, (No. 8): pp. 32-36, August 1990.

De Caro, Chuck: "Washington: The zap gap: The Soviets may be ahead of us in the development of radio-frequency weapons," Atlantic Monthly, pp. 24-28, March 1987. *

DeLeno, Steven: "Electronic Concentration Camp."

"Disabling people and electronics," Microwave News, January/February 1996. *

DoD, Intel agencies look at Russian mind control technology claims," Defense Electronics, July 1993.

Dodgen, Larry: Non-lethal weapons," U.S. News & World Report, Vol. (No.): p. 5, August 4, 1997.

Dornheim, M.A.: "U.S.A.F. studying brainwaves to increase crew performances," Aviation Week and Space Technology, Vol. 20: pp. 18+, February 1986.

Doswald-Beck, Louise and Cauderay, Gerald C.: "The development of new antipersonnel weapons," International Review of the Red Cross, Vol. 279 , 1 November 1990.

Edwards, D.D.: "Cells haywire in electromagnetic field?" Science News, Vol. 133: pp. 216, 2 April 1988 (work of W.R. Adey).

Edwards, D. D.: "ELF: The current controversy," Science News, Vol. 131: pp. 107-109, 14 February 1987.

"Electromagnetic fields: New-wave coverage issues," Best's Review, 1991.

Elliott, Dorinda, and Barry, John: "A subliminal Dr. Strangelove. Mind: Using the power of hidden suggestions, this Russian Scientist (Igor Smirnov) tries to rewire the brain," Newsweek, p. 57, 22 August 1994.

"Emerging threat..."

"Expert meeting on certain weapon systems and on implementation mechanisms in international law," Report of the International Committee of the Red Cross, Geneva, Switzerland, May 30 - June 1, 1994 (issued July 1994).

"Final Report on Biotechnology Research Requirements for Aeronautical Systems through the Year 2000," Vols. I and II, Southwest Research Institute, San Antonio, TX, 1982.

"From Russia with love.At Los Alamos?" Intelligence Report: Parade Special Supplement, 1993?

"German workshop on mechanisms of EMF interactions," Microwave News, November/December 1991.

Glenn, J.C.: "Conscious technology: The co-evolution of mind and machine," Futurist, September/October 1989.

Herron, Robert (Maj.): "Electronic Warfare: New priority for next generation fighters," Aerospace America, p. 64, 1984.

Hough, Warren: "High tech civilian control studied: Secret Pentagon - DOJ Memo of Understanding, 'Nonlethal' weapons under development are being added to the government arsenal in its war against its own citizens," The Spotlight, p. , July 31, 1995. *

Hutchison, Michael: MegaBrain Report: The Psycho-technology Newsletter

Keeler, Anna: "Remote mind control technology," Full Disclosure, Vol. 15: pp. 1-14, 1989; Also published in Mike Coyle's MindNet Journal, Vol. 1 (No. 23a: Part I & No. 23b: Part II); and in Resonance, No. 23: Part I: pp. 3-14, February 1993 & No. 24: Part II: pp. 3-16, May 1992. *

Kelly, Jack A. and Conway, Joseph: "Non-lethal weapons: Emerging requirements for security strategy," Institute for Foreign Policy Analysis, May 1996.

Kempster, Norman: "Sci-fi comes true: Mind reading machine tells secrets of the brain," Los Angeles Times, March 20, 1976. *

Krawczyk, Glenn: Nexus, Vol. 2 (No. 22); pp., October/November 1994.

Krawczyk, Glenn: "Big brother's recipe for 'Revolution in Military Affairs'", Nexus, pp. 31-36, June/July 1995. *

Lopez, Ramon: "Special operations survive Pentagon budget constraints," International Defense Review, Vol. 26 (No. 3): p. 247, 12 December 1994.

MacGregor, R.J.: "A brief survey of literature relating to low-intensity microwaves on nervous function," RAND Report, R-4397, June 1970.

MacGregor, R.J.: "A direct mechanism for the direct influence of microwave radiation on neuroelectric function," RAND Report R-4397, June 1970 - ("The electrical component of microwave radiation induces transmembrane potentials in nerve cells and thereby disturbs nervous function and behavior.").

MacKenzie, Debora: Bioterrorism Special Report: Bioarmageddon," New Scientist, Vol. September 19, 1998.

Maddox, J., et al.: "", Nature, Vol. 334 (No.): 287-, 1988.

Mann, Paul: "Mass weapons threat deepens worldwide," Aviation Week & Space Technology, Vol. 144 (No. 25): p. 58, 17 June 1996.

Manning, Jeane: "Electronic telepathy device" (unnamed source, from Angels Don't Play This HAARP)

Martin, Harry V., and Caul, David: "Mind control," (A 13-part series) The Napa Sentinel, Napa, CA 1995.

Matthews, Owen: Report: "Soviets used top secret 'psychotronic' weapons," Moscow Times, Sec. 750, 11 July 1995.

McAuliffe, Kathleen: "The mind fields," Omni Magazine, pp. 258-267, February 1985.

McKinney, Julianne: "Microwave harassment and mind control experimentation," Unclassified, Vol. IV (No. 3) Parts I & II: 20 pgs., June/July 1992. *

Merritt, J. H., et al.: "Some biological effects of microwave energy directed at the head," (Unpublished and unclassified abstract circulated to conference participants. Conference was sponsored by the DoD Electromagnetic Compatibility Analysis Center) 19??. (See Steneck, Nicholas: The Microwave Debate, p.)

Metz, Steven, and Keivit, James: "The revolution in military affairs and conflict short of war," Strategic Studies Institute (SSI), U.S. Army War College, U.S. Government Printing Office (No. 1994-504-111/00089) July 25, 1994 (references to mind manipulation).

Michrowski, Andrew: "Covert ELF warfare," Specula (formerly published as The Journal of the American Association of Metascience) p. 27, January/March 1980.

"Microwave measurements," Aviation Week and Space Technology, Vol. 144 (no. 18): p. 73, 29 April 1996.

Microwave News, May/June 1988.

"Military on non-lethal weapons: A very attractive option," Microwave News, November/December 1993.

"The Mind Control Papers," Freedom News Journal, 1980 (ISBN: 0-915509-35-3)?

"Mind-reading computer," Futurist, p. 49, May/June 1992.

Mintz, John: "The secret's out: Covert E-Systems, Inc. covets commercial sales," The Washington Post, p. A-1, A-10, 24 October 1994.

Mizrach, Steve: "Electromagnetic effects on human behavior," MindNet Journal, Vol. 1 (No. 82) July 1996. *

Mollick, Ethan: "A gentler war: The debate over non-lethal weapons," Harvard International Review, Vol. 18 (No. 4): p.46, Fall 1996.

Morrison, David C.: "Sites unseen: A sketch of the Pentagon's secret 'black' bases used for stealth aircraft, special operations, and electronic eavesdropping programs emerges from a National Journal study," National Journal (Defense Report) pp. 1468-1472, June 4, 1988. *

Opall, Barbara: "U.S. experts: Focus arms control goals," Defense News, p. 6, 24-30 November 1997. Opall, Barbara: "U.S. explores mind control technology," Defense News, pp. 4, 29, January 11-17, 1993. *

Opall, Barbara: "U.S, Russia hope to safeguard mind-control techniques," Defense News, p. 4, 11-17 January 1993.

Page, J.: "Tuning in on brainwaves," Science, Vol. 5: pp. 88+, October 1984.

Pasternak, Douglas: "Wonder weapons: The Pentagon's quest for nonlethal arms is amazing. But is it smart?" US News & World Report (Special Report), Vol. 123 (No. 1): pp. 38-46, July 7, 1997. *

Pengelley, Rupert: "Wanted: A watch on non-lethal weapons," International Defense Review, Vol. 24 (No. 4): p. 1, 1 April 1994.

"Perry plans to launch nonlethal warfare", Defense News, September 19-25, 1994.

Persinger, Michael A.: "On the possibility of directly accessing every human brain by electromagnetic induction of fundamental algorithms," MindNet Journal, Vol. 1 (No. 65) June 1995.

Pool, Robert: "Electromagnetic fields: The biological evidence," Science, Vol. 249: pp. 1378-1381, 21 September 1990.

Posner, Michael I.: "Seeing the mind," Science, Vol. 262: pp. 673-674, 29 October 1993.

Possony, Stefan: "Scientific advances hold dramatic prospects for phy-strat," Defense and Foreign Affairs, Vol. 34, July 1983.

Ray, J.: "The body magnetic," Buzzworm, Vol. 4: p. 22, September/October 1992.

Ricks, Thomas E.: "Nonlethal arms: New class of weapons could incapacitate foe yet limit casualties," The Wall Street Journal, pp. A1 & A4, January 4, 1993. *

Rosenberg, Barbara Hatch: "Non-lethal weapons may violate treaties," The Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists, pp. 44 - 45, September - October 1994. (Note: Rosenberg gives the full name of this treaty as "Convention on prohibition or Restriction of the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons which may be deemed to be Excessively Injurious or to have Indiscriminate Effects.")

Schmitt, Eric: "Zany new weapons for U.S. team in Somalia," International Herald Tribune, 16 February 1995.

Schmitz, Tom: "California's Livermore weighs plan to use Russian technology," The Journal of Commerce, April 8, 1993. *

Selden, Gary: "Machines that read minds," Science Digest, October 1981.

Sharp, Joseph C. et al.: "Generation of acoustic signals by pulsed microwave energy," IEEE Transactions on Microwave Theory and Techniques, May 1974.

Shorto, Russell: "Armageddon: Killing them softly," Gentlemen's Quarterly, March 1995. *
"Still under wraps" Aviation Week and Space Technology, pp. 35+, June 7, 1993.

Sweetman, Sherri: Report on the Attorney General's Conference on Less than Lethal Weapons, U.S. Dept. of Justice, National Institute of Justice, March 1987.

Thomas Timothy: "The mind has no firewall," Parameters: U.S. Army War College Quarterly, Vol. 28 (No. 1): pp. 84-92, Spring 1998. *

Tigner, Brooks: "NATO panel to consider non-lethal weapon guidelines," Defense News, p. 14, 29 September 1997.

Tigner, Brooks: "Europeans protest U.S. ionospheric research," Defense News, p. 3, 16-22 February 1998.

Tyler: IN: Dean, David J. (ed.): Low-intensity Conflict and Modern Technology, Air University Press, USAF, Center for Aerospace Doctrine, Research, and Education, Maxwell AFB, AL, June 1986. *

"U.S. Nullifies Nuremberg Law," Earth Island Journal, p. 18, Winter 1996-97. *

Victorian, Armen: "The military use of electromagnetic, microwave, and mind control technology," Lobster, No. 34: pp 2-7, Winter 1998; Also published in Resonance, No., April 1998.

Victorian, Armen: "Mind reading computer," Time Magazine, 1 July 1974.

Victorian, Armen: "Neural manipulation by remote radar," Resonance, No. 30: pp. 25-28, March 1996; Also published in Lobster No. 30. *

Victorian, Armen: "Psychic warfare and nonlethal weapons."

Walker, Martin: "Dark dreamer of Star Wars," 5 May 1995.

Wall, Judy: "Electromagnetic weapons," Resonance, No. 29: pp 27-33, May 1995. *

Wall, Judy: "Military use of mind control weapons," Nexus, pp. 11 - 16, October - November 1998. (Unedited version originally published in Resonance, No. 33, April 1998. *

Wall, Judy: "Synthetic telemetry," Resonance No. 29: pp. 17 - 26, May 1995. *

Weiner, Malcolm H., Chairman: "Non-lethal technologies: Military options and implications", Report of an independent task force sponsored by the Council on Foreign Relations released June 22, 1995.

Wright, Steve: "An appraisal of technologies for political control," European Parliament Scientific and Technological Options Assessment (STOA) Luxembourg, European Parliament, 6 January 1998.

IMPORTANT TECHNICAL REFERENCES

Photo and description of the Korean War LIDA machine, a radio frequency brain entrainment device.

~~"Human Auditory System Response To Modulated Electromagnetic Energy,"~~ Allan H. Frey, General Electric, Advanced Electronics Center, Cornell University, Ithaca, New York.

NASA technical report abstract stating that speech-to-skull is feasible.

DOD/EPA small business initiative (SBIR) project to study the unclassified use of voice-to-skull technology for military uses.

Excerpts, Proceedings of Joint Symposium on Interactions of Electromagnetic Waves with Biological Systems, 22nd General Assembly of the International Union of Radio Science, August 25 - September 2, 1987, Tel Aviv, Israel.

Excerpt, Dr. Don R. Justesen, neuropsychological researcher, describes Dr. Joseph C. Sharp's successful transmission of "words" via a pulse-rate- modulated microwave transmitter of the Frey type.

~~FOIA article circulated among U.S.~~ agencies describing the Russian TV program "Man and Law", which gives a glimpse into the Russian mind control efforts. (Dr. Igor Smirnov, a major player, was used as a consultant to the FBI at the Waco Branch Davidian standoff.)

SBIR (small business initiative contract) which clearly shows intent to use ultrasound as an anti-~~personnel weapon, including one-man~~ portability and with power to kill.

A page originally from the MIT Media Lab's acoustic engineer, Joseph Pompeii. Describes a similar technique under commercial and military development (American Technologies Corp., San Diego) under the trade name "Hypersonic Sound". Shows that sound can be focused to the ~~extent of targeting just one person in a crowd,~~ acoustically, using ultrasound.

APPENDIX A

Electromagnetic Weapons Timeline:

Electromagnetic (EM) weapons are of recent invention. They utilize the various frequencies of the electromagnetic spectrum to disable or kill the target. Psychotronic weapons are those EM weapons that interact with the nervous system of the target. These weapons usually operate in the very low (100 to 1,000 Hz) or extremely low (greater than zero but less than 100 Hz) frequency ranges.

1934 "A method for Remote Control of Electrical Stimulation of the Nervous System", a monograph by Drs. E. L. Chaffee and R. U. Light.

1934 Experiments in Distant Influence, book by Soviet Professor Leonid L. Vasiliev
Vasiliev also wrote an article, "Critical Evaluation of the Hypogenic Method" concerning the work of Dr. I. F. Tomashevsky on experiments in remote control of the brain.

1945 After World War II, the Allies discovered the Japanese had been developing a "death ray" utilizing very short radio waves focused into a high power beam. Tests were done on animals.

1950 The French conducted research on infrasonic weapons. (From "The Road From Armageddon", by Peter Lewis, Resonance #13, pp 9-14).

1953 John C. Lilly, when asked by the director of the National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH) to brief the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), National Security Agency (NSA), and the various military intelligence services on his work using electrodes to stimulate directly the pleasure and pain centers in the brain, refused.

1958, 1962 The U.S. conducts high-altitude Electromagnetic Pulse (EMP) bomb tests over the Pacific. (From "The Road From Armageddon" by Peter Lewis.)

1960 Headlines read "Khrushchev Says Soviets Will Cut Forces a Third; Sees 'Fantastic Weapon' ". (From article of same title, by Max Frankel, New York Times, Jan. 15, 1960, p1 as cited in "Tesla's Electro-magnetics and Its Soviet Weaponization", paper by T. E. Bearden.)

1965 A "Death Ray" weapon was developed by McFarlane Corporation, described as a modulated electron gun X-ray nuclear booster, could be adapted to communications, remote control and guidance systems, EM radiation telemetry and death ray.

Reported hearings before the House Subcommittee on Department of Defense Appropriations, chaired by Rep. George Mahon (Dem. - Texas). From "Hearing Voices" by Alex Constantine, Hustler, January 1994, pp 102-104, 113, 120, 134. Research by Harlan Girard.

1965 Project Pandora was undertaken in which chimpanzees were exposed to microwave radiation. The man who was in charge of this project said, 'the potential for exerting a degree of control on human behavior by low level microwave radiation seems to exist' and he urged that the effects of microwaves be studied for 'possible weapons applications' - (From "Electromagnetic Pollution: A Little Known Health Hazard. A new means of control?" by Kim Besley, Great Britain, p14. Research from Woody Blue).

1968 Dr. Gordon J. F. MacDonald, science advisor to President Lyndon Johnson, wrote, "Perturbation of the environment can produce changes in behavioral patterns." He was referring to low frequency EM waves in the ionosphere affecting human brain wave patterns. (From his book, Unless Peace Comes, a Scientific Forecast of New Weapons, cited in "New World Order ELF Psychotronic Tyranny", a paper by C. B. Baker.)

1970 Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Jimmy Carter's National Security Director, said in his book, Between Two Ages, weather control was a new weapon that would be the key element of strategy. "Technology will make available to leaders of major nations a variety of techniques for conducting secret warfare..." He also wrote "Accurately timed, artificially excited electronic strokes could lead to a pattern of oscillations that produce relatively high power levels over certain regions of the Earth ... one could develop a system that would seriously impair the brain performance of a very large population in selected regions over an extended period." (Cited in Baker's "ELF Psychotronic Tyranny" paper.)

1972 The Taser, first electrical shock device developed for use by law enforcement, delivers barbed, dart shaped electrodes to a subject's body, and 50,000 volt pulses at two millionths of an amp over 12-14 seconds time. (From "Report on the Attorney General's Conference on Less Than Lethal Weapons", by Sherry Sweetman, 1987, p4, which cites "Non-Lethal Weapons for Law Enforcement: Research Needs and Priorities. A Report to the National Science Foundation by the Security Planning Corporation, 1972. Research by Harlan Girard.)

1972 "A U.S. Department of Defense document said that the Army has tested a microwave weapon. It was an extremely powerful 'electronic flamethrower'." (From "Electromagnetic Pollution.")

1972 "A study published by the U.S. Army Mobility Equipment Research and Development Center, titled 'Analysis of Microwaves for Barrier Warfare' examines the plausibility of using radio frequency energy in barrier counter-barrier warfare ... The report concludes that:

- (a) it is possible to field a truck-portable microwave barrier system that will completely immobilize personnel in the open with present day technology;
- (b) there is a strong potential for a microwave system that would be capable of delaying or immobilizing personnel in vehicles;
- (c) with present technology, no method could be identified for a microwave system to destroy the type of armored material common to tanks."

(From "Electromagnetic Pollution" by Kim Besly, p15, quoting The Zapping of America by Paul Brodeur.) The report further documents the ability to create third-degree burns on human skin using 3 GHz at 20-watts/square centimeter in two seconds.

1972 Dr. Gordon J. F. MacDonald testified before the House Subcommittee on Oceans and International Environment, concerning low frequency research: "The basic notion there was to create between the electrically charged ionosphere in the higher part of the atmosphere and conducting layers of the surface of the Earth this neutral cavity, to create waves, electrical waves that would be tuned to the brainwaves ... about ten cycles per second ... you can produce changes in behavioral patterns or in responses." (From Baker's "ELF Psychotronic Tyranny" paper.)

1973 Sharp and Grove transmit audible words via microwaves.

1975 - 1977 "Unpublished analyses of microwave bioeffects literature were disseminated to the U.S. Congress and to other officials arguing the case for remote control of human behavior by radar." (From the Journal of Microwave Power, 12(4), 1977, p320. Research by Harlan Girard.)

1978 Hungarians presented a state-of-the-art paper on infrasonic weapons to the United Nations, "Working Paper on Infrasound Weapons", United Nations CD/575, 14 August 1978. (From "The Road From Armageddon" by Peter Lewis.)

1981 - 1982 "Between 1981 and September 1982, the Navy commissioned me to investigate the potential of developing electromagnetic devices that could be used as non-lethal weapons by the Marine Corp for the purpose of 'riot control', hostage removal, clandestine operations, and so on." Eldon Byrd, Naval Surface Weapons Center, Silver Spring MD. (From "Electromagnetic Pollution" by Kim Besly, p12.)

1982 Electromagnetic weapons for law enforcement use in Great Britain: Charles Bovill of the now defunct British firm, Allen International, developed a 10-30 Hz strobe light that can produce seizures, giddiness, nausea, and fainting. Addition of sound pulses in the 4.0 - 7.5 Hz range increases effectiveness, as utilized in the Valkyrie, a "frequency" weapon advertised in British Defense Equipment Catalogue until 1983.

The squawk box or sound curdles uses two loudspeakers of 350-watt output to emit two slightly different frequencies that combine in the ear to produce a shrill shrieking noise. The U.S. National Science Foundation report says there is "severe risk of permanent impairment of hearing." (From "Electropollution" by Kim Besley, citing the Manchester City Council Police Monitoring Unit document.)

1982 Air Force review of biotechnology: "Currently available data allow the projection that specially generated radio frequency radiation (RFR) fields may pose powerful and revolutionary antipersonnel military threats. Electroshock therapy indicates the ability of induced electric current to completely interrupt mental functioning for short periods of time, to obtain cognition for longer periods and to restructure emotional response over prolonged intervals.

"... impressed electromagnetic fields can be disruptive to purposeful behavior and may be capable of directing and/or interrogating such behavior. Further, the passage of approximately 100 milliamperes through the myocardium can lead to cardiac standstill and death, again pointing to a speed-of-light weapons effect.

"A rapidly scanning RFR system could provide an effective stun or kill capability over a large area."

(From Final Report on Biotechnology Research Requirements for Aeronautical Systems Through the Year 2000. AFOSR-TR-82-0643, vol 1, and vol 2, 30 July 1982.)

1986 "The Electromagnetic Spectrum in Low-Intensity Conflict" by Captain Paul Tyler, MC, USN quotes the above passage and further elaborates on the theme. (Published in Low Intensity Conflict and Modern Technology Lt. Col. David J. Dean, USAF, ed., Air University Press, Maxwell AFB, AL. Research by Harlan Girard.)

1983 Nikolai Khokhlov, a Soviet KGB agent who defected to the West in 1976, interviews recently arrived scientists and reports: "The Soviet mind- control program is run by the KGB with unlimited funds." (From The Spectator, February 5, 1983, reported in "New World Order Psychotronic Tyranny" by C. B. Baker.)

1984 "USSR: New Beam Energy Possible?" possibly associated with early Soviet weather engineering efforts over the U.S. (From "Tesla's Electromagnetics and Its Soviet Weaponization" by T. E. Bearden.)

1985 Women in the peace camps at Greenham Common began showing various medical symptoms believed to be caused by EM surveillance weapons beamed at them. (See "Zapping: The New Weapon of the Patriarchy", Resonance #13, pp 22-24. Research by Woody Blue.)

1986 Attorney General's Conference on Less Than Lethal Weapons reviews current weapons available. They include the Taser, the Nova XR-5000 Stun Gun (can interrupt a pacemaker); the Talon, a glove with an electrical pulse generator; and the Source, a flashlight with electrodes at the base.

Photonic driving strobe lights tested by one conference delegate on 100 subjects, produced discomfort. Closed eyelids do not block the effect. Evidence that ELF produces nausea and disorientation. Suggestion to develop fast acting electro sleep inducing EM weapon.

Discusses problem of testing weapons on animals and human "volunteers". (From "Report on the Attorney General's Conference on Less Than Lethal Weapons", by Sherry Sweetman, March 1987, prepared for the National Institute of Justice. Research by Harlan Girard.)

1988 The Pentagon is ordered by courts to cease EMP tests at several locations due to a lawsuit filed by an environmental group. (From The Washington Post, May 15, 1988, see "U.S. and Soviets Develop Death Ray", Resonance 11, p10. Research by Remy Chevalier.)

1992 December. "The U.S. Army's Armament Research, Development and Engineering Center is conducting a one-year study of ACOUSTIC BEAM TECHNOLOGY ... the command awarded the one year study to Scientific Applications and Research Associates of Huntington Beach CA. Related research is conducted at the Moscow based Andreev Institute." (From "U.S. Explores Russian Mind Control Technology", by Barbara Opal, Defense News, January 11-17, 1993. Research by Harlan Girard and others.)

1993 The Russian government is offering to share with the United States in a bilateral Center for Psychotechnologies the Soviet mind-control technology developed during the 1970s. The work was funded by the Department of Psycho-Correction at the Moscow Medical Academy.

"Acoustic psycho-correction involves the transmission of specific commands via static or white noise bands into the human subconscious..." The Russian experts, among them former KGB General George Kotov, present in a paper a list of software and hardware available for $80,000. (From Opal article, "U.S. Explores Russian Mind Control Technology".)

1993 February 28, beginning of 51 day siege on the Branch Davidians at Waco Texas, which ended in the death of more than 80 people.

Until this incident, the electromagnetic weapons had kept a very low profile. But in the documentary video, "Waco: The Big Lie Continues", footage from the British Broadcasting (BBC) shows at least three EM weapons used by U.S. government agents. First, the noise generators used against the Davidians. Second, a powerful strobe light, shown during a nighttime sequence.

And the third was the Russian psychoacoustics weapon, considered, but agents deny use of this weapon against the Waco people. FBI agents met with Dr. Igor Smirnov in Arlington VA to discuss the possibility of using the weapon against the Davidians. (From "A Subliminal Dr. Strangelove", by Dorinda Elliot and John Barry, Newsweek, August 22, 1994)

APPENDIX B

Most Common Known ELF Effects: Here is a list of most of the common effects. It is intended to show how the various induced stress effects are broken down. Indent levels are used to show categories and sub-categories:

Invasive At-a-Distance Body Effects (including mind):

Sleep deprivation and fatigue:

Silent but instantaneous application of "electronic caffeine" signal, forces awake and keeps awake

Loud noise from neighbors, usually synchronized to attempts to fall asleep

Precision-to-the-second "allowed sleep" and "forced awakening"; far too precise and repeated to be natural

Daytime "fatigue attacks", can force the victim to sleep and/or weaken the muscles to the point of collapse

Audible Voice to Skull (V2S):

Delivered by apparent at a distance radio signal

Made to appear as emanating from thin air

Voices or sound effects only the victim can hear

Inaudible Voice to Skull (Silent Sound):

Delivered by apparent at a distance radio signal; manifested by sudden urges to do something/go somewhere you would not otherwise want to; silent (ultrasonic) hypnosis presumed

Programming hypnotic "triggers" - i.e., specific phrases or other cues which cause specific involuntary actions

Violent muscle triggering (flailing of limbs):

Leg or arm jerks to violently force awake and keep awake

Whole body jerks, as if body had been hit by large jolt of electricity

Violent shaking of body; seemingly as if on a vibrating surface but where surface is in reality not vibrating

Precision manipulation of body parts (slow, specific purpose):

Manipulation of hands, forced to synchronize with closed-eyes but FULLY AWAKE vision of previous day; very powerful and coercive, not a dream

Slow bending almost 90 degrees BACKWARDS of one toe at a time or one finger at a time

Direct at-a-distance control of breathing and vocal cords; including involuntary speech iv. Spot blanking of memory, long and short term

Reading said-silently-to-self thoughts:

Engineered skits where your thoughts are spoken to you by strangers on street or

Real time reading sub vocalized words, as while the victim reads a book, and BROADCASTING those words to nearby people who form an amazed audience around the victim

Direct application of pain to body parts:

Hot-needles-deep-in-flesh sensation

Electric shocks (no wires whatsoever applied)

Powerful and unquenchable itching, often applied precisely when victim attempts to do something to expose this "work"

"Artificial fever", sudden, no illness present v. sudden racing heartbeat, relaxed situation

Surveillance and tracking:

Thru-wall radar and rapping under your feet as you move about your apartment, on ceiling of apartment below

Thru-wall radar used to monitor starting and stopping of your urination - water below turned on and off in sync with your urine stream

Loud, raucous artificial bird calls everywhere the victim goes, even into the wilderness

Invasive Physical Effects at a Distance (non-body):

Stoppage of power to appliances (temporary, breaker ON)

Manipulation of appliance settings

Temporary failures that "fix themselves"

Flinging of objects, including non-metallic

Precision manipulation of switches and controls

Forced, obviously premature failure of appliance or parts

External Stress-Generating "Skits":

Participation of strangers, neighbors, and in some cases close friends and family members in harassment:

Rudeness for no cause

Tradesmen always have "problems", block your car, etc.

Purchases delayed, spoiled, or lost at a high rate

Unusually loud music, noise, far beyond normal

Break-ins/sabotage at home:

Shredding of clothing

Destruction of furniture

Petty theft

Engineered failures of utilities

Sabotage at work:

Repetitive damage to furniture

Deletion/corruption of computer files

Planting viruses which could not have come from your computer usage pattern

Delivered goods delayed, spoiled, or lost at a high rate

Spreading of rumors, sabotage to your working reputation

Direct sabotage and theft of completed work; tradesmen often involved and showing obvious pleasure

In summary, the effects include:

To the Brain:

Forced memory blanking and induced erroneous actions

Induced changes to hearing. Both apparent direction and volume, and sometimes even content

Reading and broadcasting thoughts. "How can that lady talk with her mouth closed?"

Vivid controlled dreams.

Forced waking visions: some synched with forced body motion

Microwave hearing

Sleep prevention each nigh, at exactly the same time (for weeks)

To the FaceL

Sudden violent itching inside eyelids

Forced manipulation of airways, including externally controlled forced speech

"Transparent eyelids"

Artificial tinnitus (ringing in ears)

Forced movement of jaw and clacking of teeth

To the Body:

Wilding racing heart without cause

Remotely induced violent no-rash itching

Forced nudging of arm during delicate or messy work causing injury or spills

Forced "muscle quaking" on large muscles on the back or other unexplainable vibrations

Cases of repeated fresh watch batteries dying

Forced precision manipulation of hands. Sometimes synched to the forced waking visions.

Special attention to genital area: itching, forced orgasm, intense pain, "hot needles"

Intense general pain in the legs, like stings.

[Remind you, that these are the unclassified effects only.]

RICHARD ALAN MILLER

Lectures, Writing, & Research

Author & researcher Richard Alan Miller reveals a wealth and depth of knowledge and experience in three major fields; Alternative Agriculture, New Age Physics, and Metaphysics. Before many leading edge concepts became trendy topics, Miller was (and is) in the international front lines of research, experimentation and documentation.

His focus on botanicals made him the leading world authority on herb farming, processing and marketing. With numerous books, bi-lines and websites (www.nwbotanicals.org), Miller's visionary work with Alternative Agriculture continues to be 20 years ahead including concepts such as sustainability, intercropping, and Forest Farming.

Taking a step behind the scenes of "black ops" research is for most of us limited to speculations. Miller began working in that "X-Files" world in the 60s and has amazing experiences and conclusions to share. An original team-member, "man-in-black," Miller's research in the field of Parapsychology & Paraphysics began as a graduate physicist working 10 years with Army Intel/Pentagon.

During this period numerous foundational papers, including "A Holographic Concept of Reality" and "Embryonic Holography" were written. Richard Alan Miller's most recent work, "Synthetic Telepathy and the Early Mind Wars" discusses how some of his earlier work contributed to new "mind altering" technologies and their current applications.

His most recent works at Nexus Conferences in Brisbane, 2004 and Amsterdam, 2005 was titled "The Non-Local Mind In A Holographic Universe." He also has semi-technical papers to be presented in Anaheim at The World Nutra Conference in October, 2005. Title: "Lab-Grown Cordyceps sinensis Hybrid: A Nano-Processed Medicinal Mushroom that Really Delivers."

Offering fresh perspectives on Metaphysical traditions his books, papers & articles integrate his scientific research with time-honored metaphysical concepts, leading to such works as The Modern Alchemist; A Guide to Personal Transformation and The Diamond Body, a Synergetic Approach to Mysticism.

He brings a similar integration to The Magical & Ritual Use of Herbs and The Magical & Ritual use of Aphrodisiacs. Miller is listed in Who's Who in the World, America, and the West.

Richard Alan Miller
Northwest Botanicals, Inc.
(541) 476-5588
(541) 476-1823 (fax)

Directed Energy Weapon / Targeted Individual Patents																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																																							</
--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	----

Various Frequencies and their effects:
Lily wave:	usually in ELF or ULF range http://thebridgelifeinthemix.info/2015/11/03/the-lilly-wave-and-psychotronic-warfare/#sthash.VryKx1Q3.dpbs (piggy backing on the grid) Heart Attack Remote Weapon:
	https://everydayconcerned.net/2015/08/13/holistic-doctors-sudden-cardiac-arrest-targeted-individuals-remote-radiation-heart-attack-weaponry-how-to-protect-yourself/
HAARP
	ELF waves are coming from atmosphere
ALFVEN Waves (ELF waves) onto the Earth's surface:
	Requires plasma in order to create the ELF waves. Ionosphere is plasma. Indigo skyfold is also plasma.

Psychotronic technology has long been thought to be impossible by the majority of people and have been relegated to science fiction. The fact is that scientists developed this technology into reality at least thirty years ago and started experiments with unwitting people.

Psychotronics is the ability, using extremely low frequency (ELF) waves and other means to manipulate a person emotions, thoughts, bodily functions, will etc all from a remote location. Using this technology a person or possibly an entire population can literally be controlled like a robot with a remote control. How is this done?

Earth is wrapped in a donut shaped magnetic field. Circular lines of flux continuously descend into the North Pole and emerge from the South Pole. The ionosphere, an electromagnetic-wave conductor, 100 kms above the earth, consists of a layer of electrically charged particles acting as a shield from solar winds. Natural waves are related to the electrical activity in the atmosphere and are thought to be caused by multiple lightning storms.

Collectively, these waves are called "The Schumann Resonance," the current strongest at 7.8 Hz.

These are quasi-standing ELF waves that naturally exist in the earth's "electromagnetic" cavity, the space between the ground and the ionosphere. These "earth brainwaves" are identical to the spectrum of our brainwaves. (1 hertz = 1 cycle per second, 1 KHz = 1000, 1 Mhz = 1 million. A 1 Hertz wave is 186,000 miles long; 10 Hz is 18,600 miles. Radio waves move at the speed of light.)

The Creator designed living beings to resonate to this natural frequency pulsation in order to evolve harmoniously.

These natural geomagnetic waves are being replaced by artificially created very low frequency (VLF) ground waves coming from GWEN Towers.

Dr. Andrija Puharich (in the 1950 & 60s), found that a clairvoyant's brainwaves turned to 8 Hz when their psychic powers were operative. In 1956, he observed an Indian Yogi controlling his brainwaves, deliberately shifting his consciousness from one level to another. Puharich trained people via bio-feedback to do this consciously, that is, creating 8 Hz waves with the technique of bio-feedback. A psychic healer generated 8 Hz waves through a hands-on healing process, actually alleviating that patient's heart trouble; the healer's brain emitting 8 Hz.

One person, emitting a certain frequency, can make another also resonate to the same frequency. Our brains are extremely vulnerable to any technology that sends out ELF waves, because they immediately start resonating to the outside signal by a kind of tuning-fork effect.

Puharich further experimented, discovering that,

- * 7.83 Hz (earth's pulse rate) made a person "feel good," producing an altered-state
- * 10.80 Hz causes riotous behavior
- * 6.6 Hz causes depression.
- * 10 Hz puts people into a hypnotic state

Russians and North Koreans use this 10 Hz frequency in portable mind-control machines to extract confessions. (This system can also be found in some American Churches to help the congregation believe!)

Puharich was somehow induced to work for the CIA where he and Dr. Robert Becker designed equipment to measure these waves and their effect on the human brain. Puharich started his work by putting dogs to sleep.

By 1948/49, he had graduated to monkeys, deliberately destroying their eardrums to enable them to pick up sounds without the eardrum intact. He discovered a nerve from the tongue could be used to facilitate hearing. He created the tooth implant that mind-control victims are now claiming was put in by their dentist, unbeknownst to them, and causing them to hear "voices in their head." These were placed under caps or lodged in the jaw.

The human body, much like a computer, contains myriad data processors. They include, but are not limited to, the chemical-electrical activity of the brain, heart, and peripheral nervous system, the signals sent from the cortex region of the brain to other parts of our body, the tiny hair cells in the inner ear that process auditory signals, and the light-sensitive retina and cornea of the eye that process visual activity. The body is capable not only of being deceived, manipulated, or misinformed but also shut down or destroyed -- just as any other data-processing system. The "data" the body receives from external sources -- such as electromagnetic, vortex, or acoustic energy waves -- or creates through its own electrical or chemical stimuli can be manipulated or changed just as the data (information) in any hardware system can be altered.

When we say words to ourselves, silently, or, read a book, we can actually feel the slight sensations of those words in our vocal muscles - all that is absent is the passage of air. Thought reading is an enhanced version of computer speech recognition, with EEG waves being substituted for sound waves. The easiest "thought" reading is actually remote picking up of the electro-magnetic activity of the speech-control muscles. Scientists have also found that they could convert thoughts into computer commands by deciphering the brain's electrical activity.

Powerful CFR and Trilateral insiders have long known how electro-magnetic weapons can be effectively utilized to wage political warfare against America's population. President Lyndon Johnson's Science Adviser, Dr. Gordon J.F. MacDonald wrote the globalist-promoting 1968 book, unless peace comes, a scientific forecast of new weapons.

MacDonald described how man-made changes in the electrical earth-ionosphere can be used for mass behavioral control. He said that low frequency electromagnetic oscillations can attack the low frequency electromagnetic brain waves in human beings.

Zbigniew Brzezinski, the founding director of David Rockefeller's Trilateral Commission, also served as President Jimmy Carter's National Security Director, where he founded the infamous FEMA that is designed to implement world government dictatorial rules over the U.S.A. predicted these exact types of electromagnetic psychotronic weapons.

He stated: "It is possible - and tempting - to exploit, for strategic-political purposes, the fruits of research on the brain and on human behavior... Accurately timed, artificially excited electronic strokes could lead to a pattern of oscillations that produce relatively high power levels over certain regions of the earth. In this way, one could develop a system that would seriously impair the brain performance of a very large population in selected regions, over an extended period."

Low-frequency radiation affects the electrical activity of the brain and can cause flu-like symptoms and nausea. Other projects sought to induce or prevent sleep, or to affect the signal from the motor cortex portion of the brain, overriding voluntary muscle movements.

The bulk of recent telepathy research in the U.S.S.R. has been concerned with the transmission of emotional or behavioral impulses and the study of physiological response to PK exercises etc...By the early 1970's CIA agents in the field reported that the Soviets were able to influence telepathically the behavior of people, alter their emotions or health, and even kill at long distance.

In a 'Psychotronic War' using microwaves modulated using ELF waves, it would no longer be necessary to kill whole armies by inducing cardiac or respiratory irregular signals. The enemy can simply be incapacitated by disturbing their states of balance or confusing the ability to think logically. The manipulation of human beings, by means of ELF waves is relatively easy to perform.

In 1977, the U.S. Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) declassified a report describing how vast advances in Soviet psychotronic technology can create the ultimate big brother society, by using electronic mind control against populations to implant ideas and thoughts into the heads of unsuspecting victims:

"sounds and possible even words, which appear to be originating intracranially (within one's own head), can be induced by signal modification at very low average power densities" (VLF & ELF).

The DIA report also said that the Soviets discovered that secret microwave radiation can be used to induce in unsuspecting victims:

"headache, fatigue, perspiring, dizziness, menstrual disorders, irritability, agitation, tension, drowsiness, sleeplessness, depression, anxiety, forgetfulness, and the lack of concentration."

Predicting the use of so-called "non-lethal" psychotronic weapons to support the U.N. occupation of America, a 1988 article stated:

"Government authorities and the military would have to overcome no insurmountable difficulties to modulate carrier frequencies with ELF signals in existing centimeter radio-relay links...an army of occupation could then manipulate a nation's ability to make decisions."

In a 1993 meeting between Clinton Administration officials and Soviets psychotronics experts, including Dr. Igor Smirnov.

Clinton Administration officials wanted to determine whether psycho-correction...programs could be undertaken by the u.s. government. These devices could be used to affect judgement or opinion of decision-makers, key personal or populaces.

Clinton Defense officials expressed interest that the KGB psychotronic devices could be used "in non-violently" clearing areas of potential enemies, snipers, etc. (meaning U.S. gun collectors and patriotic militias).

Former KGB General George Kotov has told American visitors about Russian (KGB) research into 'acoustic psycho-correction.' The process involves transmitting commands into the subconscious of targeted victims through static or white-noise bands.

There she was shown the technique which was pioneered by the Russian Department of Psycho-Correction at Moscow Medical Academy. The Russians employ a technique to electronically analyze the human mind in order to influence it. They input subliminal command messages, using key words transmitted in "white noise" or music . Using an infrasound very low frequency-type transmission, the acoustic psycho-correction message is transmitted via bone conduction - ear plugs would not restrict the message.

According to the Russians the subliminal messages by-pass the conscious level and are effective almost immediately.

These devices appear to work at the Very Low Frequency (VLF) spectrum, the same frequency range as generated by the sinister U.S. Gwen (Ground Wave Emergency Network) system of transmitters.

Pioneered by the government-funded Department of Psycho-Correction at the Moscow Medical Academy, acoustic psycho-correction involves the transmission of specific commands via static or white noise bands into the human subconscious without upsetting other intellectual functions.

Experts said laboratory demonstrations have shown encouraging results after exposure of less than one minute. Moreover, decades of KGB research and investment of untold millions of rubles in the process has produced the ability to alter behavior on willing and unwilling subjects.

The ability to cause death can be transmitted over distances, thus inducing illness or death for no apparent reason. These weapons would be able to induce illness or death at little or no risk to the operator. The psychotronic weapon would be silent and difficult to detect.

Directed-energy weapons currently being deployed include, for example, a micro-wave weapon manufactured by Lockheed-Sanders and used for a process known as 'Voice Synthesis' which is remote beaming of audio (i.e., voiced or other audible signals) directly into the brain of any selected target.

On March 21, 1983, The Sydney Morning Herald published this article by Dr. Nassim Abd El-Aziz Neweigy, Assistant Professor of Agriculture, Moshtohor Tikh-Kalubia, Egypt.

"Russian satellites, controlled by advanced computers, can send voices in one's own language, interwoven into natural thoughts. They can target the population of choice with this diffused artificial thought process. The chemistry and electricity of the human brain can be manipulated by satellite and even suicide can be induced.

Through ferocious, anti-humanitarian means, the extremist groups are fabricated, the troubles and bloody disturbances are instigated by advanced tele-means via Russian satellites in many countries in Asia, Africa, Europe and Latin America.

Another source says that these computers have been fed with the world's languages and synthetic telepathy will reach into people's heads making people believe God is speaking to them personally to enact the Second Coming, complete with holograms!

Today we have intellectual, physical and financial resources to master the power of the brain itself, and to develop devices to touch the mind and even control or erase consciousness.

During the 1960's, brain transmitters as small as a half of a cigarette filter made it possible for doctors to implant them into unwitting patients during operations easily and without surgery via the nostrils. Implants are now smaller than a hair's width and are injected with vaccine and flu shots. Millions have had this done unknowingly. These "biochips" circulate in the bloodstream and lodge in the brain, enabling the victims to hear "voices" via the implant.

Like all such radio devices, this electrode transmits data from a person's inner life, his mental functions, biological and neurological processes, all of which can be combined to yield more information about someone's life than even that person knows about himself. The implants can be used to "brainwash": to manipulate inner processes, modify or destroy emotions and thoughts, and control behavior in detail.

By means of two-way radio communication, called telemetry or remote control, one can send a wavelength round trip to a brain transmitter in a person's head. The wavelength streams through the brain and returns to a computer, where all aspects of a human being's life are uncovered and analyzed.

By electrical stimulation of specific cerebral structures, movements can be induced by radio command, hostility may appear or disappear, social hierarchy can be modified, sexual behavior may be changed, and memory, emotions, and the thinking process may be influenced by remote control.

Transmitters have no batteries, are activated by radio, and can be used for life, so that the brain can be stimulated indefinitely.

In the newspaper Delovoi Mir, "Mind Control" by Ivan Tsarev, 1992, a victim wrote, "They controlled my laughter, my thoughts, and cause pain in various parts of my body...It all started in October 1985, after I had openly criticized the first secretary of the City Committee of the Communist Party.

The Ground Wave Emergency Network (GWEN) was begun in the 1980's by the U.S. Government. The system was allegedly designed for the purpose of maintaining defense communications in case of a nuclear war.

GWEN transmitters, placed 200 miles apart across the USA, allow specific frequencies to be tailored to the geomagnetic-field strength in each area, allowing the magnetic field to be altered.

The GWEN towers transmit electromagnetic waves in the VLF range between 150 and 175 Khz.

"The VLF range was selected because its signals travel by means of ground waves - electromagnetic fields that hug the ground - rather than radiating into the atmosphere. The signals drop off with distance, and a single GWEN station transmits to a 360-degree circle radiating out from it to a distance of about 250 to 300 miles."

Unlike the thousands-of-miles long range ELF waves, the higher frequency VLF waves transmitted by the GWEN system have a limited range of only a few hundred miles.

The GWEN towers will play a key role in U.N. mind control operations because they have the ability to selectively zap specific geographic locations, while leaving other areas unaffected.

In this way, the population in selected regions of the nation can be mentally softened-up. Expected resistance to U.N. occupation forces, from the militias of loyal Americans, can be significantly reduced by having GWEN system in targeted areas transmit specific psychotronic signals that encourage depression and submission.

In crosscurrents, Dr. Becker stated:

“GWEN is a superb systems, in combination with cyclotron resonance for producing behavioral alterations in the civilian population. The average strength of the steady geomagnetic field varies from place to place across the United States.

Therefore, if one wished to resonate a specific ion in living things in a specific locality, one would require a specific frequency for that location. The spacing of GWEN transmitters 200 miles apart across the United States would allow such specific frequencies to be ‘tailored to the geomagnetic field strength in each area.”

Prior to the construction of the GWEN system, the government conducted experiments on the use of GWEN-type Very Low Frequency transmissions.

The present 58 tower GWEN system is still functioning and cannot be turned off or dismantled without specific legislation from Congress.

Symptoms of psychotronic torture

Here is a description of the cluster of symptoms common to most victims. 24 hours 7 days a week, for years on end, victims are subjected to all kinds of harassment and torture. Most agree that the technology can remotely target and control every nerve of the body. Heart rate can speed up and slow down, bowel movements can be regulated, illnesses can turn on and off in an instant. Victims report microwave hearing or voices in the head and sleep deprivation. Thoughts can be read, and played back to the victim, instantaneously.

People around the victim can repeat verbatim, the victim's immediate thoughts.

- * dreams are manipulated
- * behaviors controlled
- * emotions literally played with and all types of pain can be started and stopped in all parts of the body
- * remote sexual manipulation and abuse with pedophilia
- * homosexual and degrading themes are reported regularly
- * microwave burns are frequently reported, along with all types of bizarre and harassing manipulation of electrical equipment, phone, car, TV and computers
- * black bag intelligence tactics of tire slashings, break ins and mail tampering are reported
- * hologram are projected

(The youtube user victimofrothschild identified many of these same symptoms.)

According to victims, it is vicious, amoral, sadistic and cruel. Most victims describe the experience as very debilitating and liken it to mental rape, prison or total destruction of the quality of one's life. Most are labeled mentally ill and live with financial ruin, loss of health, social life and career. All say the technology is very sophisticated and effective as a weapon. Some victims say they would use it on their torturers and feel vindication. It is like a slow death.

Unfortunately for the victims that are being used as guinea pigs for this technology (who will some day most likely be you) are left helpless as law authorities and government agencies refuse to co-operate with them and psychiatrists label them "mentally ill" in order to keep this a secret.

Recently a youtube user named victimofrothschild uploaded videos of himself claiming to be a victim of Psychotronic Warfare. He originally had 52 videos on his channel but they were all deleted and on the date of this post he currently has 8. His youtube channel can be viewed here:
<http://www.youtube.com/user/victimofrothschild>

It has been reported that the Rockefellers have been financing psychotronic mind control research since the 1950's.

The Sound of Silence is a military-intelligence code word for certain psychotronic weapons of mass mind-control tested in the mid 1950's, perfected during the 70's, and used extensively by the "modern" U.S. military in the early 90's, despite the opposition and warnings issued by men such as Dwight David Eisenhower. This mind-altering covert weapon is based on something called subliminal carrier technology, or the Silent Sound Spread Spectrum (SSSS), (also nicknamed S-Quad or "Squad" in military jargon.) It was developed for military use by Dr. Oliver Lowery of Norcross, Georgia, and is described in US Patent #5,159,703

From: vladimir muzhesky

From Psychotronic Warfare to Biotronic Materials (excerpts)

Vladimir Muzhesky

Synthetic Plane of Immanence

Whether electronically or materially mediated, psychotronic complexes interact with their spatial background environment and not with their generating concept. The concept itself is rerendered into a spatially invaginated structure intended to reflect and replicate elements of abstract defense. It is a multipolar semiotic system that goes beyond the tripolar systems of Lotman, more reminiscent of strange attractors: it defines multi dimensional landscapes of bioinformational trajectories instead of describing cultural codes. In general, instead of being encrypted in bioinformational activity, culture, with its codes being hacked vertically and horizontally through mental manipulation which disperses personal and collective memory, replicates and counterfeits reflections and intentions and even meaningful positions, then mutates into a new dimension where meaningful and nervous spatialities are fused to form a twisted conglomerate of neuro-space: a virtual plane of immanence for the economy of abstract defense.

It would not be fair to say that cyberspace was out there first. It always was and forever will be a model which claimed new dimensions. Once we speak about modes of existence in this dimension we cannot avoid a correlation with biological informational networks: hence a cyberspatial dummy will never be actualized as in the neomythology of sci-fi literature, but neurolized, as happened with the defense technology in the ex-SU.

Psychotronic generators are units which, by definition, refer to the activity of the human nervous system as much as they are intended to modify the sequences of individual and collective behavior on the informational level. They are materialized discursive formulas of the closure of revolution and resistance as one-dimensional social events. Biotronic revolution has more at stake: it becomes possible for the means of production to be simulated in terms of abstract representations by means of synthetic bio electronic technologies. In this context, the upcoming biospheric shock acquires a different marker: Global Recombination. The environment of Gaia becomes neurolized: the new multipolar mental-technological complexes are being translated from neurospace into the ecosphere and replicated in the environment of the Earth. If it sounds unreal, pick up a cognitive psychology reader and look at the way cognitive maps emerge and function. The search for life in outer space becomes a ridiculous venture: biotronic life complexes send their traces ahead. It is not difficult to see that our civilization finally forms itself into a spatially active system. Its undefined reality (homonified and hypertranscribed in the process of neurosimulation) recollapses: it cannot be given a meaning because it is a semantic warp which changes every thread of our meaning-matter universe.

In accordance with the opposing expert group's interpretation, millions of rubles of the Soviet state budget were spent producing multiple copies of nonexistent field generator dummies. Some saw in it a brilliant money laundering operation, some criminal unprofessionalism. Amidst hot debates, experts had to reach the compromised definition of psychotronic warfare pragmatism. Functionally, psychotronics was subdivided on psychological and enio- or bioinformational warfare. Both of them are relatively close to each other because they are based on related studies and share many research objectives. Thus, it was agreed to understand the term, psychotronic warfare, as military exploitation of bioinformational technologies and its technological reinforcement complexes.

Migrating under varying ideological pressures, pioneers of psychotronics had to switch from one scientific field to another collecting integral expertise, usually in three to four scientific disciplines. Psychotronic research, therefore, was interdisciplinary by definition.

What the State Defense Committee expected psychotronics to become was slightly more pragmatic: a principally innovative weaponry based on the high velocity psychoinformational programming generator complexes.

As a related weapon system, ray weaponry was defined as the system of weapons based on the powerful sources of electromagnetic, acoustic, laser, and other types of energy generators. The first devices were quite simple: the emission was used to destroy this or that system in the human body. The ensuing development produced more sophisticated results: the ray of energy was modulated in accordance with certain biosystem parameters which impose irreversible transformative regimes on the system. For example, the generation of ultrasound frequencies which resonate with the oscillation patterns of inner organs, cause acute pain and can result in lethal injuries.

In the beginning of 1992, a group of scientists from the Rostov Medical Institute and the Biotechnology Research Institute, directly associated with psychotronic programs, put forward a petition demanding the elimination of the use and production of psychotronic generators. These institutions had at least a decade of experience of research in the sphere of the alteration of biological tissue resistance under the conditions of co-axis influence of electromagnetic and high frequency radiation. In practice, the application of their research, which made them shut down any further investigation, was the possibility of the remote manipulatory access to the structuring level of the environments of human organisms.

One of the main principles of psychotronic technology is the correlation of human biological activity and the activity of a technological complex. As elements of the economy of abstract defense, psychotronic generators are characterized with the spatialization of concepts in the context of the synthetic neurosimulation of space. Thus, the space of references becomes the space of replication, forming the hyperreal complex of neurospatial material by binding the atoms of human perception and processing with atoms of technological data development.

Many sources name Kiev as one of the centers of psychotronic research. It was one location of a few state funded and independent research groups. Stahovsky-Beridze, one of the independent research leaders, devoted his research to the creation of a technological basis for the support and development of human interactions with weak ecological planetary environments. To the same extent that this man was a genius, his son was an unlucky salesman: after the death of his father in 1982, at the age of fifty-two, which it was claimed had been caused by the extensive use of his machines, Stahovsky-Beridze jr. was desperately trying to sell his father's revelations. In one of those attempts he visited my Kiev apartment. He had a video tape with him where the medical advantages of his father's generators were documented. When I switched on the video, he excused himself and rushed out of the room. As he explained later, according to his father's notes, electronic TV tubes negatively influenced the human body which was previously affected by his generator.

The marketing problem of Stahovsky-Beridze jr. made me first think about the enormous gap between what we call economic production and what it recently has become in light of bioinformational technology. His father's explanatory notes were something between an electronic scheme, absurd poetry, and transcendental comic strips. It was far beyond the limits of the rational discursive resources with which a conventional economy operates. It was negatively economically abstract. I let Beridze jr. go without comments: anyway, his plan was desperate.

However, the generator itself was approbated by several medical institutions and proved to facilitate the treatment of cancer. Another research center investigated the effect of the Beridze-Stachovsky generator on growing seeds: positive results were detected.

Beridze-Stachovsky investigated the absorption of the energy emitted by his generators on the proton level. Through the method of nuclear magnetic resonance, he detected a change in the level of energy of the affected hydrogen nuclei. One of the participants of the research group volunteered to test this generator on herself. After several trials, she woke up in the night from excruciating pain. She described feeling as if every particle of her body was falling apart, as if every cell would turn inside out. She made it till morning. The effect was not studied further.

Another center for psychotronic research was The Institute of Material Research in Kiev. Within its experimental framework, there were programs of melted metal structural modification with the use of field emission. The center was working with the theory of spin fields (the same fields which were crossed out of existence by the opponents of psychotronics). According to this theory, all organic and inorganic objects acquire spin fields: the fields of rotation. As these fields are very weak in nature, they are usually neglected in the analysis of physical systems. However, it is possible to reinforce spin fields, by distorting the plane geometry of a physical vacuum with a certain form. In this case, spin fields can be registered with physical, chemical, and biological indicators. Spin fields resemble gravitational fields in their properties. For example, spin fields, cannot be screened practically. They can expand on substantial distances with a phenomenally small level of decay. It is considered that generators based on these fields can affect biological systems on the cellular -molecular level. In accordance with the institutional report, their test generator had a 40 cm active range. This was the main thesis that the director of the institute used in his defense against the accusation of being a part of the "inhuman psychotronic warfare escalation." However, by the time of his interview (around 1992) the materials affected by this generator were already going through final testing programs. The research group claimed that data already available let them foresee clinical applications of these materials for purposes of stimulation or sedation.

In conversations with independent researchers (who claimed to design defense generators which could neutralize natural and artificial field emission sources), many of them shared the opinion that there exists at least a dozen research groups which develop psychotronic equipment. Moscow, St. Petersburg, Tomsk, and Novosibirsk, among others, were named as active research locations.

In the course of its history, psychotronic warfare went through the following three stages: launched as research in the psychological transformation of "human system - socio/biological environment interaction," it very soon included the studies of technological reinforcement of psychophysiological transformation factors and concluded in the complex of bioinformational technology. A priori focused on neurological and perceptual modulation, bioinformational technology finds its roots in the very irrational soil of human thinking. Thus, the subject of psychotronics became a conceptual bridge which joined the first studies of paranoid reaction to the suggestion of electromagnetic devices with the technological research itself. Once Vernadsky introduced the notion of the noosphere as the higher transformative structure in relation to the biological substance of the earth, many started to look for the transmitters of hyperinformation. The abstract economy of neurosimulation began in the 20s, when there started to appear clinical cases with patients declaring that their bodies were destroyed by electromagnetic devices controlled by secret organizations. As one of the patients hospitalized in the early 20s describes it, "behind my ceiling there was a device installed which made me soak in electricity. "

In the 90s, electromagnetic paranoia was substituted with the pathological fear of bioinformational control. As one of the patients claimed, her head, heart, and dreams "were remotely controlled from the Men and Device Control Center (MDCC)." She was sure that her behavior and speech were completely controlled by transmissions which she received, directly, through her brain. "Their shift lasts about six hours. When they start, my teeth shake... I can't describe everything. Sacharov [one of the most famous dissidents V.M.] was also killed by the MDCC."

If we compare both cases, it becomes clear that electromagnetic suggestion plays a stronger role in the first case, while the second possesses a wider functional and referential frame of informational control. If we can evaluate the irrational input of technology, then it could be formulated as spatialization, as opposed to conceptualization of discourses, with the waves and transmissions acquiring a more meaningful position and shifting more to the center of the paranoid attention field, which becomes the center of the technoparanoic domains of mentality.

Finally, as an illustration, we can refer to an interview of Kalugin, ex-Major General of the KGB. He was asked if the concept of psychotronic warfare was familiar to him. Kalugin's answer (possibly due to his recent dismissal), the first in the history of the mass media's reaction to the psychotronic issue, was positive. He also mentioned that he personally knew researchers who had developed a behavioral manipulation technology based on this principle.

As we see, the economy of abstract defense interpenetrated many layers of Soviet society before this geopolitical monster perished. It came a long way from the microparadigm of singular vulnerability of the human system in the mid 20s to the macrolevel of antiepistemology and multipolarity of the 90s. The foundations of the micro paradigm, I guess, we can find in Kazamalli's Theory of Cerebroradiation Reflex, that he discovered in 1912. In accordance with the Italian research theory, during intensive psychosensoric activity, the human brain emits electromagnetic radiation, which can be measured and calibrated. For Kazamalli, this reflex was evolutionarily pragmatic, as it established the correlation between the human brain and ether. Marconi, a Nobel Prize winner and one of the founders of radio was involved in this research as a consultant.

As to the macrolevel, we can refer to Kaznachejev's research (although it occurred seventy years later) in the quantum interaction of cellular levels of biological structures and the research of the interaction between complex 1/F noise systems and its operators.

Among the founders of the psychotronic technologies in Russia were Margarita Telce (daughter of Dzerzhinsky, then the Director of the State Defense Committee) and professor Deluni. The main emphasis was made on the psychotropic effect on the basis of natural and synthetic drugs. But even back then it was detected that the speed of the human system transformation is substantially accelerated if the subject is simultaneously affected by high frequency electromagnetic radiation. According to the testimonies of Soviet political ex-prisoners, high frequency EMR emitters were used in the Vladivostok and Lefortskaya prisons, and the Orlov and Serbsky psychiatric clinics between 1989-90.

On January 31st 1973, in one military unit, an experiment was made which, if it were as widely known as CIA psychotropic research on soldiers, could have had an even stronger public resonance: it probably violated more than a dozen human rights conventions. The complex which was tested was Radiodream. The objective of the experiment was to investigate the influence of modulated electromagnetic radiation on a human system. The first testing program was arranged on the personnel of the 71582 military unit in Novosibirsk. The results were considered positive. In accordance with the researchers calculations, the Radiodream generator could be effectively used in the 100 square kilometer city, with all the inhabitants being affected by deep dream induction.

In the same way that after the multiple experiments with psychotropic compounds on civilians, as described in declassified CIA archives, many psychedelics were reutilized on an alternative community basis, Soviet experiments with psychotronic generators formed the technical and intellectual basis for a number of autonomous biotronic communities to sprout. One of these groups was formed by Faidish. It functioned on the basis of a psychoenergetic resonator, which Faidish describes as, "a kind of crystal structure composed of the lines of electromagnetic fields." Based on principles of dissipation, these generators formed a locus of approximately a seven square meter active range. Not a very big territory compared to that on which biotronic viruses can be deployed using today's electromagnetic environment of the net.

Another model of Faidish's community was based on a He-Ne laser dissipative structure. In his theoretical research, Faidish connects the concept of the neoarchetype with the concept of the strange attractor, which makes the dissipative effect possible. Thus, all concrete semantics are being erased from the realm of the biotronic mentality. This is the first step towards mental justification of overcoming the thermodynamic gap between neuro and technoprocessing: the chains of the senses are equalized in level, no concepts in biotronic mentality are possible unless they are constructed of the particles of neurospace, which implies that there can be no inner/outer (not even a simulation) border for a human system. This is where postmodern hyperreality ends without being actualized: it is censored out, neurologized. The community which performs the function of the censor in neurospace is more of an immune organ than a communal structure. The abstract economy of defense becomes revitalized with the immunity principle where people and technological complexes play the role of informational filters. In accordance with Kaznachejev, a leading Soviet expert in bioinformational technologies, psychotronic warfare can be defined as a military use of psychotronic technologies including their means, methods, techniques, and generators. It is also possible to define bioinformational or eniowarfare as related branches of military development. On the other hand, an essential definition of the subject of both is very ambiguous, which research experts usually explain as a symptom of the young age of the discipline. Regardless of their pragmatic infantile unpredictability, the results of psychotronic technological developments were introduced into mass production and military use because of their suggestive power. The result was not a jump to another coil of the military economic race, but the formation, on a material level, of a certain plane of bioinformational immanence. Basically, a net of objects and, eventually, a space was formed which was not always directly connected to brain activity, but possessed an ultraconceptual status: it was designed and modified to structure individual and collective mentality. It enabled the modulation of the selforganizing processes of the inner environments of a biological system, which had no points of reference in any legal systems in history. With its own instruments of control at the end of its existence, Soviet society, as a sociopolitical entity, was selfcensored out into the ultraconceptual storage of bioinformation. It was the point when biotronic hiatus coincided with social death.

Accidental Terrorism

Establishing a connection between a technological complex of a generator and the complex of a biological system, psychotronics, as a particular case of the abstract economy, makes a neuroturn in mentality, reinforcing negative mental feedback loops: so many discursive explanations of this phenomenon have already been found: existential vacuum, unpredictable turn, unification of discursive dimensions. All these theories reflect the fact that under the influence of a growing neurodimension, the mentality renders itself as an unnecessary appendix of the fusion of bio and technosystems, which forms a technocerebrum informational warp.

Another expert, Kholodilov, suggested that many researchers focus on the technological device and neglect the role of the human operator. He considered that the effect of the psychotronic generators is based on the interaction with a neurological system of the operator. The most important part of the psychotronic complex, as he continues, is a trained operator. A human system programs the psychotronic complex, and in accordance with its program, the same complex can be used for a variety of purposes. Kholodilov's point of view is shared by Schepilov, a member of the research team of the Eniotechnology Center in Moscow. In his view, psychotronic generators are technological systems based on the emission of weak wave-type processes which interfere with neural and nervous activities. The role of the operator is to detect, calibrate, direct, and maintain this interference. Schepilov recalls accidents when the operators, as a result of a generator misuse, would fall into psychosis. According to him, numerous generators, which are currently available for military purposes, were specifically designed to harmfully affect respiratory, cardiovascular, and neurosystems.

In the end, sets of spin generators were produced and the basic elements for a synthetic plane of immanence were created. However, with the collapse of the Soviet Union, economic mechanisms which fed this abstract enterprise were destroyed. The funding was terminated on the very verge of creating a general technology of social manipulation. The researchers that lost their jobs in classified institutions launched independent centers and started to adjust their inventions to a free market economy: a friend of mine with reliable sources told me recently that one of the most well known Moscow bankers was killed via his telephone by an electromagnetic impulse. It may, of course, be a rumor.

By association with the research in psychotropic compounds and techniques, the 50s are usually considered to be an historical borderline, when the infrastructure of underground science was finally crystallized. Since then, it has become quite a network that has adopted a great deal of contemporary psychotronic innovations. That is why a number of experts believe we should expect the appearance of unknown means of crime, both chemical and physical. Kaznachejev, for example, pinpoints the possibility that knowledge of the informational traumas of the biosphere can be misused by terrorist organizations.

As terrorism is always a transgression of locality, it always exists between two countries, two places, it needs a confrontation to be alive. The net is more than a favorable environment for any kind of abuse because it transgresses locality by definition. However, the most probable form of digital abuse, the accidental, implies that if regarded as active transformative factors, spontaneous or intentional (it is impossible to find out post factum), biotronic formations can create both positive and negative feedback loops within the environment of a global computer network. The establishment of a priori disintegrated agent, place, and means of action, leads to neuro-simulating accidental terrorism, which is now globally possible with the unification of local computer net standards. The process of electronic impersonization puts biotronic complexes into the role of real agents of actions and meanings. The theory of catastrophes seems to acquire another subject here.

In general, the elimination of maternal biotronic environments positions abstract economy constructs as parasites towards any other environment in which human and technological systems are correlated in perceptual and intellectual activity. Hypothetically, it can become a metavirus, a form of organism which parasite on hyperenvironments, only reprocessing the very matter which emerges between human perception and its reflected simulation in electronic space. Among the potential affected zones there can be mass media, communication system, remote control machinery, and informational networks. All of them have already a syndrome of reflected neuralization: for example, the growing exploitation of the 3D effect can be interpreted in this context as the neuroization of originally perceptually based media; computers simulate a trivial model of space by mirroring neural functions and letting the brain render its functional reflection and correlate its spatial processing along with it. There is always a parallel processing involved in neuroization, imaginary chains fighting for real spatial status. Forced into synergy via virtual parallel processing, the human brain can rely only on abstract representations which possess no immanent spatial reference, but refer to the ultraconceptual planes of human thinking, the operational dispositions of neurospace.

In the ex-Soviet Union today, psychotronic complexes produced independently often barely resemble their functional prototypes. For many it became a neofetish of the information age, the objects of power which can be the sparkles of neoreligion, or the viruses of the first neuroepidemy. The fusion of psychotronic and drug markets, which is happening now in Russia, results in a bioinformational and field narcotic movement. Generators penetrate society, appearing in offices, stadiums, TV broadcasts, etc.. There is only one explanation for it: a dead society acquires biotronic status, the new form of social flesh.

Society is no longer the mode of production, it is the mode of remote correlation of human systems, which includes bioinformational processing and related phenomena. It is obvious now that bioecological and bioinformational catastrophes can not be predicted without this type of knowledge. In this framework, nanotechnology research, which eliminates the thermodynamical barrier between a synoptical molecule and a computer chip, seems to be a reflection of the mirror type of bioinformational organization.

Vladimier Mushesky will soon publish a book on Russian Psychotronic Warfare at Autonomedia Press, New York

Humanity is today being subjected to massive levels and intensities of electromagnetic radiation and frequencies in its myriad of forms on a daily basis.

From televisions, radios, electrical appliances, computers, microwave ovens and cell phones to radio broadcast stations, cell phone towers, power lines, ELF and VLF (extremely and very low frequency) transmitters, space-based psychotronic arrays and even solar flares, Mankind is under assault from natural and artificial electromagnetic energy as never experienced before in human history.

Holy Scripture has revealed that Lucifer (Satan, the Devil, the chief fallen angel/cherub) is the prince of the power of the air. As electromagnetic frequencies proliferate on Earth, many new 4th and 5th dimensional "stargates" are sure to open for Lucifer's fallen angelic kingdom- 1/3rd of the heavenly host- to more fully integrate and externalize on in these last and evil days before the Judgement.

Amongst the psychotronic technologies and projects that have recently brought mind altering and mind controlling electromagnetic spectrum frequencies to the mind of Man include; the Russian Tesla Magnifying 'Woodpecker' transmitter near Kiev in the Ukraine (began July 4, 1976), H.A.A.R.P. (the High Atmospheric Auroral Research Project) based in Gakona Alaska USA, G.W.E.N. (Ground Wave Emergency Network) of -300- transmitter towers spread across the USA, so-called "non-lethal" radio, microwave, ultrasonic and acoustic ELF and VLF (extremely and very low frequency) generators and transmitters, a proliferation of hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of cellular phone towers, a global array of land, sea and space-based satellite systems using radiation, electromagnetic, sonic and laser technologies and energies, as well as the emergence of "Wi-Fi" clouds and hotspots (for wireless internet access) in many cities throughout the world.

The central rationale behind electromagnetic/psychotronic mind control technology is that it is a battle for the human mind.

Colonel John Alexander, author of the book, 'Warrior's Edge', and program manager for Non-Lethal Psychotronic Weaponry at Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico USA, has called it "the new mental battlefield". A small sampling of the list of books written on the subject of electromagnetic mind control include; Mind Wars, The Mind Race, Psychic Warfare, The Body Electric, Operation Mind Control, Psychic Dictatorship, Angels Don't Play This HAARP, Psychic Control of the Mind: Towards a Psychocivilized Society, Crosscurrents etc...

The arsenal of electromagnetic/psychotronic weapons used to manipulate, control and entrain the human mind are an integral part of the overall battle plan of the New World Order. The secrecy involved in the development and propagation of electromagnetic mind control technologies reflects the tremendous power that is inherent in them. To state it bluntly, whoever controls this technology controls the minds of all men. The technical capability to remotely influence 6.5 billion human brains with the sole intent of manipulating human behavior, the human nervous system, the human psyche, the thoughts, moods and mental states and health of the masses, constitutes a level of tyranny never before witnessed in all of human history.

Acoustic "psycho-correction", behavior modification, remote neural monitoring, psychic and biophysical warfare, brain-wave entrainment, bioelectromagnetics, subliminal programming, psychotronic mind control etc... are all the terminologies used to describe the insidious and invisible assault being waged upon the collective human psyche by electromagnetic technologies of the 21st century.

Brain wave manipulation from a distance using phased and pulse-modulated infrasonic and ultrasonic generated frequencies designed to control the very thoughts and feelings of a subjected populace is every dictator's dream come true.

Because the human mind is so sensitive and vulnerable to outside electromagnetic intrusion and has no natural ability to erect a "firewall" to protect itself, biowarfare on the mind may prove to be one of the most effective means of projecting power by the planet's privileged elite in their quest to establish a New World Order.

Beyond the planetary electromagnetic frequency weapons now in place and operating (Russian Woodpecker, HAARP, GWEN etc...), there are large arrays of ELF/microwave cellular phone tower grids being erected and already operating at the local community level in many areas. These towers are putting out levels of power that exceed all cellular phone requirements by a large margin, with the hidden purpose of exerting electromagnetic mind control influence over entire populated areas- specifically tailored to each community.

Men Who Control Psychotronic Weapons

According to the Scientific Committee that met at the Second International Congress on Psychotronic Research in 1975, psychotronics is “a science which, in an interdisciplinary fashion, studies fields of interaction between people and their environment (both internal and external) and the energetic processes involved.” The committee said that “Psychotronics recognizes that matter, energy and consciousness are interconnected in a way which contributes to new understanding of the energetic capabilities of human beings, life-processes and matter in general.”

The word Psychotronics is a combination of psychology with materialist science. "Psyche" stands for soul or spirit. "Tronics" associates the soul or spirit with modern technology.

Since this is true, then the men involved into 'peeping' into other people's private lives to 'study' them, especially without permission, is a violation of human rights. Everyone on this planet should be concerned.

What Psychotronics Was Made For

The original intentions of the men who promoted Psychotronics was to determine how the mind worked, and if there was a way to control the mind of another individual or group of people. Supposedly, this was meant for government agencies in matters of crowd control, more effective war, or correction of 'wrong' thinking.

A problem has arisen with the leaking of the technology to the public making psychotronic weapons available to any devious, creative mind.

The Minds of Psychotronic Men

Think about this for a minute. What is it like to look into the mind of another individual? To be able to see clear down into their soul or spirit? To be able to retrieve every memory stored in the conscious and subconscious mind?

In the beginning all psychotronic men did was watch. They became the Watchers of the World. With that forbidden knowledge came a disintegration of their spirit since they had to de-humanize the individuals they were studying. They were no longer humans - people. You and I. They were test subjects just like any other living species that science has used to test their theories on.

Are Psychotronic Capabilities Possible?

The answer most definitively is - YES! Almost every living thing on the planet is testament to that. One Internet website that sells a psychotronic product called the Brainwave Receiver proclaims this statement:

"Our goal is to develop new advanced technologies and concepts to reveal, and validate technology that has been suppressed over the past 70 years by big business, and big government."

"...Most of the various items we deal with are considered fringe or even a bit crazy by the masses. Our goal is to attempt to validate those items, and produce working models in order to prove their validity."

Inputs for psychosocial dynamics conducive to torture and ill-treatment report

Note: Kindly request confidentiality of my report

Date: 20th June 2020

Respected Sir/Madam,

This statement is with respect to the inputs requested for psychosocial dynamics conducive to torture and ill-treatment report (To inform the Special Rapporteur's annual interim report to be presented to the General Assembly at its 75th Session in October 2020)

This is an URGENT public interest petition to STOP the illegal and unauthorized abuses of advanced military-grade weapons that are being used for Torture Programs. Torture comprises of Mind-Reading, Mind control, Central Nervous System control, 24/7 anywhere tracking, Organized Gang-Stalking, 'Voices-To-Skull'('V2K'), Physical Injury/harassment through Directed Energy Weapons. This has been going on in India for past 15 years at least (I am getting attacked/tortured for many years now, Voice to skull started in 2016)

All these attacks are 'no-touch' / 'Covert 'and are remotely operated - and so leave the minimum evidence (if at all) thus making all available laws ineffective and powerless to help the targeted innocent civilians. The people targeted and subsequently tortured systematically are termed as 'Targeted Individuals' (or 'TIs'). There are several hundreds of 'TIs' defending and fighting for justice in India and globally across many countries now.

1. TOTAL SURVEILLANCE, MIND-READING, BODY-MIND CONTROL, DREAM MANIPULATION - USING NEUROWEAPONS - REMOTE NEURAL MONITORING MODULE ('RNM') - Using this, harassers can view ALL the innermost thoughts of the targeted person on a screen - as clearly as one reads a newspaper. The eyes of the target become a live camera for the trackers. Whatever the targets view is recorded on the trackers' computer or viewed by the trackers' brains using a brain-to-computer interface (BCI) / Brain-to-Brain interface (BBI)! These satellite-based technologies result in gross by-passing of fundamental human rights such as personal privacy, health, safety, data security, family security, etc. Pre-packaged dream sequences are routinely downloaded to TIs' brains and harassers interact with the victims while they are dreaming. Stressful traumas/shocks are also induced via artificial dreams (completely wirelessly - without any chip implants, electrodes etc.)

2. INVISIBLE PHYSICAL HARASSMENT: DIRECTED ENERGY WEAPONS ('DEW'): Any of our body-parts can be targeted and attacked by these directed energy weapons. These weapons may use Microwave/EMF/ELF waves and can cause a wide range of diseases including cancer, heart failure, kidney disease, vertigo, hands/legs paralysis, internal decay, memory losses to name a few - all at the touch of a button from anywhere, traceless - just by using the unique 'brain fingerprint' (brain frequency) of any victim anywhere. Also, many fatal heart-attacks/palpitations that struck the victim when asleep may have been induced / catalyzed by these weapons

3. DISRUPTION OF THOUGHT FREEDOM BY 'VOICE-TO-SKULL' ('V2K'): This patented technology is also known as 'Microwave Hearing' / 'Synthetic Telepathy' / 'Voice-of-God weapon' and is being used for traceless mental harassment. Using this, the harassers beam-in abusive voices directly into skulls of the Targeted Individuals by-passing their ears. Harassers interrupt and censor the victims' normal thinking when travelling anywhere in society by beaming in abusive voices into the victim's head constantly - hence spoiling work-tasks completion. (Victims also get wrongly labeled as mentally-ill when reporting about this, not many are aware about novel neuro/electromagnetic/bio weapons and its capabilities)

V2K is also used for Deception (causing confusion by beaming voices inside skull in-between talks when TI is talking to other people) and Impersonation of voices of close persons (whenever close persons are talking to TIs, these perpetrators intertwine their own voices along with the close persons voices by a technology named 'EEG Heterodyning')

TOTAL LOSS OF PRIVACY: Surveillance is usually carried out first unannounced secretly for years - without the targets ever being able to detect that their innermost details had been collected and stored - and that their own eyes themselves are made to act as cameras giving the latest details about themselves and the places and persons they visit. These devices are suspected to be authorized to access government satellites and are linked to supercomputers for data analysis and harvesting purposes. Victims have no privacy anywhere on the planet (bathrooms and bedrooms included).

HARMFUL EFFECTS: The targeted people's physical health, hygiene, peace of mind, career and social credibility, family, friends and other relationships - all these get seriously downgraded and systematically made to fade out via the above torture program. A primary goal in these 'slow-kill', 'no-touch'/'soft-kill' programs is to remove TIs from the job workforce - so that they are in range at home for longer times to facilitate more testing, refining of weapons and for training more operators and neural programmers. The combined impact of all these together - physical wounds, 24x7 psychotronic warfare, career systemically made to vanish IS DEVASTATING to TIs, to say the least.

WORLDWIDE ISSUE: Dr. John Hall, M.D. (Doctor and Author, USA) who has analyzed the above phenomenon personally - calls this as 'Satellite Terrorism' and the greatest threat to humanity as a whole in the near future.

Finally, there are hundreds of victims in India currently and many hundreds across the world as well [REDACTED] - as long as the public are unaware of the above secret surveillance on mass scale by these secretive operators, more innocent civilians could be targeted in future as well. All these NO-TOUCH torture with Directed energy weapons and Voice-To-Skull are remotely-controlled. Thus, this full protocol (Organized Stalking & Electronic Harassment - 'OSEH' in short) leaves the least physical evidence of any wrong-doings and has become strongly prevalent inside many nations. This leaves us with a very rudiment question of a dignified human life, What is more worse in this world than your body, brain and mind getting hacked and harassed covertly and illegally?

We humbly request UNHRC to take due cognizance of the above issue and include all non-consensual experimentation /covert torture programs of these remote monitoring/influencing systems and weaponized technologies as severely punishable human rights violations and a life threatening Cyber-Crime, which needs urgent investigation, legislation and MOST IMPORTANTLY due justice given for Targeted Individuals who are severely affected by this NO-TOUCH torture perpetrated by covert criminals. Also request world countries through UNHRC, to safeguard our dignity to human life with immediately stopping this crime, provide monetary compensation for the loss of productive life and provide MIL-grade shielding which will protect us from getting attacked by such energy weapons!

PLEASE REFER the below sources for Proof of existence of such weapons:

When neuroscience leads to neuroweapons

https://thebulletin.org/2016/10/when-neuroscience-leads-to-neuroweapons/?fbclid=IwAR3IB00SHKaOM56SsQJ2xdyiqXN7UD0cZPf_xJ7vVbdBLsokDj0Dt-K0sLo

US army developing synthetic telepathy

<https://timesofindia.indiatimes.com/home/science/US-army-developing-synthetic-telepathy/articleshow/3596708.cms?fbclid=IwAR2kun6TsipA73-7b6bASjpajH1FBW9pheQKdfXzHZ6ptvh7mzXN6eNLAYl&from=mdr>

Spooky mind reading technology

https://www.deccanchronicle.com/nation/current-affairs/200519/spooky-mind-reading-technology.html?fbclid=IwAR01Gt-BmNZ1C7iucj81jyRh1DGWm9qmy6RYdOppYmQpBv8kvU7FZY_-D7Q

From Psyops to Neurowar: What Are the Dangers?

http://web.isanet.org/Web/Conferences/ISSS%20Austin%202014/Archive/b137347c-6281-466d-b9e7-ef7e0e5d363c.pdf?fbclid=IwAR3_XOP5zWglgNmbOE0J85LBqf0NDljcA5Gw5lmqlraR68yDQy497c3BVn4

Weapons of perception: neuroscience and mind-controlled weapons

<https://www.army-technology.com/features/featureweapons-of-perception-neuroscience-mind-controlled-weapons-and-the-military/>

Note: Kindly request confidentiality of my report

-----End of Report-----

Manual For Organized Gang Stalking Operations.... FBI's COINTELPRO, Operation Gladio, NATO Stay Behind Armies, and Ongoing Global U.S. Military "Unconventional"/"Civil-Military"/"Psy-War"/"Information War" Operations

Chapter 18 Overview of Harassment Methods Used By (FBI's) COINTELPRO, (OPERATION) GLADIO, Covert Community Recruits and Stay Behind (Armies): (OR "Instruction Manual for Community Gang Stalkers")

From Dr. Rauni-Leena Luukanen Kilde's "Bright Light on Black Shadows"

ETK Instruction: I have reproduced Dr. Rauni Kilde's chapter 18 here because it is an instruction manual for community gang stalkers. These same techniques, and perhaps this same manual, were evidently also used in the FBI's COINTELPRO (counter-intelligence program) and Operation Gladio/Stay Behind Operations in Europe between about 1950 and 1990. They also accurately describe the U.S. Military-Intelligence's ongoing, global gang stalking operations as documented in "New World War: Revolutionary Methods for Political Control" by Mark M. Rich (2011). All these top-secret operations went on, officially undetected, for decades; Gladio/Stay Behind functioned secretly and illegally throughout Europe for four decades, when it was exposed in 1990 by Italian Prime Minister Andreotti. Shortly thereafter, the European Parliament made a resolution condemning Gladio (see Appendix 1), but acknowledged that it may still be operational!

Like American author, Gloria Naylor (see her book, "1996"), and countless others, Dr. Rauni Kilde was a "Targeted Individual" (TI) for decades. She was harassed, defamed, tortured, and eventually, on Feb. 9, 2015, murdered in this program.

As neither Dr. Kilde nor her publisher were/are native English speakers, there are minor grammatical errors in the text. To make the text read more smoothly, I occasionally add additional words, which I place in parentheses.

In her book, Dr. Kilde does not specify where she obtained this instruction manual or who authored it. However, as Chief Medical Officer for Northern Finland, she was an “insider” who was invited to many open and secret conferences. Her husband was also a political insider. Thus, she was privy to top-secret documents. Doubtless, she does not divulge the author(s) of this document in order to protect her informant(s). I note that many phrases and spellings are peculiar to the British form of the English language. This could reflect Dr. Kilde’s spelling and usage patterns. OR, it could reflect the fact that the original document was written by British military-intelligence operatives. If so, we may speculate that it was authored by an individual or group associated with the Tavistock Institute of Human Relations, which grew out of the Psychological Warfare Division of the British Army at the close of World War I and has, for decades, been the world’s “brainwashing center.”

Regardless of its exact authorship, this is an extremely important document that should be read and understood by all “targets.” Clearly, this is a manual for psychological warfare that presents the methods by which an extremely complex military-secret service hierarchy surveilles, punishes, “neutralizes” and ultimately murders its designated “targets.” There are obvious comparisons to be made with the CIA’s KUBARK torture manual, which has been employed in Vietnam, Latin America, the Middle East, and indeed, in CIA “black sites”/“extraordinary rendition” centers throughout the entire world. The psy-war system described herein bears a remarkable similarity to the operations and procedures of the U.S. military’s “Fourth Generation Warfare”/“Civil-Military Operations”/“Military Operations Other Than War”/“Unconventional Warfare”/“Asymmetrical Warfare”/“Psychological Warfare” and “Information Warfare” operations as detailed in Rich’s “New World War: Revolutionary Methods For Political Control.” (See Appendices 2 and 3 for a comparison of key terms in each program.) Indeed, the systems are identical.

The remarkable revelation provided here is that modern organized gang stalking operations are identical with, or nearly identical with, those used in the FBI’s secret COINTELPRO (counter-intelligence program) of the 1950s-1970s, the top-secret “Gladio” and other “Stay Behind Army” operations of Europe between 1950 and 1990, and the destabilization and citizen-elimination operations now being carried out in the name of “counter-terrorism” by the U.S. military in approximately 140 of the world’s 195 nations (see The World is the Battlefield, US SOCOM Involved in 134 “Counter-Terrorism” Wars). Thus, we can properly understand the global organized gang stalking operations (which I refer to as GOG’s NeW GESTAPO for Global Organized Gang Stalking Neuro-Warfare Groups Electronic Slavery, Torture and PsyOp Operations) as a major component of the phony Global War on Terrorism and the “Full Spectrum Dominance” strategy of the Anglo-American-Israeli Empire. Welcome to the New World Order Antichrist-fascist-communist totalitarian police state in which the “battlespace” is the entire world and “you” are the enemy.

Further details regarding the advanced technologies now being used in covert global Organized Stalking/Electronic Harassment operations are provided in Appendix 4 (from Total Individual Control Technology by Ominsense.

Dr. Kilde's Chapter 18 text is followed by these appendices:

Appendix 1: Key words and phrases, taken directly from this manual.

Appendix 2. Key terms from Rich's "New World War: Revolutionary Methods For Political Control" (2011). (ETK comment: Note that the terms, definitions, military documents, laws, and patents provided by Rich prove the existence of the operations described in Kilde's "manual."

Appendix 3: European Parliament Resolution On Operation Gladio

Appendix 4: From Total Individual Control Technology by Ominsense

1. GENERAL

Operations in general are of the "active surveillance" type. Passive surveillance is watching a target covertly, to obtain information about the target. Active surveillance can include information gathering, but it (also) includes the agent making the target aware they are under surveillance. Beyond active surveillance, agents perform acts to keep the target uncomfortable, around the clock. Although operations are silently approved of, and covered for by the official justice system, (they are not) seen as criminal in nature by citizens who do not have a strong sense of right and wrong.

Agents must take great care that each and every act of punishment is DENIABLE. This means that should the target complain to police, (or) any other officials, or friends, neighbors, family members, or doctors, the nature of the punishment must be seen as the target's "overactive imagination" or better yet, an indication the target is mentally ill.

(The system) has worked for years to recruit the medical establishment to help maintain deniability, and today, most targets (are) immediately labeled as mentally ill and often forced onto anti-psychotic medication when they complain. But their agents must still do their part skillfully (to) perform acts of punishment, so (that) almost anyone the target complains to will deny a crime against the target has taken place. As an agent, you will be trained in how to do this.

(The system) has been blessed with advanced technology which enables heavy punishment at times the target is in their home, silently, through walls, and this is very deniable. Agents must pass their initial training and demonstrate a high level of commitment to maintain community safety, and the ability to operate deniably, before they will be considered for advanced electronic punishment training. Electronic punishment training is beyond the scope of this manual.

The organization is very fortunate in that we have been able to recruit top specialists to back up field operations people. Psychologists are the key to find(ing) ways to maximize feelings of stress and hopelessness in the target, and degrading the target's health, from many individual "minor" invasive punishment acts. Technician's in all fieldstelecommunications, electric power, building electrical and alarm systems, and utility employees in all fields use their positions to inflict many absolutely “normal-looking” problems on targets on an ongoing basis. And of course, the services of many skilled locksmiths are invaluable in this. As a community-based agent (CBA) you will have the privilege of working with a team capable of delivering better “justice” than the official system.

2. SURVEILLANCE

Surveillance is the foundation of all operations. Both community-based agent (CBA) visual surveillance and advanced electronic surveillance are used. This chapter will cover only local agent visual surveillance. Your local lead agent will schedule surveillance watches for each target in that community. Every target will have at least one CBA watching them (at) all times, even while at home and asleep. Each CBA surveillance team will be given a cell phone number for reporting target actions and movement to the local Control Center (CC).

Actions to be reported include, but are not limited to:

Target turns lights on to start the day.

Target uses toilet or shower

Target exits residence

Target drives away

Target arrives at work, or

Target shops or visits any other establishment or location.

Target arrives home

Target eats meal, at home or in restaurant

Target engages in sexual activity

Target turns lights off at the end of the day

Target turns light on in the middle of the night

Target travels out of town

Some of these observations will be performed by the Electronic Corps (EC), but CBA's should attempt to make and report as many detailed observations of target activity as possible. The reason such detail is necessary is that the punishment phase of active surveillance requires that supervisors customize each punishment action to match the personality of (the) target, and the need to make each punishment action appear to be “life's normal breaks.”

One important punishment function of surveillance is to sensitize the target. Targets are never told they are under surveillance or being punished. Instead, close, active surveillance and other activities, happening far too frequently to be written off as “life's normal breaks,” will eventually cause the target to realize they are under surveillance and punishment.

As a community-based agent (CBA), you will be given specific instruction(s) on exactly when, where, and how to carry out punishment actions. As long as you carry out punishment instructions exactly as given, there is no way the target will be believed if they complain, and you will not be exposed to risk of action by law enforcement.

How well the punishment actions work depends on how accurate and complete your reports are in many situations(. The) Control Center (CC) acquires access to properties or apartments immediately next to the target's homes or apartments. Because EC (Electronic Corps) has through-the-wall surveillance and punishment equipment, they will be reporting target activity along with community-based agents. In a typical setup, CBA's may be posted in a parked car where the target's home or apartment can be observed overnight, for example.

In this setup, the CBA in the car may be instructed to call, using walkie-talkie-style cell phones, another CBA (or team) waiting or patrolling by car nearby to follow the target, or, you may be assigned to follow the target yourself. You will receive instructions from your local center as to following the target.

Targets in transit may be either covertly or visibly followed. When in doubt, hang back a bit, and contact the center for instructions, as targets in transit can present many unanticipated situations. The Center will always have the target's position monitored, so if a target gives the CBA the slip, it will assign other appropriate community based agents to pick up the target at the earliest opportunity. Be sure to notify (the Control Center) immediately if you lose the target.

When applying the visible following of a target, making the target uncomfortable because of your presence, you will be given instructions as to when to break off the following. Another CBA or CBA team may pick up the visible following, but once you have broken away, they advise that you are clear and ready for the next assignment.

3. INTERCEPTS

Intercepts are where community-based agents (CBA) will appear to "just coincidentally" cross paths, on foot, with the target. Once the target has been sensitized to the point of realizing they are under surveillance and punishment, they will recognize, and be made appropriately uncomfortable by, the simple act of multiple CBA's "just happening to" cross paths with them.

Your local control center will instruct you as to how you will be cued to perform an intercept. Often you will have an on-site supervisor (OSS) position you, and give you hand signals as to when to start your movement to intercept the target. Because targets moving about aren't always totally predictable, the success of CBA intercepts depends heavily on the Electronic Corps who have means of monitoring the exact whereabouts of every target, and through computer programs, predict exactly when and where a target will be as they move about the community. Your local OSS has a special means of receiving instant, silent instructions for the Center.

1. Intercepting CBAs may be asked to perform one of the following forms of intercept:

2. Simple path crossing, requiring the target to take evasive action to avoid collision, multiple CBAs sometimes perform this several times during a single outing by a target.

On foot, walking for an extended period on the opposite side of the street from walking target.

3. Arriving at a place known to be a favorite of the target, and simply occupying that place just as the target is about to arrive (restaurants, parks, public facility seating, even bus seats are examples); sometimes just “hanging out” in such a location at times and places where people don’t ordinarily do that.

4. Smoking, coin-jingling, whistling, or toe-tapping near the target at a location where the target is known to need to stand, as to wait for the bus, or standing right behind a target at a water fountain.

5. A group, as many as a dozen CBAs, may be assigned to arrive at a store just ahead of a target, and form a queue ahead of the target, spending time buying lottery tickets, to delay the target. (The target) is very tired and eager to get home after work, for example, or in a hurry.

6. Community-based agents may be assigned to leave a next door home or apartment exactly the same time as the target, repeatedly. Alternatively, a CBA may intercept the target a short way before home and arrive at exactly the same time as the target.

While these may seem like trivial acts, keep in mind that the target will have these “trivial” things happen every single day, and repeated intercepts like these will force the target to always watch for such acts, essentially ensuring the target never “has a nice day.” This is the goal, to ensure the target’s punishment. Similar intercept operations are performed with vehicles. The Center can schedule these every day the target commutes, and both to and from work. Vehicle intercepts are particularly effective when the target sees the same vehicle in an intercept convoy both in the morning and in the evening commute. (Because vehicle intercepts can be dangerous, CBA assigned to vehicle intercept duty must successfully complete a special training course prior to actual assignment.) Here are some examples of vehicle intercepts a community-based agent (CBA) can expect to be assigned.

-Parking so as to prevent a target’s leaving a parking area, and then disappearing.

-Parking commercial vehicles often, near target’s home with something unusual about these vehicles, such as there is no need for that trade, or just unmarked white vans to make the target think the van is there to conduct surveillance.

-Simple following, or leading, a short distance, but every day. Doing this, both during target commutes and then other times makes the target very uncomfortable.

-Passing as side street stop sign, then stopping an uncomfortable distance into oncoming traffic just as target is about to arrive at the side street, causing the target to have to slam on the brakes (this requires Control Center assistance and prompting by walkie-talkie style cell phone.

-For a CBA vehicle convoy, boxing in the target during a commute, forcing the target to travel at a lower speed than the target wants to travel. In some locations, the Center will supply special license plates to CBA vehicles with short words which have special meaning to the target.

-For a CBA convoy, and where the target is at a location (and time) where traffic is normally very sparse, cause heavy traffic, forcing the target to notice.

The ultimate vehicle intercept is the staged accident. This can be dangerous and is only assigned to very senior agents. However, it is possible to stage an accident so only the target knows it was staged. This is an excellent means of punishment where a target has committed a serious offense specifically against secret services by revealing their criminality to the public. Generally, staged accidents are done in jurisdictions where police strongly support the operations, so that the CBA driver is protected.

4. PHYSICAL SABOTAGE

Physical sabotage is an especially effective form of punishment when it is carefully limited to low value items, below the value where police will take the report seriously. For example, burning a target's house down, or even stealing an expensive appliance, would bring official investigators into the picture, so that is not done.

Sabotage producing extreme safety hazards is generally not suitable for operations, because of the potential for bringing official investigators to an accident scene. So while damaging the brake system of a target's vehicle is not allowed for community-based agents (CBAs), draining some of the oil, transmission fluid or radiator antifreeze is allowed, but not all of it. The goal is to make it look as if the target is negligent in maintaining fluid levels, and generally not causing a catastrophic failure that non-targets might see as sabotage.

It is very important to apply punishment by way of a large number of small value sabotage acts, because that makes it look like the target is forgetful, exaggerating, or in some cases even delusional, if they complain about many cases of small value damage. The target's associates will simply refuse to believe that anyone but the target is responsible.

Sabotage is very important in that it lets the target know they are totally helpless to stop it, and can't even complain about it effectively without appearing mentally ill. (The) organization (is) very fortunate in that some people, hearing about sabotage from a target did the sabotage themselves, "to get attention."

Sabotage is applied at the target's home, workplace, and on their vehicle. This requires the assistance of locksmiths and alarm technicians. Your local Control Center will supply this help, and will bring specialists in from a distance in the case of rural areas.

Here are some examples of sabotage a community-based agent (CBA) may be assigned to carry out:

- Entering a vehicle, or home, and changing control and radio settings.
- Replacing window washer fluid with water, possibly destroying the system in winter.
- Scratching the paint on the target's vehicle, scratching furniture and valuables.
- Tire sabotage, from removing some air right up to slashing a sidewall if authorized by the Center.
- Simulating a break in electric window heater strips.
- Cutting off the 4-way flasher button.
- Removing substantial amounts of oil, transmission fluid or antifreeze but not enough to cause catastrophic failure.
- Moving things around inside the vehicle to show the target someone got in.
- Unlocking the vehicle and leaving it unlocked, possibly even with door open.
- Small cuts to car's upholstery.
- Unlocking the target's front or back door and leaving it ajar while the target is away, even at midnight at New Year for Y2 hour.
- Moving furniture or carpets around fairly frequently to show the target someone was there.
- Stealing low-value items, especially items like scissors which can be easily misplaced, keeping them until the target replaces the item, then return the missing item, often in a place the target checked.
- Stealing important papers, especially those which will cost money to replace.
- Stealing irreplaceable photographs.
- While target is at work, remove mail from their box and toss it around. Repeatedly making wall pictures crooked.
- Setting clocks to the wrong time.
- Repeatedly dumping consumable supplies (e.g. coffee) to make the target think they are no longer capable of managing their supplies well.
- Starting small rips in new clothing, which are widened on repeated visits.
- Ripping crotches out of the target's underwear, or stealing finest underwear, swim suits, etc.
- Replacing clothing with similar items which are too small for the target, like for children what target does not have.
- Ironing inside button flags over, making buttoning the shirt or top difficult.
- Carefully working the tip of a knife through seams in any air mattress or cushion the target may own, including replacements, on a daily basis.
- Breaking zippers in clothes and bags, perhaps by pulling out a tooth or two.
- Shoving a knife through the soles of waterproof boots.
- At work, removing screws from the target's office chair, or at home dinner table leaving only one screw of four, left to tilt the table with china.

- At work, damaging or destroying (if not extremely obvious) a target's work from a previous day, (for example), the computer is broken again possibly worse.
- At work, replacing current copies of computer files with an older copy- particularly serious if target is a computer programmer.
- At work, where some employees are or can be recruited to be community-based agents, set up "mistaken deliveries" of heavy goods which block the target's office.
- At work, if the target is responsible for parts of the operation which can be sabotaged, do so repeatedly just as the target starts eating lunch, or is about to leave for home.
- At work where the target is responsible for materials (that) can't be locked up, sabotage or with special permission from the Control Center steal the material.

Thefts have to be carefully considered and authorized by your local Center, unless you have authorization, do not steal. One particularly effective type of theft is to remove small value, but often used items from the target's premises. Once the target has been observed purchasing a replacement, the item is returned. This not only causes the target to spend money uselessly, (it also) imposes a feeling of total helplessness on the target.

5. SABOTAGING THE TARGET'S REPUTATION

Sabotaging the target's reputation- and all that goes with it, such as ability to earn a living, business and personal relationships- is a very special operations category. Newer community-based agents will not be assigned to "engineer" the method, but will assist in passing "rumours," which are the main means of destroying a target's public image.

"Rumours" consist mainly of lies. However, in order to secure cooperation of specific members of the community to participate in the punishment phase, additional information keyed to appeal to the patriotic or community service sense of such community members may be used as well. As mentioned earlier, the organization has many top psychologists and psychiatrists on permanent staff at headquarters, and some in larger population centers. It is their responsibility to design the campaign to destroy the target's reputation.

These people listed below can be approached and given information which will cause them to make the target's association with them uncomfortable, or break off all contact with the target.

- Business contacts.
- Supervisors.
- Co-workers.
- Casual social contacts, such as clubs a target may be a member of, or a group that frequents a bar where the target is a patron.
- Friends.
- Local fraternal organizations- they are motivated by the public service, and are an excellent source of assistance in keeping the target under surveillance, and participating in the punishment phase as well.
- Store staffs at places the target shops.

- Target's landlord.
- Target's neighbors.
- Tradesmen who are likely to service the target's home, car, or business.
- Bus drivers on the target's route.
- Local children.
- City employees, including emergency medical technicians, ambulances.
- Homeless shelter staff and residents where applicable.
- Family members (surprisingly, many are ready to believe negative information.)
- Especially, personnel at places the target applies for work.

How intensely (these sabotage operations are carried out) is governed mainly by the need to prevent the target from (learning) that the negative rumors are being spread. The goal is to keep negative information covertly flowing into the community, in such a way that those receiving the information aren't likely to tell the target. One might think that friends and family members would instantly notify the target and side with the target. Fortunately, experience shows that co-opting friends and family is surprisingly easy, once they are informed about the target's criminal record. The Headquarters staff have developed techniques which by and large prevent that, but those techniques are beyond the scope of this manual. Suffice it to say that it is possible to apply "incentives" which cause even people closest to the target to cooperate. These incentives are applied by specialists from our organization at higher than the local level. For the community-level CBA, the work of sabotaging the reputation of the target takes the form of simply carrying out instructions from your Control Center as to what you say to whom, how, and when.

6. DISCREDITING TARGETS

While the powerful silent support of operations by the justice and psychiatric systems has been sufficient to prevent the target from informing the public, the area of discrediting targets is an ongoing activity. Like sabotaging the target's reputation, discrediting their public statements, web sites, media appearances, letters to the editor and the like are done under the supervision of psychologists and psychiatrists on their staff. If a community-based agent (CBA) has a good track record of intelligently carrying out assignments, and has access to a computer, the CBA may apply to the local Control Center for assignment to discredit work. Excellent communications skills are required. Some of the activities CBAs carry out under supervision are:

- Monitoring message boards, Wogs, and open media like Indy media for target posts.

This is normally done in special shifts and under scheduling and control at a higher level than your local CC. This monitoring is assisted by blog scanning software which will detect and instantly flag posts relating to activities. The CBA doing this work will immediately reply with comments like "Someone isn't taking their medication" or "target name" has provided absolutely no evidence." The CBA will then report the post to higher level supervisors for possibly more detailed responses.

-Monitoring newspapers in your area for letters to the editor regarding activities. Most editors and many reporters have been recruited and are willing to assist in keeping the important work of monitoring and neutralizing quiet, but once in a while, a letter to the editor will slip through. In this case, comments like "Someone isn't taking their medication" are not an appropriate response. Transcribe and forward such a letter to the editor to the supervisor, along with your proposed response. The supervisor may edit your response, and will assist in ensuring your response is printed.

-Your supervisor will have staff monitoring upcoming talk show appearances by targets. While most talk show hosts, even those somewhat sympathetic to targets, have received discrediting information and often will not host targets, some targets do manage to get on the air. In this case, your supervisor will assign you to call in to the show, and instruct you as to appropriate things to say, such as rebutting the target's claims, pretending to be a target calling and making "wacko" statements such as "UFOs are harassing me," or pulling the discussion away from real activities and to something like "media mind control."

-Agents who have excellent persuasive communication skills can be assigned, with careful coaching and preparation from supervisors, to pretend to be a target and get on talk shows known to air targets as the guest. These opportunities are great ways to discredit targets by talking about UFOs, things like black helicopters following you, foil beanies, satellites "parked" just above your home, and perhaps events normally considered "paranormal" like seeing (things that) appear and disappear. These discrediting topics must be a total surprise to the host, only mentioned after the show is in progress.

-CBA can "casually" describe the "odd behavior" exhibited by the target as a result of around the clock activities to the target's neighbors. The idea is to focus the neighbors' attention to the target's behavior, hinting that maybe the target is mentally ill. This is easy once the target has developed suspicion that "everyone is out to get" him or her.

It is a special "honor" for CBAs to be chosen for target discreditation work.

7. TRADE-RELATED PUNISHMENT

This section will give some examples of ways community-based agents (CBAs) with specific trades or situations in the community can apply deniable punishment to targets.

-Underground utility crews, where the management has been recruited, schedule messy, noisy maintenance at the target's home (or business if the target runs a business). This can include having the street torn up for extended periods, or repeatedly. Funding for unneeded work is available from headquarters. Taxi drivers can delay arriving when called by the target, especially when going to the airport.

-Bus drivers have leeway, in nasty weather for example, to stop one stop away from awaiting target and wait there for perhaps 5 minutes, ostensibly to "get back on schedule." This can also cause a target to miss connections with the next bus or train. This is especially effective when the target, exposed to bad weather, can see the bus waiting up the street for no apparent reason, or not stopping at all at your bus stop.

-Repair trades people can keep “getting it wrong” necessitating many recalls, be late, be messy, over-bill the target, and even damage things which were OK. This is especially effective in the automobile repair trade.

-Medical lab technicians can substitute blood samples, or otherwise falsify results making the target appear to have absolutely no reason for their complaints.

-Police can frequently pull the target over for frivolous reasons.

-Telephone and cable TV technicians can re-route legitimate calls to the target’s number in large numbers, and this will cause the target to get very angry with these totally innocent callers.

-Store staff where the target shops frequently can be instructed to remove items the target is known to need when a target is known to be coming. Store management can stop ordering a target’s favorite items.

-Restaurants and food delivery services can tell the target they are out of an item known to be a favorite of a target.

The key to successful punishment by trades people is that while the target is very likely to know they are being punished, these punishment acts must appear to the general public as “life’s normal breaks.”

8. TARGET’S HOME

Punishing the target at the target’s (home) is essential for effectiveness of secret service operations. If the target were punished in the community but was allowed sanctuary in their home, the creation of a “prison without walls” would not be complete. One of the very first things the Control Center (CC) will arrange is for homes or apartments adjacent to the target’s home to be occupied by both community-based agents (CBAs) and members in the Electronic Operations manual. Because operations are carried out 24/7 in shifts, homes and apartments which are leased or owned by staff are not used as dwellings. The lease or deed will bear either an entirely false name, or the name of a senior staff member whose actual home will be at a different location.

Some adjacent homes or apartments are occupied by neighbors of the target who have offered to cooperate in punishment of the target. The initial contact of neighbors to determine their willingness to cooperate is done by senior staff, and incentives to cooperate are often tendered. Here are some commonly used punishment activities which are carried out both by CBAs and cooperating neighbors of the target. Activities are rotated among the choices, but at least one of them is applied daily:

-Noise. Noise must be of a type which the general public deems “normal.” Remember that the goal is to have the target aware they are being punished, but not be able to convince anyone else that that is the case. Observe local noise curfews, but plenty of punishment can occur outside noise curfew times. The target must not have easy cause to involve law enforcement. Examples:

-Start leaf blower, times precisely when the target attempts to enjoy their yard, or when EC operators cue the CBA that the target is trying to nap.

-Loud music from neighboring home. This is an excellent action, as it is common. Time it so every time the target opens a window the music starts. The timing makes the point it is intentional punishment. EC operator can apply music in adjacent apartments with exceptionally powerful bass, directed at the target’s unit.

-Frequent squealing of tires near target’s home.

-In apartments, frequent drilling into a scrap of wood or masonry held against the target’s wall, floors or ceiling as if “working.” Alternatively, hammering. Especially effective when cued by EC operators that the target is attempting to nap.

-Tossing golf or tennis balls against the target’s home when the target is known to be trying to fall asleep. Ideal for cooperating neighbor children.

-Frequent use of sirens near the target’s home. Many emergency services employees have a strong sense of community service and willingness to cooperate in this, or by people posing as Jehovah’s Witnesses.

-Knocking on the door for frivolous/nonsensical/wrong address reasons. Especially effective when the target is in bed or having a meal.

-Trash. Leave trash in the target’s yard. Frequently, but CC staff will assist in scheduling this so that the target can’t quite have a case on which law enforcement will act.

-Terrifying the target’s pet. This requires entry while the target is away from home for an extended period and must be scheduled by CC. Electronic Corps (EC) operators can render a dog or cat passive for safe entry of the community-based agents, by electromagnetic beam.

-Wounding or killing the target’s pet. Rarely used, scheduled when the target has acted in a way so as to deserve special punishment, like divulging the name of a criminally acting secret agent.

-Killing domestic animals or wildlife and leaving them on the target’s doorstep. Scheduled when the target has acted in a way so as to deserve special punishment.

-Where the target owns substantial land, noxious activities can be arranged and built for next to the property. In one case, a dump, an auto race track, and a prison were built adjacent to a target who owned a large farm in an area of natural beauty. While this is rare, it does illustrate commitment to delivering punishment to those “deserving” of it.

-Cooperating police departments can visibly watch the target’s home. Possibly being parked in front of the home when the target returns, repeatedly.

Police officers who refuse to take complaint of harassment and sabotage of the target, who they label “disturbed” – really are NOT allowed to make diagnoses, as only medical doctors can do, but may get a raise- price- for their unlawfulness afterward. Police follow orders by e.g. Stay Behind, Secret Military-led organization, created by the CIA after WWII in NATO countries. They give orders in secrecy to police, media, legal system, and judges, etc. Thus, being above parliaments and governments as demonstrated, for example, in Norway when in 1957 the Chief of “Stay Behind” Sven Ollestad gave the security code of Norway to MI6 (British Intelligence) in the UK acting on his own! “We have to trust our allies,” he had said. Today, the security code of Norway is kept in Wales. Originally, Stay Behind was created with good intentions to fight communism. Today it is out of control, and a new, much bigger Stay Behind 2 is active in Norway. The Stay Behind logo resembles the NATO logo.

In Italy, Stay Behind was called Gladio 2 and dealt with terrorism secretly in Western Europe. It was responsible, for example, for the kidnapping and killing of Prime Minister Aldo Moro in 1978, while the blame was pinned on the Red Brigade. Today, enemies are communists and NATO (is the) opposition.

On November 22, 1990, the European Union forbade Operation Gladio, but although Norway follows most EU decisions, this one is omitted. Italy and Belgium had terror actions by Stay Behind, and when the organizations (ceased to exist, the terror operations also ceased to exist). In Norway, Stay Behind is called E14. What was its role in Norway’s terror actions, if any? Some have tried to get control of Norwegian Stay Behind (armies) already years ago. Who are the back men giving orders to those “officially” in charge?

The late Chief Medical Officer of northern Finland, and Targeted Individual, Dr. Rauni-Leena Lukanen Kilde

Appendix 1. Key Words and Phrases From the Organized Gang Stalking Manual Above

Key words to chapter 18.

Major operational components of organization:

-Community-based agent (CBA)

-Electronic Corps (EC)

-Electronic Operations Manual

-electromagnetic beam

-Control Center (CC)

-On-Site-Supervisor (OSS)

Field Operations People

- Psychologists/Psychiatrists
- Advanced computer communications systems and computer programs

Elements of (secret service) gang stalking operations:

- Surveillance is foundation of all operations
- Operations are “active surveillance type”
- Passive surveillance, watching the target covertly, to obtain information
- Community-Based Agents- CBA
- Every act of punishment is DENIABLE
- Advanced technology enables heavy punishment (when) the target is in their home, silently through walls.
- Electronic Corps (EC) members get specialized Electronic punishment training
- Advanced electronic surveillance
- This manual
- Field operations people
- Psychologists are the key to find ways to maximize feelings of stress and hopelessness in target, and degrading target’s health.
- CBA’s are given cell phone number for reporting target actions and movement to local Control Center (CC)
- The Center (CC) always has target’s position monitored.
- Electronic Corps (EC) has through-the-wall surveillance and punishment equipment
- On-site-supervisor (OSS) will give hand signals
- Computer programs predict exactly when and where a target will be as they move through the community.
- OSS has special means of receiving instant, silent instructions for the Center.
- Intercepts are where CBAs appear to “just coincidentally” cross paths, on foot or by vehicle with the target.
- The ultimate vehicle intercept is the staged accident... excellent means of punishment where target has committed serious offense specifically against secret services by revealing their criminality to the public.
- Sabotage lets the target know they are totally helpless to stop harassment
- Thefts must be authorized by local Control Center
- Sabotage of target’s reputation- is special operations category- done by spreading rumors, consisting mainly of lies. The goal is to keep negative information about the target flowing through the community.
- The organization has many top psychologists and psychiatrists on permanent staff at headquarters. Their job is to design campaign to destroy target’s reputation.
- “Incentives” are offered to get neighbors, friends, community members to cooperate
- The “Organization has powerful silent support of operations by the justice and psychiatric systems
- Monitoring newspapers for letters to the editor regarding these activities.
- Monitoring talk radio show appearances by targets.
- Repair trades people can damage items (cars, travel trailers, etc.) of targets and/or overbill targets
- Police can frequently pull the target over for frivolous reasons

-Punishing the target at the target's home is essential for effective secret service operations to create a "prison without walls."

Operations are carried out 24/7 in shifts

-Control Center (CC) will arrange for homes or apartments adjacent to the target's home to be occupied by both community-based agents (CBA) and members in the Electrical Operations manual.

-Electronic Corp (EC) operators can render a dog or cat passive for safe entry of the community-based agents, by electromagnetic beam.

Appendix 2. Key Terms from Rich (2011) and Equivalencies with Terms Presented in Kilde's "Manual For Gang Stalkers"

Terrorism- The US and its allies will terrorize the civilian population to achieve political objectives. The DOD stated: "Some IW activities, such as terrorism and transnational crime, violate international law. US law and national policy prohibit US military forces or other government agencies (OGAs) from engaging in or supporting such activities. However, since our adversaries employ terrorism and transnational criminal activities against the interests of the United States and its partners, these activities are included... as examples of the range of operations and activities that can be conducted as part of IW (Information Warfare)."

4GW – Fourth Generation Warfare- is a form of political/information warfare waged against civilians by a state or other entity. It utilizes civilians and the military, indeed all of society, to target civilian adversaries (aka "domestic state enemies," "insurgents," extremists, non-state actors, "cells of fanatics," citizen "terrorists") who value national sovereignty and/or pose some perceived threat to the state's interests. Anyone disseminating information contrary to the state's ("national security") interests may become an enemy. The goal of the New War is the psychological collapse of the new enemies using a combination of tactics. Defeating the new enemies involves the synchronized use of non-lethal directed energy weapons, isolation, deprivation, and PsyOps against individuals and groups (aka TA, target audience and TI, targeted individuals). 4GW is more or less synonymous with unconventional warfare (UW), irregular warfare (IR), asymmetric warfare (AW), low-intensity conflict (LIC), military operations other than war (MOOTW), and network-centric warfare (NCW). This new war involves international, interagency cooperation between the military, federal and local law enforcement, non-governmental organizations (NGOs), intergovernmental organizations (IGOs), the civilian population/private voluntary organizations (PVOs), and private government contractors. This multinational force (MNF), involving NATO (North Atlantic Treaty Organization) and the UN, is termed civilian-military operations (CMO). TI – targeted individual (insurgents, non-state actors (NSAs), dissidents, terrorists, asymmetrical threats, irregular threats, potential enemies, etc.)

Insurgents – those who try to persuade the populace to accept political change. The enemy does not necessarily use violence to promote social change. Their methods may be nonviolent. These are groups of individuals not under government control, against the established leadership, who will be targeted because of an action they might take in the future. These may include nonviolent protesters who are labeled as terrorists. They may 'wrap themselves in nationalism.' CMO – Civilian-Military Operations- combines military, federal agencies, NGOs, civilian organizations and authorities, and the civilian population. CMO is used in friendly, neutral, or hostile operational areas, including populated civilian areas in which no other military activity is conducted. It is used to deal with domestic threats in the New War. The controlling faction of these PsyOp/CMO activities includes the military, federal agencies, NGOs, regional organizations, and international organizations that work with civil authorities. (In the US, this means the controlling faction is FEMA, DOJ, CIA, and other federal agencies (FBI, DHS, etc.). Civilians are used as irregular forces. CMO are interagency and global in nature. In the US, they are used as part of Homeland Security.

CMOC – Civilian-Military Operations Centers- is established in the civilian sector for exchanging ideas. It may be a physical meeting place or a virtual one through online networks. Daily meetings are attended by representatives of the military, NGOs, the private sector, and local officials. Discussions at these meetings may include any ongoing campaigns against domestic threats in the area of operation. C4ISR- Command, Control, Communications, Computer Center that utilizes Intelligence Surveillance and Reconnaissance. Multiple interacting components of C4ISRs include battlespace monitoring, awareness, understanding, sense making, command intent, battlespace management, synchronization, and information systems. C4ISR centers can be mobile or stationary, or virtual, or strictly computer-based. Each military service has its own tactical mobile C4ISR system; The Navy and Marines use ForceNet, the Air Force uses Command Control Constellation (C2 Constellation), the Army uses LandWarNet and WIN-T. Each type of C4ISR system is connected to GIG (global information grid).

CR – Cognitive Radio- (a kind of JTRS, or Joint Tactical Radio System) that consists of a computer which has AI (artificial intelligence). CR is an intelligent device that is aware of itself, the needs of the user, and the environment. It can understand and learn. DARPA helped create CRs through programs like the Adaptive Cognition-Enhanced Radio Teams (ACERT), and Situation Aware Protocols in Edge Network Technologies (SAPIENT).

GIG – Global Information Grid- developed partially by the MITRE Corporation, has been called DOD's global C4ISR unit for netwar. It can quickly track down an adversary (target) anywhere on earth and attack them via DEW (directed energy weapons) and other forms of electronic warfare (EW). GIG uses existing commercial satellite and ground-based systems as well as GIG nodes such as aircraft, vehicles, and ships equipped with DR (JTRS). GIG is connected to all communications systems used by coalition and allied forces.

GWOT – Global War on Terror- use of 2nd, 3rd, and 4th generation warfare to achieve political/military objectives of the American Empire and New World Order.

IO – Information Operation- aka "cyber war," information warfare," network centric warfare (netwar, NCW) and command and control warfare (C2W).

In terms of activities of the internal enemy," official sources suggest the act of simply conveying information alone can be described as IO. In this case, it is usually waged by people within oppressed populations.

In terms of government/military use of IO, DOD defines IO as: "The integrated employment of the core capabilities of electronic warfare, computer network operations, psychological operations, military deception, and operations security, in concert with specific supporting and related capabilities, in influence, disrupt, corrupt or usurp adversarial human and automated decision making while protecting our own."

The 1999 "Air and Space Power Journal," in an article called "What is Information Warfare?" states: Information Warfare is any action to deny, exploit, corrupt or destroy the enemy's information and its functions; protecting ourselves against those actions and exploiting our own military information functions."

This new war is fought for political purposes and revolves around the issue of gaining the support and influence of the population.

IW- Information Warfare- According to US Military and Defense Contractors, the "new enemy" use computers, the internet, fax machines, cell phones and public media to advance their objectives. They use "information operations" to influence state forces with the population. Various publications term the act of transmitting information "netwar," "information operations," "information warfare," "information attacks," etc.

Professor George J. Stein in "Information Warfare," which appeared in Airpower Journal, stated: The target of information warfare, then, is the human mind.... The battle remains, the battle for the mind."

What all this means is that the New War is an information war.

IO – Information Warfare-

Infrasonic and ultrasonic weapons- Infrasonic and ultrasonic generators, also called emitters and VLF modulators, are weaponized devices consisting of a directional antennae dish which can send acoustic pulses to a general or specific area. In 1972 France was using infrasonic generators which operated at 7 Hz on its civilian population. By 1973, the British was using the Squawk Box in Northern Ireland. This directional weapon could target specific individuals by producing an audible sound at about 16Hz which turned into infrasound at 2Hz when it coupled with the ears.

In early 1990s, Russia developed a 10 Hz VLF modulator adjustable up to lethal levels, capable of targeting individuals over hundreds of meters, causing pain, nausea, and vomiting.

As far back as 1997, the US DOD has been creating generators in the infrasound and ultrasound ranges (7 Hz and 20-35 Hz, respectively) which can cause these same effects.

These weapons can target the brain, causing changes in brain chemistry which influence thoughts and emotions. Particular frequencies and modulations will trigger precise chemical reactions in the brain, which produce specific emotions in the targeted individual.

Infrasound- Occurs within ELF range from a few hertz up to about 20Hz, which is the lowest limit of human hearing. From 1 to 250 Hz the pain/damage threshold seems to increase with frequency as well as power. Frequency determines what kind of damage occurs whereas power determines how much damage occurs.

Infrasound easily passes through buildings and travels great distances. Natural examples include avalanches, earthquakes, volcanoes, and waterfalls. Whales, elephants, hippopotamuses, and rhinoceros use infrasound to communicate over great distances.... For whales, hundreds of miles. An electronic example would be a large subwoofer. Infrasound is thought to be superior to ultrasound because it retains its frequency when it hits the body.

From about 100 to 140 decibels infrasound causes a variety of biological symptoms. Effects include fatigue, pressure in the ears, visual blurring, drowsiness, imbalance, disorientation, vibration of internal organs, severe intestinal pain, nausea, and vomiting. Higher power levels can liquefy bowels, and resonate internal organs to death. It can also cause feelings of pressure in the chest, choking, irregular breathing patterns and respiratory incapacitation.

High powered, low frequency sound from about 30 Hz to about 100 Hz (just beyond infrasound) causes fatigue, blurred vision, bowel spasms, pain or damage to internal organs, feelings of fullness in the chest cavity, chest wall vibration, difficulty breathing, difficulty swallowing, choking and respiratory impairment. Psychological effects include loss of concentration, disgust, apathy, sadness, depression, fear, anxiety, and panic attacks.

Micro-wave hearing- aka “synthetic telepathy,” “Voice of God,” and V2K, Existing radar units can be modified to transmit a beam of pulsed microwave energy into a person’s skull which causes sounds like ticks, buzzes, hisses, knocks, chirps, and words. The sounds originate from within, above, or behind the head and are transmitted to the inner ear via bone conduction (thermal expansion). (Bone conduction is another pathway for sound transmission in humans and other mammals). There is no external noise. It can be applied from hundreds of meters away from a target using man-portable transmitters.

Dr. Allen Frey invented the technology in 1958. The transmitters use pulse-modulated waves at extremely low average power levels. In 1975, Dr. Joseph Sharp proved that correct modulation of microwave energy can result in wireless and receiverless transmission of audible speech.

NLW- Non-Lethal Weapons- have also been called non-injurious, disabling measures, immobilizers, strategic immobilizers, discriminate force, less-than lethal, pre-lethal, mission kill, new age weapons, soft kill weapons, slow kill weapons, silent kill weapons, limited-effects technology, neutralizing technology, reduced lethality weapons, low-collateral damage weaponry, etc.

DOD defines them as: “weapons that are explicitly designed and primarily employed so as to incapacitates personnel or material, while minimizing fatalities, permanent injury to personnel and undesired damage to property and the environment.... Non-lethal weapons employ means other than gross physical destruction to prevent the target from functioning.”

They include biological and chemical warfare, directed-energy weapons, communications warfare, information warfare (IW) and psychological operations (PsyOp). Other types include Computer Attacks and Weather Modification.

NLW are to be used in combination. The CFR states: “These weapons must be deployed coherently in synergistic coordination with information/psychological warfare technologies.” Similarly, NATO, in their 2004 and 2006 reports, “Non-Lethal Weapons and Future Peace Enforcement Operations” and “Human Effects of Non-Lethal Technologies” indicates that NLW should be used in combination to increase their effectiveness. The US Military states that the goal is overwhelm the target by attacking all five senses, plus motor and cognitive functions.

Neuroimaging Devices- Remote Neural Monitoring and Remote Neural Manipulation

NLW- Non-Lethal Weapons- have also been called non-injurious, disabling measures, immobilizers, strategic immobilizers, discriminate force, less-than lethal, pre-lethal, mission kill, new age weapons, soft kill weapons, slow kill weapons, silent kill weapons, limited-effects technology, neutralizing technology, reduced lethality weapons, low-collateral damage weaponry, etc.

DOD defines them as: “weapons that are explicitly designed and primarily employed so as to incapacitates personnel or material, while minimizing fatalities, permanent injury to personnel and undesired damage to property and the environment.... Non-lethal weapons employ means other than gross physical destruction to prevent the target from functioning.”

They include biological and chemical warfare, directed-energy weapons, communications warfare, information warfare (IW) and psychological operations (PsyOp).

PO – Peace Operations- the new war (4GW, IR, UW, etc.)- aka “peacekeeping operations” by the UN, are international, interagency missions to contain conflict, maintain peace, and form a legitimate government. Most are run by DPKO (Department of Peacekeeping Operations) of the UN. The US Army lists them as a type of MOOTW.

PolWar- Political Warfare- a translation of the German term, “weltanschauungskrieg” (worldview warfare), which means the scientific application of terror and propaganda as a way of securing ideological victory over an enemy.

PsyOp- Psychological Operations, a major part of the New War and a core part of CMO (civilian military operations) that is combined with EW (electronic warfare) and CNO. PO involve synergistic coordination of PsyOp, MILDEC, OPSEC, and EBO. PsyOp units work with the civilian population as irregular forces to attack target audience (TA) in the area of operation (AO). PsyOp operators profile TAs and TIs and devise themes to attack their TAs (target audience), which include TIs (targeted individuals). Ultimate goal of PsyOp is to modify the behavior of the TA by destroying their will using a relentless attack consisting of painful triggers. A type of audiovisual product known as PsyAct includes agents of action who carry out plays in the presence of the TA. Every single channel of communication the TA uses for information is interfered with.

PsyActs – psychological actions- aka “F2C”- are audiovisual products consisting of “agents of action” who deliver messages to a TA (target audience or individual). Agents of action follow a set of guidelines while “play acting” to deliver the messages. PsyActs usually utilize multiple people to transmit messages. Themes are presented in a performance similar to a play or movie production. (Hence, the term “surveillance role player”). Words like sets, props, performance, theatre, actors, cast, script, audience, etc. are used.

The military sometimes actually employs people from theatre actor guilds and modeling agencies. PsyActs can occur during rallies, rumor campaigns, group meetings, lectures, theatre, plays, speeches, dances, banquets, fiestas, festivals, religious activities, talks with individuals during interviews on talk radio shows, and other social activities. Messages may be subtly transmitted during these events. Agents of action follow general scripts that can be modified as needed. This type of communication includes “key words” or phrases spoken by the actors in the presence of the TA.

PO- PsyOp- Psychological Operations, – US Military states that the ultimate goal of PO is to modify the behavior of the TA (TI) by destroying their will. This is brought about by continually inflicting pain. This is accomplished by a relentless campaign used to demoralize the TI that will create perpetual feelings of intense fear and hopelessness. The DOD describes this as an “attrition-based approach:” “Attrition is the product or gradual erosion of the will. The victim of this psychological attrition gradually becomes convinced that nothing he can do will yield a satisfactory outcome to a situation.”

In PO, themes are used to transmit painful stimuli (also called triggers) through all his/her channels of communication which a TA (TI) has been sensitized to. Triggers/themes are understood at the strategic, operational, and tactical levels of the campaign and they are passed to various commanders of particular AO if the TA moves towards that portion of the battlespace.

The triggers are part of a behavior modification program called NLP (neuro-linguistic programming) which uses anchors and triggers to promote change. An anchor is created when an emotional state is linked to something such as an object, person, sound, smell, place, color, etc. Once the anchor is established, whatever the individual was exposed to during the anchoring process becomes the stimulus (trigger) that will provoke the emotion. So basically, PO is simply a series of “stimulus-response” interactions.

PO= aka or “information operations,” military deception (MILDEC), effects-based operations (EBO), neocortical warfare, political warfare (PolWar), and psychological warfare (PsyWar), aka command and control warfare (C2W), are a major part of the New War and a core part of CMO (civilian-military operations) that is combined with EW (electronic warfare) and CNO.

Po’s are a planned process of conveying messages to a target audience (TA) to promote certain attitudes, emotions, and behavior. These messages are typically conveyed using a line of persuasion known as a theme. TA (target audience) can be a group or an individual.

PO involve synergetic coordination of PsyOp, MILDEC (military deception), OPSEC (operations security), and EBO (effects-based operations). And they are in MOOTW, CMO, IW, UW, LIC operations such as counterterrorism and peacekeeping.

The DOD and CFR consider PsyOp a NLW to be used on civilians. PsyOp units work with the civilian population as irregular forces to attack target audience (TA) in the area of operation (AO). PsyOp operators profile TAs and TIs and devise themes to attack their TAs (target audience), which include TIs (targeted individuals). Ultimate goal of PsyOp is to modify the behavior of the TA by destroying their will using a relentless attack consisting of painful triggers. A type of audiovisual product known as PsyAct includes agents of action who carry out plays in the presence of the TA. Every single channel of communication the TA uses for information is interfered with.

In “gang stalking/electronic harassment,” PsyOp is synchronized with EW (electronic warfare with directed-energy-weapons), CNO (computer network operations), and all other instruments of national power. The battlespace is your neighborhood and the war is global.

Early PsyOp research was done by a small private network of think tanks, foundations, and academic institutions, which went into partnership with government agencies and kept most of the results of their studies secret. Some of the institutions that conducted these studies were known to be subversive. Thus, much of the modern PsyOp was built by a small group of private interests, using the social sciences to install a global government. Some of these are the exact same groups promoting the use of PsyOp on civilians.

RF – Radio Frequency Weapons

Rumor Campaigns- used by PsyOp units to isolate TIs. Primary elements include the source, the rumor, and the receiver-repeater (R2).

Similarly, the US Marine Corps document, “Multiple-Service Concept for Irregular Warfare” (2006) states: “frightening the population into inactivity is sufficient to (achieve) our goals.”

TPD – Tactical PsyOp Detachment- team of about 13 personnel with a captain and staff sergeant. It is comprised of several TPT (Tactical PsyOp Teams) and provides tactical PsyOp support to brigade and battalion-sized units in support of Special Forces. TPT conducts mission assessment, determines distribution priorities, and tracks the various products that have been distributed throughout the AO. All teams maintain contact with each other. And the TPD is in constant communication with other forces such as the TPDD, POTF, or TPT during the entire operation.

TPT- Tactical PsyOp Team- small group including team leader, his assistant, and a PsyOp specialist.

CNO- Computer Network Operations- aka NW Ops, or network operations/NetOps) are information warfare attacks used to deny, deceive, degrade, and disrupt networks and computers used by the enemy. These are used in conjunction with PO (PsyOps) and EW (electronic warfare). This includes destruction of hardware and software (degrading, attacking) and spoofing (deceiving). The battlespace includes the internet. Internet applications that can convey PsyOp messages include email, websites, and chat rooms. When a TI goes online, they are entering the battlespace.

Web spoofing allows an attacker to create a copy of the worldwide web. The Air Force mentioned that an enemy’s internet could be spoofed to conceal one of its weather attacks: “Spoofing options create virtual weather in the enemy’s sensory and information systems, making it more likely for them to make decisions producing results of our choosing rather than theirs.”

DEW- Directed Energy Weapons- used to damage or destroy people, equipment, and facilities, include microwave, millimeter waves, lasers, bright lights, holographic projections, and acoustic weapons (audible, infrasound, and ultrasound). These weapons are silent and traceless. They cause a variety of effects, including tiredness, dizziness, nausea, vomiting, abdominal pain, convulsions, epileptic seizures, temporary paralysis, vibration of internal organs, cooking of organs, cataracts, burning sensation on the skin, hyperthermia (heating of body), headaches, loss of short-term memory, interruption of cognitive processes, cardiac arrest, and cancer.

These weapons can easily pass through most unshielded structures.

In their “Electronic Warfare” publication, DOD defines DEW as: “DE (directed energy) is an umbrella term covering technologies that produce a beam of concentrated EM energy or atomic or subatomic particles. A DE weapon is a system using DE primarily as a direct means to damage or destroy adversary equipment, facilities, and personnel. DE warfare is military action involving the use of DE weapons, devices, and countermeasures to either cause direct damage or destruction of adversary equipment, facilities, and personnel, or to determine, exploit, reduce, or prevent hostile use of the EMS through damage, destruction, and disruption.”

DEW include microwaves, lasers, bright lights, holographic projections, and acoustics. The two basic types of DEWs include microwaves and lasers. (Wavelengths of lasers are about 10,000 times smaller than microwaves). Both are part of the electromagnetic spectrum. The two main types of microwave weapons are millimeter wave devices such as the Active Denial System (ADS) and the electromagnetic bomb (e-bomb, which is the emission of a non-nuclear electromagnetic explosion or pulse).

DEW travel at the speed of light, are surgically accurate, can operate in all weather, are scalable, are silent and invisible (offering plausible deniability), their energy can pass through walls at distances of hundreds of meters to miles, and have long distance projection (tens of miles).

These weapons are mounted on platforms which can be a missile, aircraft, ship, vehicle, suitcase, radio, etc.

Appendix 3. European Parliament Resolution on Operation Gladio, Nov. 22, 1990:
Wikisource on Answers.Com

On November 22, 1990, the European Parliament passed a resolution on Operation Gladio. Joint resolution replacing B3-2021, 2058, 2068, 2087/90

A. having regard to the revelation by several European governments of the existence for 40 years of a clandestine parallel intelligence and armed operations organization in several member states of the community,

B. whereas for over 40 years this organization has escaped all democratic controls and has been run by the secret services of the states concerned in collaboration with NATO,

C. fearing the danger that such clandestine network may have interfered illegally in the internal political affairs of Member States or may still do so,

D. where in certain Member States military secret services (or uncontrolled branches thereof) were involved in serious cases of terrorism and crime as evidenced by various judicial inquiries.

E. whereas these organizations operated and continue to operate completely outside the law since they are not subject to any parliamentary control and frequently those holding the highest government and constitutional posts are kept in the dark as to these matters,

F. whereas the various “Gladio” organizations have at their disposal independent arsenals and military resources which give them an unknown strike potential, thereby jeopardizing the democratic structures of the countries in which they are operating or have been operating,

G. greatly concerned at the existence of decision-making and operational bodies which are not subject to any form of democratic control and are of a completely clandestine nature at a time when greater Community cooperation in the field of security is a constant subject of discussion.

1. Condemns the clandestine creation of manipulative and operational networks and calls for full investigation into the nature, structure, aims and all other aspects of the clandestine organizations or any splinter group, their use of illegal interference in the international political affairs of the countries concerned, the problem of terrorism in Europe and the possible collusion of the secret services of Member States or third countries;
2. Protests vigorously at the assumption by certain US military personnel at SHAPE and in NATO of the right to encourage the establishment in Europe of a clandestine intelligence and operation network;
3. Calls on the governments of the Member States to dismantle all clandestine military and paramilitary networks;
4. Calls on the judiciaries of countries in which the presence of such military organizations has been ascertained to elucidate fully their composition and modus operandi and to clarify any action they may have taken to destabilize the democratic structure of the Member states;
5. Request all the Member States to take the necessary measures, if necessary by establishing parliamentary committee of inquiry, to draw up a complete list of organizations active in this field, and at the same time monitor their links with the respective state intelligence services and their links, if any, with terrorists action groups and/or other illegal practices;
6. Calls on the Council of Ministers to provide full information on the activities of these secret intelligence and operational services;
7. Calls on its competent committee to consider holding a hearing in order to clarify the role and impact of the "Gladio" organization and any similar bodies;
8. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Commission, the Council, the Secretary-General of NATO, the governments of the Member States and the United States Government."

9. OTHER TACTICS (Dr. Rauni Kilde)

There are other tactics which are not strictly part of the categories discussed so far:

- IMPORTANT: Community-based agents (CBAs) are strictly forbidden from adding anyone to the list of targets. Target selection is done by senior Control Center (CC) staff or higher levels.
- Punishment of people who side with and help the target. Friends, family members, and citizens who do not place a high value on community sometimes help targets. In these very specific cases, CC-authorized punishment in the form of individual acts against them is appropriate. The system can arrange for these target sympathizers to be found guilty of crimes, or liable for civil actions, for example. This is important for maintenance of the system.

-Target bank accounts can be disrupted in ways which do not give the target cause to involve law enforcement. Examples: target protection can be changed to “youth account,” or, an overdraft protection feature can be disabled, or simply steal money from the account. It is called action of “international banking ring” and usually at first the sums are around 50 – 100 dollars which are taken when the target pays small bills.

-Money is never transferred to the journal subscription or membership in a certain club like “opposition to government surveillance.” Money simply “disappears” from the bank with help of cooperating employers. I have experienced this myself several times. Bank accounts are “hacked” for the payment and a new bill arrives for the already paid bill by the target, and the receipt of payment is stolen. There is cooperation with military intelligence, Stay behind, NATO, and foreign intelligence agencies also against their own population. (This is the) so-called secret silent war going on in all secrecy.

Appendix 4: From Total Individual Control Technology by Omnisense

Organized Stalking/Electronic Harassment. The New Hi-Tech Generation of COINTELPRO

In a Nutshell: Government sources are using directed energy weapons and artificial intelligence to terrorize, threaten, intimidate, discredit, silence, torture, and murder dissidents. In addition, security contractors (among others) are being hired as military thugs to gangstalk targets[19].

Zerzetsen: “Inflicting as much pain and suffering as possible without leaving any marks.[20]” Directed energy weapon programs revolutionized this...

Counter-proliferation programs are intended to subvert the potentials of a target while punishing them with psycho-sadist techniques. The perversions of cointelpro are notable. The murderous and sadistic ethos of government counter-proliferation programs echoes that of the Nazis and this perpetrator network of war criminals are committing sickening acts upon the global population.

Modern Day COINTELPRO Objectives:

These are counter-proliferation centered programs intended to subvert all progress

To discredit the target / To character assassinate / To slander the target

To taint the target's image / To misrepresent the target

To suppress the target's monetary success

To suppress the target's good character qualities or people's awareness of positive aspects of the target

To arrange a partner for the target or mind control the partner of the target

To destroy relationships of the target

To co-opt the target's manifestation

To turn the target into controlled opposition (In terms of beliefs & actions)

To incriminate the target

To round down the target's output and audience – To marginalize the target

To eliminate connections & networking ability
To suppress the target's personality
Sanitization of pleasure, emotions, and individuality
To punish the target / To torture the target
To destroy the target's life
To stop a target from procreating / Ending a target's bloodline (Eugenics)
To suicide the target / To covertly assassinate the target
To cover up the targeting operation
"If they see too much power and originality coming out of someone, they either use it and siphon it or they undermine it in order to neutralize it." ~Ahmad Enani (TI)

COINTELPRO 2.0 Methodology:

Covert remote influencing technology suite
COINTELPRO 2.0: Thought surveillance neural AI net for psyche profiling COINTELPRO 2.0: Directed energy weapon mind control network for counter-proliferation targeting AI based retro-causation; Extensive international neural monitoring programs can calculate a target's potentials before the target is aware of them
Gangstalking / Organized Stalking
Trauma based mind control – No touch torture
Character assassination / Slander via proxies
Technological illusions (PSYOPS) / misdirection
Electromagnetic mind control aimed at discrediting the target
Mind control of people who provide opportunities for the target
Use of family against the target (e.g. Mind control of family)
Use of pharmaceutical drugs against a target
To orchestrate the detaining of the target in a psyche ward v2k to get a target diagnosed as a "paranoid schizophrenic"
Exaggerated, warped and untrue slander about the target is proliferated
Technology playing devil's advocate via implanted thoughts to get a target in trouble
Agenda to incriminate the target (Advice for COINTELPRO targets: Stay lawful)
Use of ego against a target
Weaponized mind control against a target
Coercing of a target into appearing overly paranoid (e.g. An objective of stalking)
Specific technological control of a target's body language or vocal tone (e.g. To generate mistrust)
Total individual control technology is used as a tactic to take away a citizen's rights through faulty mental illness diagnoses[21]
Outlandish black project technology experiences intended to discredit when spoken
Use of electronic control grid to mind control misfortunes for a target Synthetic social phobias ~ Synthetic social anxiety (e.g. Public speaker related suppression) Suppression of whatever platform the target is talented in (e.g. Music production, software design)

To dehumanize a target via electromagnetic neuroscience
Severe targets are sanitized of pleasure, emotions, and personality
Synthetic suicide programming
Technologically enabled serial killers with a taste for revolutionaries & activists

Electronic Targeting Holocaust

“While all these traditional tactics have proven fruitful throughout time without waning effectiveness, the agencies involved in extreme cover-ups prefer another tactic that seems to have withstood the test of time too. That is labeling someone “paranoid schizophrenic” or mentally ill. Once that label has been attached to someone, almost all testimony will be disbelieved. The military has employed this tactic since the 60’s to get rebellious soldiers and others locked up in mental hospitals. But since the weapons testing of neurological disruptor technology has begun on the general population beginning in the early 60’s and then stepped up to full throttle in 1976, the scope of what is considered mentally ill had to be reprogrammed into a broader definition for the general population.” ~Department of Defense Whistleblower: From the Out of Print Book – The Matrix Deciphered

“My name is Dr. John Hall, I’m a medical Doctor from Texas. As a physician, relative to some of what you’re hearing today, in the community we are seeing an alarming rate of complaints of use of electromagnetic weapons, microwave auditory effect, silent sound spectrum, EEG cloning,... Which has taken the lab out of the laboratory and into the home, most of these from the research that we’ve reviewed can be done remotely. It seems to be more weapons research than medical research. I’ve personally corresponded with upwards of 1,500 victims all complaining of identical complaints from every state in the nation. Of being exposed to electromagnetic radiation. Non-ionizing radiation. For the use of cognitive control or behavior control....” ~Anesthesiologist Dr. John Hall Speaking to the Presidential Bioethics Commission

“I am also targeted and this is my story. My name is Sandra Fields. I’m an architect, recipient of Who’s Who of Women in America achievement award and have run a successful business for over 28 years. My life and livelihood have been compromised for the last 11 years by being attacked by electromagnetic radiation torture, and by organized stalking... Thousands of Americans are currently suffering from chemical, electromagnetic, psychological and physical torture with no government relief or laws. Our servicemen, prisoners, and thousands of unknowing innocent civilians are currently being lamed, tormented and tortured as a result of military research, medical research, pharmaceutical research, physiological and psychological studies that have virtually destroyed participants’ sanity, physical well-being, reputation and privacy.” ~Targeted Individual Sandra Fields, Speaking to Obama’s Presidential Bioethics Committee

“What the governments found, was that you could induce by changing the pulse frequency like morse code of the microwaves going into the brain and interfering with the brain, by specializing on the pulse frequency you could induce psychiatric illnesses to the point where a psychiatrist could not tell if it is a genuine psychiatric illness or an induced psychiatric illness. So what you can do theoretically, is you can target an individual's brain, they may have auditory hallucinations where they hear things, which is actually quite common with microwaves. Or show signs of schizophrenia, for instance 6.6 pulses a second can induce severe sexual aggression in men. ... Technically what you could do is have someone committed to a psychiatric hospital or a jail for a crime, just by somebody saying that they had a psychiatric problem where by they didn't." ~Ex-British Royal Navy Scientist Dr. Barrie Trower

"They can cause insanity, and it was an experiment. One of the experiments was to take an ordinary sane person, cause insanity, and have a psychiatrist who was unknown to everybody diagnose schizophrenia, or paranoia or a psychiatric illness. That was a successful outcome. And the person would spend the rest of their life in an asylum in misery, but to the government scientists that was a success." ~Ex-Black Project Scientist Dr. Barrie Trower

"The war against satellite terrorism isn't just the USA. This is a global issue! I'm in tropical Queensland Australia and get battered daily." ~Targeted Individual Amanda Emily Reed

MKULTRA Cover Stories

This technology has interacted with quite a large amount of people, however it is almost always misidentified as other sources[8].

Directed Energy Weapon Cover Stories:

Mental illness as an electronic harassment cover story

End game technology packaged under persuasive "spiritual warfare" illusions

Directed energy interaction packaged as the supernatural

Government technology under a cosmic being facade

Religious themed illusions / Using religion mythology as a means for cover stories

Extraterrestrial contact as a psychological operation cover story

Ghosts as a cover story – AI orchestrated phantom illusions

End game technology as a sorcery cover story

End game technology as the real source behind effective voodoo

Witchcraft as a directed energy cover story

Black project science under a black magic cover story

Directed energy attacks deceptively packaged as physiological ailments

Synthetic signals in the brain from implants framed as physiological ailments

"Psychic Attack" as a directed energy attack cover story

"Spiritual Attack" as a directed energy attack cover story

New Age cover stories (e.g. Disembodied spirit illusions)

Old age mythological gods used as a cover story

Human based electronic harassment with aliens packaged as the perpetrator

Scientology methods as a cover story for technological remote influence

Exotic neurobody illusions (e.g. Chakra, entity attachments, ethereal implants)

Inter dimensional being interaction as an electronic targeting cover story Exploitation of illusory explanations to conceal directed energy crimes

“People who have already assimilated the cover stories are often not ready to hear the truth.” ~Omnisense

Beings Impersonated:

Neighbors (Targeted Individual v2k)

Black Ops Agents (Targeted Individual v2k)

Family (Targeted Individual v2k)

Deceased Loved Ones / Deceased Relatives / Deceased Pets (Psy Ops v2k)

Demons (Mind Control Cover Story)

Jinn (Cover Stories)

Archons (Cover Stories)

Inter Dimensional Beings (New Age Psy Ops)

Extraterrestrials (Cosmic Being Impersonation Programs / UFOlogy Bastardization)

Entity Attachments (New Age Psy Ops)

Shadow Beings (e.g. To Cause Fear from an Obscure Source)

Archangels (To Impersonate a Higher Authority)

Lucifer (To Persuade into Evil)

Satan (Satanist v2k)

RA (New Age Psy Ops)

Spirits (Spiritual Warfare Illusions)

Ghosts – Phantoms (Directed Energy Trickery)

Faeries (Rehashed Old Age Cover Stories)

Higher Self (Mind Control Cover Story)

Panpsychism Based Impersonations (e.g. Gaia aka Mother Earth Speaking to People)

Saints & Mother Mary (Religious Impersonations)

Holy Spirit (Psychological Direction Method / Sleeper Assassin Method)

Ascended Masters (Impersonation of a Higher Power)

Jesus (Any Vector of Vulnerability is Exploited)

Person's of Note (e.g. To get a Target to Murder them, To Psychologically Direct)

Any Mythological God of the Past (These can be pretty cool)

God / Allah / Yahweh / Jehovah (Impersonation of the Highest Power)

Done via Electronic Telepathy Contact (Voice to Skull – v2k)

“Directed energy weapons operate invisibly while the inducible mental limits of directed energy weapons are the limits of consciousness itself, this makes for an incredibly potent environment for illusions of all types.” ~Omnisense

NeuroWeaponry & Artificial Intelligence Quotes

“The point of the program is to have maximum psychological effect and leave the minimal amount of evidence.[22]” ~Anonymous Targeting Program Insider

“In 1985 CNN did a special report on radio frequency weapons. They hired an engineer who built an “RF Mind Interference” machine based on Soviet schematics. The machine successfully transmitted images into a CNN reporter’s mind. The stunned engineer said that, given three weeks time, he could scale up the machine to use on a whole town, causing them to do things against their better judgement, see and hear things that weren’t there, etc. The pentagon said it was too sensitive a subject to comment on. Remember, these effects were achieved by civilians over 30 years ago! One can speculate that they’ve made great advances in the past decades.[8]” ~Targeted Individual Jim Hastings

EPILOGUE

It is now possible to state, with complete assurance (and also to distribute fliers such as used in the days of the lawless American Wild West:

WANTED:

FOR THE MURDER OF DR. RAUNI KILDE, GLORIA NAYLOR, AND HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS TO MILLIONS OF OTHER INNOCENT CIVILIANS:

THE FBI/CIA/DHS, U.S. GOVERNMENT, MILITARY, AND INTELLIGENCE SERVICES AND THEIR CORPORATE SPONSORS AND PARTNERS (aka The New World Order)

[status draft]
[nogallery] [geotag on]
[publicize off|twitter|facebook]
[category teknoloji]
[tags MK ULTRA PROJECT, Organized Gang Stalking, Operation, PSYCHOLOGICAL WARFARE]

Harassment techniques include:

1. Surveillance (being followed, electronic surveillance, computer and phone hacking, monitoring all online activities, and bugging of home)
2. Profiles are built to identify any and all weaknesses and insecurities to be used later. Information often obtained through sexual partners or trusted people in their lives.
3. Conditioning where victims are sensitised to certain stimuli such as everywhere you go someone will cough as they walk past you. The goal is to make you self police and then think anyone who coughs is involved in the harassment. People report of conditioning to include hand gestures, an overt use of colour in peoples clothing (like everyone you see wearing red) or cars a certain colour or with headlights on (also known as brighting).
4. Anchoring where someone will provide false rationales for the harassment. Often many possible rationales are planted to keep the victim confused and the focus of the harassment cycles from one possible reason to another round and around so as to keep the victim guessing in a self perpetuating guessing game where every scenario you are to blame and causes self doubt, fear, intimidation, and ultimately a cycle of destructive thoughts
5. Mobbing (or true gangstalking) where everywhere you go you will see an overt display of people following you and often use words you have been conditioned to or your name to draw your attention
6. Street theatre where a group will "perform" an overt activity like a fake confrontation or scenarios designed to test your reactions. Often takes the form of a couple who position themselves near you and then have a conversation using many of your conditioned words or pertaining to your particular situation and sensitivities.
7. The use of directional speakers which have the ability to direct sound to a single individual in a crowded room. This particular item is ultimately the most used and is often referred to as V2K or Voice to Skull and is used extensively in the psychological breakdown of the victim. The use initially is to cause the victim to doubt their sanity and drive them into the mental health system, and later to just torment and never give the victim a moment of privacy or peace. If they do enter the mental health system, then harassment escalates dramatically as the victim has now been "discredited" and can be labeled as someone with a mental problem if they do speak out about the harassment.
8. The use of electronics to effect your eyesight and balance which was originally developed for the military and police crowd control called "dazzling" and even the ability to make you vomit.
9. Sound campaigns which is a community harassment technique where abnormal levels of sound are directed at the victim and their home. This includes cars deliberately breaking or accelerating when they pass, people talking excessively loudly at all hours of the night, amplification of sound using directional speakers so that external sounds that previously couldnt be heard now can, garbage trucks and other heavy vehicles, and countless other deliberate tactics
10. Sleep deprivation - this is perhaps one of the most insidious tactics used where victims are woken multiple times a night and can be kept awake for days at a time. The effects are dramatic and completely debilitating effecting concentration, mood, irritability, appearance, and significantly impacts all areas of their life - job performance, relationships, and significantly aids in discrediting the victim as they appear unorganised, disheveled, and sleeping patterns alter so they may sleep during the day (where noise campaigns are more effective) and be awake at night (where they can be painted as the one making noise and being a disruptive member of the community).

11. Baiting or entrapment where victims are harassed to the point that they lash out and commit a crime such as assault, break and enter or vandalism, as they try and locate the source of the harassment. Harassers will actively try to provoke verbal and physical confrontations especially after a period of sleep deprivation. Or they are prompted into an activity which can then be used as leverage such as affairs, sexuality, drug use, or other criminal activity.

12. Gaslighting which is a form of psychological abuse where someone will actively try undermine victims and to make them doubt themselves so that they lose all self confidence and self esteem and are therefor easier to manipulate and push toward the mental health pathway. It can be as simple as being told something which they then deny, then telling them how silly they are for thinking they said it, and turn the lie around into an attack on the person. It can be incredibly effective coming from a trusted person and before the victim understands what is happening to them.

13. Blackbag jobs is a term when a harasser breaks into a victims property and places something or deliberately moves something. The purpose is to cause self doubt, and fear that their property is being accessed which harassers try to then sell as paranoia.

14. Propaganda and disinformation is also the other key element to suppress knowledge of this practice as its effectiveness initially requires the victim to be unaware of the existence of gangstalking, gaslighting, or the electronic technologies such as directional speakers so huge amounts of time are devoted online to creating disinformation sites which attempt to discredit victims by pushing the mental health agenda. They achieve this by posing as victims and actively trying to sound crazy so that all victims are treated as such. Also by creating websites claiming to help victims and being a resource for victims to come together and then harassing them to the extent that they lose hope and no longer reach out for help causing further isolation.

15. Further to the above, gangstalkers rely on disbelief and discrediting and as such much of the harassment is designed (at least initially) to mimic mental health issues. They also rely on their abuse being so extreme, so pervasive, so fundamentally immoral, as to be disbelieved and victims subsequently resort to photographing, videotaping, and sound recording their everyday encounters to disprove the countless unfounded claims made against them - especially in relation to gaslighting, which gangstalkers try to turn around and paint the victims as paranoid or irrational. Victims are made to feel helpless as every attempt to defend themselves is used against them and when they seek help they are met with disbelief or open hostility.

Page Denied

DCI/ICS 6908-88

29 April 1988

MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Central Intelligence

VIA: Deputy Director of Central Intelligence

FROM: Lt Gen Edward J. Heinz, USAF
Director, Intelligence Community Staff

SUBJECT: New Chairman of the Intelligence Research and Development Council

1. Action: That you sign the attached note to the Secretary of Defense and the accompanying memorandum to the National Foreign Intelligence Community concerning the appointment of Dr. Robert C. Duncan, Director, Defense Research and Engineering, as the new Chairman of the Intelligence Research and Development Council.

2. Background: With the departure of Don Latham, as the Chairman of the Council, Mr. Hineman temporarily assumed the position until Defense had a new candidate. Mr. Carlucci has now indicated to Mr. Gates their nominee is Dr. Duncan, Director, Defense Research and Engineering. Mr. Gates has talked to Dr. Duncan who agrees to assume the Chairmanship. The attached provides notification to the National Foreign Intelligence Community of this assignment, and in addition thanks the Secretary for his nomination.

Edward J. Heinz
Lieutenant General, USAF

STAT

Attachments: (2)
A. Note to SecDef (U)
B. Memo for National Foreign Intelligence Community (U)

All portions of this memorandum
are UNCLASSIFIED

SUBJECT: New Chairman of the Intelligence Research and Development Council

DISTRIBUTION (DCI/ICS 6908-88 w/atts)

Original - DCI

1 - DDCI (ER file)

1 - D/ICS

1 - ES/IR&DC

1 - IR&DC Chrono

1 - IC Registry

DCI/ICS/PP0/IR&DC:

29 April 1988

STAT

The Director of Central Intelligence

Washington, D.C. 20505

6 May 1988

The Honorable Frank C. Carlucci
The Secretary of Defense
Washington, D. C. 20301

Dear Mr. Secretary:

I wish to express my appreciation for your nomination of Dr. Robert C. Duncan to serve as the Chairman of the Intelligence Research and Development Council. The Council has served us well in the past by identifying Intelligence R&D issues which require management attention, and I know Cliff will continue this tradition.

Sincerely yours,

William H. Webster

All portions of this letter
are UNCLASSIFIED

Page Denied

SUBJECT: Nomination of DDR&E as New IR&DC Chairman

DISTRIBUTION:

Original - SecDef
1 - DepSecDef
1 - USD (Acquisition)
1 - Director, Defense Research & Engineering
1 - DCI
1 - DDCI (ER file)
1 - D/ICS
1 - DDS&T
1 - ES/IR&DC
1 - IRDC Chrono
1 - ICS Registry

DCI/ICS/PP0/IR&DC:

29 April 1988

STAT

The Director of Central Intelligence

Washington, D.C. 20505

6 May 1988

MEMORANDUM FOR: National Foreign Intelligence Community
SUBJECT: Appointment of Intelligence Research and Development Council Chairman

I am pleased to announce the appointment of Dr. Robert C. Duncan, Director, Defense Research and Engineering, as the Chairman of the Intelligence Research and Development Council.

William H. Webster

All portions of this memorandum
are UNCLASSIFIED

SUBJECT: Appointment of Intelligence Research and Development Council Chairman

DISTRIBUTION:

- 1 - Secretary of Defense
- 2 - Deputy Secretary of Defense
- 3 - Under Secretary of Defense (Acquisition)
- 4 - DCI
- 5 - DDCI
- 6 - Executive Director, CIA
- 7 - D/ICS
- 8 - DD/ICS
- 9 - DDR&E
- 10 - DDO
- 11 - DDI
- 12 - DDA
- 13 - DDS&T
- 14 - Chairman, NIC
- 15 - Chairman, IPC
- 16 - D/NIESO
- 17 - D/FMO
- 18 - Director, DIA (LtGen. Leonard Peroots, USAF)
- 19 - NSA/DDR&E [REDACTED]
- 20 - NSA/DDR&E [REDACTED]
- 21 - DoE (Dr. James Decker)
- 22 - Director, Defense Research & Engineering
- 23 - Ass't Sec Army/RD&A (Dr. Jay Sculley)
- 24 - Dep Ass't Sec Army (Reqs & Progs) (Bruce Zimmerman)
- 25 - Ass't Sec Navy/RE&SA (Mr. Thomas Fraught)
- 26 - OASN/DASN C³I/Ass't for Intel (Cmdr Edmond Pope)
- 27 - Secretary of the Air Force (Mr. Edward Aldridge)
- 28 - Ass't Sec Air Force (A) (Mr. John Welch)
- 29 - OSAF/D/SAF/USS (Mr. Jimmie Hill)
- 30 - DIA/DT (Dr. Jack Vorona)
- 31 - DIA/DT [REDACTED]
- 32 - DARPA (Dr. Raymond Colladay)
- 33 - DD/DARPA (Dr. Craig Fields)
- 34 - DARPA/D/STO (Dr. John Mansfield)
- 35 - DNI (RADM William Studeman, USN)
- 36 - ODNI (Mr. Tom Handel)
- 37 - ODNI (Mr. Robert Brooke)
- 38 - FBI/TSD (Mr. William Bayse)
- 39 - DUSDP (Mr. Craig Alderman)
- 40 - ASD(C³I) (Dr. Thomas Quinn)
- 41 - ASD(C³I) (Mr. Charles Hawkins)
- 42 - ASD(C³I) (Mr. Richard Baer)
- 43 - CIA/D/ORD [REDACTED]
- 44 - CIA/ORD [REDACTED]
- 45 - NASA (Dr. Lenoard Harris)
- 46 - EXTRAND (Mr. Raymond Unger)
- 47 - Army/SARDA (Dr. James Steckert)
- 48 - DIA/DC [REDACTED]

DCI/ICS/PP0/IR&DC [REDACTED]

29 April 1988

STAT

STAT

STAT
STAT

STAT

STAT

SUBJECT: Appointment of Intelligence Research and Development Council Chairman

DISTRIBUTION: (distributed to IR&DC Members)

- 49 - C/STIC
- 50 - C/WISSIC
- 51 - C/JAEIC
- 52 - C/AS
- 53 - C/CCISCMO
- 54 - C/HCS
- 55 - C/IHC
- 56 - C/SCS
- 57 - D/REO
- 58 - C/SS
- 59 - D/PBO
- 60 - D/PPO
- 61 - C/MCS
- 62 - C/LL
- 63 - C/FIPC
- 64 - C/FLC
- 65 - DIRNSA
- 66 - D/OSTP
- 67 - National Security Council
- 68 - D/INR/State
- 69 - Treasury
- 70 - Army ACSI
- 71 - Air Force ACSI
- 72 - USMC
- 73 - Counsel for Intelligence Policy, Justice
- 74 - General Counsel, Commerce
- 75 - O/Compt
- 76 - OCA
- 77 - OGC
- 78 - PAO
- 79 - IRDC Chrono
- 80 - ES/IR&DC
- 81 - Ex/Reg
- 82 - ICS Reg

DCI/ICS/PPO/IR&DC:

29 April 1988

STAT

NSA Transmissions-Mind Control, Death Rays for Planes, Cancer, Synthetic ills- Toolings ELF & Seismic Waves + Behind Scenes Focused on Wrong Weapon Mass Destruction TERRORISTS WITHIN, 1973 2nd Level CIA, Cryptocracy's Plan to Psycho-civilize You, Emulating Scriptures! ---How & Why 911, Economy. ALL from your minds! MA CROCOSM. Millions including America's Corp Leaders & Officials! "The Process." Israel Framed-engineered to go down.
Have you figured it out yet!

â ¢ NSA Tice-Hero under God
â ¢ US Supreme Court Case
â ¢ Israel-CIA Agenda- Press Releases
â ¢ Synthetic Telepathy-ills-TAXES
â ¢ Cancer 911 CIA
â ¢ Resources to Expose
â ¢ Interviews-Exhibits-Documents
â ¢ Lawsuit-Synthetic ills in America
Is the NSA Conducting Electronic Warfare On Americans?
Jonas Holmes May 19, 2006
CHRONICLE ARTICLE

Russ Tice, former NSA intelligence officer and current Whistleblower, was to testify before the Senate Armed Services Committee this week. Apparently the testimony, Mr. Tice wanted to give, makes General Haydens phone surveillance program look like very small potatoes. Mr. Tices testimony is expected to reveal further illegal activity overseen by General Michael Hayden which even loyal and patriotic NSA employees view as unlawful.

I think the people I talk to next week are going to be shocked when I tell them what I have to tell them. ITS PRETTY HARD TO BELIEVE, Tice said. I hope that they'll clean up the abuses and have some oversight into these programs, which doesn't exist right now. According to Mr. Tice, what has been disclosed so far is only the tip of the iceberg. What in the world could Russ Tice be talking about! To figure it out let us take a look at Russ Tices work at the NSA.

According to the Washington Times and numerous other sources, Mr. Tice worked on special access programs related to electronic intelligence gathering while working for the NSA and DIA, where he took part in space systems communications, non-communications signals, electronic warfare, satellite control, telemetry, sensors, and special capability systems. Special Access Programs or SAPs refer to Black Budgets or Black Operations. Black means that they are covert and hidden from everyone except the participants. Feasibly there would be no arena with a greater potential for abuse and misuse than Special Access Programs. Even now Congress and the Justice Department are being denied the ability to investigate these programs because they don't have clearance. To put it in CNNs Jack Caffertys words a top secret government agency, the NSA, the largest of its kind in the world, is denying oversight or investigation by the American people because investigators lack clearance. To add a layer of irony to the Black Ops cake this travesty is occurring in America, the supposed bastion of Freedom and Democracy, which we are currently trying to export to Iraq.

It just gets scarier. The Black Ops that Mr. Tice was involved in related to electronic intelligence gathering via space systems communications, non-communications signals, electronic warfare, satellite control, telemetry, sensors, and special capability systems. For greater insight as to the impact of these programs readers should review decades old FOIA authenticated programs such as MKULTRA, BLUEBIRD, COINTELPRO and ARTICHOKE. Radar based Telemetry involves the ability to see through walls without thermal imaging.

Electronic Warfare is even scarier if we take a look at the science. NSA Signals Intelligence Use of EMF Brain Stimulation. NSA Signals Intelligence uses EMF Brain Stimulation for Remote Neural Monitoring (RNM) and Electronic Brain Link (EBL). EMF Brain Stimulation has been in development since the MKUltra program of t he early 1950's, which included neurological research into "radiation" (non-ionizing EMF) and bioelectric research and development. The resulting secret technology is categorized at the National Security Archives as "Radiation Intelligence," defined as "information from unintentionally emanated electromagnetic waves in the environment, not including radioactivity or nuclear detonation." Signals Intelligence implemented and kept this technology secret in the same manner as other electronic warfare programs of the U.S. government. The NSA monitors available information about this technology and withholds scientific research from the public. There are also international intelligence agency agreements to keep this technology secret.

The NSA has proprietary electronic equipment that analyzes electrical activity in humans from a distance. NSA computer-generated brain mapping can continuously monitor all the electrical activity in the brain continuously. The NSA records and decodes individual brain maps (of hundreds of thousands of persons) for national security purposes. EMF Brain Stimulation is also secretly used by the military for Brain-to-computer link. (In military fighter aircraft, for example.) For electronic surveillance purposes electrical activity in the speech center of the brain can be translated into the subject's verbal thoughts. RNM can send encoded signals to the brain's auditory cortex thus allowing audio communication direct to the brain (bypassing the ears). NSA operatives can use this to covertly debilitate subjects by simulating auditory hallucinations characteristic of paranoid schizophrenia. Without any contact with the subject, Remote Neural Monitoring can map out electrical activity from the visual cortex of a subject's brain and show images from the subject's brain on a video monitor. NSA operatives see what the surveillance subject's eyes are seeing. Visual memory can also be seen. RNM can send images direct to the visual cortex, bypassing the eyes and optic nerves. NSA operatives can use this to surreptitiously put images in a surveillance subject's brain while they are in R.E.M. sleep for brain-programming purposes. In individual citizens occasionally targeted for surveillance by independently operating NSA personnel.

NSA personnel can control the lives of hundreds of thousands of individuals in the U.S. by using the NSA's domestic intelligence network and cover businesses. The operations independently run by them can sometimes go beyond the bounds of law. Long-term control and sabotage of tens of thousands of unwitting citizens by NSA operatives is likely to happen. NSA Domint has the ability to covertly assassinate U.S. citizens or run covert psychological control operations to cause subjects to be diagnosed with ill mental health. National Security Agency Signals Intelligence Electronic Brain Link Technology NSA SigInt can remotely detect, identify and monitor a person's bioelectric fields. The NSA's Signals Intelligence has the proprietary ability to remotely and non-invasively monitor information in the human brain by digitally decoding the evoked potentials in the 30-50 hz, .5 milliwatt electro-magnetic emissions from the brain. Neuronal activity in the brain creates a shifting electrical pattern that has a shifting magnetic flux. This magnetic flux puts out a constant 30-50 hz, .5 milliwatt electromagnetic (EMF) wave. Contained in the electromagnetic emission from the brain are spikes and patterns called "evoked potentials."

Every thought, reaction, motor command, auditory event, and visual image in the brain has a corresponding "evoked potential" or set of "evoked potentials." The EMF emission from the brain can be decoded into the current thoughts, images and sounds in the subject's brain.

NSA SigInt uses EMF-transmitted Brain Stimulation as a communications system to transmit information (as well as nervous system messages) to intelligence agents and also to transmit to the brains of covert operations subjects (on a non-perceptible level).

EMF Brain Stimulation works by sending a complexly coded and pulsed electromagne tic signal to trigger evoked potentials (events) in the brain, thereby forming sound and visual images in the brain's neural circuits. EMF Brain Stimulation can also change a person's brain-states and affect motor control.

Two-way Electronic Brain-Link is done by remotely monitoring neural audio-visual information while transmitting sound to the auditory cortex (bypassing the ears) and transmitting faint images to the visual cortex (bypassing the optic nerves and eyes, the images appear as floating 2-D screens in the brain).

Two-Way Electronic Brain Link has become the ultimate communications system for CIA/NSA personnel. Remote Neural Monitoring (RNM, remotely monitoring bioelectric information in the human brain) has become the ultimate surveillance system. It is used by a limited number of agents in the U.S. Intelligence Community. RNM requires decoding the resonance frequency of each specific brain area. That frequency is then modulated in order to impose information in That specific brain area. The frequency to which the various brain areas respond varies from 3 Hz to 50 Hz. Only NSA Signals Intelligence modulates signals in this frequency band.

An example of EMF Brain Stimulation: Brain Area
Bioelectric Resonance Frequency Information Induced Through Modulation
Motor Control Cortex 10 HZ Motor Impulse Co-ordination
Auditory Cortex 15 HZ Sound which bypasses the ears
Visual Cortex 25 HZ Images in the brain, bypassing the eyes
Somatosensory Cortex 09 HZ Phantom Touch Sense
Thought Center 20 HZ Imposed Subconscious Thoughts
This modulated information can be put into the brain at varying intensities from subliminal to perceptible.
Each person's brain has a unique set of bioelectric resonance/entrainment frequencies. Sending audio information to a person's brain at the frequency of another person's auditory cortex would result in that audio information not being perceived.

Additionally, A 1994 congressional hearing reported that nearly half a million Americans were subjected to some kind of cold war era tests, often without being informed and without their consent. In addition, experimentation law is well grounded in constitutional and international law. It is an under-reported fact that two major reports on human rights and torture in the U.S. recently listed illegal radiation experiments. Many more facts are documented below. Therefore, human research subject protections should be a high priority and are just as significant as current issues of torture and illegal wiretapping.

It is time for America to wake up. It is time for America to protect its Whistle blowers who are our last line of defense against dictatorship and despotism. It is time for America to take responsibility for oversight of its tax dollars and elect leaders who will assume such responsibility now. Yes, the war on terrorism is important. It is even more important and fearful if the terrorism is from within and unknowingly funded by hard working American citizens. There is no Special Access Program beyond the oversight of political leaders elected by the people and for the people. If these political leaders jeopardize national security then that shall be handled in a court of law. But to tell America, to tell the American people, to tell the political leaders elected by the American people that America does not deserve to know what happening in the NSAs dark, black rooms, with billions of dollars, behind closed doors, when we know that privilege has already been abused; that is the true definition of terrorism. That is the true definition of Communism and a Police State, no oversight. So fellow Americans, you may hem and haw in the face of truth but know that one day you will realize that your country has been usurped from the very principles upon which it was founded.
Godspeed, Russ Tice, the Patriots are with you.

Followed by Democracy Now interview if and cant tell!

.....Former NSA intelligence agent Russell Tice condemns reports that the Agency has been engaged in eavesdropping on U.S. citizens without court warrants. Tice has volunteered to testify before Congress about illegal black ops programs at the NSA. Tice said, The freedom of the American people cannot be protected when our constitutional liberties are ignored and our nation has decayed into a police state. [includes rush transcript]....Congress has been briefed. A program that is in my judgment necessary to win this war and to protect the American people. Meanwhile, the Washington Post is reporting that the NSA passed on records of intercepted email and phone calls to other government agencies including the FBI, the Defense Intelligence Agency, the CIA and the Department of Homeland Security. This news comes on the heels of several other reports that the FBI's Joint Terrorism Task Force, military intelligence and local police departments have all been engaged in monitoring peaceful groups including Greenpeace, PETA the People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, Catholic Worker, anti-war groups and even bicyclists in New York City. During the 1960s and 1970s, the military used NSA intercepts to maintain files on U.S. peace activists. It was this domestic surveillance that led Congress to intervene and pass Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 in order to prevent future such abuses. The statute permits domestic intelligence surveillance with the approval of a court order from the FISA court. In 1975, Senator Frank Church, a Democrat from Idaho, said, We have a particular obligation to examine the NSA, in light of its tremendous potential for abuse. . . . The interception of international communications signals sent through the air is the job of NSA; and, thanks to modern technological developments, it does its job very well. The danger lies in the ability of the NSA to turn its awesome technology against domestic communications. Congress is now considering holding a new round of hearings on Bush's domestic spying program. A bipartisan group of senators have already issued their public support, including several top Republicans, including Senator Dick Lugar of Indiana, Lindsey Graham of South Carolina, and Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania. This is Democratic Senator Patrick Leahy of Vermont.

SEN. PATRICK LEAHY: This warrant-less eavesdropping program is not authorized by the PATRIOT Act, its not authorized by any act of Congress, and its not overseen by any court. According to the reports its being conducted under a secret presidential order, based on secret legal opinions by the same Justice Department, lawyers, the same ones who argued secretly that the President could order the use of torture. Mr. President, it is time to have some checks and balances in this country. We are a democracy. We are a democracy. Lets have checks and balances, not secret orders and secret courts and secret torture, and on and on.

AMY GOODMAN: That was Vermont Senator Patrick Leahy. Two weeks ago, a former N.S.A. intelligence officer publicly announced he wants to testify before Congress. His name is

D.I.A. has a few elements of it, and everybody gets together and does a little mind meld to try to figure out whats going on. So its not unusual for the intelligence community to share information. But when were talking about information on the American public, which is a violation of the FISA law, then I think its even something more to be concerned about. AMY GOODMAN: Were you ever asked to engage in this? RUSSELL TICE: No, no, and if I did so, I did so unwittingly, which I have a feeling would be the case for many of the people involved in this.

RUSSELL TICE: If that was done and, you know, I use a big if here, and, remember, I cant tell you what I know of how N.S.A. does its business, but I can use the wiggly words like if and scenarios that dont incorporate specifics, but nonetheless, if U.S. gateways and junction points in the United States were used to siphon off information, I would think that the corporate executives of these companies need to be held accountable, as well, because they would certainly also know that what theyre doing is wrong and illegal.

AMY GOODMAN: Do you expect you are being monitored, surveilled, wiretapped right now? RUSSELL TICE: Yes, I do. As a matter of fact,

And Im certainly hoping that the President has been misled in whats going on here and that the true crux of this problem is in the leadership of the intelligence

e community. AMY GOODMAN: You're saying in the leadership of your own agency, the National Security Agency? RUSSELL TICE: That's correct, yeah, because certainly General Alexander and General Hayden and Bill Black knew that this was illegal. because of terrorism, you know, it's the same argument that we used with communis m years ago: take away your civil liberties, but use some threat that's, you know , been out there for a long time. Terrorism has been there for certainly before 9 /11 we had terrorism problems, and I have a feeling it's going to be around for q uite some time after whatever we deem is a victory in what we're doing now in the Middle East. But, you know, it's just something that has to be addressed. We jus t can't continue to see our civil liberties degraded. Ultimately, as Ben Franklin , I think, had said, you know, those who would give up their essential liberties for a little freedom deserve neither liberty or freedom, and I tend to agree wi th Ben Franklin. AMY GOODMAN: And your colleagues at the N.S.A. right now, their feelings, the National Security Agency? RUSSELL TICE: Boy, I think most folks a t N.S.A. right now are just running scared. They have the security office hangin g over their head, which has always been a bunch of vicious folks, and now theyv e got, you know, this potential witch hunt going on with the Attorney General. P eople in the intelligence community are afraid. They know that you can't come for ward. You have no protections as a whistleblower. These things need to be addres sed. AMY GOODMAN: What do you mean you have no protection? RUSSELL TICE: Well, l ike I said before, as a whistleblower, you're not protected by the whistleblower laws that are out there. The intelligence community is exempt from the whistlebl ower protection laws.

RUSSELL TICE: Thank you.

A PRESIDENT (Obama) WHO ONCE TOOK AN OATH TO CIVIL RIGHTS AND ACCUSED THE GOVERN MENT OF CREATING AIDS! They did!

"He that would make his own liberty secure, must guard even his enemy from oppre ssion; for if he violates this duty, he establishes a precedent that will reach to himself." - Thomas Paine

Why Palestinians want to be Israeli citizens (PostPartisan - The Washington Post)

Quantam Physics!

Mind Control-Directed Energy Weapons (microwaves) not limited to newcomers since 1970.

LIST of ILLNESSES,

NLP---NEURO-Synthetic illnesses programmed BY SUGGESTION THOUGHTS and electric h ypnosis. Prescriptions Taxed for Revenue.... since ALIEN HALLUCINATIONS:

NEURO, Obesity, Immune, Central Nervous System. See Wired & Tice Article, 5 SENS ES) KINESTHETIC wikipedia) Elec. Magnetic Fields. Asthma, MEMORY Mind/Body BLOCKS-ALZHEIMER-DIMENTIA as back to the future), Agent ORANGE, ADDHD, Equilibrium, Bladder, Colon, Leukemia, Numbness/ MS,

Anesthesiology, AIDS, FIBROMALGIA, PULMONARY, Bi-Polar, CONFUSION extra thought transmissions, MEMORY, DYSLEXIA, opposites suggestions to confuse, SKIN/BLOOD, B LOCKAGES/Flow/DISEASES, EPSTEIN'S BAR,

Vision Sight, HOLOGRAMS, HALLUCINATIONS, Parkinsons, MIGRAINES, CANCER, Anthrax, Valley Fever, Flu like symptoms, Insomnia is sleep deprivation, Thyroid, Short Term Memory, (intercepted thoughts) COGNITIVE IMPAIRMENTS, UN-Necessary procedure s, t pressure, Vaccine synthetic, ELF ills hiding behind PHARMACEUTICAL side effect s..., RLS jolts of ELF light/elec, DIABETES II, and worse. HIDING BEHIND MSG or ASPERTAME including RETARDATION, Tourette, MUSCLE Controls, ELF reproduction and sweats on both male/female, STD, ARTHRITIS... much worse. I NFLAMATION, Swelling, Burning feet (Lasers usually seniors), BLISTERS, SPLIT PERSONALITIES is a shift technique of NLP using remote electronic hypnosis, mood transmitted urges to act amplified thoughts, suggestions, thoughts back and forth, mind jabs-interrupt thoughts, with triggers of memory blocks, INDUCED ERASURES & DELAYS IN YOUR LIFE, and much more, all diseases potentials, etc. Misplacing items or trashed unconsciously mind games. Programmed MISFITS Diabolic, playing mind games since milk carton missing children recruited by coercion called Handlers. They cant see from your eyes but tell you to LOOK first and take the credit, as with memory and tricking you to facilitate mind reading for them of your intentions. ALL surreptitiously unconsciously. YOUR PERCEPTION of positive or negative and like or dislike etc is thoughts passing through as synthetic depression etc...

Bi-polar/ADD (most misdiagnosed in America), Accidents, slip & falls, STROKES, W illiams Syndrome Motor Coordination, Autism. & disorientation. False ALARMS all from the MIND;

UNREALIZED forced speech emotions & mistakes, Electronic Epilepsy! (Dr Bearden)

MORGELLANS! LIVER dialysis, kidney failures rampant in U.S. Hemorrhage energy hea

Seniors mostly, HEARING DEAFNESS, BLINDNESS and PANACEAS. Responsible for much worse, would never sit on this kind of power with Weapons nicely tucked away, knowing no threats by Russias or Chinas and never was by ELF.____Jerry Smith Programmed MISFITS Diabolic, playing mind games since milk carton missing children recruited by coercion called Handlers.

Have you been mind controlled not to believe? Diabolical did not stop with what you already know today, that, I assure you, was the part ordered burned. Helms ordered FIOA MKUltra both shredded and burned

DARK HISTORY-PAST EVENTS THAT HAVE SHAPED THE WORLD

History is an account, mostly false, of events unimportant, which are brought about by rulers mostly knaves, and soldiers mostly fools.
Ambrose Bierce

Bush-Bones Doctrine: Deny Everything Theres three things to remember: claim everything, explain nothing, deny everything. Senator Prescott Bush (Skull & Bones 1917) The Bush family patriarch made the above statement in a 1966 interview for Columbia Universitys oral history project on the Eisenhower administration. Prescott Bush said that political dictum had been explained to him by Claire Boothe Luce, congresswoman, ambassador and wife of Time-Life media magnate Henry Luce (Skull & Bones 1920)-Diagram of the Bush Dynasty Source: <http://www.threetwoone.org>

PDF Streaming Video Hear how Prescott Bush, Dubyas grandfather, tried to overthrow the government and install a fascist nazi regime.

The Hitler Project Astonishing Revelations! 01/02/05 By Ted Lang 2004 It is T&Cs position that the Bush family knew exactly what they were doing, and deliberately brought Hitler and his murderous Nazis to power knowing full well in advance what the consequences of their actions would be.

Nazi Sympathizer Prescott Bush. He personally financed the building of over 40 concentration camps including Auschwitz.

Bush and the Nazis: New Documents Herbert Parmet, November 26, 2003

THE NEW GENGHIS KAHN

The year 1999 and its seventh month, From the sky comes a great King of Terror: Reviving the great King of the Mongols, Before and after Mars (war) to reign happily.

After there is great trouble among mankind, a greater one is prepared. The great mover of the universe will renew time, rain, blood, thirst, famine, steel weapons and disease. In the heavens, a fire seen. Nostradamus in year 1555.

"Those who give up their liberty for more security neither deserve liberty nor security." Ben Franklin

"None are more hopelessly enslaved than those who falsely believe they are free."

Johann Wolfgang von Goethe

History repeating itself eyes wide shut in front of the world. Yale Club, Emulating the Torah Scriptures, toppling. Bush was to be assassinated in the 80s by Duncan OFinioan; didnt know why, but was intercepted, overridden by CIA & (triggered) to cancel mission (shoot) as ALL ELSE. DoD The Sorcerer, Manipulator, Cyberneticist, behind the electronic curtain Mind Control-SECRET SOCIETIES! & ID theft, stalkers, viruses, hackers, and 2nd level CIA STUXNET, cover ups and whitewashing before Operation wiki Brainwash! Anchors & triggers transmitted.

1957 Allen Dulles Berle wrote in his diary. "If the scientists do what they have laid out for themselves, men will become manageable ants." below; What's next!

"News is what people want to keep hidden; everything else is publicity." - Bill Moyers: - Speech, May 15, 2005

(1975) "To defend against things like anthrax attacks on our civilian population centers, we also have recommended to the U.S. Government the crash development of small, portable treatment machines using similar "antiengine-forming" and cellular reversing "porthole technology". [See Figure 13 on previous page]. Such portable machines could be developed cheaply and quickly, and present government facilities could be used to massively attack the correlate database production problem. "The portable treatment units could be cranked out by the hundreds of thousands and flooded down through emergency response agencies such as the police forces, the National Guard, emergency hospitals, emergency response teams, etc." Bearden http://www.cheniere.org/explore articles/mind control3/p04.htm

The Scalar Healing Blanket would fit into large suitcase. It has three basic parts, the longitudinal wave generator, a laptop computer, and the antenna-blanket.

The plan was a stroke of Bearden's genius, but unfortunately it fell on befuddled government ears. "Unfortunately, so far the DOD [Dept. of Defense] doesn't even understand what the heck we're talking about!"

Article "Healing with Energy": <http://www.explorepub.com/articles/energetics.html>

"We tried very hard in 1998 to call attention to the extreme national need for the most urgent possible development of a portable computer-controlled treatment device based on the experimentally proven Prior methodology, but extended to a much simpler and far more rapid method of treatment.

"Quick development of this technology could lead to a suitcase size device, capable of treating a patient in less than one minute, and stopping the symptoms and disease progress cold, then reversing it. Three "less than a minute" treatments one week apart would be required for complete cure. As an added advantage, partial reversal of aging in older patients would also be accomplished as a bonus, in addition to time-reversing the damaged and diseased cells...

"The method proposed to the DoD in 1998 used normal EM in a peculiar way to force the body itself to make its own time-polarized EM waves, and pump every part of its cells -- including the genetics -- in the time domain.

"Quite simply, we are going to be struck this way (QP spreading the immune systems of the populace plus professional smallpox, anthrax, etc. BW attacks on our population centers) and by other means we've spoken of in other papers and briefings."

Bearden <http://www.cheniere.org/correspondence/021401.htm>

The Dark Side of the Force:

Creating and broadcasting disease

Speaking of the scalar wave induction of disease by longitudinal wave patterns Bearden refers to work by French scientist Kervran Russian scientist Kaznacheyev, who proved that any disease could be transmitted electromagnetically.

Inserted Comment:(and has been) SICKO and Health in American-Michael Moore!
"It works this way: the Kaznacheyev experiments (and others) demonstrated that any cellular disease or disorder can be initiated into cells at a distance, by electromagnetic means (albeit unusual EM in nature). The decades of microwave radiation of the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, was an ongoing set of "stimuli" to ping the U.S. system and, by its response, ascertain how far along (or if it was "along") in its knowledge of such weapons. The radiation was responsible for many health changes in personnel and for the eventual deaths of three U.S. Ambassadors."
Bearden <http://www.cheniere.org/correspondence/021702a.htm>

In a letter he writes,

"Yes, the Kaznacheyev experiments were quite real; 15,000 or so in military research institutes in Siberia. As with so many other novel areas investigated and developed by the Soviets, most U.S. investigators just assumed normal EM, which is not what the Kaznacheyev experiments involved, and not what was carrying disease induction patterns from one cell culture to another in rigorous lab tests."

How to "Broadcast" Diseases

Longitudinal EM Biowars

Bearden explains how the new quantum potential weapons can be used to induce disease-at-a-distance in a population, or to "spread" the immune system so thin that a conventional bio-attack would be greatly potentiated. By "broadcasting" virtual disease patterns over a population, the immune system is so overloaded by the presence of the "shadow" diseases that its effectiveness is thinned out.

"In short, alter the internal wavestructure, and one creates a curved spacetime 'engine' that acts on mass in any fashion one chooses to design -- including initiate diseases . . . Now visualize one of these 'vacuum engines' or 'spacetime curvature engines' that acts on mass to generate the exact effects produced by an thrax. (Or any other disease one wishes) . . . Call the virtual state of a disease engine the disease pattern in the "shadow" state, just prior to becoming observable. . .

Inserted Comments:

As all else synthetic and blaming doctors etc. false positives and manipulations unwittingly!

TIME TRAVEL IN THE MIND IN YOUR SLEEP etc...

Mind Control-Directed Energy Weapons are responsible for MOST ILLNESSES, NEURO, LIST by suggestion and electric Hypnosis:
below with press release.

Death Ray for planes was Teslas invention in 1940 and a $2,000,000.00 device to zap and melt an airplane motor 250 miles away and an Invisible Chinese Wall of defense was built around the Country, no matter how large an attack, (Teleforce, manifests FREE energy and creates rays; zapping beams, the new invisible war). (Dr. Becker, Naomi Wolf, and Sharon Weinberger Imaginary Weapons)., this Warden cliff Tower is in full action in Long Island NY, along with 36 other stations or sites as GWEN, Globally that beam massive volume of Free Energy. (The New York Times, Sunday September 22, 1940-Science and Patents, Education News) One COSTLY energy zap causes by NLP suggestion transmitted to individuals; confusion, mistakes, trip, fall, body temp-freeze, heat, miscommunication, fatigue, focus/ concentration, radio-sleep (Kucinich-US patented under MKDELTA), and stalling any engine. HAARP, Body Electric, and Mass Control Human Engineering. JIM KEITH APPENDICE on my homepage with Russell Tice and Thomas Drake.

WARNINGS to We the People

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE 5/28/2010 rev

CONTACT: Mireille Torjman Federal Whistleblower

Mobile 954.529.8684 ThewhiteroseII@yahoo.com

www.mireilletorjman.com for Supreme Court Lawsuit and Open Letter to Congress.

Have you figured it out yet!

Astonishing Revelations and Press to Israel pg 6-13-May 2010 pg 14.

Sibel Edmonds gagged, Ariel Sharon comatosed, as I, DC swept covertly as NY pre-

911 TYRANNY pretext to SURRENDER CIVIL LIBERTIES decoys (illnesses in Directed energy) zaps, and NSA Russell Tice threatened and discredited, as I. Why hasn't the press--aside from MSNBC--covered NSA Tice's revelations! CANCER, NEURO NLP; Science and humanity under SIEGE! Behavioral Science Modifications & Technology-Sound and Seismic Waves infiltrations. For the Suspension of the Constitution to Communism and the LAUNCH of a NEW Holocaust in manifest on U.S. Soil Mission after surveillance implementation. [Prescott Bush, slides] --IF you knew ALL this, you would NOT be making these CHOICES! SSP, Patriot Act, Mass Control Human Engineering: Beam Warfare, Electronic Mind Control, Psi War, One World Brain, Dreamscape, Hardwiring Humans, and Information Warfare. The Persinger Plan, The U.N.s AGENDA 21 and What is Communitarianism? with Govt land, R.E. and Control. ICLEL, By-passed Congress. Links on pg. 16. U.S. Physicist Bill Nelson 2 assassination attempts in Budapest.

Illegal WARRANTLESS mind taps intercepted thoughts, Senates mind manipulations and USA ills, Engineering Consent. Paranormal Activities: Thomas Drake NSA Whistleblower Espionage Case Exposes Psychic Spy Connection. Projects... Spacestar DARPA (Trailing 50 yrs behind science/tech)-Project Voice of God, playing GOD, Picking up on all everything/one The Cult of Intelligence & CULT OF DEAD COWS UNIT-pg. 11 book but is AMERICAN REMOTE CULT, and laws of attraction, breeding Power & greed! All linked (Bear Stearns, Israel...) PsycheLeaks looks at the relationship between UK psychic Chris Robinson and indicted NSA whistleblower and former Senior Intelligence Official Thomas Drake. Other sources claim US National Security Agency inherited America's STAR GATE psychic spy program from CIA. Futurist, STARstream Research Share, SpaceStar Spies, Lies, & Polygraph Tape- Gary S. Bekum May 25, 2011- UN-conscious Mind to Mind Communication. And, why has NSA whistleblower Thomas Drake been charged with espionage?) I watched CBS 60 Minutes story with great interest Focused on wrong WMD taking Israel down-toppling

ALL 2nd Level CIA covert Weapon of Mass Destruction Psychoenergetics, Synthetic Telepathy miscommunications! Neurology under Siege, COGNITIVE IMPAIRMENT, shadowing computer use entrainment THOUGHTS! Gifford Shooting assassinations surreptitiously, Black Cancer, etc.

CIA is Sued Decades Later: BAY OF PIGS!!!!!!!!!! Operation MHCHAOS, ominous psychological warfare arsenal Plans to Psychocivilize You, Macrocosm Process; Americas Leaders & worse.

The National Security State and the Assassination of JFK

The CIA, the Pentagon, and the "Peace President" by Andrew Gavin Marshall -Allen Dulles 1957" Berle wrote in his diary. "If the scientists do what they have laid out for themselves, men will become manageable ants."

Pepe Escobar: A shadow war doubled by civil wars coming out of Pentagon not DC. CIA Control Jihadists and Brotherhood/Al Qaeda, as Libya, will only get worse, etc Link at Pg. 16. Anonymous is also CIA Cult.

Robin Cook Remote Control Heart Attack Anyone! (Former House of Commons) in Syrian Girl interview Keeping Score, US clueless, whereas CIA invented Phantom Al Qaeda or Al CIA-da as False Memory Syndrome, MHchaos Dysfunction, ills and APA ills and Drugs. pg. 4 and 10. Like Cancer etc

Premeditate-Making A Killing: The Untold Story of Psychotropic Drugging-It's the story of big money-drugs that fuel a $330 billion psychiatric industry, without a single cure. THE ANSWERS to ALL today! Mind Control in disguises. Also, no cure because there is no chemical imbalance at birth or otherwise.

Massive whitewash, covering it up, and scapegoating the tangible for their shadow inducements! Strategic changes. The tangible even part is to brainwash effectively. YOUR thoughts are not your own. They can make ANYTHING happen and Do unwittingly and Globally including illusions, justified, consciously or unconsciously and/or unrealized.

(1959) Among the recommended provocations and pretexts to justify a war, the Joint Chiefs suggested that, a series of well coordinated incidents will be planned to take place in and around [the US military base at] Guantanamo to give genuine appearance of being done by hostile Cuban forces, including starting rumours, landing friendly Cubans in uniform outside of the base to stage attack on base in Cuban uniform, capturing friendly saboteurs inside the base, and have friendly Cubans start riots near the base main gate.[30] Further recommendations were to blow up ammunition inside the base; start fires, as well as burning aircraft on the base, or sabotage a ship in the harbor, or to even, sink [a] ship near harbor entrance. Conduct funerals for mock-victims.[31] One startling recommendation was that, We could blow up a US ship in Guantanamo Bay and blame Cuba, or that, we could blow up a drone (unmanned) vessel anywhere in the Cuban waters, and blame Cuba, and that, casualty lists in US newspapers would cause a helpful wave of national indignation.[32] However, the most disturbing aspect of Operation Northwoods was the recommendation that:

"We could develop a Communist Cuban terror campaign in the Miami area, in other Florida cities and even in Washington. Honolulu fake documents! (Like all else: shark in Egypt waters blamed on Israel, 911, Rumors, etc) An excuse in advance set up for everything and a Synthetic America!

With no danger to American Society, the entrapment from Bush /Obama "MANIPULATORS".... "The object is to terrify the American Public, so that they will surrender their civil liberties--Possibly the greatest extortion scheme in U.S. history." --It's only the BEGINNING! See below creating subservient civilians, assassinations and torture goes on illegally anyway. Legalizing it is only for us civilians N.W.O.

All 2nd LEVEL CIA-Sorcerer-NSA transmissions-current Assassinations: NSA, DOD Directed Energy Weapon frying life & earth; Taking us & Israel down duplicitous decoys as all else. Mind Controlled Humanity

The New (1975) weapon of war (mass destruction duped diversions) is out and was in the hands of Cult of Intelligence! HOW & WHY 911 mastermind/CONTROL ELF WEAPON! The root of all problems must be exposed and stopped before too late! See history collectively repeating by design! Cryptocracy's Plan to Psycho-civilize you. Emulating, inducing the Scriptures. Duping ALL- Thomas Drake case Psychic Spy Programs hiding behind Dragnet and SSP since 1947! Macrocosm OFFICIALS and Corp. LEADERS

CIA JOHN LOFTUS on brasschecktv.com 2 videos of ISRAEL, CIA BUSH/HITLER DoD Yale Secret Society, CIA John LOFTUS DEPT of JUSTICE belong in JAIL----- funded Prescott Bush and RECRUITED NAZIS and FUNDING TERRORIST GROUPS with BRITISH- To crush ISRAEL- BEFORE DULLES ARAB NAZIS in CIA-911 to AGENDA next & since 1920. THE SECRET WAR AGAINST JEWS and more. THE WITNESS TREE.Part I and II <http://www.brasschecktv.com/videos/money-madness/how-america-lost-its-way-.html>- <http://www.brasschecktv.com/videos/government-corruption/why-the-justice-department-doesntcatch-banksters-terrorists-and-other-enemies-of-the-nation.html>

ALL HIDING BEHIND SSP, Patriot Act since 1947 conspiracy take over slowly being introduced as New World Order MASS Brainwash-chunked to accept! The launch of a New Holocaust in manifest after trickery and the people's CONSENT of balancing LESS FREEDOM, Civil Rights and a suspension of the Constitution, after MISSION of COMMUNISM and Middle East. Tyranny infiltrations in the auspices of 911. [Pg 9, 213] DARPA (trailing 50 yrs behind/suppressed) on BUDGET old CIA SCIENCE. CYBERSYN; "The COUP for the Communist World: It is said Henry Kissinger was the one who intervened to put an end to the GRAND experiment. Salvador Allende was assassinated by Chileans who are reported to have been in the PAY of CIA, and Cybersyn went by the wayside. They thought! Today FCC coup to regulate the INTERNET; COMMUNISM infiltrations and attempts, KGB/Gestapo style Domestic Surveillance mind manipulations after the fact & covertly hijacked www & humans. One World Brain Pg 241. N.S.A. has a five-thousand-acre campus at Fort Meade protected by iris scanners and facial-recognition devices. The electric bill there is said to s urpass $$$ seventy million dollars a year." For civility and remote DNA cloning and data-mining since 1973, it does not protect. (False sense of security.) CYBERNETICS; Helms; can be used in molding of a child's character Subdue & Ripping senses while there. odd series of events ARTICLES for decades on Ordinary folks Nationwide-leading to ... Attached. Strange cases and deaths on my website with other documents from this weapon of MIND Control events & tricks on whistleblowers & Civility especially CIVIL rights agenda. Major crimes induced since the 70s. Pg 7.

Secretary Geithner also highlighted Bear Stearns former Chief Operating Officer of Fixed Income, Paul Friedman, stated "Rumors were untrue until the telling of rumors made them true. This is how they do it (Project Stargate/Spacestar research DUPED by 2nd LEVEL as all else, and playing psychics). Then, GAO report (facilitated as all else INVOKED TO SELL by FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD) PLANS selectively REDISTRIBUTING/TRANSFER OF WEALTH from Jews, and agenda unwittingly. (odd/strange series of events on individuals across Country/Globe) and CONGRESSMAN KUCINICH AGAIN how the TRANSFER OF MONIES with WARS----- after presenting a bill for SPACE PRESERVATION ACT to ban this mind control WEAPON. Including Mark Zuckerberg Facebook. Donation of millions for Science & Tech while setting him up for years.

The CIA succeeded in developing a whole range of psycho-weapons to expand its already ominous psychological warfare arsenal. With these capabilities, it was now possible to wage a new kind of war: a war which would take place invisibly, upon the battlefield of the human mind... [p. 19]

1997 DoD Briefing: 'Others' can set off earthquakes, volcanoes remotely using electromagnetic waves By Lori Price 28 Feb 2010 Secretary of Defense William S. Cohen, 28 April 1997: 'There are some reports, for example, that some countries have been trying to construct something like an Ebola Virus [OMG! Who would do such a thing?], and that would be a very dangerous phenomenon, to say the least. Alvin Toffler has written about this in terms of some scientists in their laboratories trying to devise certain types of pathogens that would be ethnic specific so that they could just eliminate certain ethnic groups and races; and others [LOL] are designing some sort of engineering, some sort of insects that can destroy specific crops. Others are engaging even in an eco-type of terrorism whereby they can alter the climate, set off earthquakes, volcanoes remotely through the use of electromagnetic waves.' --Just switch 'yours,' 'others' and 'they' with 'U.S.,' 'U.S.' and 'U.S.'. Imagine, after eight years of George W. Bush turbo-funding these lunatics, what they can do now. Tectonic- pg 9.

(WAVES, Seismic, radio frying us) BP mind control transmitted human error! Tried to warn CONGRESS in 2008 and dismissed by disbelief. ELF CANCER directed energy at INDIVIDUALS being covered up as if from lame excuses and now Natural Disasters Corruptions infiltrated as all else. WATERFRONT Properties FL to NY under attack! Induced Climate ELF & Waves to De-populate and redistribute wealth/---again . 2nd LEVEL CIA (Terrorists) Mind CONTROLLING GLOBALIST to do THEIR MISSION for them. HUMANS are all PAWNS used in their Matrix since Alien Hallucinations went Global! I am ashamed of what climate science has become today. Sister Bertrelli, Scientist.

Invisible Empire is bad enough; imagine the covert ops of ELF warfare arsenal and NSA transmissions Invisible WEAPON of Mass Destruction! See Military Complex Spending and horrific CRIMES & ills for Decades- Allen Dulles 1957" Berle wrote in his diary. "If the scientists do what they have laid out for themselves, men will become manageable ants."

"Only the small secrets need to be protected. The big ones are kept secret by public incredulity." Marshall McLuhan

"If both the past and the external world exist only in the mind, and if the mind itself is controllable what then?" George Orwell

Published 1985- MACROCOSM: NEW WORLD ORDER MILLIONS Will go THROUGH "The PROCESS

" (brainwash programming) INCLUDING MOST OF AMERICA'S CORPORATE LEADERS and OFFICIALS from Navy/ EDUCATION-"It was estimated that Millions of persons were (1985) put through this type of PROCESSING Breaking down of personalities and recondition..." Many already manipulated into their office long ago. College manipulations no one knows about. "Weird things happen when you join the bureau". Their shadow-Collectively-What do you think they've been doing and how we got here! Making sense of 50 years in the manifest-Wake up America! Wake up Washington! Coupled with NSA transmissions, Leading psychiatrist, Dr. Walter BOWART pg 4 and more. -Charlotte Iserbyt, Bush Family/Society on Conspiracy to our education and schools before 1960s. Even Bullying in schools

"It was either invisible warfare or PEACE, and everyone seemed to agree the economy would "suffer" from peace. Without war, it was believed, the economy would falter and depression would be the dividend of peace. Thus the advisors to the president began to think about what might motivate the U.S. economy as well as war did. They came up with several possibilities, the most fantastic of which was to fake an invasion from outer space... Resource Tab 1973-90% JFK believed CIA conspiracy today BUT was unrealized now UNWITTINGLY mind controlled!!! Dr. Walter Bowart Pg 6 #21, 39.

The Weapon of Mass Destruction: DoD, Psychotronics, Synthetic Telepathy, DOE and CIA's-2nd Level--Spinning our wheels and putting out fires/band aids for yrs won't solve humanity's mind control at the root. THE FORCE BEHIND THE FORCES! Unveil them. Their own shadow is within (1973). Tesla's Chinese wall of defense... In formation warfare psyops transmitted thoughts, Article on MIND manipulating our SENATE STILL decades later 2nd level CIA FOIA 1972, "His God lurks Behind the electronic curtain, we find: The SORCERER, MANIPULATOR, CYBERNETICIST, the weaver of the DREAMscape" Jim Keith pg 245 Brilliant video below. They all said Abolish CIA and NSAct 1947. See Russia slide. It's ALL about you, it AFFECTS YOU daily and don't-wit.

OPERATION MIND CONTROL: CRYPTOCRACY'S PLAN TO PSYCHOCIVILIZE YOU-WITNESS in COURT NO Plane hit PENTAGON, TANGIBLE coupled with fear TRANSMISSIONS to manipulate and BRAINWASH you to VOTE for PATRIOT ACT is one example-----
-----BEWARE!----- Facts below and on line with Appendices! There is a 18 U.S.C. 241 Conspiracy against rights since MLK, JFK unwitting false blame---

Puppets/Ants/Robots Everybodys doing the LOCOMOTION as ObamaMaxwells Silver Hammer Chapter The Body Electric Operation Northwoods repeated under new psyops and HOOVER warned too Horrible to imagine. Jerry E. Smith was an author, lecturer, poet, & editor. ... dies March 08, 2010... "Haarp: The Ultimate Weapon of the Conspiracy "(The Mind-Control Conspiracy Series) Lt Col Tom Bearden, Russia WAR NED worse! ELF SICKO American accelerated ills and newcomers. French scientist Kervran Russian scientist Kaznacheyev, who proved that any disease could be TRANSMITTED electromagnetically. (1975) Immune. Page 4.<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Uoi5u3zx0HA> -INTERVIEW Dr W.BOWART/Death Threats

NAZIS in the CIA (secret societies) but duping their own agents; are the shadow CIA unwitting: Magnus Olsson; Below CIA Vet Milt Beardon states; "That you know of 9/11 etc, They play a lot with Memory and make you invest to lose or win $$$ -investing ills, Aliens, and enemies. Magnus Olsson Sweden also stated CIA has NAZIS.

A plan to fascism for another Holocaust in MANIFEST if the CONSTITUTION IS NOT restored. 90 Billion Hadassah Jerusalem Hosp. Swede, they tell you where to invest to lose p8.

ALL RELATED TO PATRIOT ACT, disarming etc. DUPLICITOUS plans to take down Israel and WWII still being manipulated behind the scenes duping everyone. This 2nd level CIA is behind the electronic CURTAIN on Long Island Tower inception and JP Morgan funding

Bush was to be assassinated in the 1980s by Duncan O'Finioan; didn't know why, but was intercepted, overridden by CIA & (triggered) to cancel mission (shoot) as ALL ELSE. CIA were the Aliens among us We are not alone since big Brothers watching Toggling between families homes. French civilians were transmitted Bush was c controlled by Aliens for psyops. Starting buzz anywhere.

Bowart, Walter, Leading Psychiatrist Blows Whistle on Profession: Proves 50 + years of Mind Control Were we Controlled? JFK Adventures and False Memory Syndrome Foundation, Schizophrenic offshoot since HITLER Weapon of Mass pg 9 Synthetic Ills and Crimes & AZ. APPEASED everyone in the 70s after Patti Hearst and PARANOIA to not being born ill but developing it as you get older lame induced infiltration while psychocivilizing us. Cancer Jim Keith-Mass Control Human Engineering.

(Pushed/fell??? to his death) Cults in sheep skin! Duplicitous sabotaging behind the scenes APA and AMA (while in bed with DoD; Amy Goodman Standing up to the Madness) enemies close to take them down, to Medical books also for 50 years. FALSE RECORDS & Character/Perception ETC! And JFK no official of my Administration Psychotronics-Psychotechnologies, Psychoenergetics WARFARE also on APA & AMA in your doctor's office/Lawyer... skewed medicine, list of illls below. (1975) Planned false memories in psychologists patients and blamed them as with medical manipulations in Hospitals & offices.

VIDEO Mossad Microbiologist Joseph Moshes Baxter Ukraine Plague Warning. Posted by labvirus on November 7, 2009 Bioweapon disguised as a vaccine. He claimed that the vaccine contained an adjuvant (additive) designed to weaken the immune system, and replicated RNA from the virus responsible for the 1918 pandemic Spanish flu, causing global sickness and mass death.

The next day, this happend (see video) THE STRANGE CASE OF JOSEPH MOSHE:

This Joseph Moshe arrested in L.A. is likely a MOSSAD agent with a CONSCIENCE and has apparently been extradited immediately to Israel. Now his testimony, whatever it would have been, is still secure. Notice, the federal agents used an electro-magnetic pulse which knocked out his car, as well as any cell phone so he couldnt contact the U.S. Attorney he was obviously going to meet with. (As I)ELF immune scapegoats to hide as all else with propaganda mind controlled.

The immune system is so overloaded by the presence of the "shadow" diseases that its effectiveness is thinned out."In short, alter the internal wavestructure, and one creates a curved spacetime 'engine' that acts on mass in any fashion one chooses to design -- including initiate diseases . . . Now visualize one of these 'vacuum engines' or 'spacetime curvature engines' that acts on mass to generate the exact effects produced by anthrax. (Or any other disease one wishes) . . .

Call the virtual state of a disease engine the disease pattern in the "shadow" state, just prior to becoming observable. . Tom Bearden Army Lt. Col. (www.mireilleletorjman.com for all articles with notations)

Has America become a nation of psychotics? You would certainly think so, based on the explosion in the use of antipsychotic medications. In 2008, while old people with dementia are dosed, in large numbers, with drugs once reserved largely for schizophrenics. Americans and bipolar Mass psychosis in the US - Opinion - Al Jazeera English Pfizer -(Drugs (Rx tax)-ITS ALL FOR TAX REVENUE & POWER) as USA 1970s deployed VETS non-traced, GULF war & Ground 0 still 0.

Research Links Rise in Falluja Birth Defects and Cancers to US Assault Defects in newborns 11 times higher than normal 'War contaminants' from 2004 attack could be cause by Martin Chulov enclosed Published on Friday, December 31, 2010 by The Guardian/UK

The Dark Side of the Force:Creating and broadcasting disease

Speaking of the scalar wave induction of disease by longitudinal wave patterns Bearden refers to work by French scientist Kervran Russian scientist Kaznacheyev, who proved that any disease could be transmitted electromagnetically. How to "Broadcast" Diseases Longitudinal EM Biowars

Bearden explains how the new quantum potential weapons can be used to induce disease-at-a-distance in a population, or to "spread" the immune system so thin that a conventional bio-attack would be greatly potentiated. By "broadcasting" virtual disease patterns over a population, the immune system is so overloaded by the presence of the "shadow" diseases that its effectiveness is thinned out. "In short, alter the internal wavestructure, and one creates a curved spacetime 'engine' that acts on mass in any fashion one chooses to design -- including initiate diseases . . . Now visualize one of these 'vacuum engines' or 'spacetime curvature engines' that acts on mass to generate the exact effects produced by anthrax

. (Or any other disease one wishes) . . . Call the virtual state of a disease engine the disease pattern in the "shadow" state, just prior to becoming observable. . . (see June 13, 1975)

7. In 1967, after Ramparts magazine exposed secret CIA funding of the National Student Association and numerous nonprofit organizations, President Johnson forbade CIA support of foundations or educational institutions. Inside the Agency there was no notion that this order meant ending relationships, such as the one with Geschickter. In his case, the agile CIA men simply transferred the funding from the foundation to a private company, of which his son was the secretary-treasurer.

8. Lying to Congress followed the pattern of lying to the press that some MKULTRA veterans adopted after the first revelations came out. For example, former Human Ecology Society director James Monroe told The New York Times on August 2, 1977 that "only about 25 to 30 percent" of the Society's budget came from the CIA. A statement he knew to be false since the actual figure was well over 90 percent.

Pentagon's source selection Board repeatedly recommended a bid by Boeing as both better and cheaper... DoD awarded to Gen. Dynamics" 2nd level manipulated.

DoD: McNamara, wrote in March 1969, issue of Washington Monthly Mag.; Few Americans are aware that about 90 % of the Major weapons systems that the defense Dept. procures ends up costing the Country at least twice as much as was originally estimated. The American Tax Payer is not getting their money's worth???????? SAIC = CIA Spacestar FBI lawsuit & Pursuant with Lawsuit by BOEING.

2 different thoughts etc; transmitted at the same time to create mis-understandings, communication, arguments, chaos, dis-information, forced speech bypassing cortex/ears/recall/memory short term/long channeled unrealized! Thoughts interfering on your speech, hearing, decisions for decades. First they build TRUST while set up.

Your destinies are being led or misled, mostly no coincidences and YOUR THOUGHTS are NOT your own. Dumbed down, Obese, busy, De-sensitized & Dehumanized robots by mind control individuals. Immigration mind controlled Americans as dumbed down and lazy to justify immigration; part of agenda.

SOA: Mind Manipulated in law impeding truth, creating doubts, infiltrations, & worse-GEORGE GREEN, ROBERT BAER CIA bomb makers for starters. COVERT FEMA camps and Thousands built caskets under guise of HR 645 UNWIT. Massive ops wiki and brainwash underway! American homes and jobs, with our children since Apollo 13 but with shadow Apollo 11 documented-7 witnesses never returned (Satellite) REMOTE VIEWING 24/7 spying is manipulating. Armies trained by our School of AMERICAS and set up mind controlling their people; South America now Working on ASIA. All Invaded Countries... Breaking The SOUND Barrier; Democracy NOW! pg 214+. BEAM WARFARE. SOA...It's everywhere including CIA VALERIE PLAME technology weapons, Bay of Pigs invasion, and Juan Cole Scandals. RIK and Air Force waste as SAIC etc. AGN As Contract guards behaviors, linguistics and security in Embassies, F-22 waste DC, Bldgs & Govt lock down, & impeded, information warfare, in (bubble) kept in dark for yrs. during process and false beliefs! Why is Palestines economy growing 10% a yr. with new Malls and we cant Revolution in mass accordingly!

Death Ray for planes was Teslas invention in 1940 and a $2,000,000.00 device to zap and melt an airplane motor 250 miles away and an Invisible Chinese Wall of defense was built around the Country, no matter how large an attack, (Teleforce, manifests FREE energy and creates rays; zapping beams, the new invisible war). (Dr. Becker, Naomi Wolf, and Sharon Weinberger Imaginary Weapons).., this Warden cliff Tower is in full action in Long Island NY, along with 36 other stations or sites as GWEN, Globally that beam massive volume of Free Energy. (The New York Times, Sunday September 22, 1940-Science and Patents, Education News) One COSTLY energy zap causes by NLP suggestion transmitted to individuals; confusion, mistakes, trip/fall, body temp-freeze, heat, miscommunication, fatigue, focus/ concentration, radio-sleep (Kucinich-US patented under MKDELTA), and stalling any engine. HAARP, Body Electric, and Mass Control Human Engineering. Artificial intelli gence..

Dr. MILTON FRIEDMAN- Freedoms ARE THE moral of HUMAN---Abolish most Agencies and WHY. <http://www.humanevents.com/UncommonKnowledge.php> FB. ECONOMIST (5 segments post-humously-2006)

Israel-framed while dividing all people to conquer! CIA predicts, (no creating) to carry out-water (WAR) and pricing shortage, 2015-mind control transmissions zaps dry heat in body and energy-taking us down, Israel, Africa. De-population Pentagon video staging us for next invasion. ASSASSINATED Allison Des Forges in Hudson River mind control plane Crash-Staged and Senator Ed Ted Kennedy zapped. Both Civil Rights Africa, Water and Dry Land zapped already planning to invade them and brainwash one world govt. Emulating the Torah scriptures! Manchurians, and IRS, CIA bldgs/files in WT7! Surreptitiously!

Major cities experiment to increase crime in the 70s by mind control EVOLVED never ceased GENERATING BIGGER GOVT, INDUCING MISHAPS-MISFORTUNES, entrapment and now TERRORISM? Infiltrations of BRAINWASHING SCHOOLS-WEAKEN their ARMY take down ISRAEL and America going Global Agenda. Infiltrated Palestinians-Wars provoked still in manifest; Under the Auspices/Scapegoating Drugs they brought in Conspiracy. NOT from drugs or your TV- SEE TIME photo/Article (Oct 1971) below Infiltrations and excuses on all aspects of ELF attacks.

Egypt largest Military, Turkey Sibel gagged SSP created doubts and to hide conspiracy agenda of NWO) CIA masterminds. A public brainwashed to allow it unwittingly, in the White House, to next calamity and Global Domination Conspiracy of the minds! Connecting 50 yrs of dots! ie; General Anthony Zinni (wikipedia) Changed minds! (Brainwash on the job as many others, see how its done) CIA Predicts The Future 2015 - Water Resources. 2007 video/comments. (Unwitting agents channeled to Infiltrate) Waging War since the Church Committee 1974! Charges were made 2 administrations concerned and NEVER ABOLISHED. May be drawn into the fight trying to stop it John McWethy. Taking over the Globe under the disguise of helping others tactics. An unwitting population targeted in advance! DARPA (trailing Science 50 yrs as new MKULTRA) Psyops deployed 50 yrs on civilians. ELECTRONIC WARFARE! http://www.liveleak.com/view?i=bb0_1180923539 Mc Wethy video

Larry Silverstein OWNER of 911 TOWER 7, set up in advance to get insurance and transmitted forced speech/DECISION to "pull" to firefighters as if involved-NSA transmissions-SABOTAGED as Russell Tice Article Is the NSA conducting war on Americans (YES, tip of iceberg) 2006 and Media asked, why press didn't pick it up other than NBC? Operation Mockingbird propaganda unwittingly, updated remote viewing and impairment mind control as misunderstandings. A PRESIDENT WHO ONCE TOOK AN OATH TO CIVIL RIGHTS AND ACCUSED THE GOVERNMENT OF CREATING AIDS! They did! 911 They did!

Sunstein's Report-Cognitive impairment infiltration is unwitting NOT hired Gangs, creating illusion-Un-realized Kinesthetic! Creating false perception for decades on civilians. Reagan erased with Alzheimer mind control (NLP) CIA programming. OPERATION MIND CONTROL (1973) Plans to Psycho civilize you and MACROCOSM Americas Corporate Leaders and Official, AND civilians. Preempted.

Un-Covered documentary CONGRESS MARIONETTES not READING infozapped, to invade Iraq. Mind controlled Out-Foxed video for years-media mockingbird unwittingly, UNREALIZED, updated! The joke culture, misfits in the pentagon cult of intelligence and a dysfunctional country! Allen Dulles 1957" Berle wrote in his diary. "If the scientists do what they have laid out for themselves, men will become manageable ants." Below www.mireilletorjman.com FULL disclosures. USAs ILLITERACY. Hadassah 90 Billions in Ponzi sabotage away from Jerusalem HOSP (Laser/vision) funding. Re-Distributing the WEALTH from Jews manipulating our economy further than Corporations. Always keeping their enemy close, destroying files & buildings. They took down the economy behind the scenes!

Ariel Sharon zapped into coma (as I), Directed Energy Weapons as planes; because he knew the CIA was corrupt Sabotaging Israel. Kay Griggs Military whistleblower with MIND JABBING (control) attacks (Secret Societies) 1910 Yale Prescott Bush FUNDING NAZIs soldiers, KKK. DoD. USA Education system.

1967 USS liberty-Project Philadelphia (Hallucinations) blaming ISRAEL- mistake i n identity set up-framed, cutting off investigations & news coverage (as usual until exposed 2008 as the shuttle satellite cover up, Aliens, public corruption admissions, etc) Start of Anti-Semitism fanned unwittingly since 1947 Act. Alien UFO Hallucinations Scapegoating with LSD (that CIA brought in and sold to kids). Making Million off the Pharmaceutical (Rx) TAXES (as ALCOHOL INDUCED URGES), now being sued from synthetic side effects and transmitted Synthetic illnesses. After they mind controlled you and your teacher, professor to push prescriptions and the greed transmitted to make commercial on your drug inducement on Americans- VETS Agent Orange non-traceable! Military CANCER and Leukemia, lumps, to all under the disguise of microwaves cells infiltrating crimes & wars! GROUND 0 still 0.

Playing GOD (Project Voice of GOD) & devil-The CIA Cult of Intelligence born with National Security Act in 1947, Weapons Stations need to be dismantled ASAP. Buzz in Pentagon Synthetic Telepathy and Psychotronics predicted in 1967 video instant communication in the news un-wit, after

Public Speeches "Repeatedly staying the course" to brainwash invaded Countries with (excuses), GULF war, "The ENERGY will be just fine", (Not at all) "we will help one soul at a time". Hillary "I will not channel my husband" (as in ghost-like transmissions sabotaged Clinton Rumsfeld: There is what you know, you don't know... .. Didn't mean to say that or that's not what I meant Obama dividing the people to conquer with They like to do that, one against the other Called JACKETING in psyops. (Side effects of brainwash, and Mind Control confusions). America; The Remote Cult of Intelligence!

SEARCH for MANCHURIAN ego states such as an imaginary childhood playmate and build it into a separate personality, unknown to the first. The hypnotist would communicate directly with this schizophrenic offshoot and command it to carry out specific deeds kamikaze pilot. Manchurian crimes creating a subservient society was not out of sight- by mind control waves." And worse. UNWIT BAD LUCK....

GUANTANAMO scapegoats displays and focused on the wrong Weapons of mass destruction, brainwash and intelligence masterminded. (Nano thermal debris removed quickly). Cathy OBrien, Book TRANCE-formation AMERICA, SSP impeding truth. Never getting to full truth---INNOCENT and display for false blame. TIME/DELAYS for false confession Brainwash out memory & PLANT new before public contacts.

How the CIA Missed Stalin's Bomb, 1946-50-printed 2007 but updated 2008. ---Remote Viewing and surveillance CANNOT prevent anything as London Subway Bombing-(Staged)!!! Water and Odd/even days Petrol, CIA sabotage since 70s as drugs and crime all un-natural-inducing more plans for Florida.

Judge Napolitano, Lies the Government told you unwittingly until 2008 cover up pre-empted allegations with political and media transparency... DELUSIONS, RE-READ, and CONDONED corruptions! ILLUSIONS OF CRIMES statistics for 5 decades and misperceptions mind controlled.

Market inflations and real estate pricing and gouging was also accepted inducing from the mind on each individual and as a mass, and part of conspiracy agenda. Corrupting American Minds. And, the suicide??? of a Jewish CFO after 3 months as interim accountant at FANNIE MAE fraud.

Jewish Aaron Russo died of Cancer recently after going public that Rockefeller told him the only reason the WOMENS liberation was allowed to occur successfully was to COLLECT TAXES from them. They also manipulate couples lives as The Firm John Marks also wrote only the participant knows of this and is not only army. Invading Countries Under pretext of oil etc. for take over of humanity.

Did you know CIA operates on the ground wearing Yamacas & M.C. soldiers to frame Jews, destroying fruit trees and crops against the Torah scriptures +, as with our organic natural farms in the U.S. Why?

Did you know that the ISRAELI ART STUDENTS were framed and mind controlled where to live and accepted only in the areas to live as guided to set up and look involved? CONTRARY OF CIA GUILT CREATING DOUBT and so much more BEARING FALSE WITNESS from a neighbor, false memory, fake Govt help spinning their wheels. INTERNET & Google lawsuit, libraries, false accusations & false detainments? Capable and do manipulate all Internet remotely with passwords and minds from spying survei llance. As with False imprisoned masses. Sabotaged 911 Commission never to see the light, as 9 DOJ Attorneys asking questions-Fired at once when they could not be brainwashed to go along, and Generation GAPS again. (see Bay of Pigs framing College Students in air recommendations in 1959 etc)

Did you know Mind Controlled People and Media was is set up with tricks of false thoughts transmitted during conversation and output of written documents to put a SPIN on JOURNALISTS & civilians thus unknowingly creating PROPAGANDA, until now covering their tracks with blatant lies from our government? Decades of news from misunderstanding mind games, disputes, & slanders. No one high enough Q clearance! The behavioral sciences (Modification). Nevertheless, the final result is not the whole story of the CIA's attack on the mind. No one knows except the PARTICIPANT.

He called it Pain-Drug-Hypnosis and said it is a vicious war weapon ... The extensiveness of the use of this form of hypnotism in espionage work is now so widespread that it is long past the time when people should have become alarmed about it. [p. 75] Report

Duplicitous-Framing ISRAEL & piggybacked shadowing to scapegoat and set up! See how CIA tab +. INJECTED IDEOLOGY covertly INFILTRATING WORSE OVER TIME TO CHUNK & ACCEPT. BRAINWASH society and worse yet if not stopped and reversed. AND every thing is being mis-applied!

Israel: Seismic Energy to part sea & leave crevice, Israel small land & surrounded by 50 yrs of vast constant attacks, Israel has Palestinians who were EVICTED by their own people, Israel can't have chicken or cow suffer with Kosher scriptures and suffering---2nd level shadow CIA proven Diabolical! STOP Shadow CIA attacks-50 yrs PRESS FANNING Anti-Semitism and spinning all 2nd level CIA, Goldstone Report and 911, SS liberty ... dis-info, hallucinations, cognitive infiltration, illusions, wearing Yamacas on the Ground in disguise, psyops on Israel and cover-ups. Catherine Fitts Whistleblower Cracks are everywhere now. Leave Israel alone and we will have world peace! (Tice Article on SABOTAGE on all aspects of life.)

Inducing mind control on rioters coupled with funding them in Egypt to take them down WW3 as planned every time we invade a Country- see also George Green link video. 9/2010 Press release in SUPREME COURT below this one of ISRAEL whistleblowing CIA to take them down (1947 to current activities fanning opposites) as all our NEWS for decades by design. Information Warfare [1973].

DATA-MINING, why and SINCE 1973 FOIA includes genetics & 2nd Level CIA See Lt. Col Bearden slides and more of NEW frightening weapon the World has ever seen! RUSSIAN SCIENTIST SLIDE.

Mind Control-Directed Energy Weapons are responsible for MOST ILLNESSES, NEURO, Obesity, Immune, Central Nervous System. See Wired & Tice Article, 5 SENSES) KINESTHETIC wikipedia) Elec. Magnetic Fields. (MEMORY Mind/Body BLOCKAGES, ALZHEIMER-DIMENTIA as back to the future), Agent ORANGE, ADDHD, Equilibrium, Bladder, Colon, Leukemia, Numbness/ MS, Anesthesiology, AIDS, FIBROMALGIA, pains, PULMONARY, Bi-Polar, CONFUSION extra thought transmissions, MEMORY, DYSLEXIA, opposite suggestions to confuse, SKIN/BLOOD Flow/blocks/DISEASES, EPSTEIN BAR, Vision Sight, HOLOGRAMS, HALLUCINATIONS, Parkinsons, MIGRAINES, CANCER, Anthrax, Valley Fever, Flu like symptoms, Insomnia is sleep deprivation, Thyroid, Short Term Memory, (intercepted thoughts/speech) COGNITIVE IMPAIRMENTS, UN-Necessary procedures, Bi-polar/ADD (most misdiagnosed in America, Accidents, slip & falls, STROKES, Williams Syndrome Motor Coordination, Autism. & disorientation. False ALARMS all from the MIND; UNREALIZED forced speech emotions & mistakes, Epilepsy! (Dr Bearden) MORGELLANS! LIVER dialysis, kidney failures rampid in U.S. Hemorrhage energy heat pressure, Vaccine synthetic, ELF ills hiding behind PHARMACEUTICAL side effects..., RLS jolts of ELF light/elec, DIABETES II, and worse. HIDING BEHIND MSG or ASPERTAME including retardation Tourette, MUSCLE Controls, ELF reproduction and sweats on both male/female, STD, ARTHRITIS... much worse. INFLAMATION, Burning feet (Lasers usually seniors), BLISTERS, veins, SPLIT PERSONALITIES is a shift technique of NLP using remote electronic hypnosis, mood transmitted urges to eat act amplified thoughts, suggestions, thoughts back and forth, mind jabs -interrupt thoughts, with triggers of memory blocks, INDUCED ERASURES & DELAYS IN YOUR LIFE etc. Misplacing items/pills doubling up in trash mind games. Programmed MISFITS Diabolic, playing mind games since milk carton missing children recruited by coercion called Handlers. They cant see from your eyes but tell you to LOOK first and take the credit. Seniors mostly, HEARING DEAFNESS, BLINDNESS and PANACEAS. Responsible for much worse, would never sit on this kind of power with Weapons nicely tucked away, knowing no threats by Russias or Chinas and never w as by ELF.__Jerry Smith, & more!

Have you been mind controlled not to believe? Diabolical did not stop with what you already know today, that, I assure you, was the part ordered burned. Targeted for 5 years, tortured, and attempts to recruit for the CIA, now trained in NLP and the software from NASA with Woodpecker Scalar Waves that reach Russia but SHIELDED. It is intercepted in our air space as all else. I am a witness in danger and need to be heard to WARN the grave dangers, cover ups and every excuse possible for doubt including medicinal, that are in manifest. UNREALIZED NOW making it REAL and wit!

"Is the PENTAGON Science CRAZY ENOUGH?" Mind manipulations-Not just on Senators-See Articles/ Speeches Bottom Left. Remote Control Heart Attack Anyone! Explosions Decades ago.

WITHOUT A TRACE -Millions emails missing from WHITE HOUSE servers. Failed backups $2.5 mil in taxes to recover and NOTHING-2005 unwitting Pentagon's Unit: The Cult of Dead Cows! Also see CIA Stuxnet. CIA cyber crimes, ID theft, stalking, viruses, HACKERS.....! covering up, pawns since 2009. CIA cyber crimes, THEFT & Vandalism selectively, ON ALL CIVILITY, stalking, specific MS viruses creation, HACKERS, tampered communications, muting, redirected, manipulations, intercepted thoughts day or night.....! LOS ALAMOS LABS; STUXNET creation. AGAIN in the AUSPICES of losing your FREEDOMS infiltrations... Dr. Warloff and Moret.

Mysteries solved! Remote Viewing is upon you 24/7 since 1973-Science and Humanity under Siege with DoD Secret Society Psychotronics, Synthetic Telepathy DIRECTED ENERGY- (2nd Level CIA); THE WEAPON of MASS DESTRUCTION-ELF miscommunications Duping everyone today!

"It may have been the biggest story since the atom bomb. The headline, however, was small and ignored the larger issue. Drug Tests by CIA Held More Extensive Than Reported in 75, said the New York Times on July 16, 1977. ." "Zombie is a quaint, old-fashioned folklore word but its meaning becomes obscene when our childrens minds are being controlled ... [p.17][Note:1]

Pentagon Misfits- programming civility since 50% of milk carton children kidnapped ARRESTED EMOTIONS AGGRANDIZEMENT (NARCISSISM)! To RAMPID crimes, corruption, to AGGRANDIZEMENT OF GOVERNMENT justifications FOR TAX REVENUES and Fascism teen...suicides, Diabetes, ECO. & ills-Bombers-erupted, CANCER, ALZHEIMER, Fibromyalgia, Immune See List (Project Montauk below L) The cult of Intelligence, documents. DRUGS do not make you commit crimes; the WILL does! How America was/is Mind Controlled behind scenes to Police crimes infiltrations and drugs, Politicians Military, Media, Channeled Hollywood minds, UN-REALIZED! Breach, Bourne etc Ron Paul says: CIA runs Everything but this website content is HOW: SHADOW/2nd level took off (1973) one year prior Church Commission Report with psyop MHchaos-FOIA- NO WONDER BIG BROTHER has been into every ASPECT and PROFESSION of AMERICANS. Keeping enemies close. Picking up on everyone and their genetics and events or cults or investigation, TAMPERING with MINDS NOT JUST OUR CULTURE. Mistakes, Accidents, coincidences, your soul/ karma.

ELF directed energy weapon of mass.... Spread the word. We need a Revolution Abolish CIA 2nd level and NSAct. BP framed to cover up Gov't Lab Venice FL RED TIDE -ELF infects since 1947 below Democracy NOW Air Force paralysis with a decision made one way or other. TRIED TO WARN CONGRESS in 2008 with dismissed manipulations, sabotage, and disbelief. 911 Kamikaze Pilots Mind Controlled robots on US So il (Manchurians) suicide bombers as are Globalists. Bohemian Grove culture burning babies etc... our Joke culture to the Globe pre 2008.

Our ENGINEERED CULTURE of INFILTRATIONS, COVER UPS and WHITEWASH (2008) The ROOT of ALL Problems, still in manifest! The Matrix began long ago and the spying is after the fact of CIA 2nd level-took off in 1973 one year prior. How you are letting mind control happen with brainwashing of disbelief... trickery of your will! Beliefs of their thoughts planted/transmitted as your own-daily manipulations

The rest of the world didn't ask until 1976 the type of questions we were facing in 1965.... Everybody was afraid of building the supersoldier who would take orders without questioning, like the kamikaze pilot. 70's Manchurian crimes Creating a subservient society was not out of sight- by mind control.

FBI HOOVER "clandestine warfare avowed objective had been WORLD DOMINATION by whatever means and COST!" FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, who ordered FBI agents to "expose, disrupt, misdirect, discredit, or otherwise neutralize" the activities of these movements and their leaders.

INVENTING/INDUCING and APPLIED (NLP) Paranoid Schizophrenia, Moods, Mental BLOCKS, Grandeur Aggrandizement, etc. is only a thought from a trigger and anchors NSA CIA shadow transmissions, amplifications. Tavistock: Best kept secret in America and Govt RAND Corp primary function Brainwash -CIA NLP not Freudian mind control ills! AMA-Synthetic telepathy, false memory syndrome/ confession/ bearing false witness. Montauk Project (1943) A group which has as it's prime goal the further acquisition of ever-greater raw, oppressive power over the actual lives of it's own continued aggrandizement and enrichment at the expense not only of Earth's people but most certainly of the planet itself and all its many life forms Start of a LOCKED DOOR SOCIETY transmitted fears

Pretext for Tyranny Gifford Shooting always a new law to infiltrate the whitewashing of The Constitution & Human Rights. FREEDOM! Gifford decoy/ EXPLOIT of Manchurian Synthetic ills and CRIMES- Surreptitious ASSASSINATION of a FEDERAL JUDGE by Manchurians crimes. Civil rights African crops and surreptitious cover up-CIA MASTERMINDS/CONTROL. Surveillance under the AUSPICES of and in disguise of existing remote viewing from Satellite Engineered a Human Matrix! Suggested Moods, pre-and post Manipulations, perceptions, positive vs negative, your dis/likes, your outlook thus decisions, etc

Invented Bullying, Bring it on, song and a dance to direct questions skirting avoiding answers, ANGER management escalations, stonewalling, murphys law, time length illusions-line in the mind, time flies, twists, making it real stages, out of context, distortions, inconsistencies, much more by transmitted thoughts mind games, manipulated conversations, opposites, backwards, ying and yang, PHONE TAG, etc... Civil rights Africa... CIA MASTERMINDS of AGENDA too busy, to dismiss this, & sensory deprivation unrealized stress induced and another year goes by off 50 with unwitting cognitive infiltration un-wit in disconnects in White House to next calamity. ITS not the PRESIDENTS, its the handlers!-----Mind Control-answer to all mis-information DC, GAZA disconnects 2009, RHETORIC, lies, dis-information GAPS, illusions, non-sense. GOLDSTONE REPORT, USS Liberty SET UP S... Mind Control Root of ALL problems. Talk about it FAN it! Looking beyond the messengers! CASES NEVER PROVEN in CRIMES AND SCIENCE settled-----! Mind Controlled suicides and redistribution of wealth. M. Monroe Is there a needle mark under her arm as well?

God Bless America, God Bless Humanity!

Assange

Secrets are for a reason and secret abuses are impossible to correct unless you know they are going on. Knowing their plans before they are implemented to oppose before they occur. If they are exposed by the people already suffering by the abuse, then the abuse has already occurred and it is too late.

When even one American -who has done wrong- is forced by fear to shut his mind and close his mouth, then all Americans are in peril. Harry S. Truman

JFK speech

The very word "secrecy" is repugnant in a free and open society; and we are as a people inherently and historically opposed to secret societies, to secret oaths and to secret proceedings. We decided long ago that the dangers of excessive and unwarranted concealment of pertinent facts far outweighed the dangers which are cited to justify it. Even today, there is little value in opposing the threat of a closed society by imitating its arbitrary restrictions. Even today, there is little value in insuring the survival of our nation if our traditions do not survive with it. And there is very grave danger that an announced need for increased security will be seized upon by those anxious to expand its meaning to the very limits of official censorship and concealment. That I do not intend to permit to the extent that it is in my control. And no official of my Administration, whether his rank is high or low, civilian or military, should interpret my words here tonight as an excuse to censor the news, to stifle dissent, to cover up our mistakes or to withhold from the press and the public the facts they deserve to know.

PLANNED WARS TO INFILTRATE COMMUNISM! Dividing all to conquer! Brainwashing & WHITEWASHING HISTORY is underway! THE MOTHER OF ALL EVIL-CIA Technology Changing minds and hearts, including Presidents! And vice versa CONTROLLING MENTAL BLOCKS. Disarming you-Gun Control, for a manipulated REVOLUTION hijacked passwords, www in the 90's, 911, now Exec. Order 11005 take over waterways martial law Katrina Massacres, Plans, to HR 1955 reversed freedom of thought! Unwittingly infiltrating NLP tactics Psyops. OPPOSITES! Dr. Robert Becker was the major researcher and writer on health dangers from electromagnetic fields; he died a few months ago, in summer 2008 warned INDUCED ELF/EMF-disconnects in White House to next calamity.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM, AND SCHOOL BOOKS WITH FALSE MEDICINE and FALSE TESTS RESULTS and Engineered lives all from the mind! Voting, www. and all tests can and are tampered. Have you read "Lies the Government told you"? READ twice- Perceptions in AMERICA-LONDON Subway CIA- INSIDE JOB- Remote Viewing, Surveillance and Searches -STAGED! Changed perception, depression.

John Marks-CIA BUILDING/Search MANCHURIANS since Hitler (who had electronic epilepsy himself) and MKULTRA on German Soldiers--- You are not losing your minds THEY TAKE IT!-<http://www.freedomwatch.org/> Our Soldier admits guilt to representation of TERRORISM.

Press release below June 2008 was impeded from going out in Boston. The sender reported Disappeared; A growing number of Americans have reported symptoms that include but are not limited to severe physical trauma such as shocks, stings, burning, nausea, and sleep deprivation. Targeted individuals of domestic terrorism originate from many different backgrounds and are affected in a physical, psychological, social, and financial manner as a result of directed energy weapons assaults. The average American would be astonished to learn the extent to which secret surveillance technology has advanced from remote viewing and manipulation; torture of the human mind and body horrendous abuses. Measures must be taken to free "The mind control examined in this book is the control of ONE individuals mind by ANOTHER!" Guided, misled, by the public UNWITTINGLY used as pawns (jacketed) one against the other with everything the OPPOSITE, manipulated, and dysfunctional! (1973)

First. Then they came for the communists. I didn't object because I wasn't a communist. Then they came for the trade-unionists. I didn't object because I wasn't a trade-unionist. Then they came for the Jews. I didn't object because I wasn't a Jew. Then they came for me and there was no one left to help me. "We must hang together or we will surely hang separately" ...Ben Franklin

This website information is awakening debunking/educating raising awareness, on humanity, a FULL DISCLOSURE Correction of 5 DECADES of 2nd level CIA mind controlled DIS-information, MIS-COMMUNICATION, non-sense, blinders/blocks, unconsciously, manipulating YOUR conversations, not on same wavelength) or/ sabotage create d by Mind Control ELF waves & Energy, (1974) CIA Neuro-linguistic Programming. Directed ENERGY Weapon used nefariously deployed on ALL people as pawns UNWITTINGLY, or undetectable, illusions, robots, every body's doing the locomotion, CANCER. "Information Warfare tactics" and the new ways to ASSASSINATE civilians currently. Not the Patriot ACT after THE FACT as ALL else. SURREPTITIOUSLY! SLOW KILLS Legal!

130 Facts and Examples, see induced ills; LIST on bottom left and (Pharma (Rx) Taxes; Tab)- Collectively by a Mind Control victim Expert Witness (NLP) Federal Whistleblower 1st hand, Warning "We the People" "Impeded, Gagged, tortured, squashed, disrupted, threatened, for 5 years, now being set up +. Never believe anything until it is officially denied". Illusions scapegoating our Media after 50 yrs victims of created spin, dis-information WARFARE etc... by mind control UNREALIZED & cognitive impairment infiltrations on all people. "Why hasn't the press--aside from MSNBC--covered NSA Tice's revelations! Or mine. Let the people decide; Millions would come forward. BREACHED contracts OVERSEAS SPYING to manipulate. Massive brainwash also in manifest! Another layer! Wikileaks staged lessor evil etc

Dr. Robert O Becker was the major researcher and writer on health dangers from electromagnetic fields, he died a few months ago, in summer 2008 warned INDUCED ELF/EMF-"John Wayne and Susan Hayward died CANCER decades after movie and unexpected wind shift and MONSANTO sabotage. FARMING cases!" ANY ADDICTION, and FRAMING Tobacco Co. Page 307/347 THE BODY ELECTRIC DoD!

Summary information: CIA brainwashing We the People for decades engineering our lives and culture unwittingly with mind and body control, corruptions to destroy humanity (jacketing) one against the other divide and conquer world Domination selecting who will live. Wake up America. Wake up Washington! The secret holocaust & WWII in MANIFEST. Un-realized and programmed. Now forging ahead

Pg 16

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=zeMZGGQ0ERk&feature=player_embedded THIS video is about the PROCESS. WASHINGTON will be shot after the CRISIS step 4 of mind control Brainwash over decades- slow kills... Do you believe a RUSSIAN or are you targeted? They always kill you when you are done serving. See below creating subervient civilians and torture goes on illegally anyway. Legalizing it is only for us civilians and what is coming (N.W.O. a silent holocaust) with no recourse or redress available on civil rights. Illusions, transmitted false thoughts, crimes infiltrated now Making it REAL. After 50 yrs of spy devices being installed and attached today overtly as all else shadowed.

CIA bomb makers to start, AND Mind Controlled Crimes Magnus Olsson Swede; CIA has Nazis but COVERT in Pentagon etc <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=EQQv-mfCUeg&feature=share> Memory Mind control to $ invest & lose ALL, and they play with the MEMORY A LOT. Former Hitler Youth Whistleblower Warns Of America's Nazi Future on line videos This is how they will KILL us! ISRAEL first! <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=VNJTtUhZxaY&NR=1> V For 911 Vendetta Past Present and Future www.youtube.com --- brilliant!!!! George Green and Israel first Plans for WW3

EXPLOSIONS of: Alien hallucinations, ill list pg. 9, crimes, corruption culture, CANCER, obesity, dumb down bureaucracy, zombies, surreptitiously and unrealized infiltrations until 2008 explosions made overtly!

Number of American civilians who died worldwide in terrorist attacks last year: 8 - Minimum number who died after being struck by lightning: 29." Spinning their wheels freeing 6,000 terrorists falsely accused, while assassinating who they really want, and BILLIONS a YEAR just to surveil us nefariously and worse agendas still, un-wit. mireilletorjman.blogspot.com

Mind control planted ideas in advance as Hollywood and RUMORS of Bear Stearns, and Bay of Pigs starting them in advance including musicians. Playing psychics and mind games AND 911 prediction in 1999 by Coulter. Charlotte Iserbyt Navy/Education Skull/Bones DoD Technology and Bush/Hoover. <http://www.infowars.com/charlot> te-iserbyt-skull-bones-the-order-at-yale-revealed/

Pg 16 photos to follow:

"I don't know whose idea it was, but we decided to kill ourselves because it was so horrendous what was happening," Ruth Madoff told the CBS program "60 Minutes," Michael Moore said OWS was already surfacing and ready to explode when he came in. He was the pawn. Stated can't stop it and 59% like never before on Democracy Now! OWS M Moore connect it to money pentagon mil complex and to corp being scapegoated and taken over and ONLY reason came home from IRAQ is because we got kicked out or would be there decades more. But the 10 yr contract PATRIOT ACT; "Number of American civilians who died worldwide in terrorist attacks last year: 8 - Minimum number who died after being struck by lightning: 29." In last 10 yrs and $75 Billion later on us & Surveillance equip EVERY EFFORT HAS BEEN MADE TO SET ME UP, PRE-EMPTY, DISCREDIT ME and cover up.

The White Rose, was formed by students at the University of Munich in 1941 after serving the GERMAN ARMY, and executed by guillotine shouting Long Live Freedom-dropping leaflets in Revolution for SOCIAL JUSTICE <http://www.spartacus.schoolnet.co.uk/GERwhiterose.htm>

First hand experience and trained and certified in hypnosis and Neurolinguistic programming.

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Uoi5u3zx0HA> INTERVIEW Dr W. BOWART after Death Threats.

###

BP spill below

Home Bizarro Air Force Plan: Hack Your Nervous System

Air Force Plan: Hack Your Nervous System

This is the first of a two-part series on plasma and electromagnetic weapons by David Hambling, author of Weapons Grade: How Modern Warfare Gave Birth to Our High-Tech World.

The brain has always been a battlefield. New weapons might be able to hack directly into your nervous system.

Controlled Effects (see image, right) is one of the Air Force's ambitious long-term challenges. It starts with better and more accurate bombs, but moves on to discuss devices that make selected adversaries think or act according to our needs.

By studying and modeling the human brain and nervous system, the ability to mentally influence or confuse personnel is also possible.

The first stage is technology to remotely create physical sensations. They give the example of the Active Denial System people zapper which uses a high-frequency radiation similar to microwaves as a non-lethal means of crowd control.

Other weapons can affect the nervous system directly. The Pulsed Energy Projectile fires a short intense pulse of laser energy. This vaporizes the outer layer of the target, creating a rapidly-expanding ball of plasma. At different power levels, those expanding plasmas could deliver a harmless warning, stun the target, or disable them all with pinpoint laser precision from a mile away.

Early reports on the effects of PEPs mentioned temporary paralysis, then thought to be related to ultrasonic shockwaves. It later became apparent that the electromagnetic pulse caused by the expanding plasma was triggering nerve cells. Details of this emerged in a heavily-censored document released to Ed Hammond of the Sunshine Project under the Freedom of Information Act. Called Sensory consequence of electromagnetic pulsed emitted by laser induced plasmas, it described research on activating the nerve cells responsible for sensing unpleasant stimuli: heat, damage, pressure, cold. By selectively stimulating a particular nociceptor, a finely tuned PEP might sensations of say, being burned, frozen or dipped in acid all without doing the slightest actual harm.

The skin is the easiest target for such stimulation. But, in principle, any sensory nerves could be triggered. The Controlled Effects document suggests it may be possible to create synthetic images to confuse an individual's visual sense or, in a similar manner, confuse his senses of sound, taste, touch, or smell.

In other words, it may be possible to use electromagnetic means to create overwhelming sound or light, or indeed intolerable smell which would exist only in the brain of the person perceiving them. There is another side as well. The sensory consequences document also notes that the nervous system which controls muscles could be influenced to cause what they call Taser-like motor effects. The stun guns ability to shock the muscles into malfunction is relatively crude; we might now be looking at are much more targeted effects.

Tomorrow: Moscow moves in.

Remote-controlled heart attacks, anyone?

David Hambling February 13th, 2006 | Bizarro, Lasers and Ray Guns | Comments (211)

Democracy Now! Interview: BP oil spill.

And it didnt fail because people were you know, wanted something bad to happen or were not trying to do the best that they could, but what we discovered was that there was a kind of paralysis that gripped this vast rig in critical places at critical times. And what it resulted in is it resulted in people not taking the steps, not deploying some of these safety systems, or trying to deploy them but deploying them too late, when the damage had already been done. And the net effect of this paralysis is that for nine minutes, from when the blowout first hit the rig until these crippling explosions that basically left this a dead ship, those nine minutes, there was no alarm, general alarm, issued to the 126 people who were on this rig. So, for most of the people on the rig, the first time they really understood that there was a major crisis going on was when the explosions ripped through this oil rig, in many cases injuring people, in some cases quite, quite devastating injuries burns, broken bones, that kind of thing.

JUAN GONZALEZ: Well, David, it is a fascinating account. And as I told you before the show started, its not every day that I read a full New York Times multi-page story. But this one really read like a novel, in terms of what actually happened. And especially, as you say, it wasnt just a failure of the equipment, but there were several moments when key decisions were made by these experienced people that, had they made a decision one way-Barstow-YES

Home Bizarro Pentagon Science: Crazy Enough?

Pentagon Science: Crazy Enough?

Is fringe science good for military technology?

Sharon Weinberger is, to put it mildly, skeptical. Her book, Imaginary Weapons [being discussed tonight in New York ed.], tells the tangled story of the struggle between the isomer believers who think a Hafnium bomb it can be made to work, and the doubters who think is based on impossible science. Im not so sure. Fringe science is a label that history applies after the event to failures; successes are immediately transferred to the mainstream. What looks like ridiculous like fringe tinkering at the time may later be seen as pioneering genius. It struck me while writing my book, Weapons Grade, that revolutionary advances tend to come from outside the mainstream. This is pretty much true by definition: if a concept is already in the mainstream then it will not be revolutionary. Lets look at three cases of kooks who came good after years in the wilderness: the Spaceman, the Flyboy, and Mr. Death Ray.

Case one is the Spaceman, who spent his career dreaming of travel to other planets. He was suspicious of others and tended to work on his own, refusing to publish many of the details of his work. His report on how he spent a $5,000 grant from the Smithsonian was roundly mocked in the press especially the New York Times, which said he should go back and learn some high school physics. His biggest success was to send a craft a distance of 184 feet into a cabbage patch.

The Spaceman took his plans for giant weapons based on his space drive to the mi lilitary, but nobody was convinced they were feasible. Twenty years earlier his idea for an infantry weapon using a music stand had also been shelved.

The Spaceman was in fact Robert Goddard, pioneer of the liquid-fuelled rocket. NASAs Goddard Space Center is named in his honor. Three years after the military turned him down, German V-2 rockets started raining down on London. The V-2 directly drew on Goddards work from the 1920s; the Nazis had rounded up amateur rocket enthusiasts, who called themselves Societies For Space Travel and set them to building a weapon based on his liquid-fuelled design. Goddards portable rocket was also resurrected the shoulder-mounted rocket launcher, or Bazooka, became an important infantry weapon.

On July 17th 1969, the day after Armstrong and Aldrin set foot on the moon, the New York Times published a correction to its 1920 story, accepting that Goddard was right: it is now definitely established that a rocket can function in a vacuum as well as in an atmosphere. The Times regrets the error.

Case two is the Flyboy, a 22-year-old airman who was convinced he could build better aircraft engines than anything that existed at the time. When he took his designs to his superiors, he was told they were nothing new, and that better men with more experience had failed to get similar plans to work. The working temperatures were too high for any known material, the efficiencies required were too great, and the fuel consumption would be far too high. Very interesting my boy, one distinguished aeronautics professor remarked, but it will never work. The official rejection was scarcely less patronizing: It must be remembered that a tremendous amount of work is being done, and you may rest assured the criticisms made of your scheme were made with the full knowledge of the results achieved by a actual experiment. The design was going nowhere. Five years later the patent lapsed; the military did not think it was worth renewing, and Flyboy could not afford the fee. He kept working at it though, building prototypes in a tiny workshop on a shoestring budget scraped together from family and friends. The Flyboy was Frank Whittle, the jet engine pioneer, whose designs form the basis for almost all modern jet engines. He only started to get taken seriously when it became clear in 1939 that the Germans had flown a jet aircraft and were storming ahead in development. The RAF had thrown away a lead of several years: if Whittle had been taken seriously in 1929, the Battle of Britain might have been fought with jet aircraft instead of Spitfires. Hans Von Ohain, who developed jets in Germany, even suggested that WWII might not have happened if Britain possessed jets, as Hitler would have doubted the Luftwaffes ability to win. Case 3 is the radio Death

Ray. Rockets and jet engines may have attracted some ridicule, but death rays were even more absurd. When Marconi developed a directional radio transmitter in 1924, it seemed every crackpot in the word was building one. One of the most notable self-publicists was Harry Matthews known to the media as Death Ray Matthews who claimed his apparatus could kill mice and shrivel plants at a distance, and that a weapon based on it would have a range of up to eight miles. Although radio waves could do serious damage at close range, anything beyond a few feet was less plausible. In the US, the Armys Aberdeen Proving Ground offered a standing reward to anyone who could produce a death ray capable of killing a tethered goat. Britains Air Ministry put up a similar prize to the inventor whose ray could kill a sheep at a range of a hundred yards.

Neither animal was ever seriously endangered. So great was the public clamor for death rays in Britain that the Air Ministry appointed a committee to look into them. After considerable research, Dr. Robert Watson-Watt reported on February 4th, 1935 that although in theory it was possible to bring down an aircraft with a radio beam, the power required was far in excess of what was possible in practice. Having done the work, the Ministry then asked Watson-Watt whether, in the absence of death rays, anything useful could be done with these radio beams. Watson-Watt had found that aircraft reflected radio waves, and he drew up a paper entitled The Detection and Location of Aircraft by Radio Means. Three weeks after the Death Ray paper, the first test was carried out, showing conclusively that an aircraft could be located from the radio waves it reflected. Radio direction finding, later known as Radar, became one of the RAFs most important tools and was kept strictly secret. In each of these cases the breakthrough has come from outside the mainstream, and each of them has had a lasting impact. Goddard's rockets paved the way for satellite technology, global communications, GPS, and space imaging (can you imagine weather forecasts without satellite maps?). Whittles jet engine revolutionized air travel, and we now take for granted our ability to fly the world quickly and cheaply. And although the death-ray enthusiasts were on the wrong track entirely, they were responsible for radar and the related rise in radio-frequency technology, including everything from microwave ovens to lasers. Revolutionary progress is always going to involve going beyond the mainstream, because if something is in the mainstream already it is part of the slow process of incremental change. It is only the outsiders often working alone and without sufficient funding who can bring in those radical innovations.

It's easy to laugh at new ideas, whether they are space rockets, giant electronic brains or manned flight. Supposed experts in the relevant field often reject such ideas out of hand, not bothering to look closely at the data, and dismiss them as impossible. But it's surprising how quickly these impossible things become commonplace. We live in an age where robotic terminators taking out terrorists by remote control from thousands of miles away with laser-guided weapons are a routine news story. Look at the cutting edge of military technology and you see plenty of ideas which are derided by the established authorities. I've covered lots of stories where this has been the case: The supercavitating penetrator is said to be impossible, as is plasma stealth, not to mention the Slingatron space launcher and radio-frequency devices which hack the human nervous system. Small incremental improvements based on existing ideas are never going to produce the weapons which give decisive advantages like ballistic missiles, jet engines and radar. To paraphrase the great physicist Niels Bohr: We all know the Pentagon has some crazy ideas. The question is, are they crazy enough?

David Hambling

Village Psy-ops by digby SALON and ROLLING STONE MAGAZINE

Wow. If you want to see some Village circling of the wagons, take a look at this "report" on the Army Psy-ops program against congressional leaders by Norah O'Donnell:

Tamron Hall: Norah, I saw you on Morning Joe talking about this. This is a real buzz story, for many reasons, but now you have General David Petraeus calling for an investigation regarding the seriousness of what was going on.

O'Donnell: That's right Tamron, it was a very serious allegation because of course it's against the law for the United States military to use propaganda with American citizens and that's why we saw this very quick response from the top General in Afghanistan, General David Petraeus who is now preparing to order an investigation into these charges that there was an Army unit that was trained in psy-ops that was ordered to manipulate American senators even members of the joint Chiefs of Staff.

Now that said, I have been talking to a number of sources today who have said one, that any report coming from The Rolling Stone and this author Michael Hastings, who also "went after" another general, Stanley McCrystal, should be met with a healthy dose of skepticism. The title of this Tamron, is "Another Runaway General" remember that Michael Hastings already brought down another General, Stanley McCrystal.

Two, this general is in question, General Michael Caldwell, he is the head of training the Afghan security forces. This is the lynchpin, Tamron! The lynchpin of the war in Iraq [sic]. This is how we get out of Iraq [sic] and make sure Afghan security forces are trained. Just this last week, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs was praising Caldwell, saying he'd done such a great job training many of these Afghan forces.

And finally, this Rolling Stone article has Michael Holmes as its source, he led this allegedly this five man psy-ops team. He said that he was ordered to plant information in these people's heads. I think that he was there was a number of people who will be looking into his allegations, they are taking it very seriously but I can tell you that a number of people in the military and the defense department who are not happy with The Rolling Stone because of what happened earlier with general Stanley McChrystal.

Hall: They can't be happy with it, but if it's what happened, the person is reporting it and it's factual, then that's what they have to deal with. You're not always happy with the truth.

O'Donnell: That's true, but remember that they, they still question a lot of the previous article even though that brought down General Stanley McChrystal.

Norah O'Donnell seemed very agitated.

Think about this. You have a big story that claims the military was using propaganda and psychological training on US Senators. If it's true, it's a big deal. And the military is logically very upset that the story has been reported and they are busily spinning reporters that the reporter and the publication are unreliable and they shouldn't be believed. Ok fine.

But what's truly amazing about this is that they are apparently selling this as a "national security" necessity since the General who is implicated in this is allegedly the "lynchpin" of the Afghan training program, which I guess we're supposed to take on faith --- and overlook any little unpleasantness like illegally trying to brainwash US Senators. Unbelievable.

I realize that everyone hates the fact that Michael Hastings breaks the Village rules and reports what he's heard and seen rather than keeping the government's secrets. Nothing upsets most journalists more than that. After all, if you fail to keep everything important off the record how ever will you get the little irrelevant tidbits you need for those sycophantic beat sweeteners?

As far as I know nothing Hastings reported about what McChrystal said wasn't true. What the military -- and most of the press corps are mad about is that he was apparently supposed to let that "sort of thing" go because it's a breach of protocol to reveal what your sources are telling you when they are just "blowing off steam." Moreover, it's got a sanctimonious air about it in that reporting accurately on what these General really do could "endanger the troops" or American national security, which is just cheap.

In fact, now that I think about it, it might be worth considering whether the military tried out this "psy-ops" program on the American press corps before then unleashed it on the US Senate. It explains a lot.

Update: Oh, I forgot. That last is literally true.

OPERATION MIND CONTROL MANUAL see RESOURCE TAB

False Memory Syndrome Foundation (FMSF) which sprang suddenly up from nowhere...

See symptoms of THE PROCESS on some cases at Resources

More mind control on America's Leaders

Quote from John Marks of many more clues in his book. CIA has been picking up on groups since the 70's and DATA MINING since then (FOIA) inclusive of SCIENTOLOGY, GAY/LESBIAN and INDUCING BEHAVIORS ON AMERICANS and SCIENCE.

"Hofmann recalls he felt "horrific... I was afraid. I feared I was becoming crazy. I had the idea I was out of my body. I thought I had died. "

"Out of these feelings and out of that overriding American faith in advancing technology came the CIA's attempts to tame hostile minds and make spy fantasies real. Experiments went forward and the CIA's scientists bitten, sometimes obsessed kept going back to their laboratories for one last adjustment."

Dr. Bowart

39. FALSE MEMORY SPINDROME

Memory is illusive in some cases, vivid in others. A Roper poll conducted in 1993 suggested that up to 20 million people in North America may have memories of "alien" abductions. In 1994 Dr. Colin Ross said that he heard someone on a CBC ra radio broadcast say that they had evidence that 750,000 babies had been ritually sacrificed. FBI ritual abuse "debunker" Kenneth Lanning in 1992 said that there were 50,000 missing children in the U.S., which law enforcement reports said people believed were "being murdered in human sacrifices..." Incest and child sexual abuse reached epidemic proportions. The generally accepted statistics in 1993 were as follows: * One out of three girls and one of five boys would be sexually molested before the age of eighteen. * A child was sexually abused every 2 minutes with over 95% of the abusers being someone the child knows and trusts. * For every case reported, there were twenty-five cases that went unreported. * Only 5% of all sexual abuse cases ever went to court. In 50% of those cases the child was returned to the abuser. * Approximately 97% of child prostitutes were incest victims. * Child sexual abuse was a major cause of teenage suicide. * One in ten homes were involved in child sexual abuse. * A high percentage of abused children develop dissociative identity disorders. Then, just as the legions of abused children (now grown to adulthood) were beginning to remember satanic abuse, (the ranks of diagnosed cases of Multiple Personality Disorder had reached 25,000 in the U.S.) and Harvard University's Dr. John Mack was enjoying celebrity as the author of a book on alien abductions, and about twenty percent of those diagnosed as suffering from Multiple Personality Disorder (MPD) were being discovered to have military or intelligence backgrounds, a "robust and adroit" public relations effort was mounted against those who were beginning to remember all sorts of details which related to their abuse as children. Groups were quickly formed to debunk such "nonsense." One was spearheaded by a woman who was herself named by her daughter as a child abuser. Her name was Pamela Freyd and her organization was the

1. New waves discovered

Longitudinal EM energy fills vacuum of space, the time domain of spacetime, time as compressed energy, $E=tc^2$, waves of time, phase conjugate wave pairs.

"Electric power is everywhere present in unlimited quantities and can drive the world's machinery without the need of coal, oil, gas, or any other of the common fuels." Nikola Tesla

"At any point and at any time, one can freely and inexpensively extract enormous EM energy flows directly from the active vacuum itself." Tom Bearden was a Lt Col Physicist (1960) His discussions are side effects of THE PROCESS of mind control and brainwash and includes CONFLICTING EMOTION and/or LOGIC or beliefs with change and loss of balance, non sense, etc.

Mireille Torjman
PO Box 57282 Tel 954.529.8684
Washington, DC 20037 Fax 301.762.2304
<http://www.mireilletorjman.com/> ThewhiteroseII@yahoo.com

March revised August 2, 2011

Dear Members of Congress:

I am writing to request a formal meeting to testify against the nefarious abuses of this Weapon of Mass Destruction, (NSA Transmissions) conspiring against humanity. This Directed Energy Weapon that has been kept secret for many decades. It is used Remotely by a 2nd LEVEL CIA on all civilians, not just a few Senators admitted to avert full disclosures, and not just until 1973 when the records were ordered both shredded and burned. This mind control weapon is engineering the crimes, corruption, and wars of this Country we let get to a Global point because we disbelieved in 1973. History repeating itself is being engineered at the 2nd level, behind the scenes, and by agenda with everyone pointing fingers at each other, CHAOS, and mysteries unsolved since milk carton kids (50%) kidnapped to program civility. ALL contents of this letter have supporting documents also on my website.

I purchased this NASA software with Woodpecker Scalar Waves that reach Russia, but cannot work. They are intercepted in our air space as all else. I am a witness that needs to come forward and be heard to the grave dangers that are in manifest with cover ups, endless excuses, whitewashing history. I am quashed, impeded and preempted, and staged daily with others. I spent 5 years recently being guided with synthetic telepathy by these handlers who address me 24/7 as to what they are going to do next to everyone around me and more. This controls a person fully remotely and sabotages occur daily. I have provided documents, patents, witnesses are available. THIS COUNTRY was once able to press this, believe this, and be alarmed. Senses are suspended/dehumanizing.

I have 1st hand experience in everything I describe in this letter and is not limited to 2 press releases and cases. It is difficult to understand until one has been addressed to communicate wirelessly with this SOUND WAVE technology, as I did not know myself for 45 years that I was a target unwittingly, until I was heavily experimented with, and attempts to be recruited via REMOTE VIEWING Psychotronics well known now.

I can attest to much worse evil and diabolic Matrix of the Country that does not yet go on elsewhere to this extent. This attempt went on by the CIA on US Soil and during my travels to Israel, UK, EU, AU, breaching spying contracts. I have asked to read my website information and LAWSUIT as this is a major COMMUNICATION WEAPON used in PSYOP strategies. JACKETING (one against the other) is also used on civilians and President Obama once hinted to in Politics. CONGRESS should know this when they were duped in signing a war to IRAQ with fatigue and other tactics planned in advance behind the scenes. Un-covered documentary discussed the tactic but inducing thoughts with pressure are not detectable. This is not a Fais de Complait or the first time this weapon is being used on civilians. George Green This is how they will KILL us! ISRAEL framed. <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=VNJTtUhZxaY&NR=1> The warning signs were subdued after JFK and 2 administrations with on going concern of this. Cognitive IMPAIRMENT infiltrations unwittingly, creates ILLUSIONS, mis-communications transmitted on media, police, medical, records, and everyday lives; part of the SABOTAGE. My story is one the World should know about at the very least. It is long overdue, as others have attempted it on CSPAN since Cathy OBrien (1977) TRANCE-Formation of America, Yale/DoD Secret Societies. You may have read this in my pleadings. Had they been believed and not so dismissed, our Country and humanity would not have escalated to this point of tragedies. Unfortunately, there is an agenda (the FORCE behind the SCENES) for destructions in manifest, and the wrong people are blamed. THIS INCLUDES ILLUSIONS. I have updated my press releases for your review. Dr. Bowart wrote Operation Mind Control and Cryptocracys Plan to Psycho-civilize you, 1978 MACROCOSM New World Order; MILLIONS will go THROUGH " The PROCESS" (brainwash programming) INCLUDING MOST OF AMERICA'S CORPORATE LEADERS and OFFICIALS from Navy/ EDUCATION. Much more has been induced. His God lurks behind an electronic curtain when it is pulled away we find the 2nd CIA sorcerer, MANIPULATOR, CYBERNETICIST, the weaver of the DREAMscape. Manchurians in your sleep molding, manipulating you 24/7. Unveil the 2nd LEVEL CIA Sorcerer. http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=W_hHWg0cmQ8. V For 911 Vendetta Past Present and Future.

Please be aware that Attorneys are also unwitting victims to defend free will, civil rights, and my destiny is not the only one they are manipulating. The President is not the only one but all in between. I ask that I can prove this and have a day in court but that was impeded. EVERY EFFORT has been made through the me dia to cover up these ills by ELF transmissions and NOT anything else tangible since 2008 Operation to discredit me further.

Please make no mistake between a targeted individual who has been PROGRAMMED to think his environment is conspiring. It is an entire UNWITTING PUBLIC unconsciously participating and have their own lives sabotaged they cannot detect and think is ORGANICALLY grown or occurring. One does not REALIZE and the cortex is bypassed affecting memory as well as by suggestion and pre-post hypnotic suggestion realized yet channeling the being; Everybodys doing the locomotion without recollection or mind jabbing thoughts-NSA transmissions, (Army Lt. Col. Griggs wife blew the whistle on their Yale Secret Societies framing all).

I am blocked and sabotaged in many ways for 5 years with torture and torment. I deserve to be heard and respected for what I am doing, including US Supreme court case. Since 2008, people are unwittingly impeded to READ my website or information and thousands in postal deliveries, delays and lost, redirected calls, deletes world wide, and much worse to stop me from travelling. With no freedom of information act/FLOW deliveries of documents/information and communications made more difficult than censoring. I risked my life and family with close calls, to suppress me in 2007, followed by their political shift of overt corruptions/crimes, eyes wide shut.

This weapon is used to change minds and beliefs, as well as behavior modification and physical damages and ills, synthetic and otherwise. My website has some exhibits of HUMAN engineering and mass control to dumb down Americans and worse, coupled with a tangible or an event. This weapon is NOT gang related but used on ALL beings in one way or another, they cannot DETECT, making us all pawns in a MATRIX; Now BOTH tangible and non-tangible using ones environment, as other people are NECESSARY to be brainwashed and mind controlled. The event is needed while the suggestion is planted. Animals are also affected and controlled including sharks, snakes, polar bears, oceans, as well as our environment. Induced natural disasters, to REMOTE control heart attacks, Cancer, Dementia, Diabetes II, Govt employees, and Hollywood were the first targeted and molded.

I urge you to look beyond credibility of whistleblowers that thwart investigations and truth, and to look at the facts and information presented beyond normal limits in this invisible weapon and soft kill worse than nuclear fears. Before this generation is gone, we have a responsibility not to let the past get lost in the generation GAP of Operation Mind Control and MKUltra era. There is no reason to disbelieve a victim coming forward. I assure you; this did not cease and desist but in fact EVOLVED to great powers and World domination unwitting, beginning with crimes, false imprisonment and a closed doors society, creating BUZZ from the minds, in our homes, Americas on drugs for Tax REVENUE, SCIENCE under SIEGE, and worse, since Aliens, Apollo, and USS LIBERTY Hallucinations. I warned Congress about FL Red Tide ELF attacks and DOJ in 1996. It was dismissed.

A REVOLUTION is needed as this TESTIMONY is long overdue. I have been destroyed by this as Millions and no one is doing anything about it. Quite the contrary and by design! I have offered the answers and opportunity to make a difference before it is too late. Anyone with uncompromised senses would be able to do that. You should honor and urge my testimonies and knowledge. I was not supposed to figure this out. I was informed and mis-informed for dis-information reproduction, UNTIL I became certified in hypnosis and trained in NLP NEURO LINGUISTIC PROGRAMMING (CIA 1974), to deprogram. I have found documents that support every single one of my accusations as evil as they are. This video is already in motion by the U.S. surreptitiously under the auspices of security. https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=zeMZGGQ0ERk&feature=player_embedded PROCESS; WASHINGTON will be shot after the CRISIS step 4 of Brainwash over decades- slow kills... Do you believe a RUSSIAN or are you targeted? They always kill you when you are done serving them. N.W.O. to reduce 90% of us. FULL DISCLOSURES are found at my website. WAKE UP AM

ERICA, WAKE UP WASHINGTON, we are manipulated for decades, under attack by our own. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=LJ73eOmdsv0&NR=1> It all affects you daily. Sincerely,

Mireille Torjman

2nd LEVEL CIA Sorcerer. Brilliant video! Here http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=W_hHWg0cmQ8

1985 MACRO-COSM-NEW WORLD ORDER MILLIONS will go THROUGH "The PROCESS" (brainwashing programming) INCLUDING MOST OF AMERICA'S CORPORATE LEADERS & OFFICIALS from Navy/ EDUCATION-1978 Cryptocracy's Plan to Psycho-civilize you. Jim Keith, Dr R O Becker. Ops Mind Control psyops on Civilians.

V For 911 Vendetta Past Present and Future www.youtube.com

1997 DoD Briefing: 'Others' can set off earthquakes, volcanoes remotely-Plans to destroy Wars. WATERFRONT Properties FL to NY under attack! Induced Climate ELF & Seismic Waves to De-populate and redistribute wealth/Economy---again. 2nd LEVEL CIA (Terrorists) Mind CONTROLLING GLOBALIST to do THEIR MISSION for them. HUMAN S are all PAWNS used in their U.S. Matrix since Alien Hallucinations to going Global!

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=VNJTtiUhZxaY&NR=1> This is how they will KILL us!

George Green- Bankers, Energy, THE FED, CIA- This is how they will KILL us but full disclosures, updates and strategic agenda could change as you minds! WW3 PLANS taking down ISRAEL-infiltrations. See full DISCLOSURES at www.mireilletorjman.com every time you want the facts, PRESS RELEASES and Dire Warnings! Similarity speeches by Assange and JFK!

<http://criseusa.blog.lemonde.fr/category/fed/>

BONDS, ECONOMY, JAPAN, HAARP, act of WARS! Since Project GreenStar! Les USA auraient ils utilis HAARP pour punir le Japon de ne plus vouloir soutenir le cadavre qu'est l'economie US en cessant d'acheter des bonds du tresor de la FED??... "HAARP" Est-il responsable du tremblement de terre JA...PONAIS ? Le tremblement de terre au Japon est il si naturel que a ?

FED - Economie et crise aux USA - Blog LeMonde.fr criseusa.blog.lemonde.fr

1997 DoD Briefing: 'Others' can set off earthquakes, volcanoes remotely using electromagnetic waves By Lori Price 28 Feb 2010 Secretary of Defense William S. Cohen, 28 April 1997: 'There are some reports, for example, that some countries have been trying to construct something like an Ebola Virus [OMG! Who would do such a thing?], and that would be a very dangerous phenomenon, to say the least. Alvin Toffler has written about this in terms of some scientists in their laboratories trying to devise certain types of pathogens that would be ethnic specific so that they could just eliminate certain ethnic groups and races; and others [LOL] are designing some sort of engineering, some sort of insects that can destroy specific crops. Others are engaging even in an eco- type of terrorism whereby they can alter the climate, set off earthquakes, volcanoes remotely through the use of electromagnetic waves.' --Just switch 'yours,' 'others' and 'they' with 'U.S.,' 'U.S.' and 'U.S.' This was in 1997. Imagine, after eight years of George W. Bush turbo-funding these lunatics, what they can do now.

John Marks-CIA BUILDING/Search MANCHURIANS since Hitler and MKULTRA on German Soldiers... <http://thewhiteroseii.wordpress.com/> This video is already in motion by the U.S. surreptitiously under the guise of security. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=LJ73eOmdsv0&NR=1>

N.W.O. to reduce 90% of us.

"BACKFIRE ON CRIMES October 18, 1971"- No drugs to change the will. Mind Control experiments were pre-suggested and still induced to alter and trick the belief thus will to commit crime as ok. 50% crime increase in one year not from Drugs as s ALIENS epidemic. NIXON called it a wave sweeping the COUNTRY and proclaimed to restore ORDER. " New man in DOJ needed and REPUBLICANS blamed nothing but permissiveness of Democratic Admin. 1969 Nixon RHETORIC and crimes continued 3 years later.... It's not the ALIENS of 1968...Media refused to cover... Operation MOCK INGBIRD mind control NOT subliminal from MEDIA...and EVOLVED

Fort Hood Shooting a Psy-Op? Three people are involved. That, by definition, means it is a conspiracy. Fort Hood (and over 100 other .gov and .mils) is reading CLG news forupdates.

Ukrainian Plague Update: officially now over ONE MILLION infected, 135 deaths, 39,603 hospitalized Cases of infection are increasing at about 200,000 per day; this is NOT A/H1N1

VIDEO Mossad Microbiologist Joseph Moshes Baxter Ukraine Plague Warning

Posted by labvirus on November 7, 2009

Professor Moshe had called into the studio after a live radio show guested by Dr . A. True Ott entitled Born on the Fourth of July on RBN broadcast in mid-August, claiming to be a microbiologist who wanted to supply evidence to a States Attorney regarding tainted H1N1 Swine flu vaccines being produced by Baxter BioPharma Solutions.

He said that Baxters Ukrainian lab was in fact producing a bioweapon disguised as a vaccine. He claimed that the vaccine contained an adjuvant (additive) designed to weaken the immune system, and replicated RNA from the virus responsible for the 1918 pandemic Spanish flu, causing global sickness and mass death.

The next day, this happened (see video) THE STRANGE CASE OF JOSEPH MOSHE:

This Joseph Moshe arrested in L.A. is likely a MOSSAD agent with a CONSCIENCE and has apparently been extradited immediately to Israel. Now his testimony, whatever it would have been, is still secure. Notice, the federal agents used an electro-magnetic pulse which knocked out his car, as well as any cell phone so he couldnt contact the U.S. Attorney he was obviously going to meet with.

Did he make threats against Obama?? Apparently just announcing he was going public about his knowledge of Baxter Pharma, and that the pandemic flu vaccine isnt a vaccine at all, but is indeed a biological weapon designed to kill millions was all it took for him to be detained.

AS I, (2007-2009) and still under threat! FRAMED, set up, STAGED, pre and post SUGGESTIONS on we the people! etc...

Decrypting the Shadow behind Hamid Karzai

Wednesday, 22. September 2010 The Long Intended Chaos

<http://pimpinturtle.com/2009/08/21/the-strange-case-of-joseph-moshe.aspx>

Thursday, June 9, 2011

Steve Quayle : The E. Coli Breakout in Germany is a biowarfare agent

Steve Quayle : " This is definitely a biowarfare agent it has multi point release it has multi drugs resistanceThis is a specific biowarfare agent that has been designed to do...one thing well, and that's kill people," " this is one of the most dire presentations of bio warfare and even with this what they got in store is even more lethal" Spain agriculture is decimated because Spain resisted the introduction of GMO crops into its agricultural system , Germany is targeted by the E. Coli because it has the best food safety and control in the world , the food is the ultimate weapon says Steve Quayle...Steve Quayle is the author of five books. For over thirty years, he has been investigating ancient civilizations, giants, UFOs and biological warfare as they relate to the future of mankind. Stephen discusses the coming worst-case scenarios approaching this world and how they interrelate to each other. Earthquakes, volcanoes, nuclear and biological terrorism, coupled with the planned financial meltdown of the U.S. dollar will thrust us into unimagined tribulations. Stephen Quayle is on record as stating that we have moved from the realm of natural threats into the arena of supernaturally guided events of the unseen hand of evil orchestrating world events of unfathomable proportions. Appearing for the full 4 hours, author and researcher Steve Quayle discussed the precarious world economic situation, escalating tensions, and covert warfare, as well as how supernatural events & prophecies from the Bible are being played out. According to one of his sources, we're seeing "the systematic execution and implementation of seismic warfare" that is technology that can be used to generate earthquakes, accelerate volcanic eruptions, and manipulate the weather. "All the volcanoes seem to be becoming active at once," he commented. 14 Labels:gerald celente trends research journal Steve Quayle

Why Germany he asks in the video?

Well, for a start they are making biological warfare on Germany because they are turning their back on Nuclear energy and not participating in bombing Libya. These are just two more suggestions to add to the E. coli sabotage. Bankrupt these nations one by one and then they get IMF loan and succumb to slavery. June 11, 2011 3:32 AM

<http://geraldcelentechannel.blogspot.com/2011/06/roger-tolces-electronic-harassment.html>

According to news reports, the Obama administration is once again reevaluating how to deal with Afghanistans Hamid Karzai out of fear that it may now be holding him to unrealistic standards of U.S. law enforcement. This comes after a summer of news that Karzai continues to find new ways of resisting Washingtons efforts to rein in rampant corruption in his government. Now we hear from legendary Washington Post reporter Bob Woodward that the U.S. has intelligence showing Hamid Karzai is under medication for manic depression and that Obamas national security team doubts that his strategy in Afghanistan (whatever that may be at the moment) can work. The tug of war between Kabul and Washington has become so desperate, former CIA Near East, South Asia Chief Dr. Charles Cogan recently opined that the situation was fast approaching a Diem Moment. Cogan even suggested that while Diems removal had been horribly botched, a removal of Mr. Karzai might turn out to be more straightforward. Given the similarities to Americas quagmire in Vietnam, invoking Diem raises more than a few dark memories. Yet despite vast differences in the two wars another even more deeply unsettling similarity is emerging. Hamid Karzai is in a political fight for his life like South Vietnams Ngo Dinh Diem. But (strange as it might seem) his contradictory behavior and the chaos and corruption surrounding it may be no accident. In fact it could be exactly the consequence that his main neoconservative backer, former RAND director, U.S. Ambassador and Special Presidential Envoy to Afghanistan Zalmay Khalilzad, had long intended.... By forcing Karzai into office, Khalilzad snatched defeat out of the jaws of victory because the Taliban were beaten at that point.

To both Ruttig and Rohrabacher, Khalilzads ultimate crime like the U.S. manipulation of the Ngo Dinh Diem regime in Vietnam was that his corruption of the Karzai regime had created so much internal chaos that no amount of outside effort could undo it. Yet the idea that chaos, as a form of extreme social engineering, may have actually been the plan cannot be ignored.

If anyone embodies the Cold War neoconservative philosophy that came to dominate American foreign and military policy from Jimmy Carter to George W. Bush, it is Zalmay Khalilzad. Khalilzad first came to the United States as a high school exchange student.

He received his bachelors and masters degrees from American University in Beirut and his doctorate degree from the University of Chicago where he met and studied along with Paul Wolfowitz under the RAND nuclear warfare theorist, former Trotskyite and father of neoconservatism, Albert J. Wohlstetter. It was Wohlstetter's early 1970s series of articles in the Wall Street Journal and Strategic Review that prompted the politicized CIA analysis known as the Team B experiment. It was the Team B's adherents both inside and outside the Carter administration who set the stage for undermining détente and luring the Soviets into the Afghan trap and holding them there while Afghanistan disintegrated. And it was the same Team B brain-trust of Wohlstetter acolytes including Khalilzad that went on to provide the philosophical template for the politicized intelligence process that led to the strategic military disasters of Iraq and Afghanistan.

In her 1972 book about Vietnam, Fire in the Lake, author Frances FitzGerald wrote of the perverse illogic of another of Wohlstetter's onetime RAND protégés, Herman Kahn.

Just before his departure for a two-week tour of Vietnam in 1967, the defense analyst, Herman Kahn, listened to an American businessman give a detailed account of the economic situation in South Vietnam. At the end of the talk an argument for reducing the war Kahn said, I see what you mean. We have corrupted the cities. Now, perhaps we can corrupt the countryside as well. It was not a joke. Kahn was thinking in terms of a counterinsurgency program: the United States would win the war by making all Vietnamese economically dependent upon it. In 1967 his program was already becoming a reality, for the corruption reached even to the lowest levels of Vietnamese society.

In a country as poor as Afghanistan after three decades of war it took little time and less effort to corrupt every level of Afghan society, but in Afghanistan, official corruption, both American and Afghan was built in. Overseen by Khalilzad, a bizarre marriage of America's pro-business, neoconservative Washington and Afghanistan's pro-business and often pro-Taliban right wing took root to direct and guide Afghanistan's reconstruction.

A 2007 report by Canadian journalist Arthur Kent desc...

JOHN MARKS: Pg 8 Resource tab or wordpress WHY/HOW WARS TODAY ACCUMULATIONS ENGINEERED!

Unlike most weapons, "Who? Me?" was not designed to kill or maim. It was a "harassment substance" designed to lower the morale of individual Japanese. The inspiration came from academicians who tried to make a science of human behavior. During World War II, the behavioral sciences were still very much in their infancy, but OSS well before most of the outside world recognized their potential in warfare. Psychology and psychiatry, sociology, and anthropology all seemed to offer insights that could be exploited to manipulate the enemy.

The drugs were to be tested on involuntary subjects. Thompson readily admits that this procedure was "unethical," but he says, "We felt we had to do it for the good of country." HYPNOSIS on the 5 SENSES NOT LOGIC like a TRANSMISSION JAB.

This is applied in all areas of humanity techniques!

AS I, and many others unwittingly. Still under threat! FRAMED pre and post SUGGESTIONS on the public!

Q552-http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=s6K7C8bndHk&feature=share

Former Hitler Youth Whistleblower Warns Of America's Nazi Future
(Full Length HD) ending of brainwashed and kept quiet

Former Hitler Youth Whistleblower Warns Of America's Nazi Future (Full Length HD)
)
<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=EQQv-mfCUeg&feature=share>
Contributing factors. Dr. Horowitz and Sherri Kane journalist.
127 JOURNALIST killed in Middle East

WARNINGS to We the People
FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
5/28/2010 rev 11/6/11
CONTACT: Mireille Torjman Federal Whistleblower
Mobile 954.529.8684 ThewhiteroseII@yahoo.com
www.mireilletorjman.com for Supreme Court Lawsuit and Open Letter to Congress.

Have you figured it out yet!
###

Media ignore news of Bush administration spying on media
January 30, 2009 5:11 pm ET by Jamison Foser
In their column for the Center for American Progress, Eric Alterman and George Zornick note that the media has paid shockingly little attention to new revelations that the Bush administration spied on journalists:
NSA retaliated by having Tice declared crazy, revoking his security clearance, relegating him to the motor pool, and eventually terminating his employment in May 2005.
That disclosure is protected by the First Amendment. Indeed, it rightly belongs in the rank of the whistleblowing by "Deep Throat," recently revealed to be Mark Felt, and by Daniel Ellsberg, who famously disclosed the Pentagon Papers.
Make No Mistake: Any Criminal Investigation of the NSA "Leak" Is Pure Retaliation
No wonder, then, that the Administration is playing hardball with Tice, just as it did with Wilson. Indeed, it reportedly may be criminally investigating the Times' sources, which include Tice - even though, as I explained above, the ICWPA and the First Amendment together provide a complete and unassailable defense to his disclosures.
Any such investigation lacks any legal basis. It is purely retaliatory - just as the revelation of Plame's identity was retaliatory, meant to punish Wilson for undercutting the President's motive for going to war with Iraq.
All those who believe in the First Amendment, or simply in the necessity of protecting those who bring Presidential lawbreaking to light, ought not only to support Tice, but also insist that any investigation of him and the other Times sources be brought to an immediate end.
Jesselyn Radack is an adjunct professor at American University's Washington College of Law where she teaches professional responsibility. She also serves on the D.C. Bar's Legal Ethics Committee and works with the ABA Task Force on Treatment of Enemy Combatants. NOT AVAIL see Interview tab for letter.
With this week's revelation of Representative Pete Hoekstra's (R-Michigan) sharply worded letter (pdf) sent to George W. Bush on May 18, 2006, blasting the administration for secretly implementing an entire intelligence operation and keeping its existence hidden from Congress, we are left wondering what further egregious violations of our privacy have already occurred.

Marla Brose/The Albuquerque Journal, via Associated Press
Representative Heather A. Wilson, whom President Bush praised in June, has said she has "deep concerns" about intelligence reforms. Linda

In retaliation, I was fired from my subsequent private sector job at the government's behest; branded a "turncoat" in the New York Times by anonymous government officials; placed under criminal investigation; referred for possible discipline to the state bars in which I am licensed as an attorney; and put on the "no-fly" list.

Jesselyn Radack

Despite Secretary O'Leary's pledge to compensate the victims, a ruling from the Supreme Court stated that even when someone's constitutional rights are violated by Federal agencies, these agencies cannot be liable for providing any compensation. We would be creating a potentially enormous financial burden for the federal government, Justice Clarence Thomas wrote for the court. P. 49

In July 1995 the CIA went public and declared its interest in Remote Viewing. As a result, much new information became available. At that time, the CIA and US Department of Defense had a 22-year operational track record in RV. The CIA was involved from 1973 to 1977, and the DOD from 1977 to 1995. In 1995, the CIA declassified and released Remote Viewing documents. P. 127

CIA Mind Control: Bin Laden's Driver Driven Insane at Gitmo

25th July 2008 Amy Goodman of Democracy Now! and others have reported on CIA mind control techniques at Gitmo. Hamdan, bin Laden's driver, currently on trial, hears voices inside his head, according to Time magazine. This development occurred under detention. The average prole will jump to the conclusion that this is a symptom of induced schizophrenia, and this may be but voices are also computer-generated and transmitted to the brain's auditory pathways of the CIA's subjects in highly illicit electromagnetic (EM) brain experimentation and operations, as I documented in Psychic Dictatorship in the USA (Feral House, 1995), and elsewhere. It's quite possible given the harshness of his detention by the CIA that Hamdan was driven crazy by advanced mind control tech.

Hamdan's six years at Gitmo have left him a shell of a man. He has deteriorated mentally to the point where he can no longer meaningfully assist in his own criminal defense. He is suicidal, hears voices inside his head and talks to himself. The same can be said of many subjects of EM bio-electronic assault.

- AC

Excerpt Hamdan: Guantanamo's Mystery Man

By Jonathan Mahler

Jul. 21, 2008

Time

<http://www.time.com/time/nation/article/0,8599,1825334,00.html>

In May 2002, Hamdan was flown to Guantanamo Bay, where he became detainee No. 149. Soon after, he met Soufan, the FBI's foremost expert on al-Qaeda, who interrogated Hamdan repeatedly until December 2003, when President Bush chose him from among thousands of detainees in U.S. custody to be the first Arab defendant in the military tribunals.

In 1991, Janet Morris issued a number of papers [55] and the US Army published a detailed draft report on Operations Concept for Disabling Measures. Laboratories were developing a high power, very low frequency acoustic beam weapon projecting non-penetrating, high frequency acoustic bullets. According to one Morris paper, US Special Operations Command already had a portable microwave weapon. [56] US Special Forces can cook internal organs. [57] Infrasound used acoustic beams. Very low frequency (VLF) sound, or low frequency RF modulations can cause nausea, vomiting and abdominal pains. Some very low frequency sound generators, in certain frequency ranges, can cause the disruption of human organs and, at high power levels, can crumble masonry. [58] P. 176, 178, 179

Dr. Lilly once reminded the director of the National Institute for Mental Health of an important dilemma: Dr. Remond has demonstrated that this method of stimulation of the brain can be applied to the human without the help of a neurosurgeon. This means that anyone with the proper apparatus can carry this out on a person covertly, with no external signs that electrodes have been used on that person. If this technique got into the hands of a security agency, they would have co ntrol over a human being and be able to change his beliefs extremely quickly, leaving little evidence of what they had done. [40] P. 151

DECEIVING THE PUBLIC for 50 yrs.

Pentagon Pundit Scandal Broke the Law

Submitted by Diane Farsetta and Sheldon Rampton on Mon, 04/28/2008 - 19:04.

Topics: democracy | ethics | media | propaganda | pundits | secrecy | third party technique | U.S. government | war/peace

The Pentagon military analyst program unveiled in last week's expos by David Barstow in the New York Times was not just unethical but illegal. It violates, for starters, specific restrictions that Congress has been placing in its annual appropriation bills every year since 1951. According to those restrictions, "No part of any appropriation contained in this or any other Act shall be used for publicity or propaganda purposes within the United States not heretofore authorized by the Congress."

As explained in a March 21, 2005 report by the Congressional Research Service, "publicity or propaganda" is defined by the U.S. Government Accountability Office (GAO) to mean either (1) self-aggrandizement by public officials, (2) purely partisan activity, or (3) "covert propaganda." By covert propaganda, GAO means information which originates from the government but is unattributed and made to appear as though it came from a third party.

These concerns about "covert propaganda" were also the basis for the GAO's strong standard for determining when government-funded video news releases are illegal:...

The target is you

A tantalizing window into Donald Rumsfeld's motives for creating the military analysts program can be found in a transcript that the Times obtained of one of his meetings with them. In it, he complains that he has been warned that his "information operations" are "illegal or immoral":

What is to be done?

Of course, the mere fact that a practice is illegal does not mean that anyone is going to be punished for breaking the law. For that to happen, someone with the power to act needs to enforce the law, which is why Congress needs to hold hearings and create enforcement mechanisms that will ensure compliance in the future. Currently, no such mechanisms exist. As the Congressional Research Service noted in its 2005 report, "No federal entity is required to monitor agency compliance with the publicity and propaganda statutes. At present, the federal government has what has been termed 'fire alarm oversight' of agency expenditures on communications. Scrutiny typically occurs when a Member of Congress is alerted by the media or some other source that an agency's spending on communications may be cause for concern. A Member then sends a written request to the Government Accountability Office asking for a legal opinion on the activities in question."

Congress should certainly seek such a legal opinion from the GAO and the White House Office of Legal Council regarding the Pentagon's military analyst program, but this time it shouldn't stop at simply seeking an opinion. When the GAO has rendered such legal opinions previously, the government agencies caught violating the law have announced that they would comply in the future. No one was punished, however, and in practice they knew that they could continue doing what they want. That is what happened after the Reagan administration was caught using third-party surrogates to promote the Contra war in Nicaragua in the 1980s (which is how Charles Cooper ended up writing the memo I quoted above). It's what happened after the Armstrong Williams scandal broke in 2004. And without something more than mere publication of a GAO opinion, it's probably all that will happen as a result of this latest Pentagon pundits scandal.

It doesn't have to be this way. If the U.S. Congress had the will to take action, it could create real mechanisms for enforcing the law and ensuring compliance.

This is important for reasons that go beyond the issue of whether anyone supports or opposes the current war in Iraq. So long as government agencies are allowed to continue getting away with covert domestic propaganda, the public is left u nable to know whether the opinions of "independent" analysts are truly independent. During the Vietnam War, official Pentagon statements became so mistrusted that the term "credibility gap" was coined to describe the distance between official statements and public perceptions. The government's use of "surrogates" posing as independent experts extends the credibility gap not just to public officials but also to seemingly independent, private citizens and the news media. Until accountability exists to prevent abuses like Pentagon analyst program from continuing with impunity, the public will have to assume that anyone who appears on camera espousing views sympathetic to the White House (or, for that matter, to other government agencies) has been secretly trained, recruited and given financial incentives to do so....

Scalar Wars

The Brave New World of Scalar Electromagnetics

by Bill Morgan

For the past six months I have been undergoing the greatest paradigm shift I have ever had to go through. It has rattled my nerves and shaken my bones. This intense adjustment of my "world" has come about by studying the information given by Col. Tom Bearden at his website Cheniere. The new knowledge there has necessitated a total revision of my ideas about physical reality, the world we live in, and the future of humanity. This paradigm shifting even actually made me dizzy on certain days as I tried to absorb and digest Bearden's vast amount of information. I am not a scientist at all, just a layman, and I have little comprehension of the math and high physics of this new science called "Scalar Electromagnetics." But there is a great deal of information at Cheniere which needs to become common knowledge as fast as possible, for the sake of the survival of life on earth. To that end I have put together this small primer of Bearden's ideas, as a kind of "beginner's guide" to his website. (I have tried to underline certain words and phrases which are part of the new "jargon" of talking about these "new" phenomena. Also I have taken the liberty of bolding certain words and phrases to help them stick in the mind).

(Note: Throughout "EM" means "electromagnetic," and "LW" means "longitudinal wave")

This article has six sections:

New Waves 2. Tapping the Waves 3. Weaponization 4. Healing 5. Psychoenergetics 6. As It Stands

According to a US Department of Defense directive (S-3600.1, December 9, 1996), "information warfare" is defined as "an information operation conducted during time of crisis or conflict to achieve or promote specific objectives over a specific adversary or adversaries". An "information operation" is defined in the same directive as "actions taken to affect adversary information and information systems". These "information systems" lie at the heart of the modernisation effort of the US armed forces and manifest themselves as hardware, software, communications capabilities and highly trained individuals. Information warfare has tended to ignore the role of the human body as an information or data processor in this quest for dominance, except in those cases where an individual's logic or rational thought may be upset via Dis-information or deception... Yet, the body is capable not only of being deceived, manipulated or mis-informed but also shut down or destroyed just as any other data-by 1969 and didn't have need for shuttles for decades when mission was accomplished. See Shadow Apollo 11 whistleblower.

The CIA succeeded in developing a whole range of psycho-weapons to expand its already ominous psychological warfare arsenal. With these capabilities, it was now possible to wage a new kind of war: a war which would take place invisibly, upon the battlefield of the human mind... [p. 19] Dr. Walter Bowart Operation mind control.

Mafioso went quiet after missions accomplished, until now to discredit 2nd level CIA and lawsuit as this website content accusations. WHITEWASHING with twists a nd brainwashing the public with your tax dollar and worse.

Everyone spinning their wheels for decades!

CIA JOHN LOFTUS on brasschecktv.com 2 videos of ISRAEL, CIA BUSH/HITLER, CIA John LOFTUS DEPT of JUSTICE belong in JAIL----- funded Prescott Bush and RECRUITED NAZIS and FUNDING TERRORIST GROUPS with BRITISH- To crush ISRAEL- BEFORE DULLES ARAB NAZIS in CIA-911 to AGENDA next & since 1920. THE SECRET WAR AGAINST JEWS and more. THE WITNESS TREE.Part I and II <http://www.brasschecktv.com/videos/money-madness/how-america-lost-its-way-.html>- <http://www.brasschecktv.com/videos/government-corruption/why-the-justice-department-doesntcatch-banksters-terrorists-and-other-enemies-of-the-nation.html>

MK ULTRA known experiments were reported at about $10 MILLION tax dollars.

Wherever their extreme experiments went, the CIA sponsors picked for subjects their own equivalents of the Nazis' Jews and gypsies: mental patients, prostitutes, foreigners, drug addicts, and prisoners, often from minority ethnic groups.

American prosecutors charged the Dachau doctors with "crimes against humanity" at a second Nuremberg trial. None of the German scientists expressed remorse. Most claimed that someone else had carried out the vilest experiments. All said that issues of moral and personal responsibility are moot in state-sponsored research. What is critical, testified Dr. Karl Brandt, Hitler's personal physician, is "whether the experiment is important or unimportant."

[pg 215]

Tampering with the mind is much too dangerous to be left to the spies. Nor should it be the exclusive province of the behavioral scientists, who have given us cause for suspicion. Take this statement by their most famous member, B. F. Skinner: "My image in some places is of a monster of some kind who wants to pull a string and manipulate people. Nothing could be further from the truth. People are manipulated; I just want them to be manipulated more effectively." Such notions are much more acceptable in prestigious circles than people tend to think: D. Ewen Cameron read papers about "depatterning" with electroshock before meetings of his fellow psychiatrists, and they elected him their president. Human behavior is so important that it must concern us all. The more vigilant we and our representatives are, the less chance we will be unwitting victims.
AND BEHIND THE SCENES Sorcerer, Manipulator, Diabolic!

2009 to 2011.... Exposingalltruth.com Letters from Hoekstra Intelligence Committee, FBI Mueller, Gaddafi, and my Open letter to Congress below. MY WORD IS MY WEAPON. WHY/HOW SICKO: Michael Moore, Do something! Tax Revenue/Fees on your Prescriptions... Fight the source at the root not the fires. TIME is of ESSENCE. Fan it! Expose it, Stop them! Doc Tab. CONNECTING the dots and SABOTAGE from mind manipulations- Wake Up! Check back daily;

Cover ups...I don't know which psyop warfare is more Dire than the next!

40 Years +++ Mysteries Solved! SPYING is: your ills and examples subsequently-ELF Remote Viewing is upon you 24/7 since 1973-Science and Humanity under Siege/ suppressed-Neurology hiding behind computers entrainment, with DoD Yale Secret Societies Psychotronics, Psychoenergetics, Synthetic Telepathy DIRECTED ENERGY- (2n d Level CIA) THE WEAPON of MASS DESTRUCTION- miscommunications Duping everyone today and all CIA TRICKERY! See Prescott Bush (1910) & CIA masterminds with this Mind Control Weapon illegal crimes of humanity and WARRANTLESS MIND TAPS if you don't stop them. Intercepted thoughts/body, info warfare communications..

"Is the PENTAGON Science CRAZY ENOUGH?" Remote Control Heart Attack Anyone!

Virtual Govt, Virtual Disease. Alex Constantine's death and his books, the war on rock & roll. (since 70's Culture...). Sharon Weinberger on John Stewart 2006. HOOVER said: "It's Too Horrible to Imagine!

NeuroLinguistic Programming (CIA 1976) Mind manipulations- Not just on our Senators Village Psy-ops. Article/ Speeches and "YOUR thoughts are NOT your own." Joint Chief Staff etc... Bottom/ Left & interviews Tab

Allen Dulles 1957" Berle wrote in his diary. "If the scientists do what they have laid out for themselves, men will become manageable ants." below

AMERICA, THEIR REMOTE CULT! Turning everyone against target as "Neighbors" pawns

"Considering that Admiral Turner and other CIA officials had tried to leave the impression with Congress and the public that behavioral research had almost all ended in 1963 with the phase-out of MKULTRA, this was an amazing admission." (Because it was to appease them.)

"Similar tactics overseas", " As with the Agency's secrets, it was too late to put behavioral technology back in the box." [pg 214]

Waste/FRAUD THIN THREAD and TRAILBLAZER $Trillions more... DARPA trailing 50 yrs behind Science/Tech & tax $. FULL ARTICLES here WOW!

<http://mireilletorjman.blogspot.com/2011/09/nsa-thomas-drake-case-warrantless-mind.html>

The U.N.s AGENDA 21 and What is Communitarianism? with Govt land, R.E. and Control. ICLEL, By-passed Congress. Links on pg. 16. U.S. Physicist Bill Nelson 2 assassinations attempts in Budapest. See press below.

<http://www.infowars.com/escobar-al-qaeda-agents-worm-into-syrian-rebel-army/>

<http://www.infowars.com/syrian-girl-why-al-qaeda-is-al-cia-da/>

<http://www.brasschecktv.com/videos/health-and-medical/making-a-killingthe-untold-story-of-psychotropic-drugging.html>

Below pg 16 of press release:

Robin Cook Remote heart attacks and CIA Al Qaeda

<http://www.postsustainabilityinstitute.org/what-is-communitarianism.html>

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor-Frank Olson case-Opinion No rule crafted shall insulate from liability unknowing subjects.

INTERVIEW Dr W. BOWART after Death Threats.

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Uoi5u3zx0HA>

DOE Secretary Hazel O'Leary admissions, mind control...

"Only the small secrets need to be protected. The big ones are kept secret by public incredulity." Marshall McLuhan

"If both the past and the external world exist only in the mind, and if the mind itself is controllable what then?" George Orwell

. https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=zeMZGGQ0ERk&feature=player_embedded THE PROCESS; WASHINGTON will be shot after the CRISIS step 4 of Brainwash over decades- slow kills... Do you believe a RUSSIAN or are you targeted? They always kill you when you are done serving them.

Robin Copeland, 46, Energy Dept Official suddenly dies 11/4/11...

Independent Investigative Journalism Since 1995

A Decade of Patriot Act Abuses

November 1, 2011

ALL HIDING BEHIND SSP LAW, Patriot Act since 1947 Born with the CIA, conspiracy take over slowly being introduced as New World Order MASS Brainwash-chunked to a cept! The launch of a new Holocaust in manifest after chaos, trickery and the people's CONSENT of balancing LESS FREEDOM, Civil Rights and a suspension of the Constitution, after MISSION of COMMUNISM and Middle East. [Pg 213]

CIA Sued Decades Later: BAY OF PIGS!!!!!!!!!!!!!! Operation MHCHAOS, ominous psychological warfare arsenal!
The National Security State and the Assassination of JFK
The CIA, the Pentagon, and the "Peace President"
by Andrew Gavin Marshall Lewrockwell.com

(1959)....Among the recommended provocations and pretexts to justify a war, the Joint Chiefs suggested that, a series of well coordinated incidents will be planned to take place in and around [the US military base at] Guantanamo to give genuine appearance of being done by hostile Cuban forces, including starting rumours, landing friendly Cubans in uniform outside of the base to stage attack on base in Cuban uniform, capturing friendly saboteurs inside the base, and have friendly Cubans start riots near the base main gate.[30] Further recommendations were to blow up ammunition inside the base; start fires, as well as burning aircraft on the base, or sabotage a ship in the harbor, or to even, sink [a] ship near harbor entrance. Conduct funerals for mock-victims.[31]

REMOtELY: MASS brainwash and mind/Body Control transmissions currently ongoing globally during riots simulations and whitewash mixing all going through process and locomotion... see below.

One startling recommendation was that, We could blow up a US ship in Guantanamo Bay and blame Cuba, or that, we could blow up a drone (unmanned) vessel anywhere in the Cuban waters, and blame Cuba, and that, casualty lists in US newspapers would cause a helpful wave of national indignation.[32] However, the most disturbing aspect of Operation Northwoods was the recommendation that:

"We could develop a Communist Cuban terror campaign in the Miami area, in other Florida cities and even in Washington. and,

Pg 11 (Honolulu FAKE Duplicate documents)

(The Military coup-Cuban Crisis included blowing up people in Miami, carefully chosen spots as London Subway, convincing air passengers they SAW a Cuban aircraft, like USS Liberty, blaming COLLEGE STUDENTS, like Israeli Art Students, ODD series of events, guns (Exhibits tab) etc and from an exercise to intervention as all else, and sink boats of refugees (real or simulated) from exercise mode to intervention...)

http://mireilletterjman.blogspot.com/2011_10_01_archive.html

With no danger to American Society, the entrapment from Bush /Obama "MANIPULATORS".... "The object is to terrify the American Public, so that they will surrender their civil liberties--Possibly the greatest extortion scheme in U.S. history."
" --It's only the BEGINNING!

See below creating subservient civilians, assassinations and torture goes on illegally anyway. Legalizing it is only for us civilians and what is coming (N.W.O. a silent infiltrations of another Holocaust attempt) with no recourse or redress available on civil rights. Illusions, transmitted false thoughts (coupled with the events), crimes infiltrated now Making it REAL. After 50 yrs of spy devices being installed and attached today overtly as all else shadowed.

Paranormal Activities: The list of parapsychology goals was taken from an excellent article by John Wilhelm in the August 2, 1977 Washington Post: "Psychic Spying?"

"I should apologize to the American people. Its violated everyone's rights. It can be used to eavesdrop on the whole world." Click here for full articles quashed/cover up

<http://mireilletterjman.blogspot.com/2011/09/nsa-thomas-drake-case-warrantless-mind.html>

Thomas Drake NSA 2011 Whistleblower Espionage Case Exposes Psychic Spy Connection. Projects...SAIC=CIA Stargate, Spacestar, Starstream (Future research trailing), all linked (1973) PICKING UP ON ALL GROUPS/cults/individuals, thoughts during wake or sleep, and directing CONVERSATIONS dialogue and vice versa. Your thoughts are not your own. Dr. Bearden (Govt) ... WARRANTLESS MIND TAPS..., below: Bear Stearns rumors transmitted in advance, Israel set ups...tab) Air Force hack nervous system, ELF Red Tide FL. Govt Lab, Aliens/UFO's, BP framed; mind controlled paralysis & decisions as civility, where to invest and lose..., and much worse mind taps on you. Articles bottom left Remote Control Heart Attack Anyone! induced years ago as R. control the human brain, CANCER... (1960's)

Their own shadow is within. "The SORCERER, Manipulator Cyberneticist behind the electronic curtain and Tesla's wall of defense... 1940 Information warfare psyops transmitted thoughts daily... video links below 1973 Cryptocracy's Plan to Psycho-civilize you! thoughts/hallucinations to bypass forced speech, mis-hear, mis-communicate/gaps/mis-read.... "Your thoughts are not your own", since Alien Hallucination. Cognitive impairments infiltrations are/were unconsciously.

1985 MACROCOSM

NEW WORLD ORDER MILLIONS Will go THROUGH "The PROCESS (brainwash programming) INCLUDING MOST OF AMERICA'S CORPORATE LEADERS and OFFICIALS from Navy/ EDUCATION-

-Charlotte Iserby, Bush Family/Society

"It was estimated that Millions of persons were (1972) put through this type of PROCESSING Breaking down of personalities and recondition."Breach ..AFTER CORRUPTING HOLLYWOOD minds/pawns"Project PANDORA and Oregon State people experiencing headaches, anxiety, lack of body coordination and other symptoms went on to worse in Millions of Process un-wit.

SINCE I TRIED TO GO PUBLIC launching OPERATION WHITEWASH pre-empting my court allegations in 2008, the following occurred with the public as pawns using media un-wit and blaming pharma/tax rev...

The Mother of all Evil!

Mass psychosis in the US - Opinion - Al Jazeera English

Click here and below

<http://mireilletterjman.blogspot.com/2011/10/2008-explosions-of-mass-psychosis.html>

(2008) EXPLOSION again U.S. MASS psychosis and worse NEURO weapon NLP by 2nd L CIA ...happen and/or channeled un-wit! Profits from your ills. THEY create, induce, infiltrate, accelerate, corrupt, everything NATURAL...

CANCER explosions and Birth Defects-NEURO

<http://mireilletterjman.blogspot.com/2011/10/us-assault-cancers-and-birth-defects.html>

Research Links Rise in Falluja Birth Defects and Cancers to US Assault Defects in newborns 11 times higher than normal 'War contaminants' from 2004 attack could be cause by Martin Chulov enclosed Published on Friday, December 31, 2010 by The Guardian/UK

CANCER ELF WEAPON in Iraq while funding them as all other duplicity brainwash---

Film Documentary FOOD INCORPORATED partially censored out! DOA

1978 Operation Mind Control ALREADY in N.W.O. Matrix implemented MKULTRA evolved kept secret as SCIENCE cognitive behavior sciences and panaceas because they are the creator.

"The final result is not the whole story of the CIA's attack on the mind"

"I have been blocked for 20 YEARS!" and EMF/ELF MUST be Directed Energy to affect the body or Crop... D.E.W. WMD. Bin Ladin CIA ties...

Armies trained by our School of the AMERICAS SOA and set up mind controlling South America now Working on ASIA. Invaded Countries... Breaking The SOUND Barrier; Democracy NOW! pg 214+. with Notes. Jim Keith Mass Control Human Engineering, STRANGE DEATH after his book censored below...Wake up AMERICA! We are being contr olled from up above 2nd level shadow!

SOA Brainwash...It's everywhere including CIA VALERIE PLAME... technology weapons, Bay of Pigs invasion, and Juan Cole Scandals. RIK and Air Force waste as SAIC etc. AGNAs Contract guards behaviors, linguistics, and security in Bldgs, ... Embassies, F-22 waste

Sorcerer "Beam Warfare, THE Persinger PLAN, (50 yrs)+ NSA, and DreamScape, One World BRAIN,+ pages 200+ of INJECTING IDEOLOGY not just MEDIA mind taps, injecting your thoughts Electronic Mind Control, Psi War, and Beam WARFARE CANCER... Edward Bernays wrote public opinion H.G. Wells friend of N.W.O. MASTERMIND engineering CONSENT with mind control in 1928 propaganda and Invisible Govt. Information Warfare...

BRAINWASHING the GLOBE while there from up above transmissions as all else in USA done coupled with a TANGIBLE event and excuses. DISPLAY OF GITMO for someone to BLAME and the PUBLIC to BUY IT. Using the ACLU as the pawn and the MEDIA what to fan. wikileaks; disguised, intercepted by 2nd CIA chats & - ISRAEL- in SUPREME Court 5/2010 and GADDAFI SPEECH in 2008 of USA not democracy and HITLER/CIA.

CIA Robert Baer 20 years BOMB MAKERS to blow up trains. Interviews; Why no exposure and Middle East wars, Washington financial Corruptions, no threats, and MIS-COMMUNICATION by CIA to WHITE HOUSE to investigate him, etc WOW! John Loftus THE WITNESS TREE, Arab Nazis recruited by CIA since Dulles and antisemitism mind control from 2nd level. Madsen/ Schreuder etc...

Funding Terrorist Groups & Palestine economy growing 10% a yr with new Malls and we can't REVOLUTION in MASS accordingly! Bottom Left & jpost.com

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=A_7phE0RtbU

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=sDXurOmeJxc>

[2008]"Has America become a nation of psychotics? You would certainly think so, based on the explosion in the use of antipsychotic medications. In 2008, with over $14 billion in sales, antipsychotics became the single top-selling therapeutic class of prescription drugs in the United States, surpassing drugs used to treat high cholesterol and acid reflux. (Also synthetic ills) see Al Jazeera article unwitting.

Once upon a time, antipsychotics were reserved for a relatively small number of patients with hard-core psychiatric diagnoses - primarily schizophrenia and bipolar disorder - to treat such symptoms as delusions, hallucinations, or formal thought disorder."... (Among the most misdiagnosed ills in US) (Tax revenues on Rx drugs)

Many already manipulated into their office long ago. College manipulations no one knows about. "Breach" "Weird things happen when you join the bureau" Their shadow making anything happen.

CYBERSYN; The COUP for the Communist World: It is said Henry Kissinger was the one who intervened to put an end to the GRAND experiment. Salvador Allende was assassinated by Chileans who are reported to have been in the PAY of the CIA, and Cybersyn went by the wayside. (They thought) Today FCC coup to regulate the INTERNET; part of COMMUNISM infiltrations and attempts, KGB/Gestapo style Domestic Surveillance mind manipulations after the fact & covertly hijacked www & humans.

Operation wiki- Brainwash and re-creations of events 2008- WHITEWASH overtly layers in progressive events (staged, wittingly now pre suggested) twists and DIFFERENT OUTCOME manipulations.

"The cryptocracy has used mind control for the past thirty years. It has used it on its own agents and employees, on enemies and friends alike. It has used it on thousands of Americans without their knowledge or consent. The CIA has programmed assassins and couriers by it. The CIA has even openly confessed to its conspiracy of mind control."

ERUPTED CRIMES by 50% 1971 in ONE YEAR. Corruptions ADMISSIONS and MEDIA overtly with tangible lies, devices, & excuses- STRATEGIC. DIVIDE & CONQUER people... INFORMATION Warfare, operation MHCHAOS ...what was unwitting, unrealized, illusions for decades in the making cover ups.

PATRIOT ACT is one example BEWARE! Facts below and on line with Appendices! There is a 18 U.S.C. 241 Conspiracy against rights since MLK, JFK unwitting false blame... (2009) BIOWEAPON disguised as vaccine-Strange case MOSSAD WHISTLEBLOWER-ELF immune set ups and 2nd level CIA Stuxnet at Los Alamos! as Pentagon's Unit: The CULT of DEAD COWS and Intelligence. below:

American Lt. Col "The Dark Side of the Force: Creating & broadcasting any/all disease by ELF" is included in Bio weapons. 1950's

Speaking of the scalar wave induction of disease by longitudinal wave patterns Beararden refers to work by French scientist Kervran Russian scientist Kaznacheyev, who proved that any disease could be transmitted electromagnetically.

Inserted Comment:(and has been)Health in American-Michael Moore! False results and blaming doctors unwittingly being set up. SAIC CIA S --- pace/Star, StarStream Los Alamos pg 10 lawsuit....

TRANSMITTED (immune.... Below...Now visualize one of these 'vacuum engines' or 'spacetime curvature engines' that acts on mass to generate the exact effects produced by Anthrax Shadow . (Or any other disease one wishes) . . .DC & Gov lock down & blocked information in (bubble) kept in dark for yrs during process of false beliefs!

Ex-Nasa scientist admits offering secrets to Israel after FBI discover plot during tax probe

â € FBI believe they thwarted plan before any secrets were revealed

â € Stewart Nozette had been a leading scientist with high security clearance for decades

Thwarted crimes are selective. FBI was sent there unwitting as I, to blow whistle on (2nd CIA NAZI ARABS) by mind Control against Jews

I am ashamed of what climate science has become today. Sister Bertrell, Scientist.

This website information is awakening debunking/educating raising awareness, on humanity, a FULL DISCLOSURE Correction of 5 DECADES of 2nd level CIA Mind Control sabotaged by design TRANSMITTING people with DIS-information, MIS-COMMUNICATION, gaps non-sense, disoriented, blinders/blocks, unconsciously, manipulating YOUR conversations, not on same wavelength) or/ drift, sabotage created by Mind Control ELF waves & Energy, (1974) CIA Neuro-linguistic Programming. Directed ENERGY Weapon used nefariously deployed on ALL people as pawns UNWITTINGLY, illusions, robots, "every body's doing the locomotion" since (1973) CANCER- Most of your ills NOT organically grown nor our engineered culture & lives!

FOIA: Helms ordered this MKUltra both shredded and burned. This ELF info is the part that was burned and no one can talk about.

1978-"Zombie is a quaint, old-fashioned folklore word but its meaning becomes obscene when our children's minds are being controlled . Helms; CYBERNETICS can be used in molding of a child's character .. [p.17][Note:1] ODD series of events leading to...

Mind Control Process, daily mind taps. Locked door Society induced fears.

The hope was to take an existing ego statesuch as an imaginary childhood playmate and build it into a separate personality, unknown to the first. The hypnotist would communicate directly with this schizophrenic offshoot and command it to carry out specific deeds about which the main personality would know nothing...and HOW it is all EVOLVING. Pentagon's "Imaginary WEAPONS" by Sharon Weinberger - CIA were/are the Aliens among us We are not alone since big Brothers watching was the buzz. Toggling between families homes. French civilians were transmitted Bush was controlled by Aliens for psyops.

Also quotes from John Marks...

"Book" A search for Manchurian; 1950s & ELF ARSENAL weapons at bottom/linked. KEVIN TRUDEAU FDA/cases never proven to sicken you. Cover ups now overtly. Lasers, HAARP framing other Countries. Sweeps etc... airspace.

"It may have been the biggest story since the atom bomb. The headline, however, was small and ignored the larger issue. Drug Tests by CIA Held More Extensive Than Reported in 75, said the New York Times on July 16, 1977. ." mind taps SELECTIVELY not paid off. Crimes & corruption all Manchurian daily in America to wars infiltrations.

9 DOJ Fired at once when they could not be brainwashed to go along, and Generation on GAPS again.

130 Facts and Examples, see induced ills; LIST on bottom left and (Pharma Taxes; Tab)- Collectively by a Mind Control victim Expert Witness (NASA software CIA NLP training) Federal Whistleblower 1st hand, Warning "We the People" "Impeded, Gagged, tortured, quashed, disrupted, threatened, for 5 years, now being set up+.

Never believe anything until it is officially denied". Illusions scapegoating our Media after 50 yrs victims of mind control to create spin, dis-information WARFARE, making anything happen and appear as the opposite, etc... by mind control UNREALIZED & cognitive impairment infiltrations on all people."Why hasn't the press--aside from MSNBC--covered Russell Tice's revelations! or mine. Let the people decide; Millions would come forward. BREACHED CONTRACTS OVERSEAS SPYING to manipulate. Massive brainwash also in manifest! Another layer! MURDOCH FRAMED + as ALL ELSE by CIA.

Ron Paul says: CIA runs Everything but this website content is HOW: SHADOW/2nd level took off (1973) one year prior Church Commission Report with psyop MHchaos-FOIA- NO WONDER BIG BROTHER has been into every ASPECT and PROFESSION of AMERICANS. INFILTRATIONS on EVERYTHING IN AMERICA and going GLOBAL...Keep enemies close . TAMPERING with MINDS NOT JUST OUR CULTURE. Mistakes, Accidents, coincidences, your soul/ karma.Bottom

2nd level CIA FOIA 1972.

His God lurks "Behind the electronic curtain, we find: The SORCERER, MANIPULATOR, CYBERNETICIST, the weaver of the DREAMscape" Jim Keith pg 245 Dr. Bowart and Brilliant video. They all said Abolish CIA and NSAct (1947) but 2nd level. See Russia slide & CIA milt Beardon and Magnus Olsson; playing with memory. below click here for CIA/Bush/911

The CIA and 9/11 Explosive Connections | Gerald Celente Trends Blog
Pentagon Misfits- programming civility since 50% of milk carton children kidnapped returned- ARRESTED EMOTIONS AGGRANDIZEMENT (NARCISSISM)! To RAMPID crimes, corruption, teen...suicides, Diabetes, ECO. & ills-Bombers-& worse than, erupted, CANCER, PARKINSON, ALZHEIMER, Pres. Reagan and his memory, as the Frank Olson case and Hong Kong professor suffered an Alzheimer's disease-like memory loss that hampered his teaching. His lawsuit included Univ. of Science & Tech in continuing the mind control work...no metals just NLP as CIA. "My Parents were introduced to me....I did not know them. My 5 children came back....I had no idea who they were." "Canadian quote 1960's) Fibromyalgia, Immune Diseases in USA by ELF!
STOP inducing DRUGS on our Seniors and Americans!

See List (Project Montauk/Knockout, "THE GOAL of involuntary sleep unconscious states and audio tapes played negative messages to the patient 16 hours a day for weeks..." like MANY AMERICANS and like our MEDIA mind controlled to do the OPPOSITE as WASHINGTON (DYSFUNCTION) washing out good and planting bad cults and mixing it with triggers to control persons... below Left/tabs) The cult of Intelligence, documents. DRUGS do not make you commit crimes; the WILL does!

The AGGRANDIZEMENT of GOVT nefariously and JFK In the aftermath of the Bay of Pigs, President Kennedy reportedly vowed to splinter the CIA into a thousand pieces. In the end,...below

Crimes experiments induced in major Cities 70's to Wars provoked; Under the Auspices/Scapegoating Drugs they brought in Conspiracy. NOT from drugs or your TV..

SEE TIME photo/Article below:

"The behavioral sciences. Nevertheless, the final result is not the whole story of the CIA's attack on the mind. No one knows except the PARTICIPANT."

How you are letting mind control happen with brainwashing of disbelief... trickery of your will! Beliefs of their thoughts planted/ transmitted as your own- daily manipulations-duped!

$2 Mil. Tesla's Chinese Invisible Wall of Defense around the Country, (1940) melt an engine miles away. J P Morgan! Below Kamikaze manchurians Pilots, DREAMS. GITMO holdings and daily DELAYS/Bureaucracy time to Brainwash/ plant false memory/ syndrome sabotage- CIA tenant/files in WT7. Keeping your enemies close.

Rise & fall of ... Tempting and framing persons/Countries.

"It was either invisible warfare or peace, and everyone seemed to agree the economy would "suffer" from peace. Without war, it was believed, the economy would falter and depression would be the dividend of peace. Thus the advisors to the president began to think about what might motivate the U.S. economy as well as war did. They came up with several possibilities, the most fantastic of which was to fake an invasion from outer space" Resource Tab

CIA Vet Milt Beardon; "That you know of".....inventing ills, zchizo, Aliens, and enemies. Magnus Olsson Swede also says NAZIS in CIA.

Psychotronics-Psychotechnologies, Psycho- energetics INFORMATION WARFARE also on manipulating APA & AMA in your Hosp/doctor office/Lawyer... skewed medicine also press release below list of ills. (1975)

Not gone in vein: The leading Psychiatrist Dr. Bowart, Jim Keith, Mass Control Human Engineering, Jerry Smith, HAARP; The ultimate Weapon of the conspiracy- Star Wars Future is Now.-1997

Dr. Robert O. Becker all below with exhibits/ Appendices. Resource Tab with their work impeded in Absentia. Intelligence Committee Hoekstra warns and Bowart among many to ABOLISH useless CIA but also duped within and on LEFT videos of NAZI's in the CIA brainwashing and funding soldiers, Hitler and KKK. Electronic Epilepsy!

Research shows Golda Meir lobbied US to strike Auschwitz To NO avail. AND funded by Bush FAMILY. Bin LADEN DoD/CIA ties...

By GIL SHEFLER

09/04/2011 15:19

"The mind control examined in this book is the control of ONE individual's mind by ANOTHER!" Guided, misled, by the public UNWITTINGLY used as pawns (jacketed) one against the other with everything the OPPOSITE! (1973)

He called it Pain-Drug-Hypnosis and said it is a vicious war weapon ... The extensiveness of the use of this form of hypnotism in espionage work is now so widespread that it is long past the time when people should have become alarmed about it. [p. 75] Report

"Un-Covered" censored documentary CONGRESS marionettes not reading documents & zapped to sign & invade Iraq. Mind controlled & warned them in 2008 of BP oil spill/ELF RED TIDE annually eco.

JUDGE NAP. misperception delusion, suggests

Re-Read ...book quotes London Subway

Please check back daily for facts behind the scenes 2nd level no one is talking about or can believe. MIND Control Directed Energy Weapon is transmitted on YOU 24/7. Changing minds, Mis-applied perception, dysfunction and this information to dumb down Americans.

Must READ Censored Books: Mind Control ENCYCLOPEDIA "Mass Control: Engineering Human Consciousness" and "The Body Electric" (1973)

Everybody's doing the LOCOMOTION Hack your Nervous System on left and your daily anger or subdue, all manipulations of mind controls. Full book on blog
Secretary Geithner also highlighted Bear Stearns former Chief Operating Officer of Fixed Income, Paul Friedman, stated "Rumors were untrue until the telling of rumors made them true. This is how they do it (Project Stargate research DUPED by 2nd LEVEL as all else, and playing psychics).
Psy-ops framing & manipulating ALL people years in advance, as 911 no threat yet but THE BIG FEAR to believe and provoke until SUSPENDING THE CONSTITUTION CONSPIRACY. First they transmit/plant some buzz about it, on individuals and falsely accuse, then they engineer it. PROGRAM started (1961) ECONOMIC SABOTAGE infiltrations from mind control to create EPIDEMICS.

Voice of people not Power. Synthetic Telepathy "Your thoughts are not your own" Manipulations is not just on our Senate or few. COMMUNICATION CHAOS provoked individuals and wars techniques in manifest. Dis-information in SCIENCE as in COURTS to add doubt and chaos on ALL aspects of LIFE. False beliefs.. Public speeches below unwitting-Stay the course to manipulate... UNBELIEVABLE!

Lt Col. Bearden. JUNE 13, 1975 Russia called to BAN the weapon of MIND CONTROL "MORE TERRIBLE THAN ANYTHING THE WORLD HAS KNOWN--THE FRIGHTFUL NEW WEAPON OF MASS DESTRUCTION."

(1960) Lt. Col. Tom Bearden & Operation Mind Control (1978)-Resources Tab. Mind and Scalar Wars of Today-Behind the Scenes on you surreptitiously, inclusive of "Information Warfare tactics" and the new ways to ASSASSINATE civilians currently is also below. Not the Patriot ACT after THE FACT as ALL else here including 50 yrs technology in full operation and making it legal eyes wide open.

Yale Club, U.S. Military DoD SECRET SOCIETIES, since Yale 1910 Mr. Prescott BUSH, Global DOMINATION! DIABOLICAL....left

The mind control examined in this book is the control of one individual's mind by another. As with your computer and any other communication to entrain you with words and ideas and anchors transmitted in to you. Planting and erasing as memory and looking/visual tricks. Then they tell you stages over yrs.

DIRECTED ENERGY PROFESSIONAL SOCIETY

Calendar of Events

IAEA UNWIT GETTING CLOSE TO IRAN FOR SABOTAGE AND MANIPULATIONS

<http://www.deps.org/DEPSpages/events.html>

JFK-... whether his rank is high or low, civilian or military, should interpret my words here tonight as an excuse to censor the news, to stifle dissent, to cover up our mistakes or to withhold from the press and the public the facts they deserve to know. Dr Luukanen "We must know" Zoom in photo/doc at bottom of column,

STRAIGHT FROM JOHN MARKS BOOK below quotes pg 6, and more clues COLLECTIVELY CIA's attempts to tame hostile minds and make spy fantasies real... Cancer Tab Book in color/highlights at:

http://mireilletterjman.blogspot.com/2011_04_01_archive.html

Press release 2 bottom Left.

All at Resource Tab or here highlighted: for you including Article of Joint Chief Staff and Senators mind control by DoD...

<http://mireilletterjman.blogspot.com/2011/04/cryptocracys-plans-to-psycho-civilize.html>

1973-Psy-ops was deployed on CIVILIANS (not trash TV or anything else...)-Cognitive impairment infiltrations UNWIT, mis-communications, mind jabbing transmissions, false thoughts/speech, mis perceptions, non sense, instinct, dysfunction, disrespect, culture, information warfare "Dis-information, OPPOSITE NEWS... Operation MHCHAOS UNREALIZED unconscious reporters & now overtly!

WITHOUT A TRACE-Millions emails missing from WHITE HOUSE servers. Failed backups $2.5 mil in taxes to recover and NOTHING-2005, AS WITH CORP ee's manipulated phones, minds, servers, unwitting. Pentagon's Unit: The Cult of Dead Cows!

CIA cyber crimes, bullying, ID theft, THEFT & Vandalism selectively, ON ALL CIVILITY, stalking, specific MS viruses creation, HACKERS, tampered communications, muting, redirected, manipulations, intercepted thoughts day or night.....! covering up, pawns since 2009. Pg 17 Los ALAMOS LAB- NM. UFO's John B. Alexander Stuxnet below & Forces behind Psitech (RVS remote viewing & Power to Capitol City, B lind...resource tab

Dr. Warloff, Leuren Moret: Fukushima HAARP nuclear attack by CIA, DOE, BP for London banks. Subway bombing below and Hudson river crash Federal Judges assassinations.

Fukushima HAARP tectonic nuclear attack was done by an international racketeering war crimes network within the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), Department of Energy (DOE), and BP (British Petroleum) on behalf of City of London bankers. WEAPONS ELF exist for the FINANCIERS DoD mind controlling Corp LEADERS Macro cosm and CIA-developed Stuxnet virus, FRAMING Mossad! <http://youtu.be/htsWup50i3E>

CIA virus STUXNET creation..AGAIN in the AUSPICES of losing your FREEDOMS infiltrations...and $10 Million for MKULTRA, then!

Zoom in bottom & on left!

Pentagon Articles & Assange Speech as JFK's! You won't believe framed AMERICA! "Public/press the facts they deserve to know." Not Free from the mind. Talk about it, FAN IT! Don't squash it for another 50 yrs or day.

REMOTE VIEWING mind control in homes, school, work, FDA, & Corporates, big brother 24/7 manipulating you, engineering YOUR CHILDREN, yo-yo, ying yang, mind games, non sense, rhetoric & ills and much more. Resources Tab #32 +...

IT GETS WORSE, SCARIER Articles on LEFT ALSO IGNORED. WAKE UP AMERICA.

2 different thoughts transmitted at the same time to create fights, arguments, steering, manipulating conversations, chaos, dis-information! thoughts interference on your speech and decisions for decades... First they build TRUST..then behind your back M.C.set ups...

Your destinies are being led or misled, mostly no coincidences and YOUR THOUGHTS are NOT your own. Dumbed down, Obese, busy, De-sensitized & Dehumanized robots by mind control unwittingly.

Our ENGINEERED CULTURE of INFILTRATIONS, COVER UPS, manufacturing DOUBTS with dis-information, and WHITEWASH (since 2008) The ROOT of ALL Problems, still in manifest! The Matrix began long ago and the spying is after the fact of CIA 2nd level-took off in 1973 one year before. (FOIA)

Jerry E. Smith was an author, lecturer, poet, and editor. ... dies March 08, 2010... "Haarp: The Ultimate Weapon of the Conspiracy "(The Mind-Control Conspiracy Series BOOKS)

ELF directed energy weapon of mass.... Spread the word. We need a Revolution Abolish CIA 2nd level and NSAct. BP framed to cover up Gov't Lab Venice FL RED TIDE ELF infects since 1947 below Democracy NOW Air Force paralysis.

911 Kamikaze Pilots Mind Controlled robots on US Soil (Manchurians) suicide bombers as are Globalists. below:

FORCES Behind the Forces (SORCERER) needs to be STOPPED NOW! Matched with photo of book AFTERWARD (1985) at RESOURCE TAB: J Keith Electronic Connection. "His God lurks behind an electronic curtain when it is pulled away we find the "2nd level CIA" SORCERER, MANIPULATOR, CYBERNETICIST, the weaver of the DREAMscape." Manchurians in your sleep molding you. Unveil the 2nd LEVEL CIA Sorcerer. Brilliant video!

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=W_hHWg0cmQ8

Maxwells Silver Hammer Chapter "The Body Electric HOW SCIENCE was SUPPRESSED fro m AMERICANS decades ago! Mind Controlled SCIENTIST from the START and so forth.

Photo pages-See Tabs.

BEHAVIOR MODIFICATION in your sleep at your work! Press release TAB (2010), Tax Revenue on your Rx drugs (since Aliens hallucinations then alcohol/tax urges induced as all else. AFTER THEY MAKE YOU SYNTHETICALLY SICK and after they mind controlled you and your teacher, professor to push prescriptions and the greed transmitted to make commercial on your drug inducements on Americans and SENIORS & Operation Voice of God) ELF/EMF mind control transmissions, tricking you. What EVERYONE should know (about you) BEFORE it's TOO LATE! Changing your mind, Blocking your common sense... De-Population, De-sensitize! ELF Cancer SELECTIVELY and BLACK CANCER dropping like flies 911 tab, SICKO! Millions with Alien eruptions as Diabetes, Mood/Mental disorders, Leukemia/blood... BELOW on LEFT AMERICA-HOW and WHY it's done! 24/7 Remote Viewing and MURDERS/CRIMES ALL SURREPTITIOUSLY-CIA's QUEST!

SLIDES/Documents at RESOURCE TAB

"I believe the ultimate weapon is manipulation of our electromagnetic environment because its imperceptibly subtle and strikes at the core of life itself. Dr Becker

Al Gore was right. It's all about ELF waves and mind controlled beings! Govt CIA Censored Gulf news: UN scientists turn on UN-Al Gore's mind control (video) here

I am ashamed of what climate science has become today. Sister Bertrelli Scientist.

<http://www.examiner.com/human-rights-in-national/un-scientists-turn-on-un-and-al-gore>

My press release WARNS 9/2010 TO ISRAEL. In Supreme Court Case.

Egypt largest Military, Turkey Sibel gagged SSP created doubts and hide conspiracy agenda of NWO) CIA masterminds. A public brainwashed to allow it unwittingly, in the White House, to next calamity and Global Domination Conspiracy of the minds! General Anthony Zinni (wikipedia) and changed minds! (Brainwash on the job as many others, see how its done) Applicable on all people doubts chaos for their transmission of WRONG CHOICE/ DECISION in their CONTROL and manipulation. psychics!

CIA Predicts The Future 2015 - Water Resources. 2007 video comment; No CREATING Unwitting agents channeled to Infiltrate Waging WAR...Changed strategies. here http://www.liveleak.com/view?i=bb0_1180923539

Below are the different cells or color coded groups of people and their mind controlled functions in the new invisible Holocaust.

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=LJ73eOmdsv0&NR=1>

Loosing your freedom/Mind manipulations while SPYING, duping ALL and hiding behind SSP law, born with CIA since 1947, ALL BELOW SABOTAGED 911 Commission report, as Bear Stearns & ALL events with RUMORS first set up then applied by mind control infiltrations. Judicial Watch.com

War plans to escalate to WW3 Japan HAARP induced; bonds/economic & Projects... GreenStar....!

#39 Taxes Tab. Full reports! It's not the Sun, it's not God, just mind controlled corruptions, illusions of crimes and including accepting bribes to killing! 1973-90% JFK believed CIA conspiracy today!!!

Dr. Walter Bowart Report Pg 6 #21 and 39 imp.

The rest of the world didn't ask until 1976 the type of questions we were facing in 1965.... Everybody was afraid of building the supersoldier who would take orders without questioning, like the kamikaze pilot. 70's Manchurian crimes "Creating a subservient society was not out of sight"- by mind control waves."

FBI HOOVER "clandestine warfare avowed objective had been WORLD DOMINATION by whatever means and COST!" FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, who ordered FBI agents to

"expose, disrupt, misdirect, discredit, or otherwise neutralize" the activities of these movements and their leaders or individuals. Hoover disclosed how horrific these weapons were thus, hard to believe ..."

Larry Silverstein OWNER of 911 TOWER 7, set up in advance to get insurance and transmitted forced speech/DECISION to "pull" THE BUILDING to firefighters as if involved - NSA transmissions-SABOTAGED as Russell Tice Article forced speech of the NSA conducting war on Americans (YES, tip of iceberg) 2006 and Media asked, why press didn't pick it up other than NBC? Operation Mockingbird propaganda Unwittingly, updated remote viewing. CIA OFFICES/ FILES were among WTC 7.

Gifford shooting to decoy/ EXPLOIT-ASSASSINATING a FEDERAL JUDGE by Manchurians of crimes. Civil rights African crops and surreptitious cover up... CIA MASTERMINDS of AGENDA. (Pretext for Tyranny always a new law to infiltrate the whitewashing of The Constitution & Human Rights.) FREEDOM!

Human Rights ASSASSINATION Allison Des Forges Hudson River mind control plane Crash- AND Senator Ed Ted KENNEDY zapped-both on issues...

First. Then they came for the communists. I didn't object bc I wasn't a communist.

Then they came for the trade-unionists. I didn't object bc I wasn't a trade-unionist. Then they came for the Jews. I didn't object bc I wasn't a Jew. Then they came for me and there was no one left to help me. < famous statement attributed to Pastor Martin Niemöller (1892-1954) about the inactivity of German intellectuals following the Nazi rise to power and the purging of their chosen targets, group after group. peasant rock2, it's not about loving or hating the ACLU, it's about the govt arbitrarily stifling free speech of America citizens. "We must hang together or we will surely hang separately"

...Ben Franklin

JFK and Assange similar Speeches below: Beautiful ending!

Human Engineering: YOU are not Dumb Down, sickened, and obese because you're born on US Soil- It's in your mind. Subliminal Stress...Dr. Becker

<http://digbysblog.blogspot.com/2011/02/village-psy-ops.html>

U S Matrix of Robots-Songs Everybody's doing the Locomotion (1974), as are, Politicians-BP employees mind controlled thoughts channeled to we the people bottom of this page!

Directed Energy Weapon-Water Front Properties FL to NY under attack! Induced Climate Waves WIND, to De-populate and re-distribute wealth/Economy again. See how unwitting Agents! click here:

http://www.metacafe.com/watch/621153/cia_predicts_the_future_2015_water_resources/

In Absentia, Dr. R. Becker Begich, & WALTER BOWART Leading Psychiatrist Blows the Whistle! 50+ years proven mind control BUT ON APA -AMA at DOD INVENTING SYNTHE TIC ILLS ON AMERICAN STUDIES! Forced speech transmissions by-passing cortex, channeled opposite thoughts to argue/sabotage!

by Walter Bowart, New York: Dell Publishing Co., 1978 continuing to haunt Americans! UPDATED 1995 LEADING Psychiatrist Dies BEFORE FULL DISCLOSURES, his Son Silenced! Jim Keith...!!!

"Please keep fearfully in mind that the astonishing information published in this seminal work of investigative reporting, concerning avenues taken to decision and execution by our secret police to fracture or dissolve human minds, then to operate those minds a...

JFK, current assassinations CIA's quest Surreptitious killing us- softkills. Killing us softly, It's just an illusion songs, channeled Below

INVENTING and APPLIED (NLP) Paranoid Schizo, Moods, Grandeur Aggrandizement, etc . is only a thought from a trigger and anchors NSA CIA shadow transmissions, amplifications/ sensitivities induced. Tavistock: Best kept secret in America and Govt RAND Corp primary function Brainwash -CIA NLP not Freudian mind control ills

! AMA-Synthetic telepathy, false memory syndrome/ confession/ bearing false witness. Montauk Project (1943) A group which has as it's prime goal the further acquisition of ever-greater raw, oppressive power over the actual lives of it's own continued aggrandizement and enrichment at the expense not only of Earth's people but most certainly of the planet itself and all its many life forms as well.

Death Ray for planes was Tesla invention in 1940-Invisible Chinese Wall of defense was built around the Country, no matter how large an attack, Teleforce, manifests FREE energy and creates rays; zapping beams, and a $2,000,000.00 device to zap and melt an airplane motor 250 miles away and on the new invisible war. JP Morgan, Wardencliff Tower was in full action in Long Island NY GITMO innocent with FALSE MEMORY SYNDROME, time to brainwash staying the course, no due process bearing false witness/ confessions.

Secret WARS Japan HAARP! induced Seismic/ ELF... Waves-

See below COVER UPS and WHITEWASHED... France article Le Monde here

<http://criseusa.blog.lemonde.fr/category/fed/>

According to a US Department of Defense directive (S-3600.1, December 9, 1996), "Information warfare has tended to ignore the role of the human body as an information or data processor in this quest for dominance, except in those cases where an individual's logic or rational thought may be upset via Dis-information or deception... Yet, the body is capable not only of being deceived, manipulated or mis-informed but also shut down or destroyed." Dr. Begich. Blackouts of time not alcohol.

Full reports at Wordpress here and TAXES Tab:

<http://wp.me/ptPVb-2m>

Surveillance under the AUSPICES of and in disguise of existing remote viewing from Satellite Engineered a Human Matrix! Suggested Moods, pre-and post Manipulations & Worse. too busy, to dismiss this, & sensory deprav. unrealized stress induced and another year goes by of 50 with unwitting cognitive infiltration Unwittingly disconnects in White House to next calamity.

Mind Control guiding our lives and soul!

Wake up America! Time is of the Essence Operation wiki- BRAINWASH + sabotaging our daily life strategically psyops on individuals & subdued Americans

Please call if you can help, or need further information. Destroying careers, Quashed, Pre-empted me 2008 and again 2010 behind scenes.

We The People with TANGIBLE EXCUSES STAGED GLOBALLY & destroy my case of facts with Massive cover ups. Assange my FALL GUY. A story that needs to be told to the Public NOW. . The lesser of 2 evils Middle East AGENDA strategy...

ASSANGE and JFK speeches SIMILAR below Ben Franklin and current Assassinations. Why...& as if any of this is ok.

How America was/is Mind Controlled behind scenes to Police crimes infiltrations and drugs, Politicians Military, Media, Channeled Hollywood minds, UN-REALIZED and Robots! How they took down the economy, 911-not the last coup, de-population by design under the auspices of security losing freedom & hiding behind SSP law born with CIA 1947.

9 DOJ Fired at once when they could not be brainwashed to go along, and Generation GAPS again.

COURAGE IS CONTAGIOUS; Wikileaks! An example to discourage whistleblowers. Truths they won't get from wiki. classified and no clearance, un-wit another layer of whitewash and DIVERSION. Again Pre-empted staged leak & EVERY EFFORT to build discredits and EXCUSES/scapegoats publicly since 2008 censorship. PAWNS, Cognitive NLP infiltrations cultural, delays to sabotage, BEHAVIOR Science/ MODIFICATIONS, change minds, chaos to confuse argue mis-communications "jacketing" one against the other! YOUR ARGUMENTS, steering, manipulating conversations, etc...

Intercepted by 2nd level shadow CIA when uploading attempt this info. to Assange & Mossad.

Pentagon Science-Crazy & Democracy Now! BP employees, Red Tide cover up Mind Controlled Paralysis, WAR on Oil prices...on left highlighted or Below

<http://defensetech.org/2006/07/10/pentagon-science-crazy-enough/#more-2008>
Pentagon plan to hack your nervous system and DARPA trailing!
<http://defensetech.org/2006/02/13/air-force-plan-hack-your-nervous-system>
Articles on left

<http://www.wired.com/dangerroom/2010/12/cia-hypnosis>
<http://defensetech.org/?s=plan+to+hack+the+nervous+system&x=0&y=0>
UNWITTINGLY, ALL UNTRACEABLE-Pawns self-Destruct the World!

Tom Woods 10th amendment Lt. Col. Timothy L Thomas USA
www.interviewwithazombie.com
<http://www.tearingdownstrongholds.com/mindcontrol-mindhasnofirewall.htm>
Tampered Impeded threatened and worse, for 4 years. MKUltra now DARPA trailing 50 yrs behind, Psyops mind control CHAOS, Mockingbird.. unrealized, illusions of wrong doing, DIVERSIONS and DECOYS daily, & deployed on US soil decades ago creating criminals to terrorists. The root of all problems-robots in a matrix blaming & framing CORP. GOOGLE etc. CIA is behind scenes manipulating your minds.

1997 DoD Briefing: 'Others' can set off earthquakes, volcanoes remotely using elect worse than Katrina. full report below duped by their own 2nd level CIA
I am ashamed of what climate science has become today. Sister Bertrell, Scientist.
REMOTE VIEWING ELF/EMF sound waves also in our homes-work,-labs-FOR 50 YRS 24/7
Big Brother- Spy Satellites were TO MIND CONTROL YOU, by a shadow CIA UNWITTINGLY
TAKING US DOWN one mind, one ill, one crime, CANCER, one suicide at a time. (As up 50% in one year...) Cognitive, Nefarious, Infiltrations, DARPA Projects UNWit.
IMMUNE & NERVOUS system, it infects body, African crops, in disguise, as frying earth. Seismic waves induced climate energy induced as thoughts. Mass Control Human & CULTURE Engineering manipulating you with every tangible excuse with EVERY PROFESSION under siege producing wrong information.
MORGELLAN'S, Fibromalgia, Diabetes II, RLS, jolts signals Alzheimer, Epilepsy, Cancer, Immune, see #7 ills and endnotes lawsuit Tab or press release.
Operation wiki-brainwash! Now excuses for all as if natural.

Another layer of FANNED brainwash COVER UP since 2008 to pre-empt me again in attempts to WARN "we the people". War NSA transmissions USED for war on Americans as pawns to infiltrate raising prices, EVEN induce WALL STREET crimes toppling & 911.
Manipulations and wealth sabotage infiltrated!

PRESS is NOT FREE because their minds are not free to believe or print mind control and let public decide to with 50 years Operation Mockingbird is Cognitive infiltrations created DIS-information behind scenes-taking us down now FALSE documents cover ups! Kay Griggs mind jabbers! DoD wife and whistleblower victim.
Dr. MILTON FRIEDMAN- Freedoms ARE THE moral of HUMAN---Abolish most Agencies and WHY. <http://www.humanevents.com/UncommonKnowledge.php> FB. ECONOMIST (5 segments post-humously-2006)
Rolling Stone and Glenn Greenwald/Salon on Senates mind control "plant inside people's Heads" to manipulate them is a down play. 50 yrs too little too late below

<http://www.rollingstone.com/politics/news/another-runaway-general-army-deploys-psy-ops-on-u-s-senators-20110223>
<http://digbysblog.blogspot.com/2011/02/village-psy-ops.html>
Dr. Monteith, George Green, Ross Mandell, VETS, Gulf syndrome, Asthma, side effects, mobiles, microwaves, MSG, Gov't DENIED all because SHADOW CIA transmits by

ELF Directed Energy WEAPON to subdue as in disguise the nontraceable Neuro programming Agent ORANGE by ELF.

See lawsuit-tab for your relations, environment, ills, your kids They have pick up continued on all your thoughts, habits, groups, organizations ... since Church Committee Report went black never ceased & evolved!

Since holocaust, CIA Scientists and Doctors framed, unwittingly, "Nazi Hydra 1920"

FEMA Camps Condos 20 miles underground and million BUILT caskets under the guise of HR 645 unwitting.

FINLAND website

Dr. Rauni senses it as millions do. GERMANY CONFERENCE - U.N. by our own Army Col. NO chips HOOVER SAID IT'S too HORRIBLE to imagine! EVOLVED perfected CHURCH COMMISSION reported-admitted+

Click here German Dr. Rauni

<http://wemustknow.net/2010/06/mind-control-by-dr-rauni-leena-luukanen-kilde/>

Dr Luukanen "We must know" George Green

"This is how they will kill us" ...and decoys! here

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=VNJTtUhZxaY&NR=1>

CIA, George Green Israel WW3 set ups Bankers, Energy...! ABOLISH SHADOW CIA Dismantle Satellites

It's all directed energy environmental!

Drs. Monteith/Mate/Bowart/Becker/ STEVEN JONES BYU 911 Physicist

<http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=2934299660670363221#docid=4604856575726473042>

After watching and reading this, God Bless! Be proactive Revolution Mind Control/body to destroy humanity, WHAT WILL THEY DO 2012? Stop them!

<http://www.twf.org/News/Y1997/CIA.html>

THE SORCERER

V For 911 Vendetta Past Present and Future www.youtube.com

BRILLIANT!

Public Speeches

Robots

Repeated "stay the course" to brainwash invade Countries, GULF war transmitted to SURRENDER/subdue, "TheENERGY will be just fine", "We will HELP one SOUL at a TIME". HILLARY "I will not CHANNEL MY HUSBAND" as in Ghost Technology Transmissions SABOTAGED. Pres. CLINTON as well! RUMSFELD: There is what you know, you don't know..... SIDE EFFECTS OF BRAINWASH.

JFK Secret Society Speech Gives Future Generations Dire Warning, NOT UNDER MY ADMINISTRATION"

THE weapon of..... Mind Control to: Mis-

COMMUNICATIONS, both tangible and non tangible on we the people as pawns, dis-information now CIA intent and cover up mind to wars, mind to your decisions -emotions, BODY ills hallucinated ills, dementia, APA/AMA at DOD mind to dupe all, mind to induce stress, blood, anxieties, synthetics ills, mind control dumbing you down, not your water, cognitive mental blocks, subdue sensory deprivations, mind to induce urges to eat, mind to crimes (not drugs, not movies), mind to ACCIDENTS, Hosp mistakes, mind to media, mind to fears and paranoia and worse, Aliens/UFO cover ups,

Mind Control to: Govt employees, Hollywood, drugs, sex, rock n roll culture pop, trends, bubbles, mind to corrupt, mind to doctors/lawyers/agents politicians, all controls, invented psychosis delusions, dysfunctions, false perceptions, phone mind wars/games, etc... surreptitiously!

Now, the only embarrassment is Washington DUPED & didn't know about their shadow CIA, 911, and this website content! FRAMED AND STAGED! Coward murderers behind the scenes, DC tangible crimes now the cover up massive brainwash layer and SAVING FACE.....!

Wire-tapping is Surveillance- 1970 Spying was/is to manipulate you. EXPLOSIONS of Alien and Hallucinations, suicides, bombs, gays, crimes, corruptions, ills, im migrations, etc...

Framing, SPINS & FANNED Israel for yrs. WT7, APA, Ground O ??? ELF CANCER non tr aced as Agent Orange and Denied for DECADES ... Cover ups...

unwit CIA Keeping their enemies close TO TAKE THEM DOWN, infiltrations, illusion s, manifests.

Mind control transmissions on civilians Breeding EVOLVED for 50 yrs, de-populati on, economic trend-manipulations, Framed entrapment...

The rise and fall of people, CORPORATIONS, & Countries... ODD series of events l eading to... manipulating people to bribe/blackmail/ or take them down- and futu re outcome agendas. Across the Country. Story at docum. Tab. UNBELIEVABLE!

Duplicitous-Framing ISRAEL & piggybacked shadowing! See how CIA tab +. INJECTED IDEOLOGY covertly INFILTRATING WORSE OVER TIME TO CHUNK & ACCEPT.

ALL this HIDING behind SSP Secret laws impeding truth and worse-Jesselyn Radack, Thomas DRAKE, Tom Tamm, GEORGE GREEN, ROBERT BAER, Frank OLSON, Swede Stieg LAR SSON, B.P. set up-Covered up FLA RED TIDE Venice, FL Labs, 1947 ELF/EMF infects life, cells, DNA, crops & chemtrails cover up!

Mind Control-answer to all mis-information DC, GAZA disconnects 2009, RHETORIC, lies, dis-information GAPS, illusions, non-sense. GOLDSTONE REPORT, SS Liberty S ET UPS... Mind Control Root of ALL problems. Talk about it FAN it! Looking beyon d the messengers. God Bless America, God Bless Humanity!

Assange

Secrets are for a reason and secret abuses are impossible to correct unless you know they are going on. Knowing their plans before they are implemented to oppos e before they occur. If they are exposed by the people already suffering by the abuse, then the abuse has already occurred and it is too late.

M. Monroe mind control suicides! Mind Control redistribution of wealth.

When even one American -who has done nothing wrong- is forced by fear to shut hi s mind and close his mouth, then all Americans are in peril.

Harry S.Truman

JFK speech

The very word "secrecy" is repugnant in a free and open society; and we are as a people inherently and historically opposed to secret societies, to secret oaths and to secret proceedings. We decided long ago that the dangers of excessive an d unwarranted concealment of pertinent facts far outweighed the dangers which ar e cited to justify it. Even today, there is little value in opposing the threat of a closed society by imitating its arbitrary restrictions. Even today, there i s little value in insuring the survival of our nation if our traditions do not s urvive with it. And there is very grave danger that an announced need for increa sed security will be seized upon by those anxious to expand its meaning to the v ery limits of official censorship and concealment. That I do not intend to permi t to the extent that it is in my control. And no official of my Administration, whether his rank is high or low, civilian or military, should interpret my words here tonight as an excuse to censor the news, to stifle dissent, to cover up ou r mistakes or to withhold from the press and the public the facts they deserve t o know.

Last line of defense-Whistleblowers and Sheriff Dept OATH to protect against FED S! Structural Liberties!

PLANNED WARS TO INFILTRATE COMMUNISM! Dividing all to conquer!

Disarming you-Gun Control, for a manipulated REVOLUTION hijacked passwords, www in the 90's, 911, now Exec. order 11005 take over waterways martial law Katrina Massacres, Plans, to HR 1955 reversed freedom of thought!

Brainwashing & WHITEWASHING HISTORY is underway!

Dr. Robert Becker was the major researcher and writer on health dangers from ele ctromagnetic fields, he died a few months ago, in summer 2008 warned INDUCED ELF

/EMF

"John Wayne and Susan Hayward died CANCER decades after movie and unexpected wind shift and MONSANTO sabotage. FARMING cases!" Page 307 to 347 THE BODY ELECTRIC DoD!

Channeled Song writers and Many more victims since 70's unwittingly, Rock and Locomotion, It's just an illusion... Farrah, M. Jackson, Elvis, Susan Lucci awards ... B. Spears "stop them from turning everyone against me" all mind control victims worse than the rest of population!

INFILTRATING AN INDUCED SEISMIC waves/ATTACKS ON WATER FRONT PROPERTIES EAST COAST & WATER WARS WITH TURKEY, EGYPT largest Military TAKING ISRAEL DOWN IN SHADOWS! and US one Politician, one Civilian at a time INFILTRATIONS

Remote Viewing London Subway Bombing-Staged-CIA predicts, NO Planning to carry out-water (WAR) 2015-mind control transmissions zaps DRY heat in body and energy-taking us down, Israel, Middle East, Africa. ASSASSINATED Allison Des Forges Hudson River mind control plane Crash- AND Senator Ed Ted KENNEDY zapped

Civil rights Africa... CIA MASTERMINDS of AGENDA too busy, to dismiss this, & sensory deprav. unrealized stress induced and another year goes by of 50 with unwitting cognitive infiltration Unwit in disconnects in White House to next calamity.

Mind Control guiding our lives and soul!

DARPA-Project Voice of God, & Psychic Project Stargate, playing paranormal, playing laws of attraction, breeding Power & greed!

SUNSTEIN's Report-Cognitive impairment infiltration is unwitting not hired creating illusion-Un-realized Kinesthetics! Creating false perceptions for DECADES on everyone. Cults in sheep skin!

THE MOTHER OF ALL EVIL-CIA Technology crimes Changing minds and hearts, including Presidents!

Millions are coming forward--EXPOSE IT, A REVOLUTION IS NECESSARY- Power in Numbers. This tells all why some utter What is this world coming to? Pre-911.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM, AND SCHOOL BOOKS WITH FALSE MEDICINE and FALSE TESTS RESULTS and Engineered lives all from the mind! Voting, www. and all tests can and are tampered.

Have you read "Lies the Government told you"? READ twice- Perceptions in AMERICA

LONDON Subway CIA- INSIDE JOB- Remote Viewing, Surveillance and Searches-STAGED!

Other Countries Un-preventable

VETS-MANCHURIAN Candidates-Agent Orange non-Traceable and dream suggestions- Post traumatic false illness induced as all others.

John Marks-CIA BUILDING/Search MANCHURIANS since MKULTRA and Hitler on Soldiers as LATIN AMERICA and so on.....Click here or resource tab for highlighted version!

http://mireilletorjman.blogspot.com/2011_04_01_archive.html

<http://thewhiteroseii.wordpress.com/>

cryptome.org

30. MAY THE FORCE BE WITH US!

The first evidence of the use of hypnosis as a reliable operational tool of the cryptocracy, according to John Marks, can be found in the work of Morse Allen in 1954. Of course hypnosis itself had been used by shamans and fakirs to manipulate and control people for centuries. Marks explains that Allen's work came at the height of the Project ARTICHOKE explorations in which the spooks attempted to use hypnosis to "programme" an assassin. CIA documents also reveal that in 1959 John Gittinger recommended the use of hypnosis in operational experiments. (Of course our latest evidence shows that Navy Intelligence had been using mind control in the 1940's, at least.)

Charlotte Iserbyt is another familial Whistleblower on 100 year Secret Society plan on dumbing down U.S. education system. Corrupting the minds books, and teachers to implement this, and CIA bomb makers, just for starters.

The CIA files contain a translation of a Soviet research project entitled Unperceived Manifestations of Mental Processes in Deep Hypnosis which described the su ccess of their psychoscientists: "We succeeded in programming not only the subject of dreams (I would like to visit Africa in my dream...), but to program color perception (let my dream be blue...), as well as inducing a specific mood after sleepin..."

31. THE WARRIOR'S TONGUE

John Alexander is a busy man these days, not only is he one of the moving forces behind PSITECH, a company that sells military developed remote viewing skills (RVS) to private enterprise, he is the program manager for nonlethal defense at the Los Alamos (N.M.) National Laboratory, an author (The Warrior's Edge), and a practitioner of the gem of mind control arts --Neuro-linguistics Programming. To day, after 32 years of military service this retired Colonel has the responsibility of drawing together and nurturing many nonlethal weapons devices which could disable key electronic equipment, blind weapons sensors or shut off the power to a capital city. He has drawn upon a variety of disciplines involving polymer chemistry, microbics, kinetics, acoustics, electrical engineering, materials science and information science, just to demonstrate their feasibility," in the burgeoning science called Nonlethal defense, at least so said Aviation Week & Space Technology. "As the concept has evolved," Alexander is reported as saying, " we have come to focus our efforts on anti-material systems. If you can stop the machines of war, you can inhibit the prosecution of conflict."

32. CULT CONTROL

In 1990 psychiatrist Dr. Louis Jolyon West, M.D., Professor of Psychiatry, University of California, pet shrink of the cryptocracy gave a speech on cults. As usual it was soft on fact and hard on the cryptocracy line: It is estimated that there are more than 2500 cults in the United States... Now there must be a lot more "cults" than that since, the Oxford English Dictionary said the word cult meant:

Core Values Accountability Integrity Efficiency

To support the Department's mission and serve the public interest.

DOE Secretary HAZEL O'LEARY admissions...

DoD Secret Societies- your tax $ and Trillions U S Pentagon Black Budgets and Source Selection Board decisions, in the Trillions.--- N.S.A. has a five-thousand-acre campus at Fort Meade protected by iris scanners and facial-recognition devices. The electric bill there is said to surpass $$ seventy million dollars a year." For civility and DNA cloning and/or data-mining, etc. It does not protect. at bottom

Pentagons source selection Board repeatedly recommended a bid by Boeing as both better and cheaper... DoD awarded to Gen. Dynamics" 2nd level manipulated.

DoD McNamara, wrote in March 1969 issue of Washington Monthly Mag.; Few Americans are aware that about 90 % of the Major weapons systems that the defense Dept. procures ends up costing the Country at least twice as much as was originally estimated. The American Tax Payer is not getting their moneys worth???????? SAIC FBI lawsuit & Pursuant with Lawsuit by BOEING .

7. In 1967, after Ramparts magazine exposed secret CIA funding of the National Student Association and numerous nonprofit organizations, President Johnson forbade CIA support of foundations or educational institutions. Inside the Agency there was no notion that this order meant ending relationships, such as the one with Geschickter. In his case, the agile CIA men simply transferred the funding from the foundation to a private company, of which his son was the secretary-treasurer.

8. Lying to Congress followed the pattern of lying to the press that some MKULTRA veterans adopted after the first revelations came out. For example, former Human Ecology Society director James Monroe told The New York Times on August 2, 1977 that "only about 25 to 30 percent" of the Society's budget came from the CIAa statement he knew to be false since the actual figure was well over 90 percent. His untruth allowed some other grantees to claim that their particular project was funded out of the non-Agency part of the Society.

"The last could have incredibly destructive applications, if it worked. For instance, switches setting off nuclear bombs would have to be moved only a few inches

s to launch a holocaust. Or, enemy psychics, with minds honed to laser-beam sharpness, could launch attacks to burn out the brains of American nuclear scientists. Any or all of these techniques have numerous applications to the spy trade." In the aftermath of the Bay of Pigs, President Kennedy reportedly vowed to splinter the CIA into a thousand pieces. In the end, he settled for firing Allen Dulles and his top deputies. To head the Agency, which lost none of its power, Kennedy brought in John McCone, a defense contractor and former head of the Atomic Energy Commission. With no operational background, McCone had a different notion than Dulles of how to manage the CIA, particularly in the scientific area. "McCone never felt akin to the covert way of doing things," recalls Ray Cline, whom the new Director made his Deputy for Intelligence. McCone apparently believed that science should be in the hands of the scientists, not the clandestine operators, and he brought in a fellow Californian, an aerospace "whiz kid" named Albert "Bud" Wheelon to head a new Agency Directorate for Science and Technology.

---Search for Manchurian

Allen Dulles, COMMON CAUSE JUDICIAL and much more.

http://mireilletterjman.blogspot.com/2011_04_01_archive.html

http://mireilletterjman.blogspot.com/2011_04_01_archive.html

<http://thewhiteroseiii.wordpress.com/2011/04/>

Copyright 2010 NSA Transmissions. All rights reserved.

Web Hosting by Yahoo! An expert witness, Certified Hypnotist trained in CIA Neuro Linguistic Programming techniques with NASA software and Military Patents.

NSA Transmissions-Mind Control, Death Rays for Planes, Cancer, Synthetic ills- Topplings ELF & Seismic Waves + Behind Scenes Focused on Wrong Weapon Mass Destruction TERRORISTS WITHIN, 1973 2nd Level CIA, Cryptocracy's Plan to Psycho-civilize You, Emulating Scriptures! ---How & Why 911, Economy. ALL from your minds! MA CROCOSM. Millions including America's Corp Leaders & Officials! "The Process." Israel Framed-engineered to go down. Have you figured it out yet!

- â ¢ NSA Tice-Hero under God
- â ¢ US Supreme Court Case
- â ¢ Israel-CIA Agenda- Press Releases
- â ¢ Synthetic Telepathy-ills-TAXES
- â ¢ Cancer 911 CIA
- â ¢ Resources to Expose
- â ¢ Interviews-Exhibits-Documents
- â ¢ Lawsuit-Synthetic ills in America

FAN IT, TALK ABOUT IT, STOP THEM before too late-

It's not courts that are Supreme but the Constitution! It is to Govern the Gov't not the People! Beware of Article V- "If we forgot anything, you can't do that!"

" John Birch Foundation, www.jbs.org-How AMERICA got this way Synthetically -Mind Control Matrix! Lawsuit TAB for full allegations and all hiding crimes behind SSP since 1947 unwittingly.

"Let's all understand that attempts to assassinate my character will continue and in all probability will become worse. Rather than let that get in the way, I want you to believe everything bad that you ever hear about me. See if that changes anything that I have been trying to tell you."

William Cooper was Eliminated by the Order in 2001 he was gunned down by government agents outside his home in Eager Arizona. William Cooper was the one who uncovered the 9/11 plot a few months before he was killed . "WIKIPEDIA BIO; It's NOT Aliens, just CIA Psychotronics; Unbelievable!

The Government's duty of honesty to the Court can never be excused, no matter what the circumstance. The Court is charged with the HUMBLING task of defending the CONSTITUTION and ensuring that the Government does not falsely accuse people, needlessly invade their privacy or wrongfully deprive them of liberty. The Court simply cannot perform this important task if the Government lies to it. Deception perverts justice. Truth always promotes it.

LIST OF PARTIES New lawsuits filed in Federal Courts

MIREILLE TORJMAN

Plaintiff

V.

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION et al.

935 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest

Washington, DC 20535-0001;

CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

1000 Colonial Farm Rd-Legal Counsel Gate 5

Washington, D.C. 20505;

NATIONAL SECURITY AGENCY

9800 Savage Road, Suite 6711

Fort Meade, MD 20755-6711;

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

950 Pennsylvania Ave, N.W. Rm 5614

Washington, D.C. 20530;

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE

1000 Defense Pentagon Rm 3E880

Washington, DC 20301-1000;

DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

1000 Independence Ave

Washington, DC 20585;

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

Defendants

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE PETITION

1. This Case Presents an Important Question of our Amendment Laws That the District Court Has Decided in a Way That Conflicts with Petitioners proof and Public Admissions from United States Officials which warrant for National Importance, and grave risks for the American Judicial System and Public WELFARE AND SAFETY.

2. An American citizen has a Constitutional right to petition.

INDEX TO APPENDICES AND EXHIBITS

1. Jim Keith Photo-CIA Mass control Dumbing down America, Death-Pushed/Fell ? (2)

2. Judge Napolitano The Lies the Govt told you photos-(6)

3. Article Judicial System example of ordinary citizens perception and concerns of Truth-(7)

4. Letter from Attorney (Petitioner warned class action suit non-gang related)-(5)
5. Articles Media and public concern Unwitting Media and sample-(17)
6. Article of Bush Family Patriarch statement in 1966 (Congress-Media)-(3)
7. Letter Judiciary Committee Patrick Leahy July 2010 and email January 2009-(5)
8. Press Release September 17, 2010-(14)
9. Memorandum Opinion Dismiss Jul 20-(3)
10. Order denied Venue with Appeal Sept 9-(3)

CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY PROVISIONS INVOLVED

U.S. Const. Amendments: As in Complaint and;
I. Freedom of religion, speech, the press, assembly, and petition.
IV. Interdiction of unreasonable searches and seizures;
VIII. Bans cruel and unusual punishment, and excessive fines or bail
IX. Unenumerated rights
XIII. Abolishes slavery and involuntary servitude, (ELECTRONIC WARFARE)

IN THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

MIREILLE TORJMAN CASE NO.: 10-cv-01211 - AP 10-5302
Plaintiff
V.
FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATIONS, et al.
Defendant

INFORMAL PETITION, MOTION FOR REHEARING EN BANC

Comes now, Appellant, hereby moves this court for rehearing and of the Appeal for remand. The proceedings involve one or more questions of exceptional importance regarding Appellants presentation to proceed, and the conflict in the citation of neitzke v. williams. A record and presentation should not prevent a victim from justice. Appellant provided explanation why she could not get representation and does not know law. The Appellant also requested a motion of leave for various reasons. Appellant is sabotaged in all ways and told what is being done to torment further. These are techniques or tactics admitted in the Church Commission report and other sources as NSA sabotage to Americans, in Complaint. Mind Control in America is prevalent, (non mainstream news) and admitted, thus should not be thought of as frivolous or implausible any longer. (Even worse, is George Gre en video subsequently, of the conspiracy end result.) Just 4 years ago, Appellant also thought this was plausible. Appellant can prove a Shadow Govt, Secret Society is engineering our society; from seismic wave inductions, to daily crime in filtrations, and Bear Stearns rumors making things real/happen after infiltrating mind control transmissions on every profession including Wall Street. No one should underestimate the power of this weapon and how far they are going to cover it up as we speak, (January 2, 2011). Attorneys are influenced with coerced fear, work load, deleting Appellants emails unread, and numerous other excuses, unrealized. This occurred with Appellants Attorneys, the former Class Action Attorney, and other Attorneys, not solely Richard I. Fine and civil rights attorneys who are targeted. This form of coerced sabotage is also illegal (pg 5). This again started with the FBI and the Church Commission reports of admissions targeting Civil Rights, Human Rights, Attorneys, dissent, activists, and millions more. There has been an infiltrated obey Orwellian culture as with dysfunctional Americans. Million not thousands as quoted by NSA who are in or out of Hospitals, comp lain of decades of mind control from our DOD. This case represents much more. However, Appellant showed the motive exists, the weapon exists, and the witnesses exist. Everything rests on this Weapon of Mass Destruction; the minds of the people, which control the daily events tricking one is choosing. No progress can be made if the courts can't recognize this as a significant factor. Most unrepresented Americans (pro se), in the Judicial System fail by design for decades. This ongoing impeded and sabotaged record and presentation was included in the Appellants Complaint. Many other Attorneys have left the Country.

As in the Richard I. Fine Attorneys case in California who was jailed when trying to expose some corruption, was too late after 18 months impeded from finding out what was really happening in that court. He is suing the bar for his mistreatments, but no one would come to his aid, including the ACLU for reasons of contradiction, no resources, excess workload and other excuses, because we the people are being manipulated unwittingly in a Matrix created decades ago. Appellant has spent 4 years with this and hundreds of dollars in postage, travel and expenses, and wasted legal fees just to keep from exposing full disclosure truths until it is too late. Attorneys were influenced, some overnight, some ingrained. Appellant was influenced and transmitted to omit names and make numerous errors, among some of the other impediments from the public described throughout complaint and brief, tangibly, and non-tangibly. Because of this circumstance and the nature of the case, Appellant should be granted opportunity to proceed and seek justice, redress, and due process, or rule of law, with corrections. Appellant was unsure of summary judgment, prima facie law or trial on May 28, 2010 when threatened before delays began.

Additionally, false scientific theories from this weapon have everyone duped and it is ingrained in the people for decades as disbelief and much worse. Yet, the weapons existed, admissions existed, millions agree and are suppressed, with the proof in the pudding all the way to American health and economy. Those days were gone when MKUltra and cutting edge technology got in the hands of Shadow CIA covertly deployed. What did NOT exist before MKUltra technology and Secret Societies, now widely known, were urges to eat, do drugs, crime, cold and stupid, childish, juvenile targets, and media joke culture, corrupt, Cancer is ELF virus, Heart Attacks, Alzheimer, paranoid schizophrenia, Immune, neuro diseases of NLP, suicide, inventing sociopaths and synthetic Fibromyalgia, Morgellons, and the list goes on as in (endnotes of Complaint), always blamed on something else. More layers of brainwashing dis-information have been launched since Operation WikiLeaks as the tool to twist/spin another layer of history. All these issues are out in the open now and must start to enter the court rooms and media for accountability and to cease or dismantle. Appellant is pre-empted. Had this case or weapon and mind control been fanned in 2008 or decades ago, America would not be bankrupt and worse today. Crimes have unwittingly fallen under aiding and abetting, framed, falsely accused with these weapons behind the scenes since Patty Hearst or any type of Manchurian for behaviors and beliefs. That set precedence for crimes to hide behind drugs, broken homes or movies, as alien hallucinations and bearing false witness. However, the law did not recognize that or the brave whistleblowers that try to report any corruption to this day and age. The law must defend transmitted influence and coercion to discover to ALL the conspiracies.

Dr. Rauni-Leena -Nyhetsspeilet.no, Dr. Robert Becker on dangers of ELF induced from Govt before his death, and numerous other prominent Doctors Globally as Dr. Byron T. Weeks, MD, July 31, 2001 find this case not implausible any longer, but Americas best kept secrets.

Coercion (pronounced /k-o-r-r-n/) is the practice of forcing another party to behave in an involuntary manner (whether through action or inaction) by use of threats, intimidation or some other form of pressure or force.

This force was also described by outsiders in various Countries as in the energy but not just by mass. An exception or acceptance to this case should be allowed at least to amend or remand. This weapon is so evil and influences and coerces unwittingly any form of LIFE. This must not be condoned but recognized, and dismantled. Appellants defense should be granted with leave, or there is no injunction or justice for any of us. This case represents importance coming from a voice of we the people who are what matters and who our Government services. Had others prevailed for decades in regards to mind-body motor control, weapon, lives would have been saved, accountability and injunctions would have been in place and 911 would have been prevented etc. There are 54 prominent whistleblowers ignored on 911 commission and thousands more over the years with twisted versions of truth in news brainwashing Americans. Opposite news for decade conspiracy in all topics to add false sense of needed security when people do not want this tyranny in disguise. Creating more Govt tax dollar DHS agencies one after the other, most unnecessary ineffective for decades by design and Corporations taking away jobs by outsourcing overseas trends. Enough is enough; this cannot continue or be swept under the rug for more deaths, calamities, with humanity and science under siege. Selective urges, pre-post suggestions, pain killer, prisons, rehabs, food, any addictions, behaviors modifications, inventing the ying and yang, COGNITIVE IMPAIRMENTS and rhetoric, opposites wave length conversations, all under NLP to engineer CHAOS, corruption and oppression. An APA and AMA framed at DOD and in books of false sciences, always staying close to their enemies to take them down.

According to the Revolution Grass Roots of America going on today, millions of citizens and victims in the system, there has been no justice for decades. Appellant will provide evidence and proof. The flow of FOIA was written about 1966-1974 with intended delays and only partial disclosures or loop holes. Millions of dollars and hours are spent by tax dollars, employees, attorneys and their fees, and court cases, just in fighting for months for documents from our Govt and discovery. This tactic was snuck in the system as well according to the Church Commission Report.

This weapon is not new technology but can no longer be ignored or dumb us down further. People complain of the Judicial system not working for its people and being corrupt, the Constitution being disrespected when it is Supreme, not the Courts. Non-profits battle it for decades through political organizations and no change was effective. This case represents how and why we the people are duped. Redress and the rule of law has been a problem on its own people by its own people. Why would anyone want to prevent such importance because of presentation with good valid reason, especially when lives are being saved, but no one to care of Appellants efforts and risks? It is non-sense that a Judge would not want to hear this case as soon as possible, when making decisions every day about American lives for their justice. Voice of people not power. Where is the caring justice that the oath motivated our Judges to practice law and rule on human beings? Is Washington still in a bubble (suspension from realizing what is really going on in Americas ordinary people? Where is a media of thousands of reporters at their desks that wont take a story and allow the public to make their own minds? Appellant is hung up before saying her name and cut off from discussion. Whistleblowers are blocked, quashed, impeded, discredited, detained, discouraged, threatened, and the Medias DUTY to report Government actions to we the people to help suppress the conspiracy from mind control leading corruptions, crimes and terrorists. There is a revolution on exposing the CONSPIRACY before its too late. Every effort is being made to cover up mind control with tangible excuses and to discredit and set up Appellant since 2008. Appellant can identify a matrix of brainwashing media and of mind controlled 5 senses on Americans not living in REALITY or real world events. Brainwash cannot occur without a tangible and environment. Both are required, however Transmissions trick one to believe their thoughts and senses are organically grown unwittingly, including any behavior. Appellant witnessed much worse with crimes and illusions of crimes (infiltrating paranoia in Americans-1970s) from mind controlled others in high rankings and unwitting. Appellant is under threat and tortured by her own Government. The Appellant has been a healthy law abiding citizen doing charity work and has the right to due process. Defined as:

Due process is the principle that the government must respect all of the legal rights that are owed to a person according to the law. Due process holds the government subservient to the law of the land protecting individual persons from the state. When a government harms a person, without following the exact course of the law, then that is a due process violation which offends the rule of law. Due process has also been frequently interpreted as limiting laws and legal proceedings (see substantive due process), so judges - instead of legislators - may define and guarantee fundamental fairness, justice, & liberty.

Appellant stated having numerous overwhelming records, evidence, proof, witnesses, and confident she can prevail. Other counts with FOIA have also been made that should not be denied because of their importance. A victim of her Government has as the civil right to justice and the criminal right to an immediate injunction.

This was also presented in the Complaint. There was ruling against the record and presentation and this should not supersede or get in the way of justice and redress. There was however, reason and accusations of attacks psychologically by transmissions and induced pressure, coercion tactics, and threats to file immediately and to err constantly to impede and self destruct and to change Appellants mind to her detriment and that of the humanity. The Appellant had to move 3 times in October 2010, while preparing the brief and its presentation. Appellant was unable to receive Verizon internet for weeks and hours on the phone for weeks again, with constant unwitting delays from everyone. Appellant is constantly impeded with printing, transportation, and postal capabilities and these repugnant attacks, threats, and tactics to sabotage, were part of the allegation in complaint inclusive of the accusations of 2008 and should not be discounted. This sabotage was also admitted by NSA Russell Tice in the complaint and (Appendix N). These are transmitted attacks to targeted victims and are escalated at time of importance to unbearable suffering. This is the sabotage of Cointelpro NSA Electronic Warfare on Americans that should not be ignored as it is exploding for massive whitewashing. This is an extraordinary cause, to grant rehearing and/or trial and be able to proceed. The tangible aspect of the case also includes FOIA, blocked selective emails including resumes, and communications, sabotage and isolation. Appellant was harassed out of her house by these various tactics and is injured by her Government with this weapon.

Victims are disbelieved nationwide, and victims unable to obtain representation or assistance including class action suits and the ACLU has been a problem to bring this weapon to light misused on its own civilians and allowed this Country to self destruct over 50 yrs unwittingly. It allowed crime experiments in the 70s on major cities evolve to 911 false terrors, provocations, playing voice of God and ET, Aliens/UFO hologram projects, tax dollars to build spaceships and cover ups. This Weapon of mass Destruction includes Quantum Physics MATTER that affects autos, appliances, objects, Directed Energy body mass, functions, and gravity, according to targeted individuals class action, however Appellant has also witnessed its use for plumbing and water/sewer clogging and tampered manipulations. A massive propaganda and dis-information operation was launched in this Country, since subliminal marketing discoveries. It started with Cointelpro and DARPA, by a Shadow CIA covert ops and proven infiltrated wars, with cult-like diabolic, sadistic programmed misfits (MAD scientists) targeting Americans they dislike behind the scenes. These were alluded to as scientists in the Pentagon claiming ways to figure out how to (program) humans by investigative journalist televised interviews and literature (Space and technology, Pentagon Science: CRAZY ENOUGH and DEATH RAYS by Sharon Weinberger, Journey to Pentagons Scientific Underworld, and Imaginary Weapons), successfully quashed or suppressed. (Exhibit A, B) Sensory manipulations and much worse infiltrations have been reported as examples discussed in 2006 Articles (Air Force Plan: Hack Your Nervous System) Weapons Grade: How Modern Warfare Gave Birth to Our High-Tech World.) This is inclusive of mental confusion, heart/muscle attacks, and entire body surreptitiously activated remotely from the mind. CIA tactics have always been, first do then tell. By May 9, 1973 a second level of CIA went discreet with program MHCHAOS, shadowing CHAOS. Program CHAOS included the possible manipulation of American citizens by any one found negative. Today POLICE are being blamed and killing many people across Country with the GUN VERSION of taser-like motor control, but patented as NON LETHAL. (App. N of Brief) NSA stated the same EMF/ELF warfare that can cause subject to be diagnosed with mental ill health was also overlooked.

Today there is so much talk with a Nuremberg code and Trials from prominent folk s and agents themselves. It is already proven that our CIA has been most corrupt and inhumane in their torture and crimes, and STAGED CRIMES to lose freedom, yet a Judicial system cannot realize what else is going on, even with admissions and whistleblowers from within who claim worse from this Secret Society. (Exhibit A, B new evidence) Former CIA, Bankers, Remote Viewers, George Green also stating a plan for WWII is Fais de Complait in Israel, as Appellant alleged in August. Reducing Middle East population plans, while focused on wrong weapon of mass destruction infiltrating de-population occurring without Nuclear needs. This is called soft kill or slow kill. Jesse Ventura censored out documentary on FEMA labeled Enemy camps with children behind barb wires, covert caskets built in thousands, under the guise of HR 645 and other Exec. Orders to self-destruct, under the guise of terrorism, also being infiltrated, as claimed in brief, a take over of WATERWAYS with HR 11005 and Katrina highway blockades for massacres. The CONSPIRACY is bigger than 911 yet to come. WASHINGTON was DUPED! One former elites video (<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=VNJTtUhZxaY&NR=1> of numerous types of warnings from we the people if we dont do something now.) Charlotte Iserby is another familial Whistleblower on 100 year Secret Society plan on dumbing down U.S. education system. Corrupting the minds books, and teachers to implement this, and CIA bomb makers, just for starters. The actual selection of individuals for poverty, as Appellant had discovered with choosing destinies and ills with mind control individually. The judicial system cannot ignore this weapon in the law, due to disbelief and transmitted manipulations of misapplied decisions to this point in history. A Country usurped is by its own mind controlled pawns. Developing psychological warfare, Project Montauk since 1942, again on Long Island, has subterranean installations, and perhaps Ground 0.

Appellant has been and is being tortured, and cut off from society and communications, whereas cannot get an attorney to assist or to ask questions. Appellant is sabotaged in her career and livelihood. Appellant finds others complain of the same blocks in place not only for attorneys and work, but journalists who complain of computer internet and phone attacks. Appellant makes no mistake; these are calculated, selective, directed and timely while guided for years and told as with the well known Harland Girard target. In Complaint and Article App. N, whereas the NSA can and does control persons lives by guiding and using the public to control their choices as well as the target. This is not new or few but suppressed for decades. Appellant was experimented with twice and brings facts and accusations from personal experience, family and others under attack still unwitting. Appellant has additional hard evidence and medical records to provide for all accusations duping a Country nefariously more than a Global economic topple. (Appendix N) i.e.: Appellant made written accusations of winds blowing seeds on farmer to cause lawsuit by Monsanto by Shadow CIA. Today wiki leaks seem to have Monsanto tied to CIA via Blackwater funding, as Nazis were. Appellant alleged Monsanto was not aware of induced winds to grow seeds on farmer and have him sued. These infiltrated tactics are far more evil and sick than the bio-warfare Government corruption, labs, and cannot be seen/detected BP blamed cover up of labs in Venice FL with Red Tide killing fish since 1947 by ELF/EMF further cover ups and whitewashing infiltrations must be stopped. New evidence obtained today with paralysis on more employees and beyond imagination of the ills caused by this weapon. Appellant gave recorded testimony to BP in Alaska (drilling/oil prices) on August 26, 2010 and to Secret Service. (See Exhibit B, Air Force pg.1, BP employees pg. 2) Physical sensations in Article are hallucinations of NSA transmissions on civilians. Recent Repugnant Discoveries of this are beginning but kept behind the eight ball in technology discovery, and too late. Also, according to the AHRP, the CIA has not only been preventing VETS in the thousands from treatment of mind control (not Agent Orange) but also DESTROYED their atomic records, denying all targeted individuals and guinea pigs of same. These victims and worse torture in history rarely get news coverage as the Gitmo few hundred have for years on display by design to thwart off guilt, as in Complaint. Our own Americans are tortured much worse by the thousands and millions of mind-body control, quashed unwitting by design. It was stated long ago by FBI Hoover and many Government physicists so horrific you cant imagine. This makes it more difficult to believe until one is addressed personally with this DOD terminology, synthetic telepathy psych o-tronics transmissions, also causing one trauma when used in conjunction with the public. The technique is of cults, NLP Remotely picking up on groups of civilians spread over the decades since Tesla discoveries. Appellant called the police a few times when the power is cut off with loss of internet connection, laptop (3) is cut off and the next morning an intruder or virus had been attempted. This also occurs often including intercepted by agents on Google and on instant messaging in the wiki leak server attempting to send case information on August 29, 2010. Years of cyber crimes alleged in Complaint findings under psytek ops and investigations under The CULT of the DEAD COWs Pentagon Unit, should be an indication of even worse. Appellant gave information to Secret Service in September before leaving Florida and others while under threat. This goes beyond a few (misguided) incidents, coincidence, or just few victims. Appellant was also sheltered and unwitting of this matrix for 45 years and can prove every accusation made since 2008. (pg 17) JFK warns Generation of Secret Societies with de-population beliefs and superiority. Appellant was denied a trial to prove case based on delusional belief after corrections to make a claim. Appellant was denied base on frivolous citations. Appellants case is to the contrary, whereas it is NOT the public conspiring, but the public mind controlled unwittingly, with the illusion of conspiring. The public is un-consciously aiding to attack based on innocent synthetic different thought transmissions, thus sabotaging lives using their environment. These tactics to impede and sabotage EXIST admittedly and downplayed from full disclosure unwittingly.

To rephrase Thucydides, I blame those who are resolved to misrule, but I place more blame on those who show an even greater readiness to submit.

In war, too, the discretionary power of the Executive is extended; its influence in dealing out offices, honors, and emoluments is multiplied; and all the means of seducing the minds are added to those of subduing the force, of the people. The same malignant aspect in republicanism may be traced in the inequality of fortunes, and the opportunities of fraud, growing out of a state of war, and in the degeneracy of manners and of morals, engendered by both. No nation could preserve its freedom in the midst of continual warfare."

- JAMES MADISON "Political Observations" April 20, 1795

Rule According to Higher Law

A conundrum is presented when the government acts in strict accordance with well-established and clearly defined legal rules and still produces a result that many observers consider unfair or unjust. Before the Civil War, for example, African Americans were systematically deprived of their freedom by carefully written codes that prescribed the rules and regulations between master and slave. Even though these slave codes were often detailed, unambiguous, and made known to the public, Govt enforcement of them produced negative results. Do such repugnant laws comport with the rule of law? The answer to this question depends on when and where it is asked. In some countries the political leaders assert that the rule of law has no substantive content. These leaders argue that a government may deprive its citizens of fundamental liberties so long as it does so pursuant to a duly enacted law. At the Nuremberg Trials, some of the political, military, and industrial leaders of Nazi Germany unsuccessfully advanced this argument as a defense to Allied charges that they had committed abominable crimes against European Jews and other minorities during World War II. In other countries the political leaders assert that all written laws must conform to universal principles of morality, fairness, and justice. These leaders argue that as a necessary corollary to the axiom that "no one is above the law," the rule of law requires that the government treat all persons equally under the law. Yet the right to equal treatment is eviscerated when the government categorically denies a minimal level of respect, dignity, and autonomy to a single class of individuals. These unwritten principles of equality, autonomy, dignity, and respect are said to transcend ordinary written laws that are enacted by government. Sometimes known as Natural Law or higher law theory, such unwritten and universal principles were invoked by the Allied powers during the Nuremberg trials to overcome the defense asserted by the Nazi leaders.

Since the timely fanning of wiki leaks, the ACLU and the Country is focusing more on SSP law, civil rights, rule of law, and redress, which is due to come up in the Supreme Court this year. These individual rights have been increasingly taken away, not after 911 but after the Church Commission and Cointelpro. We must obey the Constitution and restore function for all of us. It is time to allow our people, ordinary civilians, and victims of human rights torture to obtain redress when under psychological attacks and mind wars for all of us. The biggest threat and concern is time and delay to change minds and influence decision unwittingly. The remark of one Attorney is true for cases with the opinions or bias of Judges in other rulings:

Nothing has been more emblematic of the cancer they have been in this regard than the posture they have relentlessly fought for on unfettered and unilateral ability of the Executive Branch to impose the state secrets doctrine to shield the government from litigation, even when it is concealing blatant and wholesale government criminality. Another American of many wrote:

First. Then they came for the communists. I didn't object because I wasn't a communist. Then they came for the trade-unionists. I didn't object because I wasn't a trade-unionist. Then they came for the Jews. I didn't object because I wasn't a Jew. Then they came for me and there was no one left to help me.< famous statement attributed to Pastor Martin Niemöller (1892-1984) about the inactivity of German intellectuals following the Nazi rise to power and the purging of their chosen targets, group after group.

peasantrock2, it's not about loving or hating the ACLU, it's about the Govt arbitrarily stifling free speech of America citizens.

"We must hang together or we will surely hang separately"..Ben Franklin Secrets are for a reason and secret abuses are impossible to correct unless you know they are going on. Knowing their plans before they are implemented to oppose before they occur. If they are exposed by the people already suffering by the abuse, then the abuse has already occurred and it is too late. (Assange 2009)

JFK SPEECH:

Secret Society Speech Gives Future Generations Dire Warning"

The very word "secrecy" is repugnant in a free and open society; and we are as a people inherently and historically opposed to secret societies, to secret oaths and to secret proceedings. We decided long ago that the dangers of excessive and unwarranted concealment of pertinent facts far outweighed the dangers which are cited to justify it. Even today, there is little value in opposing the threat of a closed society by imitating its arbitrary restrictions. Even today, there is little value in insuring the survival of our nation if our traditions do not survive with it. And there is very grave danger that an announced need for increased security will be seized upon by those anxious to expand its meaning to the very limits of official censorship and concealment. That I do not intend to permit to the extent that it is in my control. And no official of my Administration, whether his rank is high or low, civilian or military, should interpret my words here tonight as an excuse to censor the news, to stifle dissent, to cover up our mistakes or to withhold from the press and the public the facts they deserve to know.

A victim should never be further victimized by the system, especially when it has not been working for decades, again, according to millions and Judges themselves. Appellant is being tortured by her own Government, is reporting the demise of humanity, and no ruling should prevent redress and justice when record and representation are not faulty, but psychological sabotage and coercion of the very weapon abuses, in the accusations themselves. Every effort is being made to preempt and discredit the Appellant with cover ups publicly since late 2008, after reporting it in writing to the authorities. Appellant also noted this Operation launched in complaints (endnote #129) working on covering up each and every fact since then engineering events and false news behind scenes unwittingly using media reporters and we the people. This is a real weapon and valid defense which has been noted publicly whereas victims of electronic warfare mind controls are kept on the move to sabotage and impede their attempts to defend themselves. These psyops tactics attacking dissent to impede and stifle was also noted since the Church Commission Report and should be recognized. There has been disconnects of information/ communication, duplicity, unsolved mysteries for decades, new and unknown ills, that FULL DISCLOSURES would be factual with this case if redress was honored or allowed. Investigators have been spinning their wheels for decades. Appellant has her own records and experience while in manifest not just what she was informed of, or figured out and investigated. Even if Appellant was delusional of this weapon of power in the hands of evil men behind the scenes, Appellant still has a case of injunction and injury, to bring to fact and should be granted to proceed and redress. Whether one person, one class action, or all humanity, without accountability and punishment, neglecting this case will allow Defendants to get away with horrific crimes of covert ops encouraging the abuse to continue and every American is in peril, when one is quashed or gagged. (Harry S Truman) America declined with induced infiltrations, engineering society from the minds, with this weapon since JFK era. Appellant is a victim and only the messenger of these repugnancies and modern technology kept secret, inexcusably; a weapon and panacea. The neitzke v. williams case is outdated, inapplicable, and does not take into account this secret weapon. This case is on point explaining how delusion is created and a conspiracy. Appellant was never jailed or forma pauperis and far from frivolous. Appellant has 4 years of blocked communication, medical, police, and judicial records as a target before showing how widespread it became to this point in America. Now, John P. Wheeler in technology, Boeing, Aero, DOD, VETS supporter, is also gone, as Dr. Robert Becker and others in CIA warned of Govt ELF/EMF, and hundreds more of surreptitious murder and programmed crimes selectively by the millions. Former Govt Physicists now harassed severely, are claiming Americans are dropping like flies for 50 years not by microwaves and mobiles, etc. There is crimes, abuse and torture daily for decades that are accepted desensitized robots: WHY would anyone not believe the abuse can occur in this fashion ESPECIALLY when by Govt who think they cant be seen or caught and can get away with it? America is synthetic by design and food is not where synthetic uses stop. Appellants public storage unit with evidence has been threatened and damaged by laser to roof as with private parts of her clothing, and wants to prove more, not fanciful, but exactly what Russell Tice article called it, Electronic Warfare. Appellant knows it as psyops (mind control, mind wars, mind games) beyond experiments, deployed on US soil and Americans and demands justice. FINALLY, Appellant is harmed by a DOD weapon, NSA transmissions, and demands EMERGENCY preliminary injunction (pending appeal), to enjoin their ABUSE AND UNLAWFUL activities, and the right to Petition for redress and grievance from her Government under Constitutional Civil Rights laws. The court has the right to direct and take control of the proceeding. Under the circumstances in this case, a judge can aid a disadvantaged pro se litigant to allow, rehearing, or restore, to proceed and achieve true justice.

CONCLUSION

Wherefore, Appellant respectfully requests for REVIEW including Complaint endnotes #7, rehearing, amend, redress, remand, due process, and rule of law to proceed under these extraordinary circumstances, at the direction of the court.

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I certify that a true copy of the foregoing brief has been furnished in person at 333 Constitution Ave NW, Washington DC 20001 Court of Appeals Clerk, and via regular Mail to US Attorney Civil Division, Craig Lawrence at 555 4th Street NW, Washington DC 20530, on January 10, 2011.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct on January 10, 2011.

Respectfully submitted,

Mireille Torjman

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This case was also presented to the U S Supreme Court under Federal rule 11. Wri t of Certiorari was denied November 1, 2010 before judgment with new occurring events. (10-419)

This case was ruled frivolous and fantastic when noble with factual dangers. Appellant has the right to an immediate Injunction Relief from Government torture protection, and for redress and grievance. The opinion made no mention of NUMEROUS Political Officials and Agencies admissions of these allegations (subsequently below), with weapons patented and proven to be in use nefariously and covertly against We the People, inclusive of our own Government falling victim. Appellant requested a leave of court, FOIA request, investigations, right of review, proper media warning, emergency hearing, protection, and an injunction to cease immediately. Appellant was denied justice and the right to defend herself and prove her case, and/or opportunity for accountability and discoveries with Critical Agency Admissions and information provided seemingly Un-read or Un-realized, and to cause subject to be diagnosed with ill mental health. (Compl 15 p 10- Appx N exhibited)

STATEMENT OF THE FACTS

On July 7, 2010, Appellant had her Complaint above said case taken from the counter before mailing, and upon arrival at court house, Complaint was unwittingly switched on Chief Judges desk regardless of calls and written instructions. Prior Complaint unwittingly switched was missing names of current high profile individuals and current assassinations. Days later, Appellant also caught Case Complaint which was unwittingly switched with Pharmaceutical case when loaded by Pacer electronically, as with numerous other obstacles for 4 years in attempt to expose and warn what she has figured out.

On or about August 12, 2010, Appellant went on the air and provided a recorded 45 minute interview but no one in DC or across North America and Canada stations had heard the interviews and had been redirected, all week to another phone line to impede communication and full disclosures while building discredits and wars, (as incorrect websites and phone calls misdirected). Appellant notified radio host, a Former Police Officer (working on crimes and the paranormal) and found it was a technical difficulty and/or human error. Appellant has also been heavily blocked by an unwitting public, daily in this fashion tangibly and non-tangibly, from electronic transmitted communications, with heavy mind and body control experiments, and recruitment attempts for CIA using Remote Viewing (satellite apparatus) today called NSA transmissions, which include transmitted synthetic illnesses to millions. RUSSELL TICE case, an NSA agent blew the whistle on all accusations and torture of Electronic Warfare on Americans. (See Subsequent Public Statements quoted to the Press)

Appellant had to amend Complaint and had not made monetary claims originally. (Motion for Relief 1 through 8) Appellant was then denied claims for damages in 2nd(Compl 255), Injunction, surveillance and spying, privacy, torture, along with the civil rights violations, witness protective plan, media request, Intl tortures, and 27 Counts of violations. Appellant is further retaliated against for attempting to WARN the public or file suit. Appellant is under threat, without delusion or doubt and has proof of all allegations, being pre-empted, impeded from the minds from others to block her, and is threatened as many other prominent radio hosts and activists by our Govt in attempts to expose conspiracies carefully masterminded behind the scenes (un-wit-unrealized). One mind, one life, one threat, one CANCER has been too many for another decade or another day, at the hands of mind control disbeliefs programmed for years eyes wide shut. This case should be heard and investigated by all. Appellant has proof, trying to save lives, and is under threats to relocate to DC. Neuro-Directed Energy Weapons of Mass Destruction admittedly for decades in Covert Govt hands. Citations are uncontested law and one can no longer ignore these patented facts by our Govt, DARPA projects and others, nor slander anyone as delusional fanciful, with the subsequent USA information below including Russell Tice article stating such and attesting to Appellants experience and knowledge with what has been discovered since 2008. (EMF Insulin, Blood, NLP, and Liver disease) The covert Intelligence is with Malice and should be stopped immediately. Media is now publishing a Government has gone amuck to whitewash, and much worse with opposite news fanned fo r years. Lies the Govt told you by Judge Napolitano, a system that has not worked, for these reasons failing millions of our own people, suggesting to re-read and deceptions. Ie: Whistleblower Griggs calling it mind jabbing and Dr. Bowart False Memory Syndrome, unwitting APA. (Appx B and Democracy Now (Standing up to the madness) Stop the Madness) It has been our own programmed disbelief for years and hidden advanced Technology that has enabled this Country to arrive at this point unwittingly from behind the scenes, and must be stopped and dismantled. People are starting to wake up. Architects and Engineers Movement and Congressman Ron Paul Supporters want to know, former Govt Officials, Unsolved Mysteries, Phenomenon, Alex Jones and massive events across the Nation under Brian Glick reports want the truth, know that MKULTRA mind control is in full operation, and so should every one with sound minds and realization of this sense. Pledges and admission statements made by U. S. Officials since 1976 and over the years recent, to dismantle these powerful mind control Neurological Directed Energy Weapons have been proven thus, continue for decades to today's 911 false terrorism in the guise of Muslims to manifest war worse than before on US Soil, and INDUCED seismic waves as other energy waves to cause contaminations, economic manipulations, trends, and population control induced behind the scenes. (Appx H) Appellant also has witnessed redirected phone calls, websites, and email communications tangibly and as done to Attorneys leaving Country just to work on Iraq matters here, without further impediments. (Compl Counts III and IV) Appellant has been impeded and blocked with emails, specific selective viruses, faxes, deliveries, voicemails and phone lines/calls while with various Communication Companies across the Country including DSL lines and can provide records showing activities for years behind the scenes un-wit from remote viewing, and password access to www. private CORPORATION servers with tips to VERIZON and other lawsuits. FALSE accusations as one case example, untraceable. (Compl 32 and 201 and (NSA, Verizon joined with AT&T M06-1791 VRW) individuals, google, and EFF). have been around Appellant has statements of Federal Employees and Government Officials, Presidents with ADMISSIONS of Non-Fanciful Weapons of Electronic WARFARE over the years as to MILLIONS of Americans targeted unwittingly. A class action suit with its attorney (married to the DA in CO, and funded by a Silicon Valley University on Mind Control NSA transmissions impeded and no longer available for the very reasons of this Lawuit (non-gang related conspiracy, but an unwitting public used in all professions that We the People have a responsibility to stop before too late, by power in numbers to dismantling this Mother of all Evil Weapon, or suffer future catastrophic consequences more than Seismic WAVES, Cancer, or free will). (Compl 50, Appx E).

Appellant is being denied her rights, and the Judicial System has not connected the dots yet, on prior crimes from these technology weapons that blighted the Courts 40 years ago to bring us to this point and a corrupted Country and infiltrated Culture. Appellant will show mind manipulations in this Country are created with transmitted hallucinations on the public to cover up an agenda against humanity collectively, since Big Brother Technology spying. This began in HOLLYWOOD and GOVERNMENT BUILDINGS and which some outsiders already realized the masterminds in the U.S. by DIA. Appellant has records of unwitting transmitted victims within DOJ, Congress (Un-covered documentary) unread to invade Iraq to set up and brainwash their people as other Countries for mass control infiltrations, and mind controlled (Out-foxed media video) jacketing one against the other, psyops techniques for years with the use of all waves and resonance of frequencies. TruTV and media experiencing various pressures not to air any Govt Conspiracies and quash all related topics. Appellant reviewed her Quantum Physics Governmental studies from 2007 with information to support the new findings found at (Appx N highlighted with O) and her prior allegations, since under attack by this Directed Energy Weapon.

Appellant attempted to receive assistance from Congress and the Intelligence Committee Senator Bill Nelsons Office and Congresswoman Ginny Brown-Waite and was told that they had only been able to cease some not all victims seeking help, as it is selective Directed Energy Weapons. Appellants case was closed after a visit with other officials in DC. (Dennis Kucinich bill, Space Preservation Act 2005 in part-was quashed with citations of Remote viewing manipulations on millions of Americans so far. (Compl 21 and PARTIES). Today, according to former NSA employees and NY congressional committee volunteers, the burden of proof on victims should be on the defendants.

Appellant is with proof, witnesses, interviews and reports, from Leading Psychiatrist Dr. Walter Bowart (before his death and his son silenced), who blew the whistle on 50 years of mind control and FALSE MEMORY SYNDROME FOUNDATION, (and worse-by CIA remote viewing), and in our courts and streets, Russ Tice statements of NSA transmissions in use to sabotage lives, other CIA whistleblowers, of mind control including Operation Mockingbird (updated remotely) but publicly admitted brainwash mis-information (with a divided CONGRESS) permeating our Media unwittingly from these transmissions for decades creating our propaganda mass COMMUNICATION CHAOS, (2 opposite thoughts at once), DISPUTES, and A SYNTHETIC engineered culture. (Covert Propaganda infiltrated as psyops on US Soil).

Appellant is with the device (intercepted) and military patents, science, documents of CIA MKULTRA and statement of Manchurians to assassinate G. Bush in the 80s, and these very Technology Weapons of Mass Destruction (diverted focus created) in use for 911, as well as 9 DOJ attorneys fired for asking too many questions of what would have been to be uncovered. On August 5, 2009 Associated Press printed that the CIA denies faking Al Qaida Iraq letter, which agents are un-wit of within their own and of their missions with erased memory etc. (Press release Sept 13, Appx H) Everyone spinning their wheels too busy to REALIZE and dumbed down. (Jim Keith and Operation Mind Control, an engineered culture) On March 31, 2008 at 10:30 am, a letter in strong opposition written to JUDGE JOHN ROCKEFELLER

IV intelligence Committee, regarding S. 2035 free flow of information act from ROBERT GATES at DOD is condoning unwittingly DUPLICITOUS, MASSIVE CRIMES generated against AMERICAN CIVILIANS and conspiracy hiding behind SSP as QUITE the CONTRARY on all counts that is headed into GRAVE DANGERS. Mind Control has been infiltrated psyops on civilian culture and population since 1947 and the 70s deployed Remote Viewing. BREACHED contracts of spying in EU, AU, UK, Israel, and other invaded Countries with spying and manipulating mind wars.

Appellant is heavily tortured, pre-empted, framed, staged and sabotaged, with cover ups in the media and building discredit with tangible events whitewashing history with each accusation, to discredit, since 2008 in efforts to go public, to the FBI, and to file suit. Appellant has made further discoveries of corruptions with these weapons of psyops against humanity, as Government Physicist Lieutenant Tom Bearden warned the dangers many decades ago for your thoughts may not be your own creating a matrix covertly for Power and Control, ULTIMATELY. (Compl 20)

Appellant does not know how to present this case with so much information to provide and obtain EMERGENCY injunction relief or a hearing, as DEMANDED in Complaint and Motion for relief to verify documents, with continued DANGERS to travel or come to DC again or ever take the witness chair. Appellant is praying for legal and procedural assistance of this court to be heard, prove her case and warn the people. Appellant does not know if Complaint has been read or realized in full by JUDGE JOHN D BATES with NO mention of SABOTAGE HALLUCINATIONS MKULTRA DEPLOYED for 50 YEARS to MILLIONS OF AMERICANS at 15, 16, 17 and much worse by others throughout. (Compl 23 through 50 victimized, and below page 14 quoted by Mr.

Tice), whereas Appellant was comatose for 72 hours (as Ariel Sharon) in her home to start THE PROCESS for CIA espionage, sexual slavery in the White House and Behavior modifications, recruitment and brainwash programming via Remote Viewing. As with the Obama Sunsteins report of cognitive infiltration, Appellant will prove this has been infiltrated in our society causing all accusations since Church Committee never ceased as promised by Officials. Appellant attempted to tell DOJ in 1996 when targeted for 5 years as Imaginary Friend/Enemy to obey, experimenting for Combat, robots, on the ground communications, and has years of copious notes for feedback and intent, with numerous others complaining of mind control at the same time emerged, and at a time when BUDGETS were of great concern at DOD in SAN DIEGO and Pres. Clintons public (partial) apology. DIA has done a terrific job at keeping it to a minimum if complete disbelief brainwash since the 7

0s. The 911 Pilot training in connection with HAARP stations The Ultimate Weapon of Conspiracy by Jerry Smith also died of CANCER March, 2010 and Appellant has been threatened with zaps to her body, organs, hair, etc, as other credible victims and politicians claim is going on, with experiments in full action and Science under Siege. Physicist Dr. Bill Nelson and Dr. Nick Begich ALASKAN Political family Angels dont play this HAARP also asking questions and was impeded. Another impeded resolution was from John Herschel Glenn Jr., 1974-1999, former astronaut on CANCER and radiation, and U.S. politician who Introduced a Bill (Compl 14 and 25) As with AIPAC related framed (cases), Kevin Trudeau and FDA mass corruptions via NSA transmissions with scapegoats for all their shadowing conspiracies, and OJ Simpson to murder his wife and get away with it in advance, sabotaged cases tampering with minds not just evidence, from many minor criminal cases to highest dollar cases and victims. The most sabotaged cases were the ones TELEVISED with sensory deprivations, and in front of the world (infiltrating humans into cold robots and locked doors culture is not organically grown but agenda). Millions are victims and are concerned! Whats going on? Wake up America! Wake up Washington! The answers are N.O.W. nefariously, toppling the ECONOMY and 911, the creations of 50 years of ignoring, neglecting MIND CONTROL WAVES and ELF, Ultimate Weapon behind the scenes and hiding behind SSP (1947). The Sibel Edmonds case and linguistic accusation of impaired translations were NSA transmissions communication chaos; another case never came to light and its true findings of 911. Both Muslim and Jew framed. Larry Silverstein of WTC 7 framed well in advance with insurance and transmissions to PULL topple building, and government offices. Appellant will demonstrate and tie major historic events as Allison Des Forges staged plane crash in Hudson River with Death Rays for planes (Warden Cliff Towers) and Senator Kennedy zapped Cancer. (CIA Predicts The Future 2015 - Water Resources.) General Zinni changed minds, Water Wars in manifesting with Turkey and Egypt, false natural resource shortage, as with Seismic induced East Coast INFILTRATIONS as predictions for WATERFRONT properties, and warnings to Congress ignored of Piracy and Florida EMF Red Tide to cover up with BP transmissions of human errors. Teslas invention in 1940 and a $2,000,000,00 device to zap and melt an airplane motor 250 miles away and an Invisible Chinese Wall of defense was built around the Country, no matter how large an attack, (Teleforce, manifests FREE energy and creates rays; zapping beams, the new invisible war Imaginary Weapons). Warden cliff Tower is in full action in Long Island NY, as 36 other stations, globally that beam massive volume of Free Energy. (The New York Times, Sunday September 22, 1940-Science and Patents, Education News). One energy zap is COSTLY, causes confusion, trip, fall, body temp-freeze, heat, mis-communication, fatigue, focus, concentration, sleep, mistakes, (Kucinich-US patent under MKDELTA), and stalling any engine.

All hiding behind the scenes and SSP, a letter to Judicial Committee was sent in July prior to this writ of information. The attached email from 2009 was never responded to and was unverifiable as numerous other communications for years. (See App. G3) Press release was impeded and forwarded to Al Gore on September 17, before revisions, Bear Stearns manipulations, and Famous Public Speeches. The Energy will be just fine. (App. H)

Appellant was traumatized and is suffering and would like to provide medical records, police, Judicial court records (staged to appeals with delays to change minds with TIME, and other credible witness information and testimonies to prove, manifest how, what this world is coming to (prior to 2008). Appellant requested a leave of court to amend as Appellant is under immediate threat (as family and car accidents) and cannot obtain counsel.

Appellant has become increasingly realized of the severity and magnitude of these weapons in use nefariously and globally on civilians and is growing. On September 3, 2010, Appellant woke up with loud ringing in the ears to find further attacks are attempted currently to penetrate her auditory cortex if continued efforts are made to expose and cease. From CLASS ACTION suit members, this type of attack can be deadly in various ways, and is TORTUROUS. It included sleep deprivation until 4AM and loud alarms and outside extreme motor noises, for days prior as well as by phone, voice mail, electronic intrusions and transfers and 5 hours to obtain a flight ticket by phone to DC and blocked internet account set up with providers, (WITH AMPLIFIED SUGGESTIONS or modulations) and sensitivities to entrain and channel further connectivity sound waves during tired sleep not to awake programming. In the Jawad case No. 05-cv-2385 (RMU) GUANTANAMO prisoners are kept tired to be programmed during sleep and not wake up with interruptions techniques. This sleep disorder goes on in AMERICAN homes with sleep disorders that began 40 years ago or so. Appellant was able to record and video these awful events and suspects is being entrained mentally to accept such intrusions. Appellant is harassed and sabotaged daily, to impede her expert witness testimonies and WARN the people how and where this Country is being taken down behind the scenes and by an unwitting public timed in advance to sabotage lives. More than what Tice stated in full article and more than each of my accusations are already being investigated by analysts since my efforts have been taken to several authorities; the NSA began searching for an Attorney upon my threats and lawsuit on May 28th. Historically, numerous citizens, have not been amongst just Officials but anyone who dares to expose and prevent the corruption, abuse of power, and conspiracy underway, unsuccessfully because they are under the influence of mind controls UNREALIZED, always missing the mark and as Sunsteins Report with Cognitive Infiltrations is not not gone in vein. This Country is not only being usurped legally or Constitutionally, but psychologically one mind and soul at a time allowing it to evolve from 50 years of transmitted Americans and criminal. Currently experiencing additional unpleasant attacks as follows, with full article at (Appx N) that should not be discounted: gang related but psyops on the American Ordinary People. (Quoting what Appellants accusations are from years of her documented Government torture, sabotaged life in front of a Sheriff Department, and framed with the exact events below which are that of cults and Church Committee tactics going on today. Russell Tice, a Hero Under GOD, Jim Keith and Dr. Walter Bowart

Is the NSA Conducting Electronic Warfare On Americans?

Russ Tice, former NSA intelligence officer and current Whistleblower, was to testify

Godspeed, Russ Tice, the Patriots are with you .

RUSSELL TICE: If that was done and, you know, I use a big if here, and, remember, I cant tell you what I know of how N.S.A. does its business, but I can use the wiggle words like if and scenarios that dont incorporate specifics, but nonetheless, if U.S. gateways and junction points in the United States were used to siphon off information--- AMY GOODMAN: Do you expect you are being monitored, surveilled, wiretapped right now? RUSSELL TICE: Yes, I do As a matter of fact

April 1, 1976, Attorney General Levi announced the establishment of a special review committee within the Department of Justice to notify COINTELPRO victims that they were the subjects of FBI activities directed against them. Notification will be made "in those instances where the specific COINTELPRO activity was improper, actual harm may have occurred, and the subjects are not already aware that they were the targets of COINTELPRO activities." 315

Further, the Department will have acknowledged -- finally -- that COINTELPRO was wrong. Official repudiation of the programs is long overdue. (Wiretapping began with Hoover in 1940)

The American people need to be assured that never again will an agency of the government be permitted to conduct a secret war against those citizens it considers threats to the established order. Only a combination of legislative prohibition and Departmental control can guarantee that COINTELPRO will not happen again. The notification program is an auspicious beginning. This rough, tough, dirty business included infiltration of political groups, psychological warfare, legal harassment, and extralegal force and violence. The FBI and police threatened, investigated and conducted break-ins, vandalism, assaults, and beatings. The object was to frighten dissidents and disrupt their movements, write Mike Cassidy and Will Miller. They used secret and systematic methods of fraud and force, far beyond mere surveillance, to sabotage constitutionally protected political activity. The purpose of the program was, in FBI Director J. Edgar Hoovers own words, to expose, disrupt, misdirect, discredit and otherwise neutralize specific groups and d individuals.

Secretary Geithner also highlighted Bear Stearns former Chief Operating Officer of Fixed Income, Paul Friedman, stated rumors were untrue until the telling of rumors made them true.

Fannie Mae interim Jewish Accountant suicide after 3 months on fraud

Framed as Larry Silverstein to redistribute wealth away from Jews to topple the economy agendas and framing Israel Conspiracies uncovered!

March 31, 2010 in the Islamic Foundation v Obama case, Judge Walker ruled the TSP as unlawful and violated FISA.

NEW CASE Dr. Orly Taitz V. Obama with Judges courage, NON-SENSE and responsibility necessary to dismantle this covert CIA ops and weapons of mass destruction with many deaths like Prosecutor Ted Stevens articles

Obama staffer wants cognitive infiltration of 9/11 conspiracy groups

Posted by sakerfa April 14th, 2010-Journal of Political Philosophy in 2008

Why hasn't the press--aside from MSNBC--covered Russell Tice's revelations on the government's massive spy apparatus that according to Tice illegally survey's every US citizens' purchasing records, emails, phone calls, bank transactions, etc. and maintains the information in massive databases for nefarious uses? DNA and why

After the Church Committee exposed COINTELPRO, the government report claimed it had dismantled the program. However, in the 1980s, the Reagan administration legalized the tactics (after the fact) by signing Executive Order 12333. FOLLOWED by FALSE and LOSS Memory!

Posted: March 4, 2010 12:42 PM

A Terrible Mistake: H.P. Albarelli's Investigation into CIA Scientist's Murder, at the Crossroads of Mind Control and Assassination

What's Your Reaction:

Read More: A Terrible Mistake, CIA Geneva Conventions , CIA Missions , CIA Untied States ConstitutionBooks News ,

"Where else could a red-blooded American boy lie, kill, cheat, steal, rape and pillage with the sanction and blessing of the All-Highest." -- George Hunter White, U.S. Federal Bureau of Narcotics

For well over half a century, the CIA (and its predecessor, OSS) has been violating the Geneva Conventions and the United States Constitution, subjecting the guilty and innocent alike to "cruel and unusual" treatment. H.P. Albarelli's A Terrible Mistake -- The Murder of Frank Olson and CIA's Cold War Experiments, a fascinating and important new work of unprecedented depth (10 years in the making and involving numerous first hand interviews), pulls back the curtain on the AGENCY DIABOLICAL MIND CONTROL Experiments and EXTENSIVE EFFORTS to assemble and analyze every known substance that could kill a person relatively easily, quickly and SURREPTITIOUSLY.

A Terrible Mistake is the true story of how the CIA drugged one of its own scientists and, when "the little bird" flew through a closed window on the 13th floor of the Statler Hotel in Manhattan, proceeded to publicly insist, for decades to come, that Dr. Frank Olson was mentally unstable and had committed suicide. Albarelli takes us with him as he investigates the question: did Frank Olson jump, or was he pitched?

This compelling tale not only reveals the wherefore and how of Frank Olson's murder, but looks behind the scenes at CIA and the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, deliciously acquainting us with some of the Agency's darkest characters, including:

Dr. Sidney Gottlieb, head of the notorious MKULTRA program, whose mind control techniques included extensive use of LSD; the evil psychiatrist Dr. Harold Abramson; various Corsican mafia kingpins; and the ultimate spy, Pierre Lafitte. Lafitte was not only glamorously descended from the famous pirate captain, Jean Lafitte, he was also a CIA assassin, who just happened to be working as a bellman at the Statler Hotel the night Frank Olson crashed through a closed window and drop ped to his death.

A Terrible Mistake reads like the most gripping of spy novels, as it lays out the roadmap to the drug culture of the 1960s and beyond. Since the 1940s, CIA had been hell-bent on perfecting mind control techniques, including the creation of a "truth drug," for use in interrogation of captured enemy operatives and to root out the enemies within. These pursuits began with Project BLUEBIRD's creation of synthetic THC (the active ingredient in marijuana), evolving into Project MKULTRA, in which Agency scientists conducted human experiments with LSD and hypnosis (frequently on American citizens held captive in mental hospitals); and ultimately led the Agency into a close association with international heroin traffickers.

Dr. Frank Olson was a research scientist in the Chemical Branch of the CIA's Special Operations Division ("SOD") at Fort Detrick, Maryland, where he was involved in a wide variety of chemical warfare experiments. Some of these experiments took him to exotic destinations in the Caribbean, where the U.S. Army's Chemical Corps conducted tests resulting in the deaths of thousands of animals, not to mention the supposedly unintended consequences to the health of the residents of an island near the watery test site.

In the summer of 1951, Dr. Olson and other members of the SOD research team traveled to France, in particular, to the village of Pont St. Esprit, for an operation code named Project SPAN. On August 16th of that year, the entire town of Pont St. Esprit was stricken with a mysterious malady. One Parisian reporter described.

ADDED 12/15/10 with OPERATION PIQUE ADMISSIONS

On November 28, 1953, U.S. Army biochemist Dr. Frank Olson crashed through a hotel window in New York City and fell over 150 feet to the sidewalk below where he died. The New York City Police Department, U.S. Army, and CIA, for whom he also secretly worked, reported Olsons death as a suicide. In 1975, a Presidential-appointed commission inadvertently released information publicly that revealed that, days before his death, the CIA had surreptitiously dosed Olson with LSD. The CIA admitted that it had given the drug to Olson, but refused to reveal any details of the so-called experiment, or about what Olsons work for the CIA involved.

The American media briefly examined the perplexing mysteries surrounding Olsons suicide, but soon lost interest. Twenty-years later, further investigation into Olsons death revealed that there was ample reason to believe that he had been murdered. The Olson case grew even more mysterious and strange after the Manhattan District Attorneys Office convened a grand jury inquiry into the odd death. Critical witnesses died strangely only days and weeks before they were to be questioned by prosecutors; government officials refused to speak and those that did suddenly developed severe memory problems; crucial documents were destroyed and lost; and investigators were intimidated and threatened.

http://www.legitgov.org/#breaking_news

ACLU Says Government Used False Confessions 02 Jul 2009 The American Civil Liberties Union yesterday accused the Obama administration of using statements elicited through torture to justify the confinement of a detainee it represents at the U.S. military prison in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. The ACLU is asking a federal judge to throw out those statements and others made by Mohammed Jawad, an Afghan who may have been as young as 12 when he was captured. His attorney argued that Jawad was abused in U.S. custody, threatened and subjected to intense sleep deprivation. "The government's continued reliance on evidence gained by torture and other abuse violates centuries of U.S. law and suggests the current administration is not really serious about breaking with the past," said ACLU lawyer Jonathan Hafetz, who is representing Jawad in a lawsuit challenging his detention.

Military prosecutor abruptly quit his post, saying that the case was riddled with problems and that the prisoner had suffered physical and psychological mistreatment while in custody.

U.S. again [third time] delays releasing CIA torture report 02 Jul 2009 The U.S.

government on Wednesday once again delayed the release of a full report on CIA's controversial interrogation program. The government had intended to complete its review of the 2004 report and release it two weeks ago. But continued interagency debate about how much of the secret report could be made public pushed back the deadline. [See: US wants to [again] delay release of CIA report 26 Jun 2009 and Delay in Releasing CIA Report Is Sought 20 Jun 2009.]

U.S. spy says just followed orders in Italy kidnap 30 Jun 2009 A former U.S. spy at the center of a kidnapping trial in Italy appeared to acknowledge a role in the abduction of a Muslim cleric but said he was only following orders, according to a rare interview published on Tuesday. Robert Seldon Lady is one of 26 Americans, almost all believed to have been working for the CIA, who are accused along with Italian spies of grabbing a terrorism suspect off the streets of Milan in 2003 and flying him to Egypt. There, Hassan Mustafa Osama Nasr says he was tortured and held for years without charge. Army faces 20 more torture and abuse claims from Iraqi civilians

Numerous cases have BLIGHTED THE COURTS for decades since 1947 Securities Act and these weapons to be researched and experimented about the time Aliens and Apollo hit the Media, and crimes filled the jails with hallucinations, entrapment, and bearing FALSE WITNESS behind the scenes, MILLIONS made by PHARMACEUTICAL with the start of a communication chaos dis-information Operation Mockingbird, FBI Grandeur delusions, in our books, synthetic illness with the AMA, song writing, DYSFUNCTIONAL non-sense corrupt culture, EVOLVED. Now duped and the EMERGING, explaining so many airport cases and others falsely paranoid using an unwitting public.

Appellant will show that the above article from Sunsteins Report is not hired help or gang-related conspiracies, but what has been impeding A&E 911 truth investigation for 9 years with CIA Jacketing to divide and fighting (crimes) on the streets, on line www, turning anyone against the other manifestations unwitting, as Countries creating wars as pawns behind the scenes, Stalking, ID theft, theft and vandalism. Generating false news; OBAMA speech (they like to do that, against each other (dividing culture). Stay the course to Brainwash, repeatedly Bush speeches (for oil?) and many more duped, (Appx H)), Generating Buzz, FEAR S over the years, FLORIDA, and ECONOMIES, Generating Propaganda, Generating Illnesses since missing children on milk cartons, (misfits) in the Pentagon. Journalist, Sharon Weinberger, after PENTAGON interview wrote (Imaginary Weapons) and Wired Magazine, and a Globe who saw our Media and Judicial System as a Joke culture, and injustice from within, all with COSTLY zaps as they call it. Appellant purchased from NASA Physicist, the device for $21,000.00 with Woodpecker scalar waves to Russia and China being used when paranoid Russia had launched theirs breaching airways spying contracts. Appellant had to learn CIA techniques of NLP taught to FBI early 70s and became certified in Hypnosis in 2008. (Neuro-linguistic Programming which some details were provided of Ft Hood victim, in the (Complete pages 19 and 78)) NLP (1974) is the absolute mind control creations of cognitive impairments, Alzheimer and Dementia, Memory back in timelines, targeting former President Reagan after signing executive order 12333, ADD Scientology and emotional disorders, highest mis-diagnosed ills in America among many new synthetic creations infiltrating Science nefariously for the next generation. New side effects and illnesses plague Americans with no names or traces are endless and documented, as many illusions, delusions, and/or deceptions.

Appellant has knowledge the JUDICIAL SYSTEM has been preventing to save these CRIMES OF HUMANITY, from the MINDS, unwittingly. These activities and other covert programs are being abused with a pattern of experiments and crime corruption on the street since the 1970s using weapons of technology and Neurological that has investigators spinning their wheels and folks exclaiming, What is this world coming to, pre 911? (Tesla Invention and energy 1940) Furthermore, testimonies made in 1977 to U.S. Courts and Congress by whistleblowers Cathy Obrien and CIA Mark Phillips were blocked for reasons of National Security. This 1947 SSP LAW and disbelief and/or forgotten event had unwittingly allowed the crimes and evil corruption to continue in AMERICA at the hands of the most powerful TECHNOLOGY WEAPON of the mind. Too many years of death and torture include every one in this C country somehow. Today some are finally seeing the same has continued to bigger Government crimes and corruption with technology to take over humanity for mass control, Step #9 of 10 (Naomi Wolf, Yale) closer to legalizing Fascism, eyes wide shut: LOSING OUR FREEDOM under the DISGUISE of 911 (nano-thermite findings as ELF-EMF warfare and its speedy debris removal and silenced, etc). Part of a gradual process in REVERSING an entire AMERICAN CIVIL WAR and JUDICIAL SYSTEM. Appellant assures the Court that as Access Denied, Trance-formation of America, among many neglected slandered and discredited Whistle-blowers instead of Courageous Heroes; Naomi Wolf, CIA retirees, and NSA employees, reported being hypnotized on the job, are part of GUANTANAMO innocent scapegoats used as Public display tricks to decoy. ACLU reports of false statements of confessions after sending them my information of psyops infiltrations brainwash over time, again reason for delays, and covert sweeping of DC and NY pre 911, whitewashed AFTER 2008 infiltrated to Mosques as Shuttle and much more. Numerous investigations with missed fact-findings at the hands of mind control behind the scenes. Covert condos built underground reports by Jesse Ventura currently in the MIDWEST and false threat of war on US Soil created in the process of being manifested with 911. Mind controlled Pawns, Manchurians and staged London Bombings, as domestically. (App.E3) Appellant does not consent to the espionage information being transmitted against her will to her discoveries today and should not have been targeted with this experiment and beyond torture and information. Remote View Projects that REQUIRE D HUMAN EXPERIMENTING and The Cult of Intelligence-occults covertly. Numerous DARPA and Military projects, Pandoras Box, Voice of GOD. Former United States Government Physicist! 1981-Lt Col. US Army Retired, Pentagon analyst McRae, Ronald, Mind Wars, St. Martin's Press, 1984, p 127, Psychic Weapons) and synthetic telepathy, (creating wars and crimes on our streets) and the new buzz words in the Pentagon, Operation Northwoods, Project Stargate, Spacestar, (CIA Psychic Remote Viewing and FBI Virtual Project, 1996 respectively), Project Paperclip (Space Medicine), Remote Accupuncture (ELF) electrosis, Project Hybrid Insects & Polar Bears and hallucinations), for abusive powers.

Appellant will also provide evidence to the connection of numerous sabotaged court cases, our economy manipulations, and 911 with this WEAPON of technology mind wars used on most Americans for decades. We the People had, and have a powerful sturdy foundation to disbelieve MKULTRA and the Church Committee is still active and/or part of the brainwash with massive investigations and CASES diverted for years. Appellants quashed and impeded warnings ignored by Congress leading to many deaths, BP oil, ELF EMF Red Tide, Labs-1947, VETERANS un-traceable Agent Orange etc, and many calamities including non-sense, mis applied dysfunctions, delays, sabotaged people and cases from the mind. Henderson v. Veterans Affairs 09-1036, VVA v, CIA cv 09 0037 CW, which has pleadings with mischaracterized discoveries, delays, denials, and refusals, with mind control throughout. On Oct 13, 2010, declarations made by CIA and DOD agents who do not have top secret clearance of covert ops today and who are themselves unwitting victims as other agents and Govt Officials as Whistleblower Russell Tice himself. The basis of Appellants case and point. Their Affidavit states in 1973 the programs went under severe tight guard secret, which is about when they deployed psyops on the Public for power upon this discovery, which is evolving outside the U S now as a result of no TRANSPARENCY and SSP with a new DHS and revamped FBI, WHITEWASH and lost in generational GAP. Furthermore, Plaintiff has obtained 20,000 pages of documents and videos, and more from Canada before CIA destructions, and went public Aug, 2010. There is no documentation of current NLP, Remote mind control or viewing made available and EXPERIMENTS are REQUIRED especially since patented and Ops admitted by former and current agents, as well as other prominent folks. In addition, there is talk from outsiders of DOD and across the Nation, of CointelPro MIND CONTROL as admitted in the 70s and with crimes under Operation CHAOS with skepticisms in the White House for 2 Administrations, charges for electronic spying were made back then with data minding since then. (CIA Church Committee Report Page 682, 687 and 1947 Act, and Compl page 5, 7paragraph 7)They did not cease or aboli sh this Act, but went black according to Tice and Millions of People so far including those victimized which Appellant interviewed and those with Cancer. Appellant provided the VA with the non-traceable ills of Americans at the hands of this Directed Energy Weapon also used in the Gulf War (Compl Footnote 7 and 36, App x H, N, P-) San Francisco Firm Press Release Media Advisory. Julianne McKinney, Director of these Military Ops is still battling Oversight. (Compl 36) Appellant prayed for an immediate injunction relief and has been under urgencies, demanding JUSTICE, to prove this case.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

I. This Case Presents an Important Violation of our Amendment Laws and the future ROLE of the Judicial system. (Compl 28)

II. There is an immediate and serious impact on the Appellant and public safety with severe and alarming corruption and crimes to cease.

III. Analogously, in history of these crimes and violations cases involving Coin telpro, Church Committee and MKULTRA, knowledge of the illicit nature is imputed to the defendant, further victimized and traumatized by the public's disbeliefs, even though technical and credible testimony have been made unrealized, as in United States v. Lindauer Case No. 03 Cr. 807, falsely accused, slandered, delayed, detained, for 2 years as most whistleblowers to impede truth until too late to matter. (Church Committee full report-went black, Compl page 5).

IV. Additionally, because the majority has not been appropriately made aware of the extent of surveillance for the uses of spying, data-mining, breached contracts, treason, and nefarious misuses to humanity, millions more victimized, that would indeed come forward for immediate dismantling of Covert Remote Viewing, making liars of Public Govt Officials, unwittingly. (USSID 18, Compl Page 12)

V. The Appellant made demands for FOIA, damages physical and psychological (with irreparable harm, monetary losses, witness protection, proper media coverage, and an injunction, Part of Appellants harmful damages is too vexing and mind controlled transmits to err. Appellant was traumatized and is writing pro se with privacy concern. Medical records will be provided for physical and psychological evidence. (Compl page 16, 17, 30, 35, 61, 65, 68, and 23, 33 63) Symptoms are that of VETS-D.E.W. Neurologic torture, picking up behaviors, illnesses hiding as if organically grown, as cults and synthetic addictions on civilians. Affecting emotions and 5 senses, and this case to prove all, from being targeted to wars and has not been free to exercise her rights to speech against the government crimes and to leave her house for the past 4 years and has been retaliated upon in various ways including experimentation of mental GAG orders and House Arrest as with other (ORDINARY UNWITTING PUBLIC, non-gang). These blocks coupled with detainments by law enforcements in all efforts to WARN while DELAYING and covering up accusations.

VI. This Case depicts important Violations of our Amendments that has caused mass chaos, Population Control, and a Society to be disillusioned, misled, along with disbeliefs at the hands of mind control TRANSMISSIONS behind the scenes pawns to create dis-information, mis-understandings and cognitive impairments, to divide and conquer people and to procure and produce exact OPPOSITES (FANNED) of events and harassment. Appellant was extremely Pro-Government 4 years ago, as is the honorable JUDGE John D Bates, thus has the right to an impartial trial and the public at large needs to know and has the right to know including and especially JUDGES. One should not let a rule prevent truth and crimes if justice and truth is our goal to begin with. JUDGES cannot make correct informed decisions WITHOUT this KNOWLEDGE.

VII. VARIOUS ADMISSIONS from Military OFFICIALS, Secretary on US Soil is taking place toward Millions of innocent UNWITTING Civilians included continued operation of COINTELPRO MKULTRA as opinions confirms the allegations dating years back to Church Committee CIA diabolical tactics and NSA transmissions for Electronic Warfare on Americans and humanity.

For nothing in the history of humanity and our judicial system can ever be resolved or accountable UNTIL this case and its WEAPON at hand is heard, considered, and ruled, thus bringing CONSPIRACY THEORISTS TO FACT. The American Judicial sys tem needs to recognize these issues and hold this covert shadow Government accountable to successfully CEASE ITS OWN DEMISE as part of the humanities and We the People duped and brainwashed within our own CIA terrorists. We are ALL in DANGER, and notice DC that is kept in a Bubble.

VIII. No act of Congress can authorize a violation of the Constitution. The Constitution cannot be interpreted safely except by reference to common law and to British institutions as they were when the instrument was framed and adopted. In the 2nd case, Plaintiff provided additional names of Assassinations and did have claims for damages, with an added claims made and documentation that this does exist by our own DIA shadow Govt. The District court dismissed case as fanciful instead of grounds for repugnancies that can be proven, urgently, and is warranted with merit as victim, target and injured party. (Compl 23)

IX. As in the ACLU v. NSA Nos. 06-2095/2140-07a0253, this pattern of Constitutional Violations and torture is victimizing civilians for decades and Appellant is a target of this technology weapon kept covert for nefarious uses and conspiracies. THERE WAS AN ABUSE OF DISCRETION with ALARMING, overwhelming historical facts and admissions of these weapons in use nefariously. Appellant is under attacks and is seeking assistance, and leave of court again to amend, risking her life and family, trying to warn the people, and offered to testify before Congress, after years of torture and courage with enough resources to help her to survive and also demanding discoveries and investigations as to where HUMANITY is heading un-wit, if JUDGES dont stop them NOW.

CONCLUSION

When even one American -who has done nothing wrong- is forced by fear to shut his mind and close his mouth, then all Americans are in peril.

Harry S. Truman

God Bless America, God Bless Humanity!

In light of the foregoing, the court should reverse the District court's Order to dismiss and remand this matter for expedited further proceedings.

Respectfully submitted,

MIREILLE TORJMAN

Appellant is Pro se

Endnotes

1 United States v. Lindauer Case No. 03 Cr. 807

Whistleblower agent remote viewing falsely accused and detained delays until too late to use her information and the 911 brainwash.

2 In Katz v. United States, 389 U.S. 347 (1967) Supreme Court ruled that a search occurs only when 1) a person expects privacy in the thing searched and 2) society believes that expectation is reasonable. In Katz, the Supreme Court ruled that a search had occurred when the government wiretapped a telephone booth. [21] The Court's reasoning was that 1) the defendant expected that his phone booth conversation would not be broadcast to the wider world and 2) society believes that expectation is reasonable.

3 Skilling V. United States, No. 081394 Opinion of Sotomayor, J. In sum, I cannot accept the majority's conclusion that voir dire gave the District Court a sturdy foundation to assess fitness for jury service. Cf. ante, at 29. Taken together, the District Courts failure to cover certain vital subjects, its superficial coverage of other topics, and its uncritical acceptance of assurances of impartiality leave me doubtful that Skillings jury was indeed free from the deep-seated animosity that pervaded the community at large. [R]egardless of the heinousness of the crime charged, the apparent guilt of the offender[,] or the station in life which he occupies, our system of justice demands trials that are fair in both appearance and fact. Irvin, 366. Because I do not believe Skillings trial met that standard, I would grant him relief.

4 Constitutional Provisions, Statutes And Policies At Issue First Amendment to The United States Constitution Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of people peaceably to assemble e, and to petition the government for redress.

5 Justice Sandra Day O'Connor-Frank Olson case-Opinion No rule crafted shall insulate from liability unknowing subjects.

OLSON also pushed or fell 9 (by mind control neuro) in strange death as quoted family case and Jim Keith death without LSD cover up IMPORTED by our CIA and sold to kids, and censored book out as Cult of Intelligence sold in Nice. The CIA COOPER report was a complete WHITEWASH and history repeating itself by Agenda.

CERTIFICATE OF COMPLIANCE

As required by this Court of Appeals F.R.A.P.P. 25, 28 and 32 (a)(7)(b)(iii), 32 (a)(5), and (6) typeface requirements.

I certify that this brief contains 8304 words at in 14 pt Times New Roman.

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I certify that a true copy of the foregoing brief has been furnished in person at 333 Constitution Ave NW, Washington DC 20001 Court of Appeals Clerk, and via regular Mail to US Attorney Civil Division, Craig Lawrence at 555 4th Street NW, Washington DC 20530, on November 12, 2010.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct on November 12, 2010.

Respectfully submitted,

Mireille Torjman

QUESTION PRESENTED

1. Whether this case is frivolous and fantastic or noble and factual dangers?
2. Whether Petitioner has the right to an immediate Injunction Relief from Government torture and protection?
3. Whether the Judicial System can afford to ignore this case, denying a Citizen the right to petition redress of grievance?

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES CITED

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI

BEFORE JUDGMENT

Petitioner respectfully prays that a writ of certiorari issue for the case to be heard in the United States Supreme Court District of Columbia.

U.S.C. 28 2101 Supreme Court; filing under this Courts Rule 11, as a matter of immediate Public Safety and Welfare.

One example of many case and perception:

â Welcome to Judges Above the Law?

WHY THIS CASE MATTERS SO MUCH - TO SO MANY

Imagine one day you or someone you love, find yourself wrapped up in some unexpected litigation, whether civil or criminal. (Statistically speaking, everyone in America will, at some time in their life, be a party in a lawsuit.)

A little background.

Until three years ago, Michael R Kathrein truly believed courtrooms were places where judges listened to the facts carefully and decided cases honestly.

Then he got the lesson of his life.

A judge in his case could, and did, cheat. Opposing counsels could, and did, cheat. And once they coordinated their cheating, no fact, law or procedure could save him. He was set up to lose.

When you think of a corrupt judge, you may think of one who trades rulings for cash. A

As far as we know, that obvious sort of corruption is rare. You must appreciate however, that corruption may take subtle but equally destructive forms. Among other things, a dishonest judge can ignore evidence, twist rules and procedure, obstruct the record, retaliate, manufacture facts or ignore others, allow infirm claims or dismiss valid ones, deny admission of evidence prejudicial to the favored party, suborn perjury, mischaracterize pleadings, engage in ex parte communication and misapply the law.

When he or she does these things intentionally, (motivation is a separate issue) he commits a crime. Petty or grand, the acts are still crimes. It takes surprisingly little to "steer" a case.

After the American Revolution, our Constitution was conceived and adopted as the mechanical foundation of our government. For ordinary citizens, the independent grand jury was the only tool of salvation from judicial corruption. Without this critical tool of redress, American civil rights exist only at the will of a judge. That tool (unfettered access to a grand jury) has been taken away.

Judges simply snatched it from us. They did it by enacting "judicial legislation," i.e., by "ruling" that private citizens had no right of access to the grand jury. They took the grand jury from us and they gave it to themselves, and they use their "gatekeeping" power to protect themselves (from accountability) all the time.

Who decided, "What will be the law?" Judges did.

Who is supposed to decide, "What will be the law?" Congress is.

Right under Congress's nose, the entire judicial branch of our government placed itself out of reach. They eliminated all means to be held accountable to the public for their actions.

Judges are now, above the law.

Federal judges and federal prosecutors routinely block the access common citizens are supposed to have to the federal grand jury.

There is a logical but not legal, reason for this.

If you have ever seen someone hustled through the courthouse cattle chute, you will understand that "equity" and "justice" have little to do with the process. Judges determined to make things turn out the way they want them to and naturally, prosecutors are always determined to get convictions. In many ways, equity, justice, facts and law, interfere with the process.

Have you ever stopped to consider that public defenders (the poor man's lawyer) don't investigate anything? Public defenders do not have police or detective resources at their disposal—only prosecutors do. Your defense will rely almost entirely upon the evidence the prosecutor decides to "share" with your lawyer. If the prosecutor "forgets" evidence that would help your case, or decides to ignore an important lead, he will win and you will lose.

That is not merely misbehavior, that is criminal behavior. The very last thing a prosecutor (or judge) wants is a properly operating, independent grand jury.

The ONLY recourse that remains now, against a corrupt judge, is to respectfully "request" that the judge evaluate himself for honesty.

What criminal wouldn't desire the power to block an investigation of their own crime? It is hard to imagine a more fundamental or structural conflict of interest than that.

Human nature takes over.

To protect the sanctity of the judiciary, otherwise honest judges are driven to shield the misdeeds of their crooked brothers at the bar. Perfectly understandable human nature, yes... but when this behavior is at the expense of the public trust, it is utterly unpardonable. The courtroom is no place for situational ethics.

A judge who is honest 99% of the time is useless to the people. If this judge is your judge, his 1% of corruption equals your 100% of conviction. Your right to a fair trial does not go away just because nine out of ten people did get one. And your right to challenge a man for criminal behavior should not go away just because that man wears a black robe.

Justice cannot tolerate exceptions. Just like a cop, a priest, or a bank teller, if they cross the line once, they have to go. Dishonesty is extremely difficult to detect and prove. External, independent, unbiased inquiry is the only solution.

on.

It wasn't always like this.

Judges have taken control of the right to assert your guaranteed rights, i.e., they are no longer inalienable as guaranteed in the Constitution. You have them only when a judge feels like letting you have them. If he doesn't, you don't. There is nothing you can do.

Effectively, judges dispense our rights at their whim and pleasure with total impunity.

Unfortunately, ordinary citizens have no other means to enjoy or enforce their civil rights except through that same court system. What this means is that without a mechanism for remedy, (the court) you have no rights. If a judge refuses to order relief, then you don't get any. Therefore, citizens have no choice but to (literally) pray to a judge for leave to assert their rights. Where their prayers are denied, their rights are denied.

This type of abuse is exactly why our forefathers granted ordinary citizens the right to access the Grand Jury directly. It is a centuries old system of checks and balances imported from England, installed in America to protect ordinary citizens against judicial tyranny.

Direct access to a grand jury is the victim's path (us) around the victimizer's (bad judges) roadblock.

In this Petition you will see a perfect example of justice thwarted by the very people (judges and the U.S. Attorney) who are supposed to ensure that justice is done.

Kathrein seeks to expose and eliminate this unfair Conflict of Interest.

Why did the Seventh Circuit try so hard to bury his case? Because to allow a common citizen direct access to the federal grand jury is to expose the judiciary's Achilles heel... accountability to the people.

Title 18 U. S. C. Â§ 242 provides that judges are liable for criminal acts committed under a color of law meaning that judges may be immune from prosecution for civil misbehavior, but they are NOT immune from prosecution for criminal behavior.

The only way to make a judge answer for criminal behavior is to bring criminal charges against him. The ultimate irony here is that the only way to bring criminal charges against a bad judge is to ask another judge for permission to pursue the bad judge. As noted above, that will never happen.

As long as the subjects of the investigation (judges) are the gatekeepers of the investigation, there will be no investigation. Therefore, judges have rendered Title 18 U. S. C. Â§ 242 unenforceable.

Kathrein cannot win this fight to bring evidence of judicial misbehavior directly to a grand jury, then all Americans who are victims of Â§ 242 crimes are denied their civil rights. It will become forever impossible to get a complaint against a judge, past a judge.

This is why his complaint matters so much to so many... because you never know if the judge on your case is going to do his job.

If he decides to steer the proceedings against you, you will wrongly lose your property, your liberty and perhaps your life. You MUST have a way to protect yourself. ---- Read R Kathrein's Booklet to understand how this barricade affects all of us...in ways you would never suspect.

Call your Congressman, TODAY.

Tell him, to tell the Supreme Court, to answer this question

Decades of American Judicial PUBLIC

PERCEPTIONS from Mind Control

Transmitted Unwittingly!

DARK HISTORY-PAST EVENTS THAT HAVE SHAPED THE WORLD

History is an account, mostly false, of events unimportant, which are brought about by rulers mostly knaves, and soldiers mostly fools.

â Ambrose Bierce

Bush-Bones Doctrine: â Deny Everythingâ â Thereâ s three things to remember: claim everything, gain nothing, deny everything.â â Senator Prescott Bush (Skull & Bones 1917) The Bush family patriarch made the above statement in a 1966 interview for Columbia Universityâ s oral history project on the Eisenhower administration. Prescott Bush said that political dictum had been explained to him by Claire Boothe Luce, congresswoman, ambassador and wife of Time-Life media magnate Henry Luce (Skull & Bones 1920)

Diagram of the Bush Dynasty Source: <http://www.threetwoone.org>

PDF Streaming Video â Hear how Prescott Bush, Dubyaâ s grandfather, tried to overthrow the government and install a fascist nazi regime.

The Hitler Project â Astonishing Revelations! Nazi Sympathizer Prescott Bush. He personally financed the building of over 40 concentration camps including Auschwitz.

01/02/05 By Ted Lang Â© 2004 â It is T&Câ s position that the Bush family knew exactly what they were doing, and deliberately brought Hitler and his murderous Nazis to power knowing full well in advance what the consequences of their actions would be.

Bush and the Nazis: New Documents Herbert Parmet, November 26, 2003

THE NEW GENGHIS KAHN

The year 1999 and its seventh month, From the sky comes a great King of Terror: Reviving the great King of the Mongols, Before and after Mars (war) to reign happily.

â Nostradamus in year 1555.

History repeating itself eyes wide shut in front of the world. Yale Club, Emulating the Torah Scriptures toppling. What will they do in 2012?

YALE BUSH secret societies.

Copyright 2010 NSA Transmissions. All rights reserved.

Web Hosting by Yahoo! An expert witness, Certified Hypnotist trained in CIA Neuro Linguistic Programming techniques with NASA software and Military Patents.

NSA Transmissions-Mind Control, Death Rays for Planes, Cancer, Synthetic ills- Topplings ELF & Seismic Waves + Behind Scenes Focused on Wrong Weapon Mass Destruction TERRORISTS WITHIN, 1973 2nd Level CIA, Cryptocracy's Plan to Psycho-civilize You, Emulating Scriptures! ---How & Why 911, Economy. ALL from your minds! MA CROCOSM. Millions including America's Corp Leaders & Officials! "The Process." Israel Framed-engineered to go down.
Have you figured it out yet!

- â ¢ NSA Tice-Hero under God
- â ¢ US Supreme Court Case
- â ¢ Israel-CIA Agenda- Press Releases
- â ¢ Synthetic Telepathy-ills-TAXES
- â ¢ Cancer 911 CIA
- â ¢ Resources to Expose
- â ¢ Interviews-Exhibits-Documents
- â ¢ Lawsuit-Synthetic ills in America

Israel, Seismic Energy to part sea & leave crevice, Israel small land & surrounded by 50 yrs of vast constant attacks, Israel has Palestinians who were

EVICTED by their own people, Israel can't have chicken or cow suffer with Kosher scriptures and suffering---2nd level shadow CIA proven Diabolical! STOP Shadow

CIA attacks-50 yrs PRESS FANNING Anti-Semitism and spinning all 2nd level

CIA, Goldstone Report and 911, USS liberty ... dis-info, hallucinations, cognitive infiltrations, illusions, wearing Yamacas on the Ground in disguise, psyops on Israel and cover-ups. Catherine Fitts Whistleblower. Below

Leave Israel alone and we will have world peace! See Tice Article on SABOTAGE on all aspects of life.

Inducing mind control on rioters coupled with funding them in Egypt to take them down WW3 as planned every time we invade a Countrysee also George

Green link video. 9/2010 Press release in SUPREME COURT below this one of ISRAEL whistleblowing CIA to take them down (1947 to current activities fanning opposites) as all our NEWS for decades by design. Info. warfare 1973.

DATA-MINING, why and SINCE 1973 FOIA includes genetics See Lt.
Col. Bearden slides and more of NEW frightening weapon the World has ever seen! (1975) RUSSIAN SCIENTIST SLIDE.

CSPAN video: Texas Congressman Ted Poe;
It's None Of Our Business What Israel Does!
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=pfiUNjn0Rys&feature=player_embedded Bombs, rockets, ravines, rocks, attacks, assaults on Jewish children, etc... on small land if not secure borders, (1967) & who are we to give bad advice to Israel, mind our own business!...and worse psyops and US blocked freedom of information flow entering buildings, embassies etc with no explanations given in the U.S ...Access Denied Opposites and REALIZED PROPAGANDA sabotaged by AMERICA to white wash DISCREDITS... MANIPULATIONS, human pawns, and on.

Sick, Diabolic psyops went Global long ago! Sig-intel; NSA, the largest of its kind in the world, is denying oversight." George Green & WW3 plans...The LAUNCH of a NEW HOLOCAUST in manifest on US soil.

Lyndon LaRouche statement "it's the BUSH FAMILY" in a prior video with Alex Jones summer 2011... and see my STATEMENTS to the COURTS
. DoD Yale Secret Societies and Weapon of mind control framing the Globe.

Top Dutch MP slams Turkey's 'belligerence' against Israel

Middle East expert Kortenoeven accuses Turkey of "sliding into an abyss of Islamic extremism," criticizes foreign policies at OSCE meeting

Aug 2010, AMERICAN Jews, Israelis ZOA, International Fellowship of Christians and Jews, and Press release below! Research shows Golda Meir lobbied US to strike Auschwitz. AND TO NO AVAIL... AND FUNDED By Bush FAMILY. By GIL SHEFLER 09/04/2011 15:19

7/2/11 CATHERINE AUSTIN FITTS WHISTLEBLOWER: In America today, if the mainstream media does not cover something it is almost as if it never happened. Right now, the worst nuclear disaster in human history continues to unfold in Japan, U.S. nuclear facilities are being threatened by flood waters, the U.S. military is bombing Yemen, gigantic cracks in the earth are appearing all over the globe and the largest wildfire in Arizona history is causing immense devastation. From authentic CREVICE to evil HAARP DESTRUCTION SYNTHETIC CRACKS WHITEWASHING more HISTORY AND THE SCIENCE/TORAH etc.... The ultimate conspiracy!

Research Links Rise in Falluja Birth Defects and Cancers to US Assault & Defects in newborns 11 times higher than normal & 'War contaminants' from 2004 attack could be cause by Martin Chulov enclosed | Published on Friday, December 31, 2010 by The Guardian/UK

CIA (2)- Directed ENERGY WEAPON of mass Destruction as Ground Zero and untraceable Agent ORANGE etc... : CANCER ELF WEAPON in Iraq while funding them | as all else DUPLICITOUS brainwashing opposites daily!
The National Security State and the Assassination of JFK The CIA, the Pentagon, and the "Peace President" (1959)

by Andrew Gavin Marshall Lewrockwell.com

The Military coup-Cuban Crisis included blowing up people in Miami, carefully chosen spots as London Subway, convincing air passengers they SAW a Cuban aircraft, like USS Liberty, Egypt shark waters, etc, blaming COLLEGE STUDENTS, like Israeli Art Students, etc and from an exercise to intervention as all else, and sink boats of refugees (real or simulated)...

Exhibited in Supreme Court Case prepared May, 2010
PRESS RELEASE DIRE WARNS

Death Ray for planes was Tesla's invention in 1940 and a $2,000,000.00 device to zap and melt an airplane motor 250 miles away (as your organs) and an Invisible Chinese Wall of defense was built around the Country, no matter how large an attack, (Teleforce, manifests FREE energy and creates rays; zapping beams, the new invisible war). (Dr. Becker, Naomi Wolf, and Sharon Weinberger Imaginary Weapons).. this Warden cliff Tower is in full action in Long Island NY, along with 36 other stations or sites as GWEN, Globally that beam massive volume of Free Energy.

(The New York Times, Sunday September 22, 1940-Science and Patents, Education News) One COSTLY energy zap causes by NLP suggestion transmitted to individuals; confusion, mistakes, trip, fall, body temp-freeze, heat, miscommunication, fatigue, focus/ concentration, radio-sleep (Kucinich-US patented under MKDELTA), and stalling any engine. HAARP, Body Electric, and Mass Control Human Engineering. JIM KEITH APPENDICE on my homepage with Russell Tice and Thomas Drake...

Israel-framed while dividing all people to conquer! CIA predicts, (no creating) to carry out-water (WAR) and pricing shortage, 2015-mind control transmissions zaps dry heat in body and energy-taking us down, Israel, Middle East, Africa. Overpopulation video from Pentagon staging us for the next invasion-ASSASSINATED Allison Des Forges in Hudson River mind control plane Crash-Staged and Senator Ed Ted Kennedy zapped. Both Civil rights Africa, Water and Dry Land zapped already planning to invade them and brainwash one world govt. Emulating the Torah scriptures! Manchurians, and IRS, CIA bldgs/files in WT7!

Major cities experiment to increase crime in the 70s by mind control EVOLVED never ceased GENERATING BIGGER GOVT, INDUCING MISHAPS-MISFORTUNES, entrapment and now TERRORISM? Infiltrations of BRAINWASHING SCHOOLS-WEAKEN their ARMY take down ISRAEL and America going Global Agenda. Infiltrated Palestinians-Wars provoked still in manifest; Under the Auspices/Scapegoating Drugs they brought in Conspiracy. NOT from drugs or your TV- SEE TIME photo/Article (Oct 1971) below Infiltrations and excuses on all aspects of ELF attacks.

Egypt largest Military, Turkey Sibel gagged SSP LAW created doubts and to hide conspiracy agenda of NWO) CIA masterminds. A public brainwashed to allow it unwittingly, in the White House, to next calamity and Global Domination Conspiracy of the minds! Connecting 50 yrs of dots! ie; General Anthony Zinni (wikipedia) and changed minds! (Brainwash on the job as many others, see how its done) CIA Predicts The Future 2015 (no infiltrating)- Water Resources. 2007 video comments. (Unwitting agents channeled to Infiltrate) Waging War since the Church Committee 1974! Charges were made 2 administrations concerned and NEVER ABOLISHED. May be drawn into the fight trying to stop it John McWethy. Taking over the Globe under the disguise of helping others tactics. An unwitting population targeted in advance! DARPA (trailing Science 50 yrs as new MKULTRA) Psyops deployed 50 yrs on civilians. ELECTRONIC WARFARE! http://www.liveleak.com/view?i=bb0_1180923539

Larry Silverstein OWNER of 911 TOWER 7, set up in advance to get insurance and transmitted forced speech/DECISION to "pull" to firefighters as if involved-NSA transmissions-SABOTAGED as Russell Tice Article Is the NSA conducting war on Americans (YES, tip of iceberg) 2006 and Media asked, why press didnt pick it up other than NBC? Operation Mockingbird propaganda unwittingly, updated remote viewing and impairment mind control as misunderstandings.

Sunstein's Report-Cognitive impairment infiltration is unwitting NOT hired Gangs, creating illusion-Un-realized Kinesthetic! Creating false perception for decades on civilians. Reagan erased with Alzheimer mind control (NLP) CIA programming. OPERATION MIND CONTROL (1973) Plans to Psycho civilize you and MACROCOSM Americas Corporate Leaders and Official, AND civilians.

Un-Covered documentary CONGRESS MARIONETTES not READING infozapped, to invade Iraq. Mind controlled Out-Foxed video for years-media mockingbird unwittingly, UNREALIZED, updated! The joke culture, misfits in the pentagon cult of intelligence and a dysfunctional country! Allen Dulles 1957" Berle wrote in his diary. "If the scientists do what they have laid out for themselves, men will become manageable ants."
Below www.mireilletterjman.com FULL disclosures.

Hadassah 90 Billions in Ponzi sabotage away from Jersusalem HOSP (Laser/vision) funding. Re-Distributing the WEALTH from Jews manipulating our economy further than Corporations. Always keeping their enemy close, destroying files & buildings. They took down the economy behind the scenes! See video on home page of misdirected investments mind controlled.
as many others unwittingly.

Ariel Sharon zapped into coma (as I), Directed Energy Weapons as planes; because he knew the CIA was corrupt Sabotaging Israel. Kay Griggs Military whistleblower with MIND JABBING attacks (Secret Societies) 1910 Yale
Prescott Bush FUNDED NAZI soldiers, kkk etc DoD.

1967 USS liberty-Project Philadelphia (Hallucinations) blaming ISRAEL-mistake in identity set up-framed, cutting off investigations & news coverage (as usual until exposed 2008 as the shuttle satellite cover up) Start of Anti-Se mitism fanned unwittingly since 1947 Act.

Alien UFO Hallucinations Scapegoating with LSD (that CIA brought in and sold to kids). Making Million off the Pharmaceutical TAXES (as ALCOHOL INDUCED URGES), now being sued from synthetic side effects and transmitted Synthetic illnesses. After they mind controlled you and your teacher, professor to push prescriptions and the greed transmitted to make commercial on your drug inducement on Americans- VETS Agent Orange non-traceable! Military CANCER and Leukemia, lumps, to all under the disguise of microwaves infiltrating crimes & wars!

Playing GOD (Project Voice of GOD) & devil-The CIA Cult of Intelligence born with National Security Act in 1947, Weapons Stations need to be dismantled ASAP. Buzz in Pentagon Synthetic Telepathy and Psychotronics predicted in 1967 video instant communication, after Public Speeches "Repeatedly staying the course" to brainwash invaded Countries with (excuses), GULF war, "The ENERGY will be just fine", (Not at all) "we will help one soul at a time". Hillary "I will not channel my husband" (as in ghost-like transmissions sabotaged Clinton Rumsfeld: There is what you know, you don't know..... " I Didn't mean to say that or that's not what I meant," Obama dividing the people to conquer with "They like to do that, one against the other," Called JACKETING in psyops. (Side effects of brainwash & MC).

SEARCH for MANCHURIAN ego states such as an imaginary childhood playmate and build it into a separate personality, unknown to the first. The hypnotist would communicate directly with this schizophrenic offshoot and command it to carry out specific deeds kamikaze pilot. Manchurian crimes creating a subservient society was not out of sight- by mind control waves." And worse.

GUANTANAMO scapegoats displays and focused on the wrong Weapons of mass destruction, brainwash and intelligence masterminded. (Nano thermal debris removed quickly) and Cathy O'Brien, SSP impeding truth. Never getting to the truth---MINDS! INNOCENT and display for false blame. TIME/DELAYS for false confession Brainwash out memory & PLANT new before public contacts.

How the CIA Missed Stalin's Bomb, 1946-50-printed 2007 but updated 2008. ---Remote Viewing and surveillance London Subway Bombing-Staged!!! Water and Odd/even days Petrol, CIA sabotage since 70s as drugs and crime all un-natural-inducing more plans for Florida.

Judge Napolitano, Lies the Government told you unwittingly until 2008 cover up pre-empted allegations with political and media transparency... DELUSIONS, RE-READ, and CONDONED corruptions! ILLUSIONS OF CRIMES statistics for 5 decades and mis perceptions mind controlled.

Market inflations and real estate pricing and gouging was all induced from the mind on each individual and as a mass, and part of conspiracy agenda. Corrupting American Minds. And, the suicide ??? of a Jewish CFO after 3 months as interim accountant auditing the books at FANNIE MAE fraud. Oversight today to Brokers & appraisers.

http://www.foxbusiness.com/on-air/freedom-watch/index.html#/v/1106032184001/your-government-landlord/?playlist_id=158146

Jewish Aaron Russo died of Cancer recently after going public that Rockefeller told him the only reason the WOMENS liberation was allowed to occur successfully was to COLLECT TAXES from them. They also manipulate couples lives as The Firm John Marks also wrote only the participant knows of this and is not only army. Invading Countries Under pretext of oil etc. for take over of humanity.

Did you know CIA operates on the ground wearing Yamacas to frame Jews, destroying fruit trees and crops against the Torah scriptures +, as with our organic natural farms in the U.S. Why?

Did you know that the ISRAELI ART STUDENTS were framed and mind controlled where to live and accepted only in the areas to live as guided to set up and look involved? CONTRARY OF CIA GUILT CREATING DOUBT and so much more BEARING FALSE WITNESS from a neighbor, false memory, fake Govt help spinning their wheels. INTERNET & Google lawsuit, libraries, false accusations & false detainments? Capable and do manipulate all Internet remotely with passwords and minds from spying surveillance. As with False imprisoned masses. Sabotaged 911 Commission never to see the light, as 9 Attorneys asking questions-Fired at once and Generation GAPS again. Sabotaged 911 Commission never to see the light, as 9 DOJ Attorneys asking questions-Fired at once when they could not be brainwashed to go along, and Generation GAPS again.

Did you know Mind Controlled People and Media is set up with tricks of false thoughts transmitted during conversation and output of written documents to put a SPIN on JOURNALISTS & civilians thus unknowingly creating PROPAGANDA, until now covering their tracks with blatant lies from our government? Decades of news from misunderstanding mind games, disputes, & slanders. No one high enough Q clearance! The behavioral sciences. Nevertheless, the final result is not the whole story of the CIA's attack on the mind. No one knows except the PARTICIPANT.

He called it Pain-Drug-Hypnosis and said it is a vicious war weapon ... The extensiveness of the use of this form of hypnotism in espionage work is now so widespread that it is long past the time when people should have become alarmed about it. [p. 75] Report

Duplicitous-Framing ISRAEL & piggybacked shadowing to scapegoat and set up! See how CIA tab +. INJECTED IDEOLOGY covertly INFILTRATING WORSE OVER TIME TO CHUNK & ACCEPT. BRAINWASH society and worse yet if not stopped and reversed.

CIA JOHN LOFTUS brasschecktv.com 2 videos of ISRAEL, CIA BUSH/HITLER, 911 to AGE NDA.

<http://www.brasschecktv.com/videos/government-corruption/why-the-justice-department-doesnt-catch-banksters-terrorists-and-other-enemies-of-the-nation.html>

VIDEO Mossad Microbiologist Joseph Moshes Baxter Ukraine Plague Warning-Posted by labvirus on November 7, 2009

Professor Moshe had called into the studio after a live radio show guested by Dr. A. True Ott entitled Born on the Fourth of July on RBN broadcast in mid-August claiming to be a microbiologist who wanted to supply evidence to a States Attorney regarding tainted H1N1 Swine flu vaccines being produced by Baxter BioPharma Solutions. He said that Baxters Ukrainian lab was in fact producing a bioweapon disguised as a vaccine. He claimed that the vaccine contained an adjuvant (additive) designed to weaken the immune system, and replicated RNA from the virus responsible for the 1918 pandemic Spanish flu, causing global sickness and mass death. The next day, this happened (see video) THE STRANGE CASE OF JOSEPH MOSHE:

This Joseph Moshe arrested in L.A. is likely a MOSSAD agent with a CONSCIENCE and has apparently been extradited immediately to Israel. Now his testimony, whatever it would have been, is still secure. Notice, the federal agents used an electro-magnetic pulse which knocked out his car, as well as any cell phone so he couldn't contact the U.S. Attorney he was obviously going to meet with. Did he make threats against Obama?? Apparently just announcing he was going public about his knowledge of Baxter Pharma, and that the pandemic flu vaccine isn't a vaccine at all, but is indeed a biological weapon designed to kill millions was all it took for him to be detained. AS I and still under threat! FRAMED discredit, set up, pre and post SUGGESTIONS and the PUBLIC...

and [Update December 9, 2010] Gilbert states in the new report: Al Gore article I am ashamed of what climate science has become today."

ELF ills COVER UPS with TANGIBLE; done for 50 yrs UNWIT. Sister Bertell: doctorate in biometry below. Letter to Congress on home page. www.Ustogaza.org and INFORMATION WARFARE (1972) PRESS RELEASE below of a few. 50 yrs-ISRAEL-FRAMED while Dividing ALL PEOPLE TO CONQUER! Have you figured it out yet-

CONNECT the DOTS! 50 YRS of CIA dirty tricks PINNED ON ISRAEL to go down agenda. FLOTILLAS

WERE MIND CONTROLLED pawns to go there and create anti-semitism and war as past 40 yrs unwittingly agenda. Muslim against Jew and JEW against Jew putting them on boats etc. and PUT PRESSURE ON ISRAEL, LIKE CONGRESS with IRAQ war. See lawsuit last YEAR (jacking)...

Using others and media as 50 yrs of TRICKS by mind control USA.

Subdue & Ripping senses while there. FIRE IN HAIFA on CROPS was also CIA mind controlled manchurian crimes & HAARP as GAS PIPE crimes set up in EGYPT to block/force..
Rivlin, deputies reject Tibi bill to commemorate 'Nakba' By LAHAV HARKOV
<http://www.jpost.com/Headlines/Home.aspx> instant news 07/04/2011 16:45

Global Domination and Matrix by satellite-Israel, Seismic Energy to part sea & leave crevice, Israel small land & surrounded by 50 yrs of vast constant attacks, and psyops INFILTRATIONS since HITLER MIND CONTROL and his armies!

Israel has Palestinians who were EVICTED by their own people,
Israel can't have chicken or cow suffer with Kosher scriptures and suffering--- 2nd level shadow CIA proven Diabolical!

STOP Shadow CIA attacks-50 yrs PRESS FANNING Anti-Semitism and spinning all 2nd level CIA, Goldstone Report and SS liberty ... dis-info, hallucinations, cognitive infiltrations, illusions, wearing Yamacas on the Ground in disguise, psyops on Israel!
Leave Israel alone and we will have world peace!

Inducing mind control on rioters coupled with funding them in Egypt to take them down WW3 as planned every time we invade a Country- Brainwash Process & Subdue & Ripping senses while there. Also George Green link video. 9/2010 Press release in SUPREME COURT below this one of ISRAEL whistle blowing CIA to take them down (1947 to current activities fanning opposites)

Prof. Mkhaimar Abusada of the Al-Azhar University in Gaza said that "The prisoner swap has boosted Hamas' popularity for now, but it won't last more than a few months. Hamas' popularity has declined every year it has been in power.

"Hamas control of Gaza brought an Israeli blockade and siege. Even though it was Israeli-imposed, a lot of people blame Hamas. The Palestinians voted Hamas for reform and change. They didn't vote for siege and blockade and unemployment. They voted to end the corruption. None of that happened," he told the UK paper.

'Hamas as corrupt as Fatah'

The people of Gaza, the report ventured, are disappointed to find that Hamas whose upset victory in the 2006 election was based largely "on despair with the corruption and the misgovernance of the ruling Fatah" was essentially cut from the exact same cloth.

"They're back to the same old corruption," Mohammed Mansour, a human rights activist told the Guardian. "Hamas is a party that only benefits its own supporters. If you want a job, if you want to do business, you must be a supporter of Hamas."

Gazans, most of whom are struggling to simply get by, are growing more and more resentful of the ruling party, he said.

The real despair, however, is focused on the widespread lack of hope for change: Hamas is focusing its efforts on two main avenues: The armed conflict with Israel and the fierce political feud with arch-rival Fatah.

Majority Jewish Survey 10/6/11
PEACE THROUGH STRENGTH

After the columns of fire and dust of the 1967 Six Day War dissipated, the final outlines of a territorial solution to the Arab-Israeli conflict emerged.

At that time, the Israelis reunited Jerusalem, but failed to annex Judea and Samaria (the so-called West Bank) as an integral part of the Jewish state. As a result, the internationally recognized right of Jewish settlement of these lands has remained in limbo.

After more than 40 years of wandering in the desert of failed peace processes, isn't it time for Israel to assert its just and rightful claims to Judea and Samaria, the very heart of the Jewish homeland?

Of course, there will be those who will continue to insist that there is a need to create a Palestinian Arab state within the heartland of the Jewish state. What these individuals stubbornly refuse to admit is that a Palestinian state already exists within the post-1967 borders of Jordan. If the "Arab Spring" means anything at all, it means that there is a need to give the Palestinian Arab majority in Jordan more of a democratic say in how they are governed. When that happens, a democratic Palestinian Arab state will take its place among the nations.

Our collective frustration over a countless series of failed peace processes will end when we get on the right side of history, and allow truth and justice to prevail. "Peace through strength" should be our motto - with a strength based on moral clarity and determination.
<http://blog.standforisrael.org/home> <http://www.thelikud.org/> SPEECH <http://www.thejp.org/>

"You shall possess the land and you shall dwell in it, for to you have I given the land to possess it."
(BAMIDBAR 33:53)

PALESTINE economy growing 10% a year! While attacking reachable small land of ISRAEL and no PEACE blaming each other..... CIA manipulations and mind controlled AGENTS anti-semitism un-wit...
Dulles and anti-semitism mind control from 2nd level. Madsen/Schreuder etc... Funding Terrorist Groups & Palestine growing 10% a yr with new Malls and we can't REVOLUTION in MASS accordingly...

Risks in war zones... as enemy combatants if shadowed by others to sneak in or infiltrations of people for decades Letter 2/2009 from Obama gone when he was going to bring 100,000.00
Palestinians to AMERICA. No one wants them in their own land. 1947...! Genuine aid through Egypt!!!
Using pawns to PROVOKE, whitewash, cover up, spin etc...

JEWS FOR THE PRESERVATION OF FIREARMS OWNERSHIP
America's Most Aggressive Defender of Firearms Ownership

According to a US Department of Defense directive (S-3600.1, December 9, 1996), "information warfare" is defined as "an information operation Information warfare has tended to ignore the role of the human body as an information or data processor in this quest for dominance, except in those cases where an individual's logic or rational thought may be upset via Dis-information or deception... just as any other data-"Yet, the body is capable not only of being deceived, manipulated or mis-informed but also shut down or destroyed." Dr . Begich.

Blackouts of time...
The CIA succeeded in developing a whole range of psycho-weapons to expand its already ominous psychological warfare arsenal. With these capabilities, it was now possible to wage a new kind of war: a war which would take place invisibly, upon the battlefield of the human mind... [p. 19]
According to the public and Dr. Walter Bowart Operation mind control in absentia .

by 1969 and didn't have need for shuttles for decades when mission was accomplished. See Shadow Apollo 11 whistleblower. Mafioso went quiet after missions accomplished, until now to discredit 2nd level CIA and lawsuit as this website content accusations. WHITEWASHING with twists and brainwashing the public with your tax dollar and worse.

For a year, Obama prohibited any new US sanctions to stop Iran developing nuclear weapons a looming existential threat to both Israel and the US.
Refusing to identify the PA as responsible, Obama has not penalized it.

INDEED, FAR from holding Palestinians accountable, Obama has consistently rewarded them, increasing aid to almost $1 billion per year. A Palestinian Media Watch report just presented to the US Congress documents that, in May 2011 alone, the PA paid $5,207,000 in salaries to Palestinians in Israeli jails, including blood-soaked terrorists. Last year the US provided $225 million to the general Palestinian budget from which these salaries are paid.

If Obama was genuine about holding the PA accountable, he would be demanding the disbanding of Fatah's own Al Aqsa Martyrs Brigades a US- recognized terrorist group. He would demand the abrogation of the PA's unity agreement with Hamas (which calls for a genocide of Jews) as a precondition of any future talks. He has done neither.

Rabbi's Commentary www.StandforIsrael.org
Israel in Crisis and Conflict

August 25, 2011
Dear Friend of Israel,

Last week's terror attacks in Israel were tragic and telling. In the week since, I have watched the funerals of the eight innocent victims with grief and prayer. And I have also been paying attention to the Palestinian Authority's response to this brutal violence.

The attacks last Thursday originated along Israel's border with Egypt, and are believed to have been carried out by members of the Palestinian Popular Resistance Committee. When the Israel Defense Forces (IDF) rightfully responded to the attacks with military strikes on Palestinian terrorist targets in Gaza, Hamas joined in the violence, raining down more than 100 rockets on Israel over that weekend and rockets continue to fall today.

That Hamas joined in the violence against Israel when they were already vulnerable is no surprise nor is the fact that they violated the ceasefire they agreed to after days of fighting between Hamas terrorists and the IDF. If history has taught Israel anything, it's that there's no such thing as a ceasefire with Hamas.

When we look to the more reasonable and moderate of the two main Palestinian factions the Palestinian Authority (P.A.) we likewise find nothing encouraging. Instead of condemning the terrorist attacks coming from Gaza, P.A. president Mahmoud Abbas went to the U.N. Security Council, calling for an emergency session to halt Israeli airstrikes on the Gaza Strip.

Abbas offered the U.N. no acknowledgement of Palestinian incitement and culpability. Nor was there any attempt at direct communication and negotiation with Israel. The bid for a Palestinian state follows a similar formula: deny any fault, eschew any real attempts at peace, and go to the U.N. for an end-around to your desired goal.

Abbas even accused Israel of trying to use this situation to undermine the Palestinian attempts at statehood, and to drum up international sympathy by portraying the Palestinians as the victims of Israeli violence. "We are determined to turn to the U.N. in September and receive recognition because of Israeli government policies," he said. "What Israel is doing now will not deter us from continuing to claim our rights."

True character is often revealed in times of crisis and conflict. In this conflict, Palestinian leadership has yet again shown that it has little regard for the truth and little interest in peacemaking. In the week that has passed since the attacks, the Israeli people have shown their character as well. We have gathered in unity to grieve our lost sons and daughters, brothers, and sisters. The city of Eilat, where the attacks took place, pushed forward with its annual international jazz festival earlier this week. As Eilat mayor Meir Yizhak-Halevi told The Jerusalem Post, "The right way to answer hostile fundamentalist forces is to carry on as normal."

Thankfully, for Israel, even in times of attack, normal means a desire for justice and peace, participation in a strong community, and faith in God. May we all be blessed with these gifts and may they, along with our support and prayers, see Israel through the difficult times that lie ahead.

With prayers for shalom, peace,

Rabbi Yechiel Eckstein
President Top of Form Bottom of Form

Raise Your Voice
PRAY for Israel
TELL US your story
TALK to your friends
More ways you can help
Rabbi's Commentary
Israel in Crisis and Conflict

Last week's terror attacks in Israel were tragic and telling. Rabbi Eckstein says the Palestinian Authority's response to the attacks says a lot about the true character of Palestinian leadership: their regard for the truth, and their interest in peacemaking. And Israel's response reveals a lot about hers.

Readmore
Learn About Israel
Find out the story of this amazing land.
August 22, 2011--Contact Morton A. Klein at: 212-481-1500
Attn: NEWS EDITOR
ZOA Criticizes Quartet Statement, Calls for Quartet to be Disbanded

The Zionist Organization of America (ZOA) has criticized the statement issued this week by the Middle East Quartet (the U.S., the European Union, Russia and the United Nations) which failed to condemn actual, on-going recent violations by the Palestinian Authority (PA) of its signed obligations under the Oslo agreements to end terrorism and the incitement to hatred and murder that feeds it, but which instead declared the Quartet to be greatly concerned by Israel's recent announcements to advance planning for new housing units in Ariel and East Jerusalem. (Middle East Quartet Statement, August 16, 2011). In view of the Quartet's longstanding bias against Israel, as evidenced in its 2003 Roadmap peace plan, which virtually discarded the Oslo requirement of Palestinian compliance and which aims to create a Palestinian state led by an unreformed, extremist, terror-supporting PA, the ZOA has called for its disbanding. (The ZOA was the first organization to do this when its Director of Middle East Policy, Daniel Mandel, wrote an article in January calling for this step).

Following the Quartet's latest statement, former Deputy National Security Advisor, Elliott Abrams, called for the disbanding of the Quartet saying, "The last time the Middle East Quartet met, on July 11, it was unable even to issue a statement about the key issue before it: the Palestinian effort to get the UN General Assembly and Security Council to declare Palestine a state and admit it to membership. Nor has the Quartet been able to issue a statement about the attacks the Assad regime has been carrying out this week against Palestinian refugee camps in Syria, which have led thousands of Palestinians to flee their homes. But it did on August 16 get itself organized to address what it apparently saw as a graver issue and a greater threat to peace, Israel's announcement of plans to construct additional housing units in Jerusalem and Ariel."

Nowadays the Quartet seems able to reach agreement on only one thing: criticism of Israel. This is the lowest common denominator among the United States, EU, United Nations, and Russia, and it is pretty low indeed. If this is the only function of the Quartet, the better path would be to disband it now for the statements it is making and the statements it seems unable to make combine to bring discredit on all participants (Elliott Abrams, Quartet Statements and Quartet Silences, Council on Foreign Relations, August 16, 2011).

ZOA National President Morton A. Klein said, "The ZOA has watched for years, hoping an elementary sense of responsibility and decency would lead the Quartet to hold the Palestinians to their never-fulfilled obligations to arrest terrorists, outlaw terrorist groups and end the incitement to hatred and murder in the PA-controlled media, mosques, schools and youth camps that feed terrorism. Instead, as in its latest statement, it fixates on Jews seeking to build homes in Judea, Samaria and eastern Jerusalem and finds this a threat to peace."

The Quartet subverted President George W. Bush's June 2002 vision of a new Palestinian leadership, untainted by terrorism and corruption, replacing the old PA leadership and creating a new, transparent, democratic and civil Palestinian society. The Bush plan had its own faults, but it at least recognized what needed to be done on the Palestinian side. In contrast, the 2003 Roadmap peace plan called for swift Israeli concessions ahead of any Palestinian reforms. This was a formula for releasing the PA from all need for compliance on terrorism and incitement and indeed there has been no progress since that date.

In recent days, PA-controlled TV has approvingly interviewed a Palestinian mother proud of the fact that her son became a terrorist bomb-maker who wanted to marry the seventy virgins promised for a Muslim martyr in paradise. It also broadcast a program stating that the Western Wall plaza, dedicated to Jewish prayer at the Western Wall, will one day be replaced by a new Arab neighborhood. Also, the official PA daily newspaper has again denied Jewish history by referring to the Jerusalem Temple as an alleged Temple.

It is clear that a PA that can do these things is not a peace partner but one will look in vain for a word of criticism or censure from the Quartet. The Quartet has been, and remains, a failure and disgrace. It should be disbanded.

Growing threat in Gaza

Egypt unrest means weapons bonanza for Gaza 7/23/2011

Op-ed: Fall of Mubarak regime allowed terror groups to smuggle in huge quantities of arms Seven months passed since the outbreak of Arab world uprisings. The wave is not over yet and it is still difficult to estimate its implications and how it will affect, in the long run, Israel's strategic, political and security situation. However, at this time already we can see several developments that have a direct bearing on the security-military balance between Israel and elements that threaten it in neighboring theaters.

The main, immediate beneficiaries of what is known as the Arab spring are Hamas and Islamic Jihad in the Gaza Strip. The riots in Egypt and the removal of Mubarak and his associates from power prompted two developments: First, the Muslim Brotherhood is no longer an underground movement and has become an important, influential political element. The groups' influence prompted Egypt's government to completely halt construction of the underground metal obstacle built with American assistance in a bid to block smuggling tunnels. The Egyptian regime is making no effort to curb new tunnels and has virtually suspended its battle against smuggling from Rafah to the Strip.

Simultaneously, Egyptian security forces preoccupied with domestic developments completely lost their hold on the Sinai Peninsula. Some 300,000 Bedouins belonging to four or five large tribes are now the Sinai's true rulers. These tribes' main income is based on smuggling in general, and on smuggling to Gaza in particular, and they quickly exploited the security vacuum in the peninsula in the wake of the revolution.

As result of these developments, arms shipments to the Strip have been surging in recent months: Everything that has been sent by the Iranians and their emissaries in recent years and was hidden by the Bedouins - who waited for an opportunity to pass it over to Hamas under Egypt's nose - has flowed freely into Gaza in the past five months. Meanwhile, new shipments arrived and were transferred to Hamas and Islamic Jihad without delay or a need to hide them.

10,000 rockets in Gaza

Consequently, terror groups in the Gaza Strip doubled their rocket arsenals. Today, according to highly credible sources, these organizations possess some 10,000 rockets of all types, a similar number to the Hezbollah arsenal in the Second Lebanon War.

While this is a disturbing figure, the overwhelming majority of rockets held by Hamas and its allies are short-range projectiles with relatively small warheads.

However, Gaza terror groups, and mostly Hamas and Islamic Jihad, hold thousands of mid-range Grad rockets, and a few heavy Fajr rockets that have a range of some 65 kilometers (roughly 40 miles) and can reach the outskirts of Bat Yam, just south of Tel Aviv.

This means that in the next major clash in the Strip, Hamas and Islamic Jihad will be able to disrupt life not only in south-central Israel more than before, but also disrupt the orderly operations of IDF and Air Force bases in the area.

Moreover, from the beginning of the year, the Bedouins transferred into Gaza three times (!) the quantity of industrial explosives compared to the quantity handed over throughout 2010. T he shipments included advanced explosives that would enable Gaza groups to produce more dangerous, destructive bombs than in the past. In addition to rockets and explosives, large quantities of anti-aircraft weapons and mostly shoulder-held missiles and light artillery were also smuggled into the Strip. Such arms were available in Gaza before but in small quantities. Now, the quantities are higher, creating a greater threat for Air Force choppers and jets.

Follow Ynetnews on

8/16/11

Dear members,

Below you will find the ZOA's latest position statement on cutting ties to the P A. The sooner the better in my opinion. After all, trying to talk peace with an obstinate, duplicitous, belligerent, and anti-Semitic entity should not be an option for the U.S. or Israel!

Subject: ZOA Supports Israel's F.M. Lieberman's Call For Israel To Cut Ties With PA Unless PA Ends Incitement, Arrests Terrorists, Ends Hamas Alliance

PA Tries to Prosecute IDF, Plans Violence

ZOA Supports Israel's F.M. Lieberman's Call for Israel to Cut Ties with PA Unless PA Ends Incitement, Arrests Terrorists, Ends Hamas Alliance

The Zionist Organization of America (ZOA) has declared support and understanding for Israeli Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman's call for Israel to sever ties with the Mahmoud Abbas Palestinian Authority (PA), saying that unless and until the PA fulfills its signed obligations under the Oslo agreements to arrest terrorists, outlaw terrorist groups and end the incitement to hatred and murder within the PA-controlled, media, mosques, schools and youth camps, such action is necessary. In light of the recent Fatah-controlled PA unity government agreement with Hamas, a terrorist organization that calls its Charter for the destruction of Israel and the murder of Jews, PA rescission of this agreement is also a prerequisite for maintaining ties with the PA.

Mr. Lieberman told reporters this week that he would ask the forum of eight a subgroup of ministers within the Cabinet to end Israel's relations with the PA, following the PA's attempt to prosecute IDF officers at the International Criminal Court at The Hague. He said, No Finance Ministry officials, not the Water Authority and no Foreign Ministry officials [will maintain ties] You cannot have security coordination [with Israel] while you are also trying IDF soldiers at The Hague. Mr. Lieberman also said that PA officials, despite claims of intending merely non-violent action, are instead preparing to flood checkpoints with tens of thousands of PA Arabs who might then force their way past IDF soldiers and into Israel's major cities. The Palestinian Authority is getting ready for bloodshed on a scale we haven't seen. The more they speak about non-violent action, the more they are preparing for bloodshed.

Rockets continue to fall on southern Israel

Rockets continue to rain down on southern Israel as the IDF remains steadfast in its policy of responding to each rocket attack. IDF Chief of Staff Benny Gantz told reporters that Hamas is allowing other terrorist organizations that operate in the Gaza strip to fire rockets into Israel. According to Gantz, Hamas is testing Israel to see how they will respond to each attack, and are turning a blind eye to the individuals responsible for firing the rockets.

The IDF's policy is to retaliate for each attack, given that the response is limited in scope. The IDF does not want to escalate the situation to the point where it is dragged into a full confrontation with Hamas and prefers to minimize its response so long as the rockets that land in Israel do not cause severe damage. Israeli forces continue to be on high alert, while the defense establishment is anticipating an increase of violence in the lead up to the UN General Assembly vote for a Palestinian state this September.

Author: Amichai Farkas | July 18, 2011
Posted in: Hamas, IDF, Rocket attacks, Terrorism

Turkey discovers weapons in Iranian cargo plane

An Iranian cargo plane suspected of containing nuclear material was ordered by the U.N. to land in a Turkish military airfield on its way to Syria. The plane was found to contain rocket launchers, mortars, rifles, and other explosive materials.

This, and similar recent incidents, proves again that Iran is a chief sponsor of terrorism. The extent to which Iran is successful at arming terrorist groups and regimes such as Syria is still difficult to assess, but it is certain that Iran aims to be the leading power in the rapidly changing Middle East.

For Iran to be stopped, the West needs to enforce crippling sanctions against them, and free countries everywhere not just Israel must convince the Iranian regime that they're willing to use military force to ensure Iran's compliance. Otherwise, our inaction will help usher in a nuclear Iran and that would be a disaster not just for Israel, but for the entire world.

Author: Amichai Farkas | March 22, 2011
Posted in: Iran, Nuclear weapons, Syria

IDF intercepts Gaza-bound ship

A French ship named Dignity carrying 17 anti-Israel activists the only ship in the so-called Freedom Flotilla to set sail for Gaza was intercepted peacefully by the Israeli Navy. According to the ship's captain, when he first departed from Greece passengers claimed they were headed to Alexandria, Egypt. Only after leaving the port did they inform him of their intention to sail towards Gaza.

Israeli marines boarded the French vessel and transferred the passengers to an Israeli ship where they received food and water and were visited by a doctor to determine their physical conditions. The passengers were then taken to Israel's Ashdod port and were given the option to either leave Israel immediately and return to their home countries, or wait at a detention center for a judge to meet with them.

Author: Amichai Farkas | July 19, 2011

Dear ZOA members,

The following insightful OpEd is a must read because of its bold declaration that there can never be a Palestinian state in Judea and Samaria; that declaration coming from ZOA's national vice chairman, Steven Goldberg. It is also worth noting that his words are consistent with my letter to the editor, entitled "Deja vu", which appeared in the Oct. 14, 2010 print edition of Washington Jewish Week.

Marc Caroff

Israel's epic chess game

By STEVEN M. GOLDBERG

07/24/2011 22:44

The Palestinians are about to make a fatal error. Israel must not hesitate to declare "checkmate."

Israel is engaged in a war for survival that started even before its declaration of independence and continues to this very day. Its enemies have prosecuted this war militarily, economically, politically, diplomatically, legally and psychologically. Because of the length and complexity of this struggle, an appropriate metaphor is a game of chess one in which the stakes for Israel are life and death.

Winning a game of chess is no simple matter. It requires strategy, patience, steady nerves, the proper balance between aggression and caution, and the ruthlessness to checkmate one's opponent when the opportunity presents itself. Impulsiveness and emotionalism usually lead to defeat. When a grandmaster makes a mistake, he must not panic; instead, he must extract himself from danger with care and de termination.

Israel's leaders have not played like grandmasters.

Instead, they have mixed brilliant moves with blunders.

Among the former, the preemptive strike on Egypt of June 5, 1967, that led to Israel's victory in the Six Day War and Menachem Begin's decision to destroy Iraq's nuclear reactor in Osirak in June 1981 stand out.

Both moves required boldness and careful preparation, and both were highly successful.

Unfortunately Israel has subsequently made serious strategic errors. It allowed Egypt to strike the first blow in October 1973, and almost lost the Yom Kippur War.

The Oslo Accords of 1993 allowed Yasser Arafat and the PLO to return from exile, and have resulted in the murder or maiming of thousands of Israelis. Israel's precipitous withdrawal from southern Lebanon in 2000 and its forcible eviction of Jews from Gaza in 2005 compounded the error of Oslo.

THE CAUSE of these errors was emotional exhaustion, best summed up by former prime minister Ehud Olmert's tragic admission that we are tired of fighting.

We are tired of being courageous. We are tired of winning.

We are tired of defeating our enemies. Such a mentality is frankly catastrophic.

Fortunately for Israel, its enemies have made even worse mistakes. Most important have been their serial refusals to accept overly generous offers by prime ministers Ehud Barak and Olmert to sacrifice strategically vital territory in Judea and Samaria for a Palestinian state. More recently, the Palestinians have also shortsightedly insisted on a complete settlement freeze as a condition for negotiating with Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu, despite his misguided eagerness to make a bargain similar to those offered by his predecessors.

The Palestinians are about to make their worst blunder yet one that is potentially fatal to their cause.

Specifically, the Palestinian Authority, knowing that its leadership status is failing and that the clock is about to run out, has announced its intention to seek recognition as a state from the United Nations. This desperate gambit flatly abrogates both the Oslo Accords and UN Resolution 242, providing Israel with the legal justification to cancel both agreements and simply annex portions of Judea and Samaria.

TO WIN this chess game, Israel must correct the life-threatening mistake it made by agreeing to a Palestinian state. The land west of the Jordan River can hold a Jewish state or another Arab state; it can't hold both.

Israel's leaders, including Yitzhak Rabin, recognized this truth before weakening in the face of international pressure. It's time to declare categorically that there will never be a Palestinian state in Judea and Samaria.

The Arabs who live there may continue to be residents of Israel with full civil and religious rights and local autonomy, but any national or political rights must be exercised in affiliation with Jordan the already existing Palestinian state.

Taking advantage of the Palestinian blunder by terminating all discussions of Palestinian statehood won't be easy. There will be powerful international pressure against Israel for making such a bold move. Many will implore Israel to just surrender, or to make a reckless, needless sacrifice that will lead to its defeat.

But Israel can't afford to be checkmated. Now it must play like a grandmaster.

The writer is the national vice chairman of the Zionist Organization of America, and sits on the Executive Board of the World Likud. He is a graduate of Harvard University and New York University Law School, and a tournament chess player.

THE LATEST Abbas Adviser: "Blessings to the souls of our Shahids (Martyrs), whom we will not forget - not for the sake of a grant, not for the sake of a deal..." August 1, 2011 The Zionist Organization of America (ZOA) has renewed its call for President Barack Obama to terminate U.S. funding of Mahmoud Abbas Palestinian Authority (PA) which recently signed a unity government agreement with the kill the Jews Hamas terrorist organization following statements from Abbas adviser, Sabri Saidam, defending the long-standing PA practice of honoring shahids martyrs [martyrs, i.e., terrorists who were killed in the course of murdering, or attempting to murder, Jews]. Saidam repudiated the idea that the PA should cease doing so because of the displeasure of the PAs international donors.

Al-Hayat Al-Jadida, Saidam wrote, We have named streets after leaders not of our people, and have marked the birthdays of other heroes who are not from our society, as a sign of honor... More Proof - U.S. Aid To Abbas' PA Is Funding Terrorists July 29, 2011 The Zionist Organization of America (ZOA) has renewed its long-standing call for an end to U.S. taxpayer-funded aid to Mahmoud Abbas Palestinian Authority (PA) following detailed revelations U.S. funds are reaching the hands of blood-soaked Jew-killing terrorists. A report, utilizing among other sources Palestinian statutes and official PA media reports, presented to the U.S. Congress by Palestinian Media Watch, demonstrates that Abbas PA pays monthly salaries to 5,500 jailed Palestinians in Israeli prisons, including terrorists and that it funds these salaries from its general budget, a good deal of which is provided by U.S. financial aid.

Shocker: Overwhelming 73% of Palestinians Support Islamic Teaching to Murder Jews July 18, 2011

Home

This day marks the 40th anniversary of the release of the Pentagon Papers in the New York Times, and today, the Times ran an op-ed by NWC Executive Director Stephen M. Kohn that tells the story of the first-ever whistleblowers in the United States.

In 1777, a group of American sailors and marines blew the whistle on the first Commodore of the US Navy, accusing him of misconduct that included the torture of British soldiers. The Continental Congress did not throw the whistleblowers in solitary confinement, prosecute them, or execute them. Even in a time of war, the government did not use the "state secrets" privilege to hide these abuses. Instead, they passed a law that all whistleblowers should be protected, released all the records related to the whistleblowers' concerns, and used funds from Congress' meager treasury to protect the whistleblowers from retaliation.

TAKE ACTION! Stop Prosecuting National Security Whistleblowers

As a country we have moved so far away from what the Founding Fathers recognized at the foundation of democracy - freedom of speech.

The federal government should immediately drop the criminal investigations and prosecutions of national security whistleblowers, and President Obama should pardon NSA whistleblower Thomas Drake.

On July 30, 1778, the Continental Congress enacted America's first whistleblower protection law. We ask that Congress declare July 30th National Whistleblower D ay, honoring whistleblowers for their contributions throughout history.

Please send a letter to Congress demanding that they honor what the Founding Fathers did on July 30, 1778, in the midst of the American Revolution. Then pass this alert on to your friends and family.

National Whistleblowers Center U.S. Whistleblower Laws Take Action Submit Confidential Report

1997-2008 National Whistleblowers Center & NWLDEF P.O. Box 3768, Washington, DC 20027 CFC 10222

ENACT A NATIONAL WHISTLEBLOWER PROTECTION LAW!

WHEREAS, recent financial scandals and multi-billion dollar bail out legislation highlight the urgent need to protect those honest Americans who report wrongdoing in the government and in the private sector;

WHEREAS, courageous whistleblowers are responsible for recovering billions of dollars stolen by government contractors engaged in fraud;

WHEREAS, whistleblowers have played a critical role in protecting the public by exposing health and safety violations and holding governments and corporations accountable;

WHEREAS, retaliation against whistleblowers targets the very people who we need to tell the truth about fraud and misconduct;

WHEREAS, Congress has not yet passed into law a national whistleblower protection act covering all Americans;

BE IT RESOLVED: That Congress enact into law a National Whistleblower Protection Act which protects all Americans who lawfully disclose waste and fraud in government spending, violations of law or threats to the public health and safety. The law must provide all whistleblowers with the right to federal court proceedings, a trial by jury and reasonable damages. It must also reward employees who risk their careers to serve the public interest.

June 12, 2011

The Whistle-Blowers of 1777

By STEPHEN M. KOHN- Washington

FORTY years ago today, The New York Times began publishing the Pentagon Papers, a seminal moment not only for freedom of the press but also for the role of whistle-blowers like Daniel Ellsberg, who leaked the papers to expose the mishandling of the war in Vietnam in defending our democracy.

Today, the Obama administration is aggressively pursuing leakers. Bradley E. Manning, an Army private, has been imprisoned since May 2010 on suspicion of having passed classified data to the antisecrecy group WikiLeaks. Thomas A. Drake, a former official at the National Security Agency, pleaded guilty Friday to a misdemeanor of misusing the agency's computer system by providing information to a newspaper reporter.

The tension between protecting true national security secrets and ensuring the public's right to know about abuses of authority is not new. Indeed, the nation's founders faced this very issue.

In the winter of 1777, months after the signing of the Declaration of Independence, the American warship Warren was anchored outside of Providence, R.I. On board, 10 revolutionary sailors and marines met in secret not to plot against the king's armies, but to discuss their concerns about the commander of the Continental

Navy, Commodore Esek Hopkins. They knew the risks: Hopkins came from a powerful family; his brother was a former governor of Rhode Island and a signer of the declaration.

Hopkins had participated in the torture of captured British sailors; he treated prisoners in the most inhuman and barbarous manner, his subordinates wrote in a petition.

One whistle-blower, a Marine captain named John Grannis, was selected to present the petition to the Continental Congress, which voted on March 26, 1777, to suspend Hopkins from his post.

The case did not end there. Hopkins, infuriated, immediately retaliated. He filed a criminal libel suit in Rhode Island against the whistle-blowers. Two of them who happened to be in Rhode Island Samuel Shaw, a midshipman, and Richard

Marven, a third lieutenant were jailed. In a petition read to Congress on July 23, 1778, they pleaded that they had been arrested for doing what they then believed and still believe was nothing but their duty.

Later that month, without any recorded dissent, Congress enacted America's first whistleblowerprotection law: That it is the duty of all persons in the service of the United States, as well as all other inhabitants thereof, to give the earliest information to Congress or any other proper authority of any misconduct, frauds or misdemeanors committed by any officers or persons in the service of these states, which may come to their knowledge.

Congress did not stop there. It wanted to ensure that the whistle-blowers would have excellent legal counsel to fight against the libel charges, and despite the financial hardships of the new republic, it authorized payment for the legal fees of Marven and Shaw

. Congress did not hide behind government secrecy edicts, even though the nation was at war.

Instead, it authorized the full release of all records related to the removal of Hopkins. No state secret privilege was invoked. The whistle-blowers did not need to use a Freedom of Information Act to obtain documents to vindicate themselves. There was no attempt to hide the fact that whistle-blowers had accused a Navy commander of mistreating prisoners.

Armed with Congress's support, the whistle-blowers put on a strong defense, and won their case in court. And true to its word, Congress on May 22, 1779, provided $1,418 to cover costs associated with the whistle-blowers defense. One Sam. Adams was directed to ensure that their Rhode Island lawyer, William Channing, was paid.

Nearly two centuries later, the Supreme Court justice William O. Douglas, praising the founders' commitment to freedom of speech, wrote: The dominant purpose of the First Amendment was to prohibit the widespread practice of government suppression of embarrassing information.

A 1989 law was supposed to protect federal employees who expose fraud and misconduct

from retaliation. But over the years, these protections have been completely undermined.
One loophole gives the government the absolute right to strip employees of their security clearances and fire them, without judicial review. Another bars employees of the National Security Agency and the Central Intelligence Agency from any coverage under the law. And Congress has barred national security whistle-blowers who are fired for exposing wrongdoing from obtaining protection in federal court.
It is no surprise that honest citizens who witness waste, fraud and abuse in national security programs but lack legal protections are silenced or forced to turn to unauthorized methods to expose malfeasance, incompetence or negligence.
Instead of ignoring and intimidating whistle-blowers, Congress and the executive branch would do well to follow the example of the Continental Congress, by supporting and shielding them.
Stephen M. Kohn is the executive director of the National Whistleblowers Center and the author of The Whistleblowers Handbook: A Step-by-Step Guide to Doing What's Right and Protecting Yourself.

[Update December 9, 2010] Gilbert states in the new report: Al Gore article
I am ashamed of what climate science has become today."

The science community is relying on an inadequate model to blame CO2 and innocent citizens for global warming in order to generate funding and to gain attention. If this is what 'science' has become today, I, as a scientist, am ashamed. "It is morally reprehensible and an offense against humanity and the Earth to interfere with the normal function of the planetary system to cause or enhance storms, hurricanes, tsunamis, monsoons, mud slides, draught, flooding, earth quakes or volcano eruptions." Sister Rosalie Bertell knew early in her life that she would become a nun.

She is a Grey Nun of the Sacred Heart, GNSH with a doctorate in biometry. "Planet Earth: The Latest Weapon of War - A Critical Study into the Military and the Environment" 1986...
<http://www.examiner.com/human-rights-in-national/un-scientists-turn-on-un-and-al-gore>

Leuren Moret: Fukushima HAARP nuclear attack by CIA, DOE, BP for London banks
Fukushima HAARP tectonic nuclear attack was done by an international racketeering war crimes network within the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), Department of Energy (DOE), and BP (British Petroleum) on behalf of City of London bankers. WEAPONS ELF exist for the FINANCIERS DoD mind controlling Corp LEADERS Macrocosm and CIA-developed Stuxnet virus, FRAMING Mossad!
<http://youtu.be/htsWup50i3E>

The Wrong Recipe for Peace
June 23, 2011

Dear Friend of Israel,
The fall is shaping up to be a crucial time for Israel. In September, Palestinian leadership plans to present a resolution for Palestinian statehood to the Unit ed Nations Security Council. If the Security Council approves the resolution, it would then go before the U.N. General Assembly for a vote.

Though passage of such a resolution is unlikely the U.S. holds veto power because of its permanent seat on the Security Council and has promised to exercise it if it did pass it could have grave consequences. It would allow the Palestinians to avoid negotiating with Israel, effectively killing the likelihood that they would compromise on key issues. It would confer legitimacy on the new Palestinian unity government, which now includes the terrorist group Hamas. In short, it would make the possibility of peace between Israel and the Palestinians even more remote than it already is.

What are the conditions that might make real peace possible? In his landmark speech to the U.S. Congress last month, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu cut to the heart of the matter. "You see, our conflict has never been about the establishment of a Palestinian state," he said. "It's always been about the existence of the Jewish state. This is what this conflict is about. [Palestinian Authority] President Abbas must do what I have done. I told you it wasn't easy for me. I stood before my people, and I said, 'I will accept a Palestinian state.' It's time for President Abbas to stand before his people and say, 'I will accept a Jewish state.' Those six words will change history."

The prime minister is exactly right. If the Palestinians truly want a state, let them take the path of compromise and honest negotiation. By going to the U.N. to validate their aspirations to nationhood, Palestinian leadership has shown that it has no respect for the rights, sovereignty, and security of Israel. As long as the Palestinians refuse to embrace these fundamental principles, any bid for Israel-Palestinian peace is doomed to failure.

Years ago, former Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir said something just as relevant today as it was then: "There will be peace in the Middle East only when the Arabs love their children more than they hate Israel." My friends, as we wait vigilantly through this summer to see what September will bring, let us pray for the day the former prime minister spoke of a day of true peace between Israel and her neighbors. And let us continue to work to ensure that the true story of Israel's ongoing struggle for peace and security is told to the world.

With prayers for shalom, peace,
Why Isn't There Peace in Israel?

Palestinian leadership has plans to go to the U.N. this September and unilaterally seek recognition of a Palestinian state, which will eliminate the need for them to negotiate a real peace with Israel. In fact, the Palestinians have had numerous opportunities to create an independent state, but have repeatedly rejected Israel's offers. Learn more about Israel's continuous efforts to make peace with her hostile neighbors.

International Community Discourages June Flotilla participating in the upcoming "Freedom Flotilla". UN Secretary General Ban Ki-moon sent letters to Governments of countries around the Mediterranean Sea, urging them to "discourage such flotillas, which carry the potential to escalate into violent conflict."

Canadian Foreign Minister John Baird stated that "unauthorized efforts to deliver aid are provocative and, ultimately, unhelpful to the people of Gaza." While recognizing "Israel's legitimate security concerns and its right to protect itself and its residents from attacks by Hamas," Foreign Minister Baird went further and demanded for the "immediate return of Israeli soldier Gilad Shalit."

Britain issued similar callings, advising "anyone wishing to send humanitarian assistance or other goods to Gaza to do so only through official crossings and established channels.

"

See Also:

Dear ZOA members,

The following letter to the editor, submitted by our chapter president, was published last week in the Washington Jewish Week (June 16th Edition). The letter speaks for itself:

SOUR NOTE

Amidst the nearly unanimous praise of Prime Minister Netanyahu for speaking truth to power, Doug Bloomfield struck a singularly sour note ("Paging Dale Carnegie", WJW, May 26). Even the Washington Post, not known for advancing pro-Israel views, opined that "Once again, President Obama undermines his own diplomacy" by endorsing one of the preconditions Palestinians have tried to set for talks: that peace negotiations be based on pre-1967 armistice lines, with swaps of land ("The blowup with Israel", Washington Post editorial, May 21).

Obama and Bloomfield are just plain wrong when they insinuate that such preconditions correspond to longstanding U.S. policy.

The truth is that, since 1967, the cornerstone of all Arab-Israeli diplomacy has been U.N. Security Council Resolution 242. That resolution did not suggest, either explicitly or implicitly, that peace negotiations be based on pre-1967 lines. It did not call for "land swaps", whatever Obama might have intended by using such a territorially ambiguous phrase. It does make clear that Israel must have secure, recognized, and defensible borders which means, by implication, that any negotiation of Israel's final borders should not use the pre-1967 armistice lines even as a reference point.

There can be little doubt that President Obama continues to be extremely ill-advised and ill-informed on matters relating to Israel. By correcting Obama's distortions and misperceptions, Netanyahu upheld the longstanding U.S.-Israel strategic partnership while simultaneously serving the cause of peace.

I believe all Americans and Israelis owe the prime minister of Israel a great debt of gratitude for speaking the truth.

Marc Caroff

President, Louis D. Brandeis Chapter

Zionist Organization of America

Attn: NEWS EDITOR

Fmr. U.N. Ambassador Bolton: Obama is the Most Anti-Israel President in the History of the State, Without Any Question

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, American Enterprise Institute Fellow and possible Republican presidential aspirant, John Bolton, has said during a visit to Israel that Barack Obama is the most anti-Israel president in the history of the State, without any question. In an interview with the Jerusalem Post,

Mr. Bolton emphasized that the tensions that have beset the U.S./Israel relationship are not the result of misunderstanding, saying, If you think that this is just a misunderstanding of where the green crayon went in 1949, then think again. Mr. Bolton said that President Obama bought in to what he said was the European line, namely, that if you make progress between Israel and the Palestinians sweetness and light will break out in the region, and every other problem from Iran to terrorism will be easier to solve. I think that is like looking through the wrong end of the telescope.

Mr. Bolton also criticized President Obama's policy towards Iran, saying that he believed the Obama administrations real Plan B for the Iranian nuclear weapons program is that it can be contained and deterred, much as we contained and deterred the Soviet Union in the Cold War. I think that is fundamentally wrong. Mr. Bolton stated that in his view, the only way to stop Iran from getting nuclear weapons was through military action and that Diplomacy and sanctions are not going to work. The Obama administration certainly isn't going to use force against the Iranian program, and Israel is obviously very reluctant to do it as well. If Israel is not prepared to strike, then get ready for an Iran with nuclear weapons, and you can draw your own conclusions. If you think Iran's behavior is bad now, imagine what it will be if it gets nuclear capability. I think we are all sleepwalking past this. If I had been in charge of the Israeli government, I would have attacked in 2008 for several reasons. First, it was three years ago, so you are much more likely to have eliminated the key elements of Iran's nuclear weapons program [Secondly] in 2008 you had a president sympathetic to Israel so you calculate the next time that is going to occur.

Mr. Bolton also argued that the Palestinian Authority's bid for recognition of Palestinian statehood at the U.N. should not as it is in Israel and elsewhere be getting more attention and energy than the Iranian nuclear threat. Israel's proper response to the move, he said, is not to pay any attention to it, and to care no more about it than the grass you tread beneath your feet if you make the General Assembly into something more than what it is, than you are giving it authority and legitimacy it doesn't have. Mr. Bolton said that the only way to get this move stopped in the UN was for the U.S. Congress to pass legislation saying that if the move did go through, Washington would cut off funding to the international body, as the U.S. successfully threatened in 1989 when the UN was moving towards accepting the PLO as a full U.N. member (Herb Keinon, Bolton: Obama worst president for Israel ever, Jerusalem Post, July 13, 2011).

[Note: The full text of Mr. Bolton's interview will appear in the Friday edition of the Jerusalem Post].

ZOA National President Morton A. Klein said, Mr. Bolton's assessment of President Obama and his policy towards Israel is one with which we agree and which, indeed, we have long suspected to be true. In fact, immediately following President Obama's June 2009 Cairo speech, we predicted in a press release that President Obama may become most hostile president to Israel ever. We also published an opinion piece in the Jerusalem Post in January 2009 and other publications regarding Hillary Clinton's troubling transformation on Israel, detailing several of the swings towards pro-Palestinian positions and ignoring of Palestinian incitement to hatred and murder under President Obama. Clearly, there is a range of issues relating to Israel in which President Obama's policy is of deep concern to the pro-Israel community.

Mireille Torjman Letter for Mr. Drake.

The above letter is to inform you that Thomas Drake is a hero under God, and is saving civilians lives and souls. I had brought a case to the US Supreme Court with Russell Tice as my savior and these employees are saving humanity above all.

Mr. Drake did not disclose more than Mr. Tice and others regarding mind control hidden in spying and behind a SSP. It is only protecting criminality and terrorism within our own shadow. I have already disclosed the strategy and agenda of this weapon of mass destruction as others have to infiltrate against Israel ultimately and provided it to other Countries Intelligence as well as our own.

I have exposed everything about this weapon including science under siege to the National Science Academy and Cass Sunstein among many Federal Authorities with strategy plans using spying and torture psyops and cognitive infiltrations unwittingly.

I can serve as an expert witness as I trained in the CIA Neurolinguistic Programming and certified in Hypnosis with the purchase of the software from NASA physicist.

Mr. Drake did nothing to disclose or preempt security. He is doing the contrary before it is too late. I am a victim and offered testimony to Congress. My allegations were much worse than that of Mr. Drake and very threatening to NSAs Corruption on We the People I never had the opportunity to a trial.

Mr. Tice did not disclose or know how far the abuse goes on this mind control we upon since Alien and USS Liberty Hallucinations and Cryptocrocys Plans to Psychocivilize you, to Macrocosm Process of brainwash.

Please know what is at stake here on ALL humanity in Peril and know that he needs to be THANKED publicly as whistleblowers once were; regarded Under God with no mind manipulations and NSA transmissions. Millions are as our Senate recently.

____State of Maryland, ____County of Montgomery____

The foregoing instrument was acknowledged before me on _____by Mireille Torjman appeared before me and presented Drivers License _____Notary Public.

Decrypting the Shadow behind Hamid Karzai

Wednesday, 22. September 2010 The Long Intended Chaos

<http://pimpinturtle.com/2009/08/21/the-strange-case-of-joseph-moshe.aspx>

Thursday, June 9, 2011

Steve Quayle : The E. Coli Breakout in Germany is a biowarfare agent

Steve Quayle : " This is definitely a biowarfare agent it has multi point release it has multi drugs resistanceThis is a specific biowarfare agent that has been designed to do...one thing well, and that's kill people," " this is one of the most dire presentations of bio warfare and even with this what they got in store is even more lethal" Spain agriculture is decimated because Spain resisted the introduction of GMO crops into its agricultural system , Germany is targeted by the E. Coli because it has the best food safety and control in the world , the food is the ultimate weapon says Steve Quayle...Steve Quayle is the author of five books. For over thirty years, he has been investigating ancient civilizations, giants, UFOs and biological warfare as they relate to the future of mankind. Stephen discusses the coming worst-case scenarios approaching this world and how they interrelate to each other. Earthquakes, volcanoes, nuclear and biological terrorism, coupled with the planned financial meltdown of the U.S. dollar will thrust us into unimagined tribulations. Stephen Quayle is on record as stating that we have moved from the realm of natural threats into the arena of supernaturally guided events of the unseen hand of evil orchestrating world events of unfathomable proportions. Appearing for the full 4 hours, author and researcher Steve Quayle discussed the precarious world economic situation, escalating tensions, and covert warfare, as well as how supernatural events & prophecies from the Bible are being played out. According to one of his sources, we're seeing "the systematic execution and implementation of seismic warfare" that is technology that can be used to generate earthquakes, accelerate volcanic eruptions, and manipulate the weather. "All the volcanoes seem to be becoming active at once," he commented. 14 Labels:gerald celente trends research journal Steve Quayle

Why Germany he asks in the video?

Well, for a start they are making biological warfare on Germany because they are turning their back on Nuclear energy and not participating in bombing Libya. Those are just two more suggestions to add to the E. coli sabotage. Bankrupt these nations one by one and then they get IMF loan and succumb to slavery. June 11, 2011 3:32 AM

<http://geraldcelentechannel.blogspot.com/2011/06/roger-tolces-electronic-harassment.html>

According to news reports, the Obama administration is once again reevaluating how to deal with Afghanistans Hamid Karzai out of fear that it may now be holding him to unrealistic standards of U.S. law enforcement. This comes after a summer of news that Karzai continues to find new ways of resisting Washingtons efforts to rein in rampant corruption in his government. Now we hear from legendary Washington Post reporter Bob Woodward that the U.S. has intelligence showing Hamid Karzai is under medication for manic depression and that Obamas national security team doubts that his strategy in Afghanistan (whatever that may be at the moment) can work. The tug of war between Kabul and Washington has become so desperate, former CIA Near East, South Asia Chief Dr. Charles Cogan recently opined that the situation was fast approaching a Diem Moment. Cogan even suggested that while Diems removal had been horribly botched, a removal of Mr. Karzai might turn out to be more straightforward. Given the similarities to Americas quagmire in Vietnam, invoking Diem raises more than a few dark memories. Yet despite vast differences in the two wars another even more deeply unsettling similarity is emerging. Hamid Karzai is in a political fight for his life like South Vietnams Ngo Dinh Diem. But (strange as it might seem) his contradictory behavior and the chaos and corruption surrounding it may be no accident. In fact it could be exactly the consequence that his main neoconservative backer, former RAND director, U.S. Ambassador and Special Presidential Envoy to Afghanistan Zalmay Khalilzad, had long intended.... By forcing Karzai into office, Khalilzad snatched defeat out of the jaws of victory because the Taliban were beaten at that point.

To both Ruttig and Rohrabacher, Khalilzads ultimate crime like the U.S. manipulation of the Ngo Dinh Diem regime in Vietnam was that his corruption of the Karzai regime had created so much internal chaos that no amount of outside effort could undo it. Yet the idea that chaos, as a form of extreme social engineering, may have actually been the plan cannot be ignored.

If anyone embodies the Cold War neoconservative philosophy that came to dominate American foreign and military policy from Jimmy Carter to George W. Bush, it is Zalmay Khalilzad. Khalilzad first came to the United States as a high school exchange student.

He received his bachelors and masters degrees from American University in Beirut and his doctorate degree from the University of Chicago where he met and studied along with Paul Wolfowitz under the RAND nuclear warfare theorist, former Trotskyite and father of neoconservatism, Albert J. Wohlstetter. It was Wohlstetters early 1970s series of articles in the Wall Street Journal and Strategic Review that prompted the politicized CIA analysis known as the Team B experiment. It was the Team Bs adherents both inside and outside the Carter administration who set the stage for undermining détente and luring the Soviets into the Afghan trap and holding them there while Afghanistan disintegrated. And it was the same Team B brain-trust of Wohlstetter acolytes including Khalilzad that went on to provide the philosophical template for the politicized intelligence process that led to the strategic military disasters of Iraq and Afghanistan.

In her 1972 book about Vietnam, Fire in the Lake, author Frances FitzGerald wrote of the perverse illogic of another of Wohlstetters onetime RAND protégés, Herman Kahn.

Just before his departure for a two-week tour of Vietnam in 1967, the defense analyst, Herman Kahn, listened to an American businessman give a detailed account of the economic situation in South Vietnam. At the end of the talk an argument for reducing the war Kahn said, I see what you mean. We have corrupted the cities. Now, perhaps we can corrupt the countryside as well. It was not a joke. Kahn was thinking in terms of a counterinsurgency program: the United States would win the war by making all Vietnamese economically dependent upon it. In 1967 his program was already becoming a reality, for the corruption reached even to the lowest levels of Vietnamese society.

In a country as poor as Afghanistan after three decades of war it took little time and less effort to corrupt every level of Afghan society, but in Afghanistan, official corruption, both American and Afghan was built in. Overseen by Khalilzad, a bizarre marriage of Americas pro-business, neoconservative Washington and Afghanistans pro-business and often pro-Taliban right wing took root to direct and guide Afghanistans reconstruction.

A 2007 report by Canadian journalist Arthur Kent desc...

See #7 and #40-Complaint footnotes- REFERENCES for some of the highest rates of illness and mistakes, red tape in this Country.
Un-Covered video documentary CONGRESS as MARIONETTES NOT READING info TO INVADE IRAQ with sleep-MIND CONTROLLED WEAPONS USED on CONGRESS. And a Public used as PAWNS in Chess game for CRIMES.

WE CAN'T STOP SHADOW GOV'T UNTIL WE BELIEVE DEPLOYED MIND CONTROL Psyops as soldiers DRONES experiments on U.S. Soil EVOLVED 50+ Years. OUT-FOXED MIND CONTROL LED (video).

2008 a mad world emerging to cover their tracks, now with tangible, excuses, false memory, TRANSMISSIONS DAILY/nightly unconsciously with your money, since 1910 secret meeting on Jeckyl Island-Fed Reserve check creation! ALL HIDING BEHIND SSP-State Secret Privilege.

Impede, Misguide, Frame, Stage, and discredit!

FOOTNOTES and REFERENCES

DEATHS, CANCER, THREATS/BLACKMAIL, QUASHED MEDIA DOCUMENTARY

DR. WALTER BOWART, False Memory Syndrome Foundation radio interviews (CD Canada)

JIM KEITH banned books MASS CONTROL-ENGINEERING HUMAN CONSCIOUSNESS, Strange death and Body Electric (Dumbed down)

AARON RUSSO of Rockefeller and Discredited

ALEX CONSTANTINE and the CIA and MEDIA, Operation Mockingbird and Major Universities The New Dark Ages Conspiracies 1980-1995

Carol White and Too Secret Too Long EIR, Volume 14, No 23.

DR. NICK BEGICH, Alaskan Politics and family targeted- TERRORIST HUNTER, anonymously

KAY GRIGGS, Military wife and current MIND CONTROL whistleblower (Secret Societies)

DR. BILL NELSON, Tom Beardon Govt Physicists and the INVISIBLE GOV/WAR

Naval Officer L. Ron Hubbard (1964) Wikipedia Mockingbird Operation Mind Control

DR. ROBERT DUNCAN, Partial knowledge-JAY KIMBALL torture in MS DR. DOUG ROKKE,

DR IGOR LEDOCHOWSKI-Street Hypnosis and NLP Richard Bantler and John Grinder for mer CIA

Sharon Weinberger, Targeting 'Imaginary Weapons' MIND GAMES Pentagon investigative reporter.

Julianne McKinney, Military Intelligence and WHISTLEBLOWER

Senator Eric Adams, NY delayed then prevented from Senate hearing for victims in 2009 with home fire

KATHLEEN SULLIVAN (Shackled) Cathy O'Brien and Daughter Kelly

BRICE TAYLOR, Thanks for the MEMORIES

Lynn Surgella Letter from President of Psychotronics Association and former Government Scientist
 John Glenn, Former NASA astronaut, Military, and Senator letter 1997
 Michael Scheuer, CIA 117 slides on 911 and most still don't have clearance of these weapons on civilians,
 Ted Gunderson, Bob Levin, Former agent, and "OUTFOXED" documentary, Dixie Chicks INDUCED BUZZ changing minds and emotion
 Sibel Edmonds, See her story, public articles and court pleadings
 John Marks, Mark Phillips, Everyone attempting the truth with MASS CHAOS creations from the top
 Jesse Ventura-Former Seal, Covert CIA on US Soil against Mission, and changed website since. The former CIA site linking it to Hollywood and Scientology involvements revamped when I wrote about it
 Thomas Tamm, DOJ and 9 attorney terminations
 Tom Beardon, Larry Klayman, Leuren Moret, CHARLES VIAR CIA Pandora's Box-American hysterias
 Duncan O'Finioan, CD interviews Abducted Manchurian assassin for former President Bush in 1980's
 Police Barry Cooper, TX-doesn't know why he did it Corrupt framing victims on the job
 CIA Ray Mc Govern Whistleblower Partial 911
 John Perkins book on his story as one of the Federal Elite murderer.
 OPEC Pastor LINDSEY WILLIAMS-Energy Non Crisis S/Be $1.50 a gal. World Bank Profit to collapse 1910 secret meeting on Jeckyl Island Fed Reserve! NOW whitewashing History with more overt crimes
 Naomi Wolf, (Yale) Give me liberty, and FREEDOM to FASCISM 10 steps NSA employees all claim being hypnotized on the job (Mind Control) SAME as other whistleblower claims
 Jim Guest Letter on Mind Control to Senate, Senator Patrick Leahy (A divided and less civil Country)
 Ron Paul Wake Up Americans, Kevin Trudeau FDA lawsuits-Britney Spears, Dixie Chicks sabotaged audiences
 Amy Goodman Stop the Madness, APA & AMA, Nat'l whistleblowers center.org
 Judicial Watch, Freedom Watch, Institute for Accuracy, Citizens for legitimate gov.
 George Bush-Yale Member SKULL and BONES and New World Order,
 "Proof of Conspiracy-A new American View" Matrix III, Val Valerian, ed., 1992
 Constantine, Bowart: Acid Dreams-Human Rights Law Journal, "Freedom of the Mind" Vol. 3, No. 1-4
 Ross MD; Dr Colin "The CIA, Military Mind Control Building the Manchurian Candidate." April 18, 1996
 Bowart, Walter, "Leading Psychiatrist Blows Whistle on Profession: Proves 50 + years of Mind Control" MindNet Journal, Vol. 1, No. 94 and "Were we Controlled?" JFK Adventures Unlimited Press, IL, 1997
 December January 1993 "Mind Control Techniques and Tactics"
 Market inflations and real estate pricing and gouging was all induced from the mind on each individual and as a mass, and part of conspiracy agenda. Corrupting American Minds. Manipulating the economy.

Attorneys encouraged to contact Plaintiff for assistance or representation. Mobile 954.529.8684-thewhiteroseII@yahoo.com

Copyright 2010 NSA Transmissions. All rights reserved.

Web Hosting by Yahoo! An expert witness, Certified Hypnotist trained in CIA Neuro Linguistic Programming techniques with NASA software and Military Patents.

NSA Transmissions-Mind Control, Death Rays for Planes, Cancer, Synthetic ills- Toppings ELF & Seismic Waves + Behind Scenes Focused on Wrong Weapon Mass Destruction TERRORISTS WITHIN, 1973 2nd Level CIA, Cryptocracy's Plan to Psycho-civilize You, Emulating Scriptures! ---How & Why 911, Economy. ALL from your minds! MA CROCOSM. Millions including America's Corp Leaders & Officials! "The Process." Israel Framed-engineered to go down. Have you figured it out yet!

- â ¢ NSA Tice-Hero under God
- â ¢ US Supreme Court Case
- â ¢ Israel-CIA Agenda- Press Releases
- â ¢ Synthetic Telepathy-ills-TAXES
- â ¢ Cancer 911 CIA
- â ¢ Resources to Expose
- â ¢ Interviews-Exhibits-Documents
- â ¢ Lawsuit-Synthetic ills in America

"SCIENCE and HUMANITY UNDER SIEGE" JUDICIAL SYSTEM, AND SCHOOL BOOKS WITH FALSE MEDICINE and FALSE TESTS RESULTS and Engineered lives all from the mind! Voting, www. and all tests can and are tampered with electronic interference, power outages.

Bowart, Walter, â Leading Psychiatrist Blows Whistle on Profession: Proves 50 + years of Mind Control; dies 2008 son silenced. TAXES COLLECTED ON YOUR DRUGS framing Pharmaceutics infiltrations over time TACTICS.

Moreover, (framed) APA and AMA falling VICTIMS from DOD and blamed for 50 yrs. See #7 your HEALTH. Out of body, dizziness, conflicting emotion, side effects of mind control not medicines, Skewed Science and Medicine, etc

Remote Controlled beings, unwittingly! Before 1978! See full reports with Dr Becker, Begich, FREY, CIA John MARKS with similar claims as mine, going back to Hitler & German soldiers on MKUltra (name), and all others dead or quashed and disinformation fanned. AMERICAN FACTS WORSE THAN 911 YET! God Bless!

(Synthetic illnesses created) DELAYS-Engineered lives! 2 different thoughts transmitted at the same time to create fights, chaos, war or within yourself to CONFUSE! UNREALIZED!
Wake up America!

THE FACTS and Lawsuit THEY DON'T WANT YOU TO KNOW! First opposite news for decades then with every tangible excuse to cover up and WHITEWASH Re-writing History! EXCUSES for ALL! Pre-empted since 2008 and Mockingbird pawns to produce more PR OPAGANDA unwittingly Cognitive infiltration and mis-communication to PRODUCE DIS-information for years. OUT-FOXED documentary mind controlled as MEDIA OPERATION Mockingbird unwittingly until 2009. Censored out at Blockbuster last year....

For did you KNOW:

Psychiatry skewed with mind control CointelPro born in the 50s and DOD keeping their enemies close (Democracy Now interview with Amy Goodman. Below is his SYNOPSIS before his death of HORRORS among all AMERICANS TODAY!

INVENTING and framing the entire profession with synthetic ills, paranoia, schizophrenia, trances for split personalities, cognitive impairments all born around the 70s, into our childrens books/journals, with worse SCIENCE under SIEGE. The creation of suspended senses, NLP, and terrorism Manchurians, sociopaths, stalkers, etc. PSYCHIATRISTS, APA, AMA have all been duped in their own practice framed by NSA TRANSMISSIONS during their WORK. Dr. is alive and practicing. Dr. Bowart died of CANCER while discovering the full conspiracy.

Editor's Note: The following article originally appeared in the newsletter of The Freedom of Thought Foundation: Free Thinking, Vol 2. No. 6 & No. 18, 1996.

EVERYBODY has been DOING THE LOCOMOTION

by Walter Bowart, New York: Dell Publishing Co., 1978

The following Natl Healthcare was infiltrated from the minds of we the people using psyops on media and all Govt employees, laws, and systems to engineer our culture.

See also RESOURCES TAB for OPERATION MIND CONTROL AND PLAN TO Psycho-civilize you and worse!

By W.H. Bowart December 1996

Is the profession of psychiatry beginning to rival the legal profession as having the most useless information, the most know-nothing, corrupt and mercenary practitioners of any profession?

The proof of the psychiatric pudding might be that doctors who once easily earned $300,000 or more a year are having a hard time pulling in $100,000 a year these days. This could be due to the cuts in national health care payments, to the competition that has been created by the lower prices of the HMO's, and/or it could be partly caused by the accumulative effects of the CIA's fifty years of covert manipulation of that profession.

Almost every psychiatrist of the aged generation (especially those who also hold diplomas in psychology) worked for the CIA or another branch of the cryptocracy in one or another dirty project which tested drugs, hypnosis, brain stimulation and a variety of other things on unwitting humans --often employees of the government who'd already signed their lives away. These psychiatrists were hell-bent on seeing that this government chattel would, since they hadn't given their lives for their country, give their minds and souls and too often their children's minds and souls for it.

In any of the professions it's hard to find a whistle blower. Seldom will one lawyer speak ill of a peer. Even harder is it to find justice in the self-regulated profession of health --especially mental health. Doctor's seldom bear witness against other doctors. A good example of the insular attitude which sees regulatory board members looking the other way was the case of Dr. William Jennings Bryan III (WJB3). Great grandson of the great orator William Jennings Bryan, WJB3 was the director of the American Institute of Hypnosis in Los Angeles from the fifties to his death in the seventies.

Bryan was an innovator in the application of the uses of hypnosis. He designed a switchboard of electronic instruments which made it possible for him to hypnotize and monitor the feedback from three different clients at the same time. He had a taste for beautiful women, so, after he found beauties who were also highly suggestible, he encouraged them to pay him a "professional" visit.

"Psychiatry in the second half of the twentieth century has undoubtedly been strongly skewed --not by an agenda that has to do with academic research, not by the best interest of clients, not by ethical psychiatry --but by an intelligence agenda..."

--Colin A. Ross, M.D.

During such sessions, after the women were in a "deep, deep sleep," WJB3 would slip into the room where they were lying on the couch and make suggestions which would eventually open them to accepting his sexual advances --maybe while they were imagining they were having sex with their husbands, or some Hollywood icon of their dreams. While WJB3 might have thought of this as just a little creative visualization, some of the women eventually remembered episodes of this hypno-rape, and four of them pressed charges of sexual assault against him.

According to the April 22, 1969 Los Angeles Times, the California State Board of Medical Examiners found William Jennings Bryan III guilty of "unprofessional conduct in four cases involving sexual molesting of female patients." The penalty for this offense was five years probation --a typical slap on the wrist for shrink who are working for the cryptocracy. The Canadian psychiatrist, Dr. Ewen Cameron was the former head of the Quebec Psychiatric Association, the Canadian Psychiatric Association, the American Psychiatric Association, the World Psychiatric Association (the founder of the WPA, in fact), and the one-time President of the Association for Biological Psychiatry has been described as the most "politically connected a guy as ever existed in the entire field of psychiatry in the 20th Century." This Canadian shrink was funded through MKULTRA and Human Ecology Foundation, did LSD and other hallucinogen research funded by both the Canadian military and the CIA.

Cameron is one of the central figures in Gordon Thomas' book Journey Into Madness. Cameron developed an insidious technique of torture called "psychic driving" which produced Differential Amnesia and Schizophrenic appearing conditions. He gave his secret test subjects hundreds of ECT (electroshock) treatments using the Paige-Russell technique, in which the shock switch is thrown six times during a treatment instead of once. Then the "patients" would be given barbiturates and a deep, deep, neuroleptic sleep would be induced for three months or so. When the subjects finally came out of their comas they were usually depressed, disoriented, incontinent, and unable to state their names, read, drive an automobile, have sexual relations, cook, use the toilet, or recognize their spouses or children. This must have been of great use to the cryptocracy which supported such research for around fifty years since it appears that the cryptocracy is still supporting more advanced research in which possession and control of the human mind and soul is the targeted outcome.

Dr. Cameron escaped prosecution because no one knew about (or could remember) his criminal research until after his death. When news of his "experiments" was made public, the CIA was sued and quickly paid the mentally damaged subjects of Dr. Cameron's cryptocratic curiosity millions of dollars in out-of-court settlements. That figure might have been much greater had the majority of the subjects not died prematurely. The history of the CIA's search for tools to create and manage the perfect slave state are chronicled in a variety of books. But the profession has largely ignored this information, often giving the authors the armchair diagnosis as "cranks" and "paranoids."

But there are heroes even among psychiatrists. At least one, a Canadian Psychiatrist, Dr. Colin Ross, has begun to put a lot of time into trying to identify and correct the wrongs done by his countryman Cameron and his peers in the profession.

Ross said: "Virtually every leading psychiatrist in North America between the 1940's and the 1970's was involved in some aspect of the CIA's mind control research."

At a workshop he held at the 9th Annual Western Clinical Conference on Trauma and Dissociation in Costa Mesa, California, last April, Ross offered a preview of the research he's uncovered for a new book. He said, "When I systematically started looking into CIA military mind control, the more I looked, the more solid re ality there was there. And as you will see as we go through these slides, and through this talk, it's a completely different deal from SRA. Somewhere out there in the justice system, there may actually be objective evidence where somebody has actually busted a SRA cult. If there is, that information is not generally publicly available to us. It is a fact that we have not nailed down human ritual sacrifice cults in North America if they exist. So it's all conjecture ... I will prove to you, completely locked down, documented, proven, beyond dispute or discussion that intelligence agencies have been creating Manchurian candidates and MPD for operational use since the Second World War."

"This is not a conspiracy theory," he said, "This is a fact." Now that's very amazing," Ross said, "because if you took an opinion poll of all the psychiatrists in the American Psychiatric Association today --or you took the same poll five years ago, over 99% of the psychiatrists would say 'It's fiction. We know the movie is fiction, Frank Sinatra (in the Manchurian Candidate) did a good job, but there's just no way, it's absolutely impossible.' There might be two outlaw psychiatrists in the whole group who would say that it's possible that Manchurian candidates are real. This is a very, very strange phenomena that actually, in 1996, this is a completely documented fact --it's a very strange sociological development in the field of psychiatry."

"How could that be possible? Well, I'm going to try and explain how it's possible. So that's what I am going to talk about. Also I am going to talk about not just creating Manchurian Candidates, but the whole network of mind control doctors that is involved in this and supports this --this kind of old boys' network that maintains all of this. And you will see a whole bunch of slides with godzillian interconnections that I will go into in detail. And every one of those steps --unless I otherwise specify --is completely documented. Absolutely objective in full."

"There is something real peculiar about the whole story. It's a very strange story. It tells us that there is something going on in our culture and in the mental health field that is hidden and secret. This is another kind of incest secret in the field of psychiatry that all of these people who have been running psychiatry in the latter half of the 20th century are either directly or loosely connected to a whole huge universe of covert, hidden, secretly funded mind control research, and as emphasized, that's a fact... If, in fact, experimental MPD has been created and has been tight and hard and real enough for operational use by intelligence agencies for the last 50 years, then it is something of interest to the dissociative disorders field. This is profound evidence in favor of the iatrogenic (doctor induced) pathway to DID that I talked about this morning."

"When I combine the expert witness experience that I have had at clinically created iatrogenic DID using the techniques of destructive psychotherapy cults in the course of persuasion, as I described this morning --when I take that expert witness evidence and see those cases created out of a base of no preexisting DID and then I go to this CIA military mind-control literature, my only possible conclusion is, yes, you can create full tilt DID artificially from ground zero. Also, I have to conclude that you can create any degree of complexity, permutations of false memory that you want. There is absolutely no limit on the quantity, complexity, reality, congruence, plausibility of false memories that you can insert in somebody's mind --wittingly or unwittingly."

"They didn't tell me that in medical school? "This is a little sub-paradigm revolution in the DID field. "There is a huge wealth of information, experimental information, clinical anecdotal information, and operational street smarts knowledge of DID that's been up and running and full tilt in the mental health field for 50 years now. This did not spring out of nowhere in 1980, and we are missing a ton of experimental research data that's still classified that bears directly on this false memory debate that is going on in our society now. And you will see some of the players in this whole scenario of interesting people..." Ross pointed out that it was not just psychiatrists and psychologists involved in the search for the way to create a "psycho-civilized society" but also sociologists, linguists, cyberneticists and other professionals (even a magician or two --men who were expert in micro-muscle movement reading), people from the World War Two and d Cold War generations.

Today mind control research has bled into many other specialized areas and comes up under the general heading of "cognitive sciences," which includes biomedicine, anesthesiology, neurology, cybernetics, linguistics, neural networking in the computer science departments and so forth. All of these projects are scattered and compartmentalized so that one researcher usually doesn't know what another is doing, but the funders (the black budget spenders of the U.S. and other governments) collect all the data and put it together for the final devastating applications.

In his workshop Ross offered the names of some of the more insidious doctors and the institutions which supported them. At the top of the list was Dr. George Estabrooks who, in 1950 wrote:

"I can hypnotize a man --without his knowledge or consent -into committing treason against the United States." Ross described Estabrooks as a pivotal figure in the cryptocracy's mind-control research. He drew an elaborate map connecting Estabrooks to the CIA's MKULTRA research, the FBI and other agencies. Then, he named the following professionals as part of the mind control conspiracy: William C. Hollinger, L. Wilson Green, Richard Ofshe (Sociologist), James Hamilton, Harold Abramson, Carl Pfeiffer, Louis Jolyon West (Psychiatrist UCLA), Carl Rogers, Martin T. Orne, George White (Army Col, CIA, BNDD), Maitland Baldwin, Harold Wolff, Raymond Prince (Mass. General Hospital), R. Gordon Wasson (stock broker and mycologist mushroom expert), John Mulholland (magician), B.F. Skinner (Harvard Behaviorist), Garner Murphy (Harvard), E.R. Hilgard

(member of DSM IV Dissociative Disorders Committee), Ron Shore (collaborator with Martin Orne) Milton Erickson (Psychiatrist and inspiration for Neurolinguistic Programming), Daniel X.

Friedman (Editor of Archives of the Journal of Psychiatry 1970-1993), Allen Dulles (Director CIA 1953-1961), Loretta Bender, Paul Hawk (psychiatrist who killed Harold Blauer in 1953 with an inject of supposed mescaline), Robert White (Harvard), J. Edgar Hoover (Director of the FBI), John Gittinger (CIA psychologist), Robert Lifton (psychiatrist and well-known author), Margaret Singer (psychologist, author of "Cults in Our Midst"), Paul McHugh (Chairman of Psychiatry at Johns Hopkins), James Whitehorn (former Chairman of Psychiatry at Johns Hopkins and advisor of the Human Ecology Foundation with Top Secret Clearance), Harold Lief (advisor of the False Memory Syndrome Foundation), Colston Westbrook (CIA Psy-War expert who worked at Vacaville Prison with prisoners such as Donald Defreeze and Timothy Leary), Robert Heath (doing brain electrode implant research at Tulane), Francisco Silva (Cuban psychiatrist who allegedly put Lee Harvey Oswald up in his home and got him a job at the hospital where Silva worked prior to the assassination), Mark Sweet (collaborator with L.J. West for the UCLA Violence Project), Wagner Joreg (son of Wagner Joreg who won the Nobel Prize for treating syphilis with malaria), Amadeo Morazzi (LSD researcher at the University of Minnesota), Gregory Bateson, Allen Ginsburg, Ken Kesey, Sydney Mallett, and the list goes on.

Ross linked dozens of institutions to the research which, he said he suspects, is still going on in one form or another. Among the institutions he reeled off the top of his head were: Butler Hospital Health Center (part of Harvard), Children's International Summer Village, Columbia University, Cornell University, Denver University, Emory College, Florida University, George Washington University, Harvard University, Houston University, Illinois University, Indiana University, Johns Hopkins University, Eli Lilly Pharmaceuticals, University of Minnesota, New Jersey Reformatory, Bordentown in Tennessee, Ohio University, University of Pennsylvania, Penn State University, Princeton University, Stanford University, Wisconsin University, University of Texas, University of Oklahoma, McGill, the National Institute of Health, the National Institute of Mental Health, the New Jersey Psychiatric Research Institute, National Philosophical Society, Office of Naval Research, Worcester Foundation for Experimental Biology, Vacaville State Prison, Public Health Service, Cornell, Bureau of Narcotics, Bureau of Prisons, and many others.

"You get the idea," Ross said. Then, the well-prepared researcher gave a litany of declassified code names under which many of these atrocities occurred: MKULTR A, MKSEARCH, MKNAOMI, ARTICHOKE, BLUEBIRD, STARGATE, CHATTER, OFTEN, CHICKWIT, DERBYHAT, THIRD CHANCE, MKDELTA, QK HILLTOP and others.

"It just shows you," Ross said, "the theme here is not that there is a military intelligence conspiracy to cover up Manchurian Candidate creation with the myth of borderline personality disorder. The point now is more of a global general meta point which is: this whole network of old boys in psychiatry and psychology, who were covertly funded for part of the military and CIA intelligence mind-control network, are very influential in the history of psychiatry in a kind of nebulous fashion that just permeates the whole field. It isn't part of the sort of one-to-one correspondences that I have been showing before. It's a matter of the whole mind set of psychiatry --how we think about borderlines (Borderline Personality Disorder), how we think about temporal lobe epilepsy, how we are going to react to MPD?

"The point is that the history of psychiatry in the second half of the twentieth century has undoubtedly been strongly skewed --not by an agenda that has to do with academic research, not by the best interest of clients, not by ethical psychiatry --but by an Intelligence agenda." Ross said that the full story of the CIA's involvement with his profession is still unknown. "We are missing a ton of experimental research data that's still classified that bears directly on this false memory debate that is going on in our society now."

In an attempt to uncover more information Ross visited the CIA Reading Room in Washington, D.C. He said it was "a very unusual experience," and dealt with it with humor, as a skilled psychiatrist would deal with a client suffering from Dissociated Identity Disorder.

"This is the way it goes in trying to document this stuff and trying to make it public and identify the specific individuals. It's a big slow job. And when you make Freedom of Information requests, it's like interacting with any Federal Bureaucracy." Ross said that, in fact, the CIA had been extremely helpful to him. The CIA, he said, was "extremely polite, extremely courteous when I went to the CIA Reading Room..."

"Let me just tell you the story..." Ross said, "Here I am, a Canadian psychiatrist, going down to the Eastern Regional Conference, and a day early I pop over to the CIA Reading Room to look at the MKULTRA documents to figure out which ones I want to order at 10 cents a page which they then shipped to me. It arrives at my office via UPS with CIA stamped in the corner. I'm wondering who thinks that's weird?"

Ross said he found the CIA Reading Room "just this building in Virginia on a street. It is completely unrecognizable as anything. I get dropped off there ... whoa ... there's all these guys in uniforms and here I am, this civilian."

"I go walking along accompanied by this CIA person, and I go into the first room which has a steel vault door and says 'Secured Area: Treasury Department.' I go into that room and they close the door. I am now in a 'Secured Area.' I sit down and they bring in all the documents on a little cart and (an elderly woman) gives me 15-20 pencils beautifully sharpened, and a notepad and everything. You order which documents you want at the end of the day.

"I am sitting there working away on this huge amount of documents all day," Ross said.

"Work, work, work, work ...

"Some time in the middle of the day this old woman comes at me. Now I am thinking, is this old woman trying to pump me for information? What's here? (Is she) going to report back at the end of the day? She says, 'Well, what's that stuff you are reading?' I am trying to act casually, I just say, 'Well, it's just a bunch of mind control documents from the 50's and 60's.' And she says, 'Is that stuff classified?' And I say, 'No, no.

It was declassified a long time ago,' And she says, 'Well what do they need me here for?' And I said, 'I don't know.' And then I stopped talking to her and I started focusing down on the paper."

Ross said his "beef" was not with the intelligence community or the CIA, but with the psychiatrists and psychologist "who created a little loophole where they can step out of normal ethical oversight, violate the Hippocratic Oath, get away with it, not talk about it. It's just like the conspiracy to keep incest under the carpet. This is all conspired and kept under the carpet -not by twelve guys in a room at Langley who are doing the planning, but just by this pervasive old boys network. That's what keeps the mind control secret down just like it kept the incest secret down. So that's another reason why this is important, and needs to be uncovered..."

"...The idea that there could be a deliberate disinformation campaign element to the False Memory movement is perfectly plausible, consistent with history, and could be expected. There is bound to be some sort of disinformation strategy if, in fact, Manchurian Candidates have been leaking out into civilian psychotherapy. So here we have, with all of this documentation, all of this proof --we know that it is perfectly possible that people we are seeing in therapy who are claiming to be victims of systematic military mind-control experimentation are telling us about what actually happened to them... "We have a major disinformation campaign which has basically fooled mental health professionals and the general public concerning brain-washing, concerning LSD.

"Fortunately those are the only two examples in human history," Ross said with sarcasm. "This analysis does not apply to the False Memory movement. There is no way it could conceivably be possible, you will all agree, that there could not be any nervousness in the Intelligence Community about Manchurian Candidates spilling out into civilian psychotherapies and that a disinformation program based on False Memories would be required. It is obviously absurd."

Ross continued his sarcasm, saying: "Nobody but a CIA conspiracy nut would ever suggest that. I guarantee you that that thought has never even crossed my mind until it just spontaneously appeared at this moment."

Then, after the laughter subsided, Ross resumed, in total seriousness, speaking of the declassified documents from the Atomic Energy Commission, alluding to the testimony before the President's Commission on Radiation at which victims of mind control testified they had been experimented upon with radioactive materials as children.

"This is no longer vague," he said. "We know the specific names of people, when they died, whether it was plutonium or whatever was injected, the names of the doctors, the names of the medical schools where it was done, it's all keyed up for compensation, the government has set up a whole compensation mechanism..."

Dr. Ross' book, Dissociative Identity Disorder, Diagnosis, Clinical Features, and Treatment of Multiple Personality is scheduled for release by the publishers John Wiley and Sons, N.Y., in December, 1996.

Journey Into Madness, by Gordon Thomas, was published in 1989 by Bantam Books, NYC.

MindNet Journal FTP Archive Filename: [mn194.txt]

Letters to editor, Mike Coyle:

Submission of articles for publication within the MindNet Journal on the subjects of mind control, directed-energy weapons, non-lethal weapons, ritual abuse, UFO abductions, bioelectromagnetics, hypnosis and other related topics will be accepted with the author's statement of permission to publish. The editor reserves the right to accept or reject for publication. The publisher disclaims all responsibility to return unsolicited matter. Send articles for publication to:

or VERICOMM, POB 32314, Oakland, CA 94604-2314 USA.

The MindNet Journal is published by VERICOMM (sm) in cooperation with the Freedom Of Thought Foundation, POB 35072, Tucson, AZ 85740-5072 USA.

According to a US Department of Defense directive (S-3600.1, December 9, 1996), "information warfare" is defined as "an information operation conducted during t ime of crisis or conflict to achieve or promote specific objectives over a specific adversary or adversaries". An "information operation" is defined in the same directive as "actions taken to affect adversary information and information systems". These "information systems" lie at the heart of the modernisation effort of the US armed forces and manifest themselves as hardware, software, communications capabilities and highly trained individuals. Information warfare has tended to ignore the role of the human body as an information or data processor in this quest for dominance, except in those cases where an individual's logic or rational thought may be upset via Dis-information or deception... Yet, the body is capable not only of being deceived, manipulated or mis-informed but also shut down or destroyed just as any other data-processing system. The "data" the body receives from external sources, such as electromagnetic, vortex or acoustic energy waves, or creates through its own electrical or chemical stimuli, can be manipulated or changed, just as the data (information) in any hardware system can be altered. If the ultimate target of information warfare is the information-dependent process, "whether human or automated", then the definition implies that human data-processing of internal and external signals can clearly be considered an aspect of information warfare.

On a much grander scale, the use of mind control was contemplated as far back as 1969

by a former science adviser to President Johnson. "Gordon J. F. Macdonald, a geophysicist

Such Things are Known

Dorothy Burdick, New York: Vantage Press Inc., 1982

Foreword

How do you explain an invasion of privacy that is cleverly designed to sound like a common psychological disturbance? How do you explain to people without an understanding of human physiology that body movement can only occur when energy is converted to an electrical charge?

When you turn on a light, electrons cross a gap. When you start your car, an electric spark crosses a gap. While doing this you are totally unaware that in your own body the common dollar exchange of the human energy system, ATP (adenosine triphosphate), is releasing electrons and thus being converted into physical energy for all bodily processes and movement throughout the electron transport system. Every time you move or think, electrons stream across a gap between neurons called a synapse. This stream is like an electrical current and can be measured in the laboratory. The electrical field that you generate is very weak and is measured in millivolts and gauss.

The recent interest in Oriental acupuncture to prevent pain has helped lead to the use of electronic devices to aid the healing of bone with electrical current and to interrupt electrical signals that would cause pain if transmitted. The courts have defined death as the absence of electrical activity in the brain. Electronics, which has made this kind of monitoring possible, is the science of the development and application of devices and systems involving the flow of electrons in gaseous media and in semiconductors. It is very hard to imagine life, any kind of life, as simply an electrical system. Kirlian photography shows the electrical aura around a leaf. Children are being trained by physicists and psychologists to see electrical fields around people. When we speak of people as magnetic we may be speaking a scientific truth. The magnetoencephalogram (MEG) is used in the laboratory to measure the magnetic field in gauss given off by the cortex of the brain.

No motion is made by the human body without raising the so-called resting potential of nerve cells to an action potential voltage causing work. Stored in the double phosphate high energy bond of ATP, electrons are released to travel through the nervous system to activate muscles and are measured in millivolts, 1/1000 of a volt. ATP is what makes fireflies light up at night and accounts for the well-known shocking behavior of the electric eel.

The electroencephalogram (EEG) and the electrocardiogram (EKG) are graphic representations of the brain and heart making waves. Recently in sports medicine, ath letes have had their body patterns recorded photographically to show their muscular strengths or weaknesses and predict their probable degree of success. This method has also been used to predict the performance of race horses. Laser, a gas medium, is a natural extension of electronics. It is used in industry, acoustical recording, message transmission, and to read fingerprints even years after they have been left on a page. It is also used to identify horses from their chestnuts, the callosities on their legs. As an example of a technology that has been under development for some time we have to give credit for laser to Uncle Sam and you, the taxpayer. The National Standards Laboratory is busy making accurate new measurements because modern laser techniques are so precise that they have made the old ones obsolete. Laser is so fine-tuned that it is used for eye surgery.

The brain has been under investigation since the 1800s and earlier, and its activity recorded since the 1900s. It should not be too surprising that all brain tissue is simply a transmitter of electrical activity and a resonator that receives vibrations. With the computer, different areas of the brain can be displayed on a TV screen and the various activities under study displayed in an assortment of colors. The nerve impulses themselves can be converted into digital code so that the computer can identify their source, and from the source determine which part of the human nervous system is involved.

You cannot see human brain waves by looking at a human head. If that head, however, is attached in some way to a computer, you can look at the visual display and see the waves. Large, fast computers like the Cray outrace the mind of man when it comes to making concise, accurate, instantaneous measurements. Remote-sensing and over-the-horizon radars are commonplace.

Remote sensing of animals without hurting the animal has been done. A powerful laser scanning can measure acoustics, density and the sound of electrical activity including the broadcast coming from the human ear. The human ear not only receives, but also sends out its own signals which can be picked up by a sensitive listening device like the laser. Once sounds enter the ear they interfere with each other and set up harmonic tones.

The range of human behavior is almost unquantifiable but attempts have been made. The basic areas, according to Maslow, that must be taken care of first are sleep, food and sex and I would add to this the need for emotional security. You are most likely to be stressed when these areas are attacked.

The effects of radio or microwaves of various kinds have been reported in scientific and lay literature. It is known that they can affect blood pressure, body temperature and mental states by reaching the hypothalamus through the eardrum which is in the closest contact to this master gland. We also know that astronauts can be monitored in space. We have already invented lenses that see in the dark and penetrate foliage and walls. Suppose that from a distance you could be influenced by electromagnetic or microwaves and be stressed by electrical shock, unexpected muscle spasms or contractions which could be made to occur in both voluntary and the involuntary muscles of your viscera. Suppose also that the intensity could be orchestrated to produce sensations from pleasure through pain. Suppose additionally that the stress is augmented by the surprise element and through subliminal, that is unconsciously heard, vocal suggestion. You, the subject, are in your own home, very possibly totally unaware of any kind of outside interference, until you are spoken to via laser.[Note:1] You might suddenly realize that you, a human being, had become an instrument.

This type of operation, under development for some time by American intelligence, is called mind control. It is more ghastly than George Orwell could possibly have conceived because he never experienced it. Only a few people understand the interrelationships between our magnificent technological and medical accomplishments and the military-industrial complex. These few are hampered in their attempts at communication by involvement in their own fields and by security requirements. Knowledge proliferates at a doubling rate greater than every two years. What is currently known is quickly dated. If you are working you are running to catch ch up. If you are not working you may be bogged down in family and community affairs.

We exist in our complexity, psyching ourselves with pseudoscientific games, psychological hype and a couple-of-hundred-years-old love affair with snake oil and cures from the fountain of youth. It is both the best of times and the worst of times. Our so-called freedom is mired down in bureaucracy, ruled by dated old men, and clutched by inertia, boredom and fatigue.

When I started building by case, I only wanted to prove that what was happening to me was technologically possible. Although my proof is mainly circumstantial evidence, it is known that anything which appears in the marketplace has usually been under government development for quite a long time before it filters into public consciousness.

Suppose you were motivated by a combination mind/body attack and suppose also that you were lucky enough or unlucky enough to have the intelligence and kind of background to sort the whole thing out. What would you do?

This book is an attempt to explain what I believe has happened to me. Others will attribute my account to many other things. From my point of view this is a true story no matter how ridiculous or neurotically distorted it may seem. I know that it can be used against me. I believe that the story line was designed by the intelligence community to fit their disinformation program. The purpose of the book is simply to present the possibilities. Perhaps the computer-age youngsters who will have to cope with these futuristic developments will not be as upset as I was.

D. B.

June 5, 1981 Prologue

Reading minds at a distance by deciphering the brains magnetic waves has been a project of the Advanced Research Projects Agency [DARPA] of the Defense Department for some time. Many educational and research institutions have contributed to its success with government funding.

Published information indicates that DARPA scientists have learned to identify specific thought patterns through the interpretation of brain waves. These patterns reveal with up to ninety percent accuracy whether a person is: (1) puzzled or uncertain, (2) has made a decision, (3) is paying attention, (4) is observing colors or patterns, or (5) has lost concentration due to fatigue or boredom.

Thought processes have been linked to the computer through Artificial Intelligence [AI]. The autocorrelated Cray, which does one hundred million calculations a second, is specifically designed for problem solving and can carry out biomedical experiments with the computer simulating the human effects. It takes only fifty billionths of a second for an element of data to enter and leave its memory. Using psychological interviewing techniques. AI has come up with programs which lead the intelligent human to believe that he is talking to another person, when he is actually carrying on a dialogue with a computer. Properly programmed, computers have the capacity to make judgments based on previous performance or experience, predict observed behavior, speech patterns and idiosyncrasies of thought. Computers also convert many types of signals to signs, codes, sound, music and video. Twenty years were spent by Russell Kirsch at the National Bureau of Standards Artificial Intelligence Laboratory teaching machines to make judgments called image pattern recognition. A well-instructed machine can look at varied images like brain waves and make decisions concerning them. The marriage of computer programming and brain mapping has been published. To accomplish the wiring and plotting of the functions of the human brain was an incredibly complex task that could only have been accomplished by the invention of the computer itself.

It is known that enough work has been done with large computers and wave averaging on the transmission of neural messages in the brain so that neural activity associated with the word no and the word yes can be identified whether it is said aloud or not. Near the speech center in the brain is an area that prepares neural messages that drive the muscles associated with speech.

Actions of the tongue and mouth and other muscles involved in speech are quite different for these two words. The patterns of nerve signals that go out to make these two words are also unlike. The patterns are formed long before words reach the vocalizing level, and can be read and interpreted in advance of speech by a computer. Pattern recognition computers will read an answer even in a completely uncooperative subject, or specifically read his mind if the thought is mentally put into unspoken words. Speech is a motor activity which creates electrical signals traveling along neurons. With a computer, these weak signals can be read at a distance by a superconducting quantum interference device (SQUID), which almost completely eliminates environmental noise while magnifying the signal one thousand times over that read by previous technology.

To read the mind, wave analyzers must deal with the complex oscillations of the brain in somewhat the same way that a prism separates the colors of a beam of light. The components of this complex wave are isolated by electronic circuits tuned to several frequencies. Statistical averages can be determined from many readings of the mind under investigation. From this information its versatility and repertoire of adaptive stratagems can be assessed and plotted. This frequency analysis of tactics can now be instantly known and evaluated by computer faster than men can think. Optical and electronic subsystems for spacecraft and artificial intelligence have been under development since 1955. Sophisticated biomedical sensors have been developed to use on animals at a distance without physical contact. The same equipment has been used to test environmental factors on human sensory organs. Laser is used in biomedical displays to pick up brain signals and convert them to sound and color or even music. With current laser techniques verbal and aural communication is possible between any two points on earth with video and via satellite.

The human head is a target which gives off a magnetic field. Suppose that it is capable of being picked up and locked onto at a distance by a supersensitive sensor many times amplified by optics. Depending upon the kind of ray directed at the head the symptoms and sensations of the subject will vary. The carotid artery and the hypothalamus are easily reached through the thin wall of the ear drum by sonic and ultrasonic radio waves. Stimuli to this area can raise and lower blood pressure and body temperature. Sensations in other parts of the anatomy are similar to those caused by diathermy depending upon which brain signals are played upon. The subject is literally an instrument who may experience numbness, pain, pleasure, muscle jerks, spasm and stimulation of the sympathetic and parasympathetic nervous system.

It is known that thoughts can be pulsed into the mind through the nervous system by microwaves. This has nothing to do with the auditory nerves. Scientists who have submitted themselves to this process report temporary loss of memory and disorganization of thinking processes.

A subtle method of communication, laser, is used to deliver messages unheard by those close to the receiver. Depending upon the verbal messages received concurrently with physical stimulation, these technological developments become powerful tools combined with psychological techniques to shape, modify, direct, prevent and control human thought and behavior through interference with all known diurnal physiological patterns. Additionally, verbal messages may be delivered at the subliminal level during consciousness and during sleep, so that the subject is unaware that he is receiving them or that his dream sleep is being influenced.

Words are emotional triggers. When the subjects emotional triggers are analyzed he is put in the position of having his thoughts and actions controlled by other individuals. This is mind control.

For at least the last four years every minute of my conscious and unconscious life had been invaded by investigators using state of the art technology. Recently on the Today Show, William Colby said that the CIA investigated a device which could read Brezhnev's mind on his way to work. It is my contention that they not only investigated it but that they made it work. People have asked me, What do these voices say? They say, We want to be your friends. As in brainwashing they confuse the issue, and truth becomes obscure. Falsehoods seem reasonable. Indoctrination techniques resemble some techniques used in hypnosis. Like hypnosis they have a soporific effect, reiterating and repeating the same monotonous phrases.

What you do is up to you. You've got to believe in yourself. This remark is made until you are not really certain whether you know what you want or can rely upon your own opinion.

Pavlov said that a conditioned reflex can be worked out for every stimulus. In brainwashing, brain-changing results. Damage is done to the mind through drugs, hypnosis and other means, so that a memory of what actually happened can be wiped out and a new memory of what never happened inserted. The Voices, by interfering with sleep in a subliminal mode are able to stir up old memories and influence REM Sleep by vocal suggestion. They interfere with normal sleep patterns by inducing physical symptoms which result in jerks, cramps, irritation of the intestinal tract and skin, and in sexual arousal or sudden and unwanted awakening when rest is needed. All the subject is aware of is pain, discomfort, nightmares, unaccountable physical symptoms, fatigue and depression. At other times, he is euphoric with relief.

As in brainwashing, the Voices try to install a feeling of personal satisfaction by making the individual feel that he is needed in some way. The message is combined with physical reinforcement. We want you to feel good about yourself. They specialize in uncertainty. You are always on an up staircase that is going down. Dorothy, we don't know what we are going to do with you. This comes after occasions of rebuttal, rebellion and general recalcitrance. It may be accompanied by good humor or very unpleasant remarks and physical symptoms.

In the beginning, although one is not incarcerated except mentally and environmentally, the subject feels dreadfully tired and worn out. Returning POWs describe it as being like an automaton or going about in a daze.

The Voices use suggestive interrogation with desired answers implied in the wording. They alternate this with a barrage of denunciation and accusation to make you cringe. The more tired you are, the more it upsets you. They excavate the psyche for areas of sensitivity involving social attitudes, sex, marital and family relationships and feelings about self. Any vulnerability will do, and all the time, fatigue both physical and mental, is working for them. The more sensitive and reasonable the individual, the more vulnerable they are. Pushovers for indoctrinators are very intelligent but uneducated, especially the indecisive minds that always see some valid point in the other side's argument.

The victim's feeling is that his thinking is being directed. The brainwasher has been called a corticovisceral psychiatrist, able to interfere with the normal path that every human follows in life. Such a Voice directs or suggests to the subject a new route leading off in an entirely new direction. Conflicts arise in anyone between known emotional responses and those of which he is unaware and which are suppressed. No one actually knows or realizes what is going on in his own subconscious mind. The Brainwasher Voice is trained to increase such conflict and to manipulate these responses.

A great effort is made to arouse guilt feelings. Failures to meet a standard of achievement or conduct are used frequently as guilt stimuli. A decided effort is made to uncover normal failings and to take advantage of them in order to hammer them into a guilt complex. No matter how guilt arises, it is necessary to the Voice Indoctrinator for projection purposes.

The Brainwasher Voice continually attempts to sow doubt in the mind of the subject. Regardless of the strength of conviction of the individual so attacked, the moment doubt clouds the mind, it leads to tension. Tension is related to fear, and guilt also produces fear.

They asked me, "What do you want to do?" My answer was that I wanted to survive.

Fear itself is an expression of unsatisfied need for survival and security. First reactions are nervousness, tension, apprehension and depression. They make the need for security and self-protection even more acutely felt. Fortunately for me none of this was done in a really controlled environment, yet my privacy in all things was gone and I was isolated from human intercourse because nobody could believe that the Voices I heard were anything but inventions of my subconscious.

As a result of these artificially induced pressures including chronic fatigue, I was deprived of strength to combat repetitious suggestions and started to doubt my own thoughts and convictions.

Suppose in this condition that ideas are suggested at a subconscious level, not positive suggestions used in department store tapes to prevent stealing, but destructive behavioral ideas that will result in a poorer self-image, lowered confidence, both physical and mental, and atypical behavior. The suggestions assume a symbolic significance to the individual. Suppose the assault on the mind, body and nervous system is continual over a twenty-four hour period seven days a week. In this state one begins to live in a realm of fantasies and false beliefs. In the hands of Brainwasher Voices and technologists with Space Age Tools, anyone is malleable. An illusory, surreal, invisible environment is created, real only to the victim. In a prison camp one can make up one's mind not to listen. There are other prisoners. As a laser receiving station in your own home and environment one has to listen involuntarily and still try to act normally, perform tasks, drive a car and do routine things as much as possible. The incarceration is real, but unseen.

The tools of mind attack include suggestion, mockery, fear, fatigue, deception and manipulation. As in brainwashing, the Voice sometimes begins with ideas and deals with which the recipient can agree. The only relief from tension in this insidious process is laughter or drugs like sleeping pills and alcohol. The receiver forgets that he is the one who is suffering from fear, uncertainty, browbeating and the invasion of privacy in sex, toilet and social relationships. When he most fears for public performance and they let up, he feels grateful for no reason at all.

All these things are known to government psychiatrists and psychologists. The government in question is the government of the United States of America. The events I recount began on a May weekend in 1978. ...

Chapter 10

Recently, through TV and the news media, there has been an effort toward making parapsychology respectable. A university in Great Britain gives a Ph.D. in the subject. The CIA has a program of disinformation which may be a convenient cover for scientists working on programs which seem to the uninformed to border on the occult, such as bioplasma research and Kirlian photography. Children are being trained to see auras when exposed to a box containing electrodes. As the voltage increases they see auras not generally visible to less sensitive adults. The auras can be photographed using Kirlian photography. Kirlian photography reveals electrochemiluminescence which surrounds all living matter. It is named for the Russian electrical engineer, Semyon Kirlian, who passed his hand through a high energy, high frequency electromagnetic field and saw an aura around it. Kirlian produced the first high-energy cameras that could photograph these auras. British biologist, Harvey

Oldfield, has produced a radio device that displays the phenomena on a screen. British researchers are reported to be using high energy, high frequency beam of radio signals to monitor organic diseases. Hearts respond with radio signals in harmonic resonance which are picked up by the Kirlian gun and displayed on an oscilloscope screen. This instrumentation transposed to space could read vital signs at a distance. The U.S. government had information on this process in 1950 and released it to the CIA, Rand, the Air Force and other government agencies.

The CIA has advertised for people in psychological services and they are known to do other things besides prepare statistics. The combination of psychology, the basis for brainwashing, and human behavior modification, known as conditioning, and electric shock has long been a treatment for experimental animals and the mentally ill humans.

Various branches of the U.S. government are spending millions of dollars to finance Mankind Research Unlimited, Inc. (MRU). The goal of this corporation is mind control. MRU has done investigations of high frequency Kirlian effect photography, thought-controlled devices and psychokinetic switches. This is the device which permits a pilot to fire a missile by simply thinking fire. Computers can be linked to the brain to recognize electrical patterns in the cortex word for word. MRU has a brochure describing its interests in the fields of biophysics including Geopathic Efforts on Living Organisms, which are attempts to induce illness by changing the magnetic nature of animal magnetic field geography. Another MRU field of interest is behavioral science which includes the analysis and measurement of human subjective states by computer analyzed EEGs and biofeedback. MRUs pioneering use of computer analyzed EEG probably led to CIA-sponsored Brain Research Labs at San Diego Hospital, Columbia, Stanford and New York Universities.

MRU has investigated the computer analysis of psychophysical recordings including data obtained from EKG, EEG, GSR (galvanic skin response) and the plethysmography used to measure blood volume changes in the capillaries of fingers. These measurements would be supplemented with a recently developed apparatus for measuring electric field radiations from living bodies (System Research Laboratories of Dayton, Ohio, patent No. 3,555,529; 12 January 71).

MRU facilities are located in seven states. In Mountain View of Los Altos, California, MRU scientists have tested psychoacoustical transmitters that produce sound patterns termed infra and ultra-sonic that interact with brain cells and erase information. Studies have been done to develop software systems to record and evaluate biological effects of special environmental factors on plants, animals and humans.

Extensive studies have been conducted in sleep research of human unconscious behavior patterns with sensors to determine the effects of external phenomena on dreams. Interesting features of this research are the use of electromagnetic recordings of EEGs, ultraviolet and infrared sensors, precise weight analysis, and the correlation of these technical factors with electromagnetic fields, moon and planetary positions, and barometric changes. C.G. Jung connected depth psychology with theoretical physics and the natural sciences. An examination of what he and others have had to say about synchronicity leads the scientifically trained mind to the conclusion that synchronicity is a trickster. The clown theme appears in the folklore of many cultures and is generally connected to a belief in the occult or supernatural forces.

UFO activity, analyzed by computer, seems to be some kind of scheduled reinforcement. If it is scheduled reinforcement who is causing it? Such reinforcement may have been the purpose of the odd aircraft activity which I observed, or it may have been to make me sure that humans only were involved. Most likely they were relay stations which have to get close enough to read the electromagnetic field given off by the human brain and body. When the CIA says that they cannot read Russian minds, it may be because they can't get near enough to do so. UFOs may act as relay stations by getting close enough to a position of the subject, then read signals and transmit them. Left to himself, an individual may truly be said to be free except for his early childhood conditioning, and the values of his own which he has developed through trial and error which either negatively or positively reinforce his beliefs and behavior. Panic or emotionally upsetting conflicts can be evoked by stimulating conflicting drives. Under ordinary conditions, when two drives are unequal, the stronger suppresses the weaker. The manipulation of living creatures becomes possible when the means exists to activate and combine two different drives or cause confusion. Ordinary stimuli might be music and alcohol, and the added artificially-induced drive might be sexual stimulation with high frequency microwave energy. The automobile and the home can be invaded with messages from phone or satellite. Traffic control by aircraft is common. Why not mind control or directed thinking?

Laser-projected Voices tell me, You are doing what you want to do, but I am never free of their broadcast stimuli which I can feel, and microwave or ultrasonic frequencies of which I may be totally unaware. I cannot be sure that I am not really in pain due to natural causes. I only feel unaccountable changes in mood such as depression, euphoria or relief.

As long as I was unaware of what was going on, I could delude myself that my spontaneous activity was the result of the continual shifting and interplay of force es and ideas in my central nervous system. When I became aware that my environment was partially controlled, there were a whole new set of variables with which to cope. For me the price has been a complete turn-off of sexual fantasy affecting my sex life, and heightened, unpleasant nervous tension. I can not pray, dream or aspire privately. There is no escape from the mundane, continuously present flat line of controlled or directed thinking. It gives me present and an unpleasant, nightmarish, repellent, at times falsely seductive, intimate, existentialist quality. One is traveling mentally from no-where to nowhere. You exist in a funny house world with distorting mirrors. The reflections are partly real, partly exaggerated and partly transitional. My greatest strength has been a sense of humor and proportion. To fall below the flat line of directed thinking results in depression.

The physical pain which can be inflicted, and the depression evoked are the greatest strengths of the operators at the other end of the beam. I cannot quite imagine how they measure the distortion they cause except from a reading of verbal thought, spoken words and unusual physical actions. At the very least they can immobilize or neutralize to the point of death through the inhibition of natural physical processes, the use of pain, and disruption of mental activity. The amount of mental activity blocked by depression is hard to gage. Since the process began I have not often had a free choice about what I wanted to think, and even when I did, I was aware that someone was reading my thoughts either directly through computer printout or indirectly at a later time and doing programmed bugging. In any case, the human urge to think, dream, love and create have been frustrated.

One of the beauties of the situation for the perpetrators is that the victim has no records, tapes or pictures except those subjectively stored, written or spoken. The subject is in a classical neurotic, no-win situation. There are few dates, people or facts to report. Only a limited number of people in electronics, and our Federal government, can fit the fragments of circumstantial evidence together. Those who monitor equipment, simply monitor equipment. The blips, numbers, tapes and film clips that might result, are too removed from the flesh and blood, and transmitted over too great a distance to have any emotional meaning for the operators. They may not even know what they are transmitting. The only individuals to whom the object might be at all human would be a psychological behavioral result.

If my premises are true, the United States government is involved in a program to control behavior through biophysics and electrochemical control. In July 1977, The New York Times reported a fourteen-year program by the CIA intelligence services to control human behavior with drugs, electric shock, radiation, ultrasonics, psychology and psychosurgery. As reported in Time, August 17, 1977, Admiral Stansfield Turner, testifying on CIA activity said that there had been no drug testing since 1973. He did not say that the use of ultrasonics, microwave and electrochemical energy had been discontinued. It never will be, because it is the technology of both now and the future.

It is encouraging that there were difficulties finding psychiatrists to conduct experiments for the CIA. One memorandum reported that a particular psychiatrist might not care to cooperate in certain more revolutionary phases of the project.

Another psychiatrist was described as having no ethical compunctions about being completely cooperative in the program regardless of how bizarre it might be. The CIA investigated bioplasma fields or weak electromagnetic fields surrounding both human and inanimate objects and monitored the bioplasma fields of agents, according to The New York Times. I am inclined to think that they were training agents in receiving laser messages and trying out the reading of unspoken thoughts formulated into words mentally. They also worked with trained seals and otters in the well-researched field of ultrasonics. Humans hear in a range of 15 -20,000 cycles per second or hertz. Any frequency higher than this is ultrasonic, and cannot be consciously perceived.

Newspaper accounts based on actual occurrences of unethical experiments show a procession of unpalatable events, exposed due to the persistence of individuals in freedom-loving organizations. Attempts have been made to present human experim ents in a favorable light. Our scientific journals are replete with limited, but existing tales of experiments in which the individual was too incompetent due to mental incapacity or age to protest being used as a human guinea pig. The fact is that there are people in this country who have been subjected to experimentation both willingly and inadvertently. In 1950, Army reports show that a cloud of bacteria was sprayed over the San Francisco Bay area resulting in cases of pneumonia. In 1956, the CIA and the Army sprayed an unknown substance in New York City streets and the Holland and Lincoln Tunnels as part of their MK-Ultra program. Between 1949 and 1969, a period of twenty years, tests were carried out with simulated bacteriological substances in the United States, Alaska and Hawaii. These are facts, not fiction involving Dr. Strangelove.

Under the Freedom of Information Act, a Church of Scientology group uncovered documents released by the CIA which showed that someone in this agency signed out a specimen of whooping-cough bacteria, Hemophilus pertussis, from the Army's biological warfare center in Fort Detrick, Maryland, on January 26, 1955 for testing. Florida state medical records show that the whooping cough outbreak killed twelve persons in the mid-1950s. The whooping cough bacteria was used in tests in Tampa Bay and near Sebring, Florida. Records show that whooping cough cases jumped in 1954 from 339 with one death, to 1,080 with twelve deaths in 1955, an increase of over two hundred percent. Tampa Bay was one of the three places that showed a sharp increase. The CIA now says that most of its chemical and biological files were destroyed in 1973 by order of Director Richard Helms.

In December 1980, the wife of a member of the Canadian Parliament and four other Canadians sued the U.S. government for five million dollars in U.S. District Court, charging that a Montreal psychiatrist conducted CIA-financed brainwashing experiments on them between 1957 and 1963. During this time they were given LSD and massive electroshock treatments to wipe out past behavior patterns. (The government track record on LSD is well-known through the publicized suicide of a U.S. government scientist, and the ensuing successful suit of his family twenty years later.) The Canadians were subjected to continuously played tape messages to induce new brain patterns. The plaintiffs contended that their mental health remains impaired as a result.

During Project Dork, the Army released a powerful hallucinogenic drug, BZ, ten to one hundred times more potent than LSD, in clouds during tests in Utah in 1964. Between 1960 and 1969, 362 people were involved. The tests were supposed to prove that enemy soldiers could be incapacitated by inducing delirium. The effects were measured at a distance of a thousand yards. The volunteer subjects experienced an increase in heart rate and blood pressure, increased blood flow or flushing, dry mouth and loss of appetite, hyperactive peristaltic sounds, weakness or tightness in legs, persistent blurred vision and urinary frequency. Except for the visual difficulties, the other symptoms were at least found to be reversible with adequate physostigmine treatment. Three-dozen individuals who underwent the tests still complain of aftereffects including the birth of abnormal children who are mentally deficient. The volunteers themselves suffer memory lapses, hallucinations and, not surprisingly, emotional problems.

Federal snoops have used one-way mirrors to investigate and record sexual activity in San Francisco. Both the FBI and the CIA have been used in covering up and disseminating false information.

Functions of the FBI or the local police who are responsible for protecting all Federal installations have been performed by the CIA, a violation of their CIA charter and resulting in actions against American citizens. CIA directors have always worn two hats as heads of the intelligence community and as heads of their own agency. The supra-directorship of the American Intelligence Community was enhanced by President Ford on paper when he made the CIA Director overall head of the intelligence community. At that time the Director would tell the Secretary of Defense what to do with his intelligence agencies. Military intelligence, including the Defense Intelligence Agency, the National Security Agency and the intelligence arms of the three services have more than five times as many people, an d more than ten times the budget of the CIA and State Department intelligence service combined.

You should not delude yourself that Cabinet Officers appointed by the President have any real power. Commenting on his official title as Assistant Secretary for Defense for Public Affairs, Thomas B. Ross said, I'm in charge of 300-plus people inside the building (Pentagon) and 3,000 public information people worldwide and a budget of $50 million, yet I can fire exactly two people, my civilian deputy and my secretary. What we get for $50 million is debatable.

The CIA's Science and Technology Directorates annual budget was one hundred million dollars per year. The Directorate of Science and Technology of the CIA includes the Office of Electronics, the Office of Special Projects, and the Office of Computer Services. Overruns are funded largely by the Air Force which underwrites the national overhead reconnaissance effort for the entire U.S.

intelligence community. The projected FY 81 budget included a research and development figure for the Department of Defense of $16.565 billion, forty-six percent of the total national Research and Development budget. Obviously with this kind of funding, many universities and industrial scientists work for the Department of Defense. Many of our officer cadre have Ph.D.s. They represent a technological-military elite and work with the university, industry, and think tank personnel; many of them who have security clearance are not allowed to talk to you or me. Our armed services have sufficient money and instrumentation for national defense, and unlimited snooping, at home and abroad.

Several hundred satellites in space give us most of our early-warning detection of an enemy attack. Much of our communications intercept capabilities, our ability to intercept exotic new radars in space are also relayed by satellite. A hundred percent of our ability to predict the weather is now in space. Most of our ability to navigate submarines and ships and aircraft will soon be based there. Theoretically the satellites make it almost impossible for secret war preparations and thus keep the peace. This lack of privacy between nations extends to individuals.

The U.S. has more than a dozen satellites watching the Soviet activities, taking high resolution pictures, collecting communications signals and penetrating darkness and camouflage sensing heat and color variations. A worldwide network of antennae eavesdrops on Russian communications ranging from telephone calls to sensitive military radio messages. Giant radars follow test flights of missiles and photograph reentry vehicles as they land in the Pacific or on the Kamchatka Peninsula.

It has become difficult to know whether national defense is a defense or an offense. The National Reconnaissance Office, one of our country's most expensive and sensitive intelligence organizations, is likely to be reviewed by the Reagan administration. NRO is known as a black organization; that is, none of its work is subject to public scrutiny.

Despite a program lasting many years, U.S. intelligence complains that the Soviet Union might be ahead technologically and that the Soviets already have land-based laser capable of shooting down low-orbiting U.S. spy satellites. They fear that if the Soviets get their projected 11-ton space station aloft that they could put such a weapon in space.

As a result of this the Defense Department awarded a $58.7 million contract for its own ASAT program to Vought Corporation of Dallas. The U.S. plan was not to use anything so crude as radar or infrared, but to put into space hunter-killer satellites by the mid-1980s armed with lasers that could vaporize metal in twenty billionths of a second.

Navstar Global Positioning Systems (GPS) will tell anyone who tunes in exactly where he is anywhere in the world. It has been speculated that GPS can eventually be used on anything that floats, flies, runs, walks, crawls, or slithers. This is a method which could be used now by any intelligence agency to bug an individual.

Another method of person-to-person communications through space without any intervening wires became possible when Elliot Gruenberg at IBM came up with a retro-directive oscillating loop for communications instead of a conventional transmit ter-receiver. Called Synapz and manufactured by Broad-Com, Inc. of Cos Cob, Connecticut, its electronic mirrors in the form of antennas send a microwave signal back where it came from and leads to two-way TV without cable. Retro-directive arrays across the country would use atmospheric electronic noise to maintain a radio link with each other and to send messages from any point in the system to any other. Such a system, fixed on a human MEG could account for automatic feedback, plus visualization of any kind. Engineers reviewing Synapz for NASA say that it appears promising, and claim that even the experts are not entirely sure how it works. It was demonstrated to the Department of Defense and is to be used as a space link and alternative to the technology proposed by the Bell System to expand use of mobile telephone service nationwide. Somebody evidently understands very well how it works.

At one time radio telescopes and optical telescopes were not the same thing. Now we have optical interferometers using laser which combine listening and optical ability, plus lenses that see any wave length of the electromagnetic spectrum including infrared for night vision and smog, gamma rays, ultraviolet, etc.

Honeywell advertises their manufacture of everything from thermographic (meaning heat sensitive) body scanners to optical interferometers. The use of halogen compounds which have broad transmission capabilities for all types of things, from satellite weather monitoring to infrared night-vision systems through laser-assisted nuclear fusion for the conversion of energy. Honeywells research is partially funded by the Department of Energy and the Department of Defense.

Honeywell advertises that their scientists worked with both university and commercial instrumentation experts to develop a holographic and shearing interferometer system. They say that combined with their previously developed video digitization/fringe analysis system this new interferometer provides a unique system for non-contact optical evaluation.

Using an electronically powered radio telescope you have a machine optimized to detect extremely weak signals. Recently GEODSS (ground based electro-optical deep space surveillance) was completed two years ahead of schedule. GEODSS uses three powerful, miniaturized telescopes to scan the skies. The images they convey are focused onto sensitive photoimaging tubes rather than film. Using an outgrowth of military night-vision devices, these tubes convert the faintest flickers of light into electronic impulses fed into computers. GEODSS photographs rapidly several electronic snapshots. Moving objects between exposures are recorded by computer. Images that remain the same are erased. The information can be relayed by microwave and satellite to NORADs master computers. GEODSS is an optical digital computer using laser, not integrated circuits, to carry and process signals. It performs in microseconds tasks that occupied photogrammetricians for hours, and can spot a soccer ball 25,000 miles up.

Magnetic observations by the Stanford Solar Observatory can detect magnetic intensities to a few hundredths of a gauss. The MEG (magnetoencephalogram) which records the magnetic field surrounding the human head is measured in gauss. It is not too hard to imagine that somewhere there exists a holographic interferometer specially developed to read the magnetic waves of the human brain at a distance. Since 1973, the Advanced Research Projects Agency of the Defense Department has utilized the combined efforts of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, New York University, the University of California at Los Angeles, and the National Aeronautics and Space Administrations Ames Research Center at Moffett Field in California to read minds at a distance by deciphering the brains magnetic waves. The Pentagon denied the project was secret although a reporter was ousted from a meeting on the subject by someone identified as a member of the CIA.

The MEG (magnetoencephalogram) is many times more sensitive than EEG electroencephalogram). MEG was originally reported in 1968. A computer search of the current literature reveals little published on MEG because it is undoubtedly classified in ARPAs (Advanced Research Projects Agency) computer network. ARPA controls and funds a computer network, ARPANET, which connects various educational and research institutions across the country. In 1972, twenty-seven institutions were joined by leased lines capable of handling data at a rate of fifty kilobits a sec ond.

Searching for help and information, I approached an acquaintance who unknown to me had been a former member of RAND and a designer of ARPANET. He represented to me that ARPANET was a benign activity. He even has a computer terminal in his house connected to it. ARPA research information is stored in this locked computer and unavailable. Access to Host computers is controlled by an IMP (interface message processor). ARPANET is also linked to NORSAR (Norwegian Seismic Array) and SDAC (Seismic Data Analysis Center) in Alexandria, Virginia. A satellite link transmits NORSTAR real-time data to SDAC. There it is combined and correlated with data from other non-secret global arrays to achieve a composite picture and made available to selected ARPANET users, including the NSA (National Security Agency) with whom it maintains a direct link. Somehow benign is not a word I would use to describe the activity of this computer network.

All graduations of feelings and actions of which we are capable are provided by variations in the frequencies of nerve impulses and by the number of nerve cells stimulated. The brain signal is even simpler than Morse code because it uses only dots. All information can be translated by the number of dots, and the manner in which they are grouped. Communications engineers call this system pulse frequency modulation. The cerebral cortex is a resonator that encodes frequencies. To convert measurable brain signals or nerve signals to digital code for computer is extremely easy. The computer can recognize approximately sixty-four phonemes into which the English language has been divided. It is reasonable to deduce that the computer is capable of recognizing the patterns these phonemes produce in any human brain.

Unlike the EEG, the MEG records signals primarily from a small area of the cortex free of the smearing effects of bone. This helps scientists pinpoint the source of electrical signals from the brain and to study the activities of the cortex. The MEG reads only the magnetic fields produced by nerve fibers close to the skull which are in the cortex. Any difference between EEG and MEG signals means that the source is deep in the brain and not cortical in nature. Both are necessary for the interpretation of thought and action of the human being. The MEG provides a map of the sensory homunculus or Brodmann's cortical areas through which the human anatomy can be targeted. All parts of the face, hands, legs, foot, trunk, shoulder, mouth and intra-abdominal area can be stimulated by electrical contact with the cortex.

Under ordinary conditions nobody around you is able to hear or understand your thoughts, but unbeknownst to you, every action, thought, and emotion, can result in the driving of the muscles involved in vocalization. The nerve impulses that activate them produce paths of electric potentials in the brain and muscles. The nerve impulse or electric potential is a miniature electrochemical explosion that travels along outside the nerve fiber as a vortex ring of negative ions.

The Departments of Neurometrics at Stanford and New York University have brought the EEG to a new degree of sophistication by using computers to remove artifacts, such as sixty cycle hum and eye and body movements, to compute the wave shape of the AER (average evoked response) to a particular stimulus.

Brain waves of volunteers have been analyzed as they look at photographs and are presented with true or false questions. The computer attempts to determine if the volunteer recognizes a specific photograph or is thinking true or false. Researchers claim they can determine when a volunteer recognizes another face by analyzing that volunteer's brain waves. At Stanford, scientists are attempting to reverse this process and are attempting to transmit thoughts and instructions by playing previously recorded brain waves; thus, you are programming yourself. The human brain and eye are also being studied with computers so that photographic process can be understood. We are seeing through your eyes. The difficulties involved in reading these microwaves became surmountable with the deployment of SQUID (superconducting quantum interference device) which uses niobium coils in liquid helium. It is a circuit capable of measuring minute quantities of magnetic field or flux, quantum by quantum. It makes possible the measurement of the smallest magnetic fields. With modern electronic techniques, environmental magnetic noise is almost completely eliminated. By using a holographic interferometer (acoustic telescope) optimized to detect weak signals it would be possible to read the microvolt print of any human brain, since brain prints are as distinctive as fingerprints. Each individual has his own characteristic pattern of shifts in frequency and size. Thus brain waves of one individual can be distinguished from those of another.

Electronic devices use ultrasonic waves to store and recognize electronic signals for use at a later time, perform operations that usually require a computer, and separate one signal from another. They also amplify weak electrical signals using ultrasonic waves. It is possible to do things with acoustic surface waves that are difficult to do with simple electronic components, i.e., recognize a signal of known form. Laser is so sensitive that it can actually hear and record the electrical potentials of nerves as they are transmitted. The interdigital transducer converts the electrical signal into an acoustic surface wave and reconverts the acoustic wave back into an electrical signal.

Acoustic surface wave devices can be made precisely and uniformly by photolithographic reproduction techniques and are programmable. Such a device recognizes any desired code or signal from among other digital codes even in the presence of considerable noise, responding strongly to the programmed signal and weakly to all others. This kind of device is used in radar technology enabling air-traffic controllers to accurately pick out the unique identification signal of each aircraft as it comes within range.

Another silicon chip, IOSA (integrated optic spectrum analyzer) uses surface acoustic waves to convert processed radar signals into sound waves. The sound waves interact with light from a tiny solid-state laser and cause the beam to bend toward a detector array made of charged coupled devices. This amount of deflection indicates the frequency of the radar signal. This device is part of a telemetry or remote measuring system which involves picking up signals, transmitting them to a distant location for conversion into displays, recordings or comparisons with other data. Automated reactions to information received directly or indirectly may be programmed.

Wave analyzers deal with the complex oscillations of the brain in somewhat the same way that a prism separates the colors of a beam of light. The components of this complex wave are isolated by electronic circuits tuned to several frequencies. A statistical average can be determined from many readings. From this information, the versatility of the brain under investigation can be assessed, as well as its repertoire of adaptive stratagems.

If mind reading is to take place, this technique must be applied to all parts of the brain at once involving many analyzers. Problems for researchers used to be found in the fact that frequency analysis of tactics might come too late to be of immediate value. In the past, frequency analysis did not give information on how rapidly changing signals from different parts of the brain related, or which of suggested meanings would be the correct choice. Now, via computer, all this can be instantly known.

Suppose it is true, as some officials insist, that the MEG cannot really be read at a distance. What would make one believe that one's mind was read? Artificial Intelligence (AI) has been developing over a period of at least twenty years. Many scientists have been engaged in making it seem that the computer can think. At a 1980 meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Robert Wilensky of the University of California at Berkeley was asked if his program, PAM, had intelligence. PAM incorporates a sense of how people analyze and reason.

Does the computer augment human intelligence instead of interpreting and repeating it? To do this the computer must deal with a massive volume of data and requires selectivity or the ability to decide what is or is not relevant. To the group of programmers at the meeting, the human brain is theoretically existent proof against computers. Perhaps they do not talk to bioengineers.

The Cray, a large computer, has twenty to one hundred times the capacity of the smaller ones. It is different from machines that simply keep track of facts. It is specially designed for problem solving and can carry out biomedical experimen ts with the computer simulating the human effects. The Cray does one hundred million calculations a second. The human brain can only process five thousand bits of information per second. What kind of match for the Cray would you be?

The computer works by using an acoustic processor to sample the wave patterns of the speaker's voice at least 20,000 times a second. The information in the sample is digitized. A thousand samples are collected at a time and put through the procedure called discrete Fourier transform, which involves adding, subtracting and integrating waveforms to produce a useful synthesis of the information over time. This yields characteristic patterns known as spectral time samples, one hundred of them every second. The computer compares these with prototypes stored in the processor's memory. The processor classifies the time samples according to the sounds of the original word. As the acoustic processor puts them out, a linguistic decoder matches the sound patterns to the most probable sentence pattern they seem to fit.

Current injection logic circuits, (Josephson junctions) operate at temperatures so low that metal loses resistance to electric current. The less resistance, the faster the current flows and the faster the computer works. Invented by Tushar Gheewals at IBM, the circuits operate in as little as 13 picoseconds, or trillionth of a second. Roughly, a picosecond is to a second what a second is to thirty years. This is about the same as the speed of light. Suppose you are observed over a long enough period of time for analysis of your thoughts, speech, prejudices, view-points, sexual peculiarities, and likes or dislikes of both people and things. What kinds of words would make you happy or unhappy if they were programmed by an artificial intelligence expert with the help of a psychologist or psychiatrist? Bizarre, you say. Possible, I say, psychological analysis has been a hobby for a long time. Let's take it a little further, and let's assume the computer program is out to make you as uncomfortable as possible in the privacy of your own home or any place else. Really, impossible, you say. Stop and think a while. It takes a little getting used to. There will be many things in your life that upset you or make you unhappy. You may have expressed yourself aloud to close friends in person or on the phone. You may have blown your stack at work or been talked about. In our society the walls literally have ears. Anything that vibrates can be read at a distance, even your vocal cords. Assume that for some reason you come to the attention of someone in security, either national or international. You could do this very easily by making an overseas phone call or a trip, or you could have a relative who is involved with someone in whom the U.S. government is interested. Originally, when the harassment began, I wondered if the repetition of my thoughts were bounced back by a tape recorder. Later I realized that only a fast computer could transmit them back, and that no human could read it back so quickly over space. Human comment, however, might be inserted by an observer reading some kind of visual display if he was close enough.

Properly programmed, the Cray can project to you in any voice selection on the basis of the structure of your sentenced thought, which will reach it before you have really formulated it, and select either a suitable programmed answer or read back to you what you have been thinking. Thus, you may really be programming yourself. It may even seem to anticipate your answers.

What I am saying is that you have to transform the thoughts in your mind verbally but silently. Although they are unspoken, the muscles that drive speech formulate the words in advance, and can form an electric potential track in your brain that can be read at a distance by telemetry. Each nerve impulse causes a sound imperceptible to the human ear which can be picked up by laser.

A trained observer or observers can insert speech if they read what you are about to think or say. There is a lag time between the formation of the words in your brain and the formed thought, which gives the computer time to read part or all, or guess to a fair degree of accuracy what you think, and return an appropriate or inappropriate answer depending upon how you feel about it. At times they may even seem funny. Your electric potentials will always anticipate you a little

The feeling that your mind is being read can be produced by a thought being verbally introduced at a subliminal level. At that threshold you are not aware that it is presented, but because your brain resonates, the thought is received and you become conscious of it. It is designed to be intense enough to influence the mental processes or behavior of the individual. It literally crosses your mind. Next, at a higher sound level a Voice repeats the thought you just received without knowing it, thus consciously producing the sensation of mind reading in the receiver. You think, they must be reading my mind! What they are really doing is presenting an acceptable idea in your hraseology that you are most likely to be thinking while you are involved in a particular kind of activity.

Subliminal aural suggestion presented in a manner typical of your habits of thought and speech is hard for the receiver to distinguish from the original thought, original in that it really started in the mind of the receiver and wasn't suggested to him. Just how hard is it to differentiate between the two, the original idea and the suggested idea, is hard to estimate. You really have to be paying strict attention to yourself and what you are doing. You still might not be certain, because the presented idea might be typical of your mind set so that you could accept or go along with it. Should the idea just pop into your head and not be part of a train of thought you might be suspicious. Unfortunately, with this kind of thing, an idea can be slipped in. If it seems logical or fits your mood or mode of thought, you would not question it. Often it would not matter, but while using machinery, driving a car, or piloting a plane it could become fatal. Suppose you forget something and suddenly were reminded at a subliminal level. You could not be sure that you yourself remembered or whether it was called to your attention by an outside mind keeping track of your activity. You could be writing something and thinking as you write and suddenly write the wrong word. On re-reading it, you would realize that as you wrote it, it was introduced. You might misdial a phone number and not be sure whether you made a natural mistake or one that was inflicted at a subliminal level. When you finally realize what is really going on you are certainly going to be upset, at the very least. High "verbals" are natural prey for this kind of situation, especially if they can be observed. They express themselves well, often aloud in writing. Their thought patterns and methods of arriving at conclusions or solutions, their modi operandi, can be predicted if they are observed over time.

It is an extremely debilitating, nightmarish situation to be in. For instance, during REM (rapid eye movement) sleep when you are dreaming, ideas are verbally suggested to you at a subliminal level thus controlling or influencing your dream content. With a combination of subliminal, aural presentation of ideas plus the introduction or infliction of bizarre physical effects, real hallucinatory images and effects could be produced. The more emotionally upset you are, the more effective this kind of psychological technique is likely to be.

We used to worry about just being observed in our homes. In George Orwell's 1984, every home had a watching monitor. It is now only 1981. The monitor has been around since the fifties in one form or another. The ultimate in mind control has become possible. We have the technology, the psychological techniques and the people willing to use them. It is not preventable at present.

Fortunately, we still have time to protect ourselves from government experimentation if we are aware of it, because only the U.S. government has the technology, manpower and material to mount such an effort.

Once you are a victim you become aware of the possibility of suggestions to people; who you meet casually, or your friends, or relatives, or your immediate family. There is no one who cannot be reached in this way. You are never absolutely positive that what they say or do is suggested, but you may have strong suspicions when something they do seems atypical, or out of context, or something is said you have been forced to listen to before involuntarily. In the future we may all have to go around wearing some protective device on our heads to prevent our resonating cortexes from receiving unwanted messages. My brother's suggestion of putting a bucket over my head was not too far off. The only problem with his suggestion was that a bucket is not sophisticated enough.

You know your cortical signals are read, because you receive obnoxious stimuli to various parts of your anatomy through the electrical stimulation of the cortical layer of your brain. The cortex has been mapped, and stimulation of the proper section of cortex will make you salivate, sneeze or jump with muscle spasms, twitch or jerk. This sounds like a grade B movie, but the script is programmed by the U.S. intelligence service with your tax money.

Cray II was in the works in early 1979, and the prediction was that it would do 500 million calculations a second, not just 100 million. A third, even faster computer, was taking shape in Seymour Crays mind beyond this. At Livermores fusion computer center a scientist said, Theres no machine that Seymour Cray can conceive that would be too fast for us. When it comes through his bedroom door some night he may change his mind. Perhaps with his security clearance he wont have to worry, and will be able to ask it to leave, with the people who are operating it.

Now, I know from talking to others that you are going to say, But, it would take an awful lot of money and manpower to mount such an effort. Who would be interested in you, or me, or anyone? The other, very human reaction is, Who would be so mean that they would do such a thing to you?

Both of these arguments ignore the facts. We have unlimited material and manpower on duty twenty-four hours a day. The second response about mean people, is the most naive. Read the newspapers about what we still do to our Black People; the reactions of Blacks and Chicanos to unresponsive government; or the treatment of women by the military when they have the temerity to enlist. You can still read about WW II concentration camp victims and operators. Current European court cases are testimony forty years later to just how mean mankind can be.

You should not be optimistic about civil liberties in an age when you are carefully examined by the Department of Education, the Social Security Administration, the Internal Revenue Service, the Department of Motor Vehicles, labor unions, medical insurance companies, credit companies, banks, employers, and all these facts are carefully stored in some computer to be regurgitated either by accident, or on purpose, when you least expect it and for the flimsiest of excuses. Add to this, money from the LEAA (Law Enforcement Assistance Administration) for police enforcement, intelligence, and so-called crime fighting; and you will find that it is only a short step from your police department to your bedroom, if some nosy Nellie of either sex decides to make life hot for you! Our society isnt open, it is wide open. If anything else is to be done about harassment and the preservation of privacy, then people must be made aware of what is possible now, incredible though as the facts may seem.

Among acknowledged gadgets are a police crowd control device consisting of a high frequency sound generator which produces about twenty-five to thirty-five kilohertz, coupled to a high efficiency tweeter and some concentrating baffles. This machine is something like a bullhorn. The beam produces severe nausea, pain, the desire to urinate and defecate, but more especially to get out of range. There is no reason why these symptoms cannot be produced from space.

In the home, sonic cushions that contain transducers which emit low frequency musical vibrations directly into the body of the person sitting against them are becoming familiar. The cushion has a separate power amplifier that hooks to any music system. Recently a popular magazine suggested that sitting upon such a cushion produced pleasurable sexual sensations. Teddy bears similarly equipped are used to lull babies to sleep. Hearing aids are available which fit eyeglass frames to send vibrating waves through the bone structure at the back of the ear so that the deaf may hear. This hearing aid is the result of miniaturization involving an ultra-small microphone and amplifier. It contains transducers that transmit vibrations directly into the body of the person in contact with it. The whole device fits into the stem of the eyeglass frame.

Such microminiaturization in which a microscope has to be used to etch or photograph a circuit on a silicon chip is relatively easy for the layperson to grasp. Not so easy is micromasurement and sensing. One type of light sensor or photosensitive matrix is a composite of 10,000 minute silicon light sensors on a chip about a quarter of an inch square. Reflected light is focused onto the matrix. Th e resultant pattern of lighted and unlighted sensors is fed into circuitry for conversion into measurements of area, height, width, etc., which in turn are converted into a seven digit code. Field effect transistors calibrate to infinitesimal accuracy. Small built-in computers convert data into an audio signal or print. Recorded data can then be transmitted over ordinary telephone lines to a computer bank. Some TVs are equipped with a decoder to convert sound to print for the deaf.

Much of the technology that we are now using has been under development over a long period of time. The prototype of the modern mind-reader was developed in 1947 and called the Toposcope. It was similar to twenty-two small television or radar sets.

Research on the human brain has been made possible by some of the newer machines. The Sono Chromoscope is currently being evaluated at the National Institutes of Health to identify tumors and abnormalities. Cheaper than x-ray, it is absolutely safe and permits continuous recording of tissue at work. Computer technology converts one kind of signal into another to produce an accurate diagnostic color picture of the human interior. High frequency sonar is transmitted in blue, while low frequency may be a red dot.

NMR (nuclear magnetic resonance) tomography can map the progress of chemicals injected into the brain. The Gamma Ray camera, consisting of 254 scintillation detectors, each collimated to scan approximately one square centimeter of brain cortex is connected to a small digital computer. This, in turn, is connected to a TV where the blood flow level is shown in specific colors indicating what areas of the brain are active. The whole body can be placed in a magnetic field of 450 gauss exciting body atoms with radio waves. Subsequent measurement of the intensity of the waves emitted over time gives information about the chemical composition of the subjects tissues. The time it takes for the atoms to relax after radio wave bombardment gives some indication of the cells general nature. NMR employs no ionizing radiation and therefore seems safer than conventional techniques like x-ray.

The PETT (position electron tracking tomogram) tracks radioactive chemicals and forms a computerized image, providing the first direct glimpse of the brain at work, plus a more superior estimate of its condition than CAT (computer assisted tomography). The computer reconstructs abstract measurements into images played out in color on a TV screen. PETT scan can be photographed or videotaped while an individual is walking, talking, reading or thinking.

FOCUS (flexible optical control unit simulator) projects hallucinatory images directly on the retina of the eye. When the images are projected the subjects show the same bodily responses that they would by taking a drug. The subjects cannot tell the machine images from reality. FOCUS was developed at UCLA's Neuropsychiatric Institute by Ron Siegel, an experimental psychologist, who eventually hopes to control retrieval of imagery information at will, including that of daydreams, sleep, and hallucinations.

There is a common wiring and a correspondence of chemical and electrical properties in the human brain. Fever, delirium, epilepsy, syphilis, photostimulation, sensory deprivation, extreme hunger, cold, thirst, crystal gazing, swinging in the witch's cradle, hypoglycemia, and a variety of drug intoxications make the brain respond in patterns that are definable, predictable and explainable in terms of where they come from and how they were produced. This universal experience is probably what Jung meant by the collective unconscious and typified by symbols like the mandala.

Body functions tend to synchronize around stimuli that match them in frequency. Baselines from normal individuals have been established through measurements with the EEG (electroencephalogram). The EEG shows brain waves in both periodic and pulse mode. At normal frequencies, eight to twelve alpha waves occur per second.

Breathing, heart rate, and the rhythm of alpha waves can be controlled to some extent both by the individual himself and the external stimuli such as lights and microwaves. Radio-scientist Anthony Fraser-Smith has shown that the third rail of San Francisco's Bay Area Rapid Transit and Washington D.C.'s Metro expose people up to 160 kilometers away to broadcasts of ultra-low frequency radiation from ten hertz to .001 hertz. Studies have shown that human reaction time increases at 0.2 hertz. These frequencies make people feel drowsy and produce changes in their blood.

With this in mind it is easier to comprehend that brain control by electronic stimulation is possible in much the same way that a heart pacer is used to regulate the heart beat. Both seen and unseen, heard and unheard wave frequencies can affect the brain and nervous system.

Some researchers show that theta waves predominate when an individual is involved in memory storage and learning. They also seem to occur in times of reverie, annoyance or anxiety. Animals which retain training best, show the highest levels of theta waves during training. Ross Adey, however, has shown that he can increase the rate of learning and memory retention in primates and cats by using a frequency range similar to the alpha and beta waves of the brain.

During hypnotism, synchronization of breathing, heartbeat and alpha waves takes about ten minutes in a willing subject, and is associated with feelings of well being. A simple gadget like a hypnotism wheel with a special strobe pattern produces a falling illusion and produces a so-called trance state.

These can also be produced by sound waves. Frequency rates of these biological signals are reduced during a trance-inducing procedure. As the mind becomes fixed it becomes more susceptible to suggestion. Relaxation, resting and sleep are also helpful in inducing a hypnotic trance. While hypnosis can be a helpful technique, it is also part of mind control.

Other brain waves have individual, identifiable frequencies. Beta, delta, and theta brain waves can be separated in any brain reading because they all have different frequencies. Recently an N400 wave has been identified, so named because it occurs 400 milliseconds after a sentence had been heard in which there is a high level of expectancy about its completion, and this expectancy is violated. The P300 wave occurs in response to a sudden alarm or flashing light, and occurs 300 milliseconds after the stimulus. A P300 wave comes not from the cortex, but from the limbic system where feelings originate and occurs only as an emotional response.

It is my belief that all these brain waves or electrical signals can be read at a distance, and that the human brain can be both a resonating transmitter and receiver. Further, I am saying that I am being harassed by unknown parties with whom I have been in constant contact for about three years consciously, and I am not sure how long before that, while base lines of various kinds were being established.

I have chosen a time in our national history to protest that the National Security Agency is undoubtedly experimenting with some of its more exotic toys on an unsuspecting civilian population, when we are in the process of giving back to the CIA and similar agencies some of the powers that had temporarily been taken away from them due to Watergate. Our Congress is in disarray, revealed by the FBI to be both gullible and venal. Our country's petrochemical supply is being threatened by communist, and in the mist of all this, I come up with the idea that civil liberties and individual privacy are at stake in ways that seem inconceivable. Even in the best of times I would have difficulty getting a hearing for this kind of story.

Our present electronic laws are constructed to prosecute after the fact. There seems to be no successful method of proving harassment with this type of technology because there is no hard evidence. One of the reasons that it is impossible at present to prove, is that no one will admit publicly that the possibility exists. Despite the fact that William Colby mentions it on a TV show, and that a newspaper reporter was thrown out of a meeting in which well known Ph.D.s from UCLA, MIT, NYU, NASA, and ARPA were specifically discussing a machine to read minds from a distance by deciphering the brain's magnetic waves; and the specific goal of which is to exercise control over the brain. Nobody will admit that it can be done. The so-called experts have their jobs and families to protect. Security agency employees are bound by secrecy oaths, as are many academicians. The professors say, That's an area outside my expertise. Paul said, I am not into lasers. Very few people have the kind of education necessary to understand the innate possibilities and dangers of current technology. Anonymous phone calls are something for which we are beginning to find a cure. Anonymous broadcasts are something else, especially if only one person hears it. This is possible via laser. It is so precise that a whole new body of measurements is mandatory and possible. Your most private and intimate bodily routines become forced performances and are commented on as they unfold. Your mentally verbalized fantasies become public property. You can be questioned at the subliminal level and started on a whole new train of thought. Thus the inserter of the question would have a very good clue as to what you were thinking about. You could also be made to change or modify your course of action, in other words your mind. The worst element in all of this is subliminal suggestion, with its inherent capability of conditioning and directing thinking; and through this, control or direction of individual behavior both now and in the future. Young and unformed minds are going to be most susceptible. The emotionally upset and unstable will be next. Americans need education and information to defend against this kind of technocracy. Most of all they need to be told the truth. I can keep silent and avoid embarrassment, ridicule and disbelief. A policeman told me to ignore it. A security man told me that my life could be made hell on earth. The main inventor, a physicist, told me it was impossible. The whole thing may be simply a combination of laser communication and AI, which I doubt. Regardless of what it is, all Americans can be reached, anywhere at anytime doing anything, without attachments and wires. Communications have come at least that far.

Currently on planet Earth stone-age man and spaceman coexist. We have been coming out of an ancient jungle and have stumbled into a technological battle zone. What man imagines, he will develop and continue to develop.

Although you cannot see them, only sense them, the largest unseen monsters are unchanged. They are ignorance, fear and superstition. The biggest question for our time is: How do we best adapt to this recent step in communications, and at the same time preserve the values we cherish?

[Note:1] There were probably additional electromagnetic methods, acoustics, and instruments. Sources familiar with the situation indicated that the author was implanted with devices and was unaware of it.

Mind Control: (Please be aware mind control is all thoughts to the 5 senses in suggestions 24/7 and not all physical effect of ELF/EMF, but have been nefariously abused secretly before patents.

The Ultimate Brave New World

Technologies for stimulating the brain and controlling the mind can have benefits, but they have a dark side that military and intelligence planners have been exploiting for decades.

Extracted from Nexus Magazine, Volume 13, Number 2

(February - March 2006 & April-May 2006) PO Box 30, Mapleton Qld 4560 Australia. editor@nexusmagazine.com www.nexusmagazine.com

by Nick Begich, MD 2006 Extracted from: "Controlling the Human Mind 2006

It would also appear possible to create high fidelity speech in the human body, raising the possibility of covert suggestion and psychological direction... Thus, it may be possible to "talk" to selected adversaries in a fashion that would be most disturbing to them.

US Air Force, New World Vistas: Air and Space Power for the 21st Century

The idea that the brain can be made to function at a more efficient and directed level has been the subject of research by scientists, mystics, health practitioners and others for as long as mankind has contemplated such matters. In the last decade, advances in the science of the brain have begun to yield significant results. The results of the research are startling, challenging and, if misused, will be frightening. The certainty to be expected from the research is that it will continue to proceed. The idea that people can be impacted by external signal generators which create, for example, pulsed electromagnetic fields, pulsed light and pulsed sound signals is not new. The following information demonstrates ome of the possibilities and gives hints of the potentials of the technology. On the positive side, researchers in the field of light and sound are making huge progress in a number of areas, including working with learning disabilities, attention deficit disorders, stroke recovery, accelerated learning, drug/alcohol addiction and enhanced human performance. The research has shown that certain brain states can be influenced in a way which causes changes within the brain itself. These changes allow individuals the possibility of influencing specific conditions in the mind and body otherwise thought beyond our direct control. The military and others interested in such things have also focused a large amount of research into this area for the purpose of enhancing the performance of soldiers while degrading the performance of adversaries. What is known is that great strides in the area of behaviour control are now possible with systems developed and under development by most sophisticated countries on the planet. These new technologies represent a much different approach to warfare which our government is describing as part of the "Revolution in Military affairs". While these new technologies offer much for military planners, they offer even more to citizens generally. Their potential use in military applications and "peacekeeping" creates the need for open debate of this new realm of intelligence-gathering, manipulation and warfare. The most basic ethical questions regarding use of these technologies have not been adequately addressed. At the same time that defence and intelligence-gathering capabilities are being sought, independent researchers are fully engaged in seeking positive uses for the technology. The potentials of the technology, like all technology, are great as both a destructive or constructive force for change. The idea of enhancing physical and mental performance while bypassing what heretofore was a long and arduous road to achieve the same results is exciting. Maintaining the research in the open literature and ensuring that constructive uses are encouraged is critical. I began looking into technologies for stimulating brain performance about fifteen years ago. At the time, there were limited tools available compared to what is now possible. Now it is possible to obtain light and sound, electrocranial and biofeedback tools for use in this exploration. Moreover, there are audio materials also available for use with most of these tools. These audio materials can be used for learning languages, behaviour modification or enhanced performance. The biofeedback side of the new technology is being used to train people to reach specific desired brain states for optimum performance. The use of light and sound devices for stimulating brain activity which is conducive to accelerated learning and relaxation is a growing area of interest to many people. Moreover, the use of these tools in conjunction with biofeedback has been the subject of quickly evolving research. The combined technologies of brain state inducement and biofeedback offer exciting possibilities. It has been found with the combination that a person, in a matter of several weeks, can learn to modify purposefully his/her brain activity in a way which would have taken a Zen master twenty years to accomplish. It has been shown that some children with attention deficit disorders can be taught to regulate their brain activities so that they can learn efficiently without chemicals. It has been demonstrated that recovering stroke victims can more rapidly recover when working with brain-biofeedback practitioners and these new tools. The research is also teaching us a good deal about our suggestibility in terms of influences which have an impact on our behaviour. The underlying message that comes with the new technology is the necessity of providing safeguards against misuse. Additionally, recognition of the everyday stimulation we all get and the effect of these information inputs on our learning processes becomes more clear. The suggestibility of humans, particularly when in a fatigued condition, has been exploited by terrorists, cults and others in pursuit of their own aims. The passive suggestibility of radio and television as we weave in and out of the semi-sleep states is for the most part not even recognised. The passive learning situations become even more relevant when we consider how we "receive the news" in our daily lives. The ability to influence thinking, behaviour and performance is indeed a two-edged sword. The 1980s and 1990s were focused on building up the physical body. The 21st century will see a focus on building the mind and optimising mental performance. The idea o f merging the new technologies into education is interesting and also calls into question who will decide what is to be learned. In the interim, the possibilities are incredible for those interested in such pursuits. The control of our mental function is no different than the control of the muscles in our bodies. Learning to control or coordinate the activity of our minds will propel our bodies through a much more productive and fuller life. The new tools may offer just such opportunities. On the other side of the issue is the potential for misuse and exploitation of the science. Military planners, law enforcement officials and others are now seeking the covert use of these technologies for controlling the ultimate "information processor" the Human Being.

MK-ULTRA

"Dr Gottlieb, born August 3, 1918, was the CIA's real-life 'Dr Strangelove' a brilliant

bio-chemist who designed and headed MKULTRA, the agency's most far-reaching drug and mind-control program at the height of the Cold War. Though the super-secret MKULTRA was ended in 1964, a streamlined version called MK-SEARCH was continued with Gottlieb in charge until 1972." During this period, substantial interest in mind control was stimulated by Soviet use of microwaves. In 1988, "thirty-five years after security officers first noticed that the Soviets were bombarding the US embassy in Moscow with microwave radiation, the US Government still has not determined conclusively or is unwilling to reveal the purpose behind the beams". The US government did know what was happening. The Soviets had developed methods for disrupting the purposeful thought of humans and were using their knowledge to impact diplomats in the United States embassy in Moscow. In 1994, a report concerning the MKULTRA program was issued, containing the following information:

"In the 1950s and '60s, the CIA engaged in an extensive program of human experimentation, using drugs, psychological, and other means, in search of techniques to control human behavior for counterintelligence and covert action purposes." In

1973, the CIA purposefully destroyed most of the MKULTRA files concerning its research and testing on human behaviour. In 1977, the agency uncovered additional

MKULTRA files in the budget and fiscal records that were not indexed under the name MKULTRA. These documents detailed over 150 subprojects that the CIA funded in this area, but no evidence was uncovered at that time concerning the use of radiation. "The CIA did investigate the use and effect of microwaves on human beings in response to a Soviet practice of beaming microwaves on the US embassy. The agency determined that this was outside the scope of the Advisory Committee's purview. "...The Church Committee found some records, but also noted that the practice of MKULTRA at that time was 'to maintain no records of the planning and approval of test programs'. ...MKULTRA itself was technically closed out in 1964, but some of its work was transferred to the Office of Research and Development (ORD) within the DS&T under the name MKSEARCH and continued into the 1970s. "The

CIA worked closely with the Army in conducting the LSD experiments. This connection with the Army is significant because MKULTRA began at the same time that Secretary of Defense Wilson issued his 1953 directive to the military services on ethical guidelines for human experiments. "Throughout the course of MKULTRA, the CIA sponsored numerous experiments on unwitting humans. After the death of one such individual (Frank Olson, an army scientist, was given LSD in 1953 and committed suicide a week later), an internal CIA investigation warned about the dangers of such experimentation. The CIA persisted in this practice for at least the next ten years. After the 1963 IG [Inspector-General] report recommended termination of unwitting testing, Deputy Director for Plans Richard Helms (who later became Director of Central Intelligence) continued to advocate covert testing on the ground that 'positive operational capability to use drugs is diminishing, owing to a lack of realistic testing. With increasing knowledge of state of the art, we are less capable of staying up with the Soviet advances in this field'. ... Helms attributed the cessation of the unwitting testing to the high risk of embarrassment to the Agency as well as the 'moral problem'. He noted that no better covert situation had been devised than that which had been used, and that 'we have no answer to the moral issue'. " They did have the answers to the moral questions on human experimentation but chose to ignore them, destroy the records, hide the truth and still continue in their efforts. Nothing has changed as each participating organisation, using national security laws, avoids disclosure and accountability. The records which were destroyed contained the evidence necessary perhaps to send some participants to jail for society's version of behaviour modification. Once again, there was no accountability and no recognition of the rights of the individuals damaged by these experiments.

Mind Wars

"For the first time in some 500 years, a scientific revolution has begun that will fundamentally change the world as much as the Renaissance and Enlightenment did. A handful of extraordinary new advances in science are taking humans quickly and deeply into areas that will have profound implications for the future." One of these areas is control of the human mind. The issues surrounding behaviour modification, mind control and information warfare become crystal clear as the facts unfold. The following is taken from a current military document, "The Information Revolution and the Future Air Force" by Colonel John A. Warden III, USAF, which clarifies their position in the emerging area of research, taking a much different direction than the one described above: "We're currently experiencing, on an unprecedented global basis, three simultaneous revolutions, any one of which would be more than enough to shock and confound us. The first revolution, a geopolitical revolution, sees a single dominant power in the world for the first time since the fall of Rome. The opportunities that are inherent in this situation are extraordinary, as are the pitfalls. Unfortunately, there is no one around that has first hand experience in how to deal with that kind of single power dominant world. "The second revolution, and there's a lot of discussion about this so far, is the information revolution. As other people have mentioned, it is following inexorably in tandem behind Moore's law of computing power. Attendant to it, though, is not the creation of new ideas and technologies, but also an exponential growth in the velocity of information dissemination, and for us that is of extraordinary importance. A key part of this information revolution has an awesome impact on competition. The business that introduced a new product ten years ago could count on probably five years before it had to look seriously at potential competitors based overseas. Today, you're lucky if you can count on five months or even five weeks before you are facing the overseas competitor. In today's world, success simply demands rapid introduction of successively new products or military systems. Success now goes to the organization which exploits information almost instantly, while failure is the near certain fate of the organization which tries to hoard or hide ideas. Real simple use it or you're going to lose it. "The third revolution, which is a little bit more complex, is the military/technological revolution, or in some places called the revolution in military affairs. I'm convinced that this is the first military technological revolution ever because we now have, for the first time, a conceptually different way to wage war. We can wage war in parallel now. In the past, communications and weapons technology, especially weapons accuracy, have constrained us to waging serial war. This changes almost everything. "Biological Process Control: As we look forward to the future, it seems likely that this nation will be involved in multiple conflicts where our military forces increasingly will be placed in situations where the application of full force capabilities of our military might cannot be applied. We will be involved intimately with hostile populations in situations where the application of non-lethal force will be the tactical or political preference. It appears likely that there are a number of physical agents that might actively, but largely benignly, interact or interfere with biological processes in an adversary in a manner that will provide our armed forces the tools to control these adversaries without extensive loss of life or property. These physical agents could include acoustic fields, optical fields, electromagnetic fields, and combinations thereof. This paper will address only the prospect of physical regulation of biological processes using electromagnetic fields. "Prior to the mid-21st century, there will be a virtual explosion of knowledge in the field of neuroscience. We will have achieved a clear understanding of how the human brain works, how it really controls the various functions of the body, and how it can be manipulated (both positively and negatively). One can envision the development of electromagnetic energy sources, the output of which can be pulsed, shaped, and focused, that can couple with the human body in a fashion that will allow one to prevent voluntary muscular movements, control emotions (and thus actions), produce sleep, transmit suggestions, interfere with both short-term and long-term memory, produce an experience set, and delete an experience set. This will open the door for the development of some novel capabilities that can be used in armed conflict, in terrorist/hostage situations, and in training. New weapons that offer the opportunity of control of an adversary without resorting to a lethal situation or to collateral casualties can be developed around this concept. This would offer significant improvements in the capabilities of our special operation forces. "Initial experimentation should be focused on the interaction of electromagnetic energy and the neuromuscular junctions involved in voluntary muscle control. Theories need to be developed, modeled, and tested in experimental preparations. Early testing using in vitro cell cultures of neural networks could provide the focus for more definitive intact animal testing. If successful, one could envision a weapon that would render an opponent incapable of taking any meaningful action involving any higher motor skills (e.g., using weapons, operating tracking systems). The prospect of a weapon to accomplish this when targeted against an individual target is reasonable; the prospect of a weapon effective against a massed force would seem to be more remote. Use of such a device in an enclosed area against multiple targets (hostage situation) may be more difficult than an individual target system, but probably feasible. "It would also appear to be possible to create high fidelity speech in the human body, raising the possibility of covert suggestion and psychological direction. When a high power microwave pulse in the gigahertz range strikes the human body, a very small temperature perturbation occurs. This is associated with a sudden expansion of the slightly heated tissue. This expansion is fast enough to produce an acoustic wave. If a pulse stream is used, it should be possible to create an internal acoustic field in the 515 kilohertz range, which is audible. Thus, it may be possible to 'talk' to selected adversaries in a fashion that would be most disturbing to them.

"In comparison to the discussion in the paragraphs above, the concept of imprinting an experience set is highly speculative, but nonetheless highly exciting. Modern electromagnetic scattering theory raises the prospect that ultra-short pulse scattering through the human brain can result in reflected signals that can be used to construct a reliable estimate of the degree of central nervous system arousal. The concept behind this 'remote EEG' is to scatter off of action potentials or ensembles of action potentials in major central nervous system tracts. As suming we will understand how our skills are imprinted and recalled, it might be possible to take this concept one step further and duplicate the experience set in another individual. The prospect of providing a 'been there done that' knowledge base could provide a revolutionary change in our approach to specialized training. How this can be done or even if it can be done are significant unknowns [sic]. The impact of success would boggle the mind!" The above report was a forecast for the year 2020. However, the reality is that these technologies already exist and there are a number of patents in the open literature which clearly show the possibilities. This research is not new but goes back to the 1950s. "A new class of weapons, based on electromagnetic fields, has been added to the muscles of the military organism. The C3I [Command, Control, Communications and Intelligence] doctrine is still growing and expanding. It would appear that the military may yet be able to completely control the minds of the civilian population." The targeting of civilian populations by the military is a significant departure from its history. In the past, the military has used persuasion through real information rather than using deliberate deception and mind manipulation to win populations over.

"A decoy and deception concept presently being considered is to remotely create the perception of noise in the heads of personnel by exposing them to low power, pulsed microwaves. When people are illuminated with properly modulated low power

r microwaves the sensation is reported as a buzzing, clicking, or hissing which seems to originate (regardless of the person's position in the field) within or just behind the head. The phenomena occurs [sic] at average power densities as low as microwatts per square centimeter with carrier frequencies from 0.4 to 3.0 GHz. By proper choice of pulse characteristics, intelligible speech may be created. Before this technique may be extended and used for military applications, an understanding of the basic principles must be developed. Such an understanding is not only required to optimize the use of the concept for camouflage, decoy and deception operations but is required to properly assess safety factors of such microwave exposure. Actual testing of certain systems has proven "that movements, sensations, emotions, desires, ideas, and a variety of psychological phenomena may be induced, inhibited, or modified by electrical stimulation of specific areas of the brain. These facts have changed the classical philosophical concept that the mind was beyond experimental reach." The first widespread interest in the subject of mind control hit the mainstream of military think-tanks after the Korean War when returning prisoners of war exhibited significant behavioural changes. In 1956, the following was written into the United States Congressional Record:

"Reports of the treatment of American prisoners of war in Korea have given rise to several popular misconceptions, of which the most widely publicized is 'brain washing'. The term itself has caught the public imagination and is used, very loosely, to describe any act committed against an individual by the Communists. Actual 'brainwashing' is a prolonged psychological process, designed to erase an individual's past beliefs and concepts and to substitute new ones. It is a highly coercive practice which is irreconcilable with universally accepted medical ethics. In the process of 'brainwashing', the efforts of many are directed against an individual. To be successful, it requires, among other things, that the individual be completely isolated from normal associations and environment." The ethical considerations have not changed, but the military's position on the ethics has changed as it has gained significant capabilities in these areas. "Psychological warfare is becoming increasingly important for US forces as they engage in peacekeeping operations. 'In the psychological operations area, we're always looking to build on our existing technologies, so much of this is evolutionary,' [military planner] Holmes said. 'It is critically important that we stay ahead of the technology curve.'" The temptation to dabble in this area has now overcome the ethical considerations. A Russian military article offered a slightly different slant to the problem, declaring that "humanity stands on the brink of a psychotronic war" with the mind and body as the focus. These "psychotronic" weapons aim to control or alter the psyche, or to attack the various sensory and data processing systems of the human organism. In both cases, the goal is to confuse or destroy the signals that normally keep the body in equilibrium.

According to a US Department of Defense directive (S-3600.1, December 9, 1996), "information warfare" is defined as "an information operation conducted during time of crisis or conflict to achieve or promote specific objectives over a specific adversary or adversaries". An "information operation" is defined in the same directive as "actions taken to affect adversary information and information systems". These "information systems" lie at the heart of the modernisation effort of the US armed forces and manifest themselves as hardware, software, communications capabilities and highly trained individuals. Information warfare has tended to ignore the role of the human body as an information or data processor in this quest for dominance, except in those cases where an individual's logic or rational thought may be upset via Dis-information or deception... Yet, the body is capable not only of being deceived, manipulated or mis-informed but also shut down or destroyed just as any other data-processing system. The "data" the body receives from external sources, such as electromagnetic, vortex or acoustic energy waves, or creates through its own electrical or chemical stimuli, can be manipulated or changed, just as the data (information) in any hardware system can be altered. If the ultimate target of information warfare is the information-dependent process, "whether human or automated", then the definition implies that human data-processing of internal and external signals can clearly be considered an aspect of information warfare.

On a much grander scale, the use of mind control was contemplated as far back as 1969

by a former science adviser to President Johnson. "Gordon J. F. Macdonald, a geophysicist specializing in problems of warfare, has written that accurately timed, artificially excited strokes 'could lead to a pattern of oscillations that produce relatively high power levels over certain regions of the earth... In this way, one could develop a system that would seriously impair the brain performance of very large populations in selected regions over an extended period..' This capability exists today through the use of systems which can stimulate the ionosphere to return a pulsed (modulated) signal which, at the right frequency, can override normal brain functions. By overriding the natural pulsations of the brain, chemical reactions are triggered which alter the emotional state of targeted populations. Subliminal Messages and commercial Uses One of the areas where this new technology is being used is in systems to dissuade shoplifters, using sound below the range of hearing. "Japanese shopkeepers are playing CDs with subliminal messages to curb the impulses of the growing band of shoplifters. The Mind Control CDs have sound-tracks of popular music or ocean waves, with encoded voices in seven languages...warning that anyone caught stealing will be reported to the police." A number of devices have been developed to influence behaviour in this way, and patents have been awarded. The following summations are taken from some of these patents dealing with both audio and video programming. Only this time, we are the program: "An auditory subliminal programming system includes a subliminal message encoder that generates fixed frequency security tones and combines them with a subliminal message signal to produce an encoded subliminal message signal which is recorded on audio tape or the like. A corresponding subliminal decoder/mixer is connected as part of a user's conventional stereo system and receives as inputs an audio program selected by the user and the encoded subliminal message." "Ambient audio signals from the customer shopping area within a store are sensed and fed to a signal processing circuit that produces a control signal which varies with variations in the amplitude of the sensed audio signals. A control circuit adjusts the amplitude of an auditory subliminal antishoplifting message to increase with increasing amplitudes of sensed audio signals and decrease with decreasing amplitudes of sensed audio signals. This amplitude controlled subliminal message may be mixed with background music and transmitted to the shopping area." "Data to be displayed is combined with a composite video signal. The data is stored in memory in digital form. Each byte of data is read out in sequential fashion to determine: the recurrence display rate of the data according to the frame sync pulses of the video signal; the location of the data within the video image according to the line sync pulses of the video signal; and the location of the data display within the video image according to the position information." "This invention is a combination of a subliminal message generator that is 100% user programmable for use with a television receiver.

The subliminal message generator periodically displays user specified messages for the normal television signal for [a] specific period of time. This permits an individual to employ a combination of subliminal and supraliminal therapy while watching television."

The above points may seem a bit complicated; however, they can be summarised. These patents are designed to provide a way to hide messages in video or audio formats, masking any suggestions that the programmer wishes to convey. These kinds of messages bypass the conscious mind and are acted upon by the person hearing them; they are not sorted out by the active mind. Although these technologies are being developed for personal use and as security measures, consider the possibilities for abuse by commercial interests where the messages might be "buy, buy, buy", "drink more, don't worry", or some other self-serving script. Should these systems be regulated? By whom and under what conditions? New Standards for What is a Memory "Nevada is currently the only state to allow witness testimony of a person who has undergone hypnosis. As of October 1, 1997, courts hearing both c ivil and criminal cases can take a hypnotically refreshed testimony, as long as the witness, if a minor, has had the informed consent of parent or guardian, and the person performing the hypnosis is any of the following: a health care provider, a clinical social worker licenced in accordance with 641B of Nevada Revised Statute, or a disinterested investigator." This issue will surely become more complex as technology advances in terms of evidence. When the day arrives that it is possible to change or alter memory completely, as suggested earlier by military officers, what then? How will we separate the real from the unreal? What will be the impact on the burden of proof in courts as it relates to "reasonable doubt"? Again, the emergence of the technology has first to be recognised as real before laws can be constructed and systems established for controlling misuse. Think how long it has taken the courts even to recognise hypnotherapy as valid science. We are hopeful that we will not have to wait so long for legislative bodies to take the initiative to address these issues.

Auditory Effects The questions which this section raises are profound. Is it possible to transmit a signal to the brain of a person, from a distance, which deposits specific sounds, voice or other information which can be understood? Is it possible to transfer sound in a way where only the targeted person can hear the "voice in the head" and no one else hears a thing? Is it possible to shift a person's emotions using remote electromagnetic tools? The answer to each of these questions is a resounding "Yes!" The state of the science has passed even the most optimistic predictions, and the capabilities are here now. Military literature suggests that this is possible. A series of experiments, patents and independent research confirm that this technology exists today. While giving testimony to the European Parliament in 1998, I demonstrated one such device to the astonishment of those in attendance. This particular device required physical contact in order to work and was nearly forty years old. This area of research is one of the most important because it points to the ultimate weapon of political control: the ability to place information directly into the human brain, bypassing all normal filtering mechanisms. In 1995, the US Department of Defense put forward the contract, "Communicating via the Microwave Auditory Effect; Awarding Agency: Department of Defense; SBIR Contract Number: F41624-95-C-9007". The description of this technology, which would be used for direct communications with military personnel, is written as follows: "Title: Communicating via the Microwave Auditory Effect

"Description: An innovative and revolutionary technology is described that offers a means of low-probability-of-intercept Radio Frequency (RF) communications. The feasibility of the concept has been established using both a low intensity laboratory system and a high power RF transmitter. Numerous military applications exist in areas of search and rescue, security and special operations." The feasibility was not only demonstrated in the laboratory but also in the field using a radio-frequency carrier. In the case of the Gulf War, we had always suspected that the reason the Iraqis gave up in mass was not because of the heavy bombardments but because they were being hit with new "nonlethal" systems which created fear and perhaps even worse. Our research uncovered reports which now confirm our suspicions as fact. "What the 'Voice of the Gulf' began broadcasting, along with prayers from the Koran and testimonials from well-treated Iraqi prisoners, was precise information on the units to be bombed each day, along with a new, silent psychological technique which induced thoughts of great fear in each soldier's mind..." This makes a great deal of sense today, given what has become increasingly known about mind-control weapons. "According to statements made by captured and deserting Iraqi soldiers, however, the most devastating and demoralizing programming was the first known military use of the new, high tech, type of subliminal messages referred to as ultra-high-frequency 'Silent Sounds' or 'Silent Subliminals'." The use of these new techniques, we believe, went well beyond the injection of fear and may have involved more powerful signal generators which caused the other symptoms which the world observed, including head pain, bleeding from the nose, disorientation and nausea all possible with so-called nonlethal weapons. The questions which now remain: Are they still using the techniques like an electronic concentration camp in order to control the po pulation? Is this part of the way in which modern governments will suppress rogue nations? The development of the technology followed a very traceable history which began in the early 1960s at the height of the Cold War. In 1961, Dr Allen Frey wrote: "Our data to date indicate that the human auditory system can respond to electromagnetic energy in at least a portion of the radio frequency (RF) spectrum. Further, this response is instantaneous and occurs at low power densities, densities which are well below that necessary for biological damage. For example, the effect has been induced with power densities 1/60 of the standard maximum safe level for continuous exposure. " This observation had incredible ramifications because it meant that within certain ranges RF could create a sound within the brain of a person at energy concentration levels considered too small to be significant. Later that year, a patent was issued to Henry K. Puharich and Joseph L. Lawrence which stated in part: "The present invention is directed to a means for auxiliary hearing communication, useful for improving hearing, for example, and relates more specifically to novel and improved arrangements for auxiliary hearing communications by effecting the transmission of sound signals through the dental structure and facial nervous system of the user."²⁴ This crude device produced a signal which could be heard in the brain by inducing a vibration which was transferred through the bone into the inner ear, where it was then carried to the brain via the nervous system. Puharich continued researching along this line, gaining an additional patent in 1965.²⁵ Both of these inventions required physical contact with the head of the subject. By 1962, Dr Allan Frey had advanced his work and was able to create sound at a distance from the subject, using a pulsed (modulated) radio transmitter. "Using extremely low average power densities of electromagnetic energy, the perception of sounds was induced in normal and deaf humans. The effect was induced several hundred feet from the antenna the instant the transmitter was turned on, and is a function of carrier frequency and modulation." What was occurring in this research were the first attempts to "tune" into the brain of a human in the same manner as "tuning" into a radio station. The same energy was being used; it was just at a different frequency with a slight vibration (modulation) on the carrier wave which delivered the signal. In 1968, G. Patrick Flanagan was issued a patent for a device which also required physical contact with the skin of the subject. "This invention relates to electromagnetic excitation of the nervous system of a mammal and pertains more particularly to a method and apparatus for exciting the nervous system of a person with electromagnetic waves that are capable of causing that person to become conscious of information conveyed by the electromagnetic waves." This invention was much different than what others had created by that time, because this device actually sent a clear, audible signal through the nervous system to the brain. The device could be placed anywhere on the body, and a clear voice or music would appear in the head of the subject. This was a most unbelievable device which had actually been invented in the late 1950s. It had taken years to convince patent examiners that it worked. The initial patent was only granted after the dramatic demonstration of the device on a deaf employee of the US Patent Office. In 1972, a second patent was issued to G. Patrick Flanagan after being suppressed by the military since 1968. This device was much more efficient in that it converted a speech waveform into "a constant amplitude square wave in which the transitions between the amplitude extremes are spaced so as to carry the speech information". What this did is establish the code of modulation or timing sequences necessary for efficient transfers into the nervous system where the signals could be sent to the brain and decoded as sound in the same way that normal sound is decoded. The result was a clear and understandable sound. The military interest in auditory effects was present since the first inventions were patented, but in 1971 came a system which would allow troops to communicate through a radio transmitter which would render the enemy deaf and disoriented while allowing "friendly" combatants to communicate at the same time. The device is described as follows: "Broadly, this disclosure is directed to a system for producing aural and psychological disturbances and partial deafness of the enemy during combat situations. Essentially, a high directional beam is radiated from a plurality of distinct transducers and is modulated by a noise, c ode, or speech beat signal. The invention may utilize various forms and may include movable radiators mounted on a vehicle and oriented to converge at a desired point, independently positioned vehicles with a common frequency modulator, or means employed to modulate the acoustical beam with respect to a fixed frequency. During combat, friendly forces would be equipped with a reference generator to provide aural demodulation of the projected signal, thereby yielding an intelligible beat signal while enemy personnel would be rendered partially deaf by the projected signal as well as being unable to perceive any intelligence transmitted in the form of a modulated beat signal." What this says simply is that at-a-distance personal communication could be achieved by one's own forces while denying it to others and disabling adversaries at the same time. In 1974, it was noted that using a microwave a signal was changed (transduced) by the receiver into an acoustic signal. This signal was "heard" inside or just behind the head. The report stated: "...it was noticed that the apparent locus of the 'sound' moved from the observer's head to the absorber. That is, the absorber acted as a transducer from microwave energy to an acoustic signal. This observation, to the best of our knowledge, has not been described in the literature and may serve as a mechanism mediating the 'hearing' of pulsed microwave signals." By 1989, the science took another leap forward with the combination of the modulated signal on a microwave carrier. This provided a much more efficient delivery of the sound. It was reported: "Sound is induced in the head of a person by radiating the head with microwaves in the range of 100 megahertz to 10,000 megahertz that are modulated with a particular waveform. The waveform consists of frequency modulated bursts. Each burst is made up of ten to twenty uniformly spaced pulses grouped tightly together. The burst width is between 500 nanoseconds and 100 microseconds. The pulse width is in the range of 10 nanoseconds to 1 microsecond. The bursts are frequency modulated by the audio input to create the sensation of hearing in the person whose head is irradiated." Two other patents awarded that year addressed this breakthrough. The first invention related to devices for aiding hearing in mammals: "The invention is based upon perception of sounds which is experienced in the brain when the brain is subjected to certain microwave radiation signals." 32 The second invention confirmed the earlier observations: "Sound is induced in the head of a person by radiating the head with microwaves in the range of 100 megahertz to 10,000 megahertz that are modulated with a particular waveform. The waveform consists of frequency modulated bursts. Each burst is made up of ten to twenty uniformly spaced pulses grouped tightly together." In 1992, another patent was issued with the following description: "A silent communications system in which nonaural carriers, in the very low or very high audio frequency range or in the adjacent ultrasonic frequency spectrum, are amplitude or frequency modulated with the desired intelligence and propagated acoustically or vibrationally, for inducement into the brain, typically through the use of loudspeakers, earphones or piezoelectric transducers." This device had limited practicality in that it required the person to be in contact with or in close proximity to the sending device. When examined together, each of these patents is seen to be a discrete step toward a new weapon system. In 1995, it was reported that in the early research, clear sound signals had been sent and received. It is difficult now to determine what level of military or other research was being advanced in these areas. The history is clear from congressional reports that this entire area was of great interest to the intelligence communities. According to Scientists for Global Responsibility: "Drs Alan Frey and Joseph Sharp conducted related research. Sharp himself took part in these experiments and reported that he heard and understood words transmitted in pulse-microwave analogs of the speaker's sound vibrations. Commenting on these studies, Dr Robert Becker, twice nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize, observed that such a device has obvious applications in covert operations designed to drive a target crazy with voices, or deliver undetectable instructions to a potential assassin." Then, in 1996 came another development, a "wireless communication system undetectable by radio frequency methods for converting audio signals, including human voice, to electronic signals in the ultrasonic frequency range, transmitting the ultrasonic signal by means of acoustic pressure waves across a carrier medium, including gases, liquids, or solids, an d reconverting the ultrasonic acoustical pressure waves back to the original audio signal". Although this was meant to be used with both receiving and sending hardware, what was determined were the modulation methods for transferring the signal. The real work was yet to be made public in the form of patents. However, the military claims in the area were starting to surface. What was known from experience was that patents were being held back by the government and confiscated by the military. When this intellectual property was seized, the inventors were given a choice: work for the government, or you cannot continue research or even talk about your invention under a national security order. Those who did not cooperate could have their work effectively shut down.

Brain-to-Computer Connections

Major steps are being made to connect biology to information technology. In 1990 came the news that "[s]cientists have succeeded for the first time in establishing a colony of human brain cells that divide and grow in laboratory dishes, an achievement with profound implications for understanding and treating a wide range of neurological disorders from epilepsy to Alzheimer's disease". According to a report in the Wall Street Journal in February 1994: "Researchers said they took a key first step toward creating electronic microchips that use living brain cells. The researchers said they had learned how to place embryonic brain cells in desired spots on silicon or glass chips and then induce the brain cells to grow along desired paths."

The other possibility is that both brain cells and computer hardware could be built in the laboratories, creating, perhaps, the first biologically augmented computers.

What's on Your Mind?

A significant initiative was started for use in creating counter-drug measures: the Brain Imaging Technology Initiative. "This initiative establishes NIDA [National Institute on Drug Abuse] regional neuroimaging centers and represents an interagency cooperative endeavor funded by CTAC [Counterdrug Technology Assessment Center], Department of Energy (DOE), and NIDA to develop new scientific tools (new radiotracers and technologies) for understanding the mechanisms of addiction and for the evaluation of new pharmacological treatments." Through neuroimaging, not only could the stated objective be achieved, but through imaging a person's emotional states could be mapped, chemical influences determined and perhaps even specific thoughts read. Back in 1975, Physics Today reported: "Developments in ways to measure the extremely weak magnetic fields emanating from organs such as the heart, brain and lungs are leading to important new methods for diagnosing abnormal conditions.

"In 1995, a system for capturing and decoding brain signals was patented which includes a transducer for stimulating a person and EEG transducers for recording brainwave signals from the person. It also includes a computer for controlling and synchronizing stimuli presented to the person and at the same time recording brainwave signals, and either interpreting these signals using a model for conceptual, perceptual and emotional thought to correspond to the EEG signals of the person's thoughts or comparing the signals to normal brain signals from a normal population to diagnose and locate the origin of brain-dysfunctional underlying perception, conception and emotion. In other words, the device reads your mind by comparing your brain activity to other people's. In 1996 came this Orwellian development: "...a method for remotely determining information relating to a person's emotional state, as waveform energy having a predetermined frequency and a predetermined intensity is generated and wirelessly transmitted toward a remotely located subject. Waveform energy emitted from the subject is detected and automatically analyzed to derive information relating to the individual's emotional state. Physiological or physical parameters of blood pressure, pulse rate, pupil size, respiration rate and perspiration level are measured and compared with reference values to provide information utilizable in evaluating [an] interviewee's responses or possibly criminal intent in security sensitive areas."

This technology could be used for determining what a person might do, given his totally discernible interior emotions. This technology walks through any behavior our wall a person can erect and goes straight to the brain to see what may be on a person's mind. Inducing behaviour rather than just reading a person's emotional state is the subject of one scientist's work in Canada. "Scientists are trying to recreate alien abductions in the laboratory... The experiment, to be run by Professor Michael Persinger, a neuroscientist at Laurentian University, of Sudbury, Ontario, consists of a converted motorcycle helmet with solenoids on its sides that set up magnetic fields across a subject's head." This experiment was carried out and was the subject of a Canadian Broadcasting System exposé on mind control. The segment ran on a program called undercurrents in February 1999. This author also appeared in that program, along with several others interested in this field. A 1993 report said that for over 20 years Dr Persinger "...has been working on a theory that connects not only UFOs and earthquakes, but also powerful electromagnetic fields and an explanation of paranormal beliefs in terms of unusual brain activity. He has also found that stimulating another area, the temporal lobes, can produce all sorts of mystical experiences, out-of-body sensations and other apparently paranormal phenomena." This doctor's work suggests that these experiences may be the result of activity in the brain and not the actual experiences of the individuals. He has had some measure of success in re-creating many of these experiences in his subjects. Dr Persinger is also known for his work in studying the effects of ELF [extra-lowfrequency waves] on memory and brain function. In 1991, a method for changing brain waves to a desired frequency was patented. A 1975 patent discussed a similar technology: a device and method for "...sensing brain waves at a position remote from a subject whereby electromagnetic signals of different frequencies are simultaneously transmitted to the brain of the subject in which the signals interfere with one another to yield a waveform which is modulated by the subject's brain waves. The interference waveform which is representative of the brain wave activity is retransmitted by the brain to a receiver where it is demodulated and amplified. The demodulated waveform is then displayed for visual viewing and then routed to a computer for further processing and analysis. The demodulated waveform also can be used to produce a compensating signal which is transmitted back to the brain to effect a desired change in electrical activity therein."⁴⁷ In simple terms, the brain's activity is mapped in order to read a person's emotional state, conceptual abilities or intellectual patterns. A second signal can be generated and sent back into the brain which overrides the natural signal, causing the brain's energy patterns to shift. This is the "brain entrainment" which causes the shift in consciousness. There are many uses of a positive nature for this kind of technology, as was mentioned at the front of this section, the important factor being who controls the technology and for what purpose.

In January 1998, the following encapsulating statement appeared in the leading scientific journal Nature, quoting Pasteur Institute neuroscientist Jean-Pierre Changeux, chairman of the French national bioethics committee: "But neuroscience also poses potential risks, he said, arguing that advances in cerebral imaging make the scope for invasion of privacy immense...it will become commonplace and capable of being used at a distance, he predicted. That will open the way for abuses such as invasion of personal liberty, control of behaviour and brainwashing." Dancing to the Tune of an Unknown Drummer In "...a dramatic demonstration of mind reading, neuroscientists have created videos of what a cat sees by using electrodes implanted in the animal's brain. 'Trying to understand how the brain codes information leads to the possibility of replacing parts of the nervous system with an artificial device,' he said." The scientist commenting on this technology Gattett Stanley, assistant professor of biomedical engineering at Harvard saw the future possibility of brain activity mapping being used in creating electronic components to replace damaged parts of the system. The use of mind-mapping had other possibilities as well. Similar research in controlling the behaviour of humans and animals was pursued by Dr Jos Delgado at Yale University, one of the leading research institutions in the United States. Actual testing of certain systems proved that "movements, sensations, emotions, desires, ideas, and a variety of psychological phenomena may be induced, inhibited, or modified by electrical stimulation of specific areas of the brain".⁵⁰ By 1985, Dr Delgado was able to create these effects using only a radio signal sent to the brain remotely, using energy concentrations of less than 1/50th of what the Earth naturally produces. This discovery implied that frequency, waveform and pulse rate (modulation) were the important factors rather than the amount of energy being used. In considering this, it makes sense because the human body does not require high electromagnetic power concentration to regulate its normal functioning. The key was in finding the "tuning" mechanisms for locating the right "receiving station" in the brain. By 1993, publicly released information was being discussed as a result of information openly flowing out of Russia. Meetings were held to assess the threat: the "main purpose of the March meetings was described in the Psychotechnologies memo as to 'determine whether psycho-correction technologies represent a present or future threat to US national security in situations where inaudible commands might be used to alter behavior'". The threat assessment was likely to begin to condition Americans for the public acknowledgement of one of the government's long-held secrets: that the human mind and body can be controlled remotely, without a trace of evidence being left behind. In another quote, one of the leading researchers in this area, Dr Igor Smirnov, began to announce his findings. "But psychological warfare experts on all sides still dream that they will one day control the enemy's mind. And in a tiny, dungeon-like lab in the basement of Moscow's ominously named Institute of Psycho-Correction, Smirnov and other Russian psychiatrists are already working on schizophrenics, drug addicts and cancer patients." The results of this research have been investigated and demonstrated to members of the intelligence community in the United States, and have even been demonstrated by Dr Smirnov in an interview for the Canadian television documentary Undercurrents. This issue is also an interesting one, as can be seen in this 1999 article excerpt.

"Fantasies are thought processes involving internal monologues and imaginative sequences which can motivate healthy people to constructive behaviour; likewise, they can inspire unbalanced individuals to destructive or dangerous behaviour. One conclusion from that research was that fantasy played a major role among violent criminals. Researchers learned that criminals often daydreamed their fantasies, and then practiced elements of those fantasies before committing their crime. FBI agents determined that violent criminals often exhibit telltale signs as children and as adults. Hence, disturbed employees or students may demonstrate signs of violent fantasies to close observers. Troubled individuals may be obsessively interested in music with violent lyrics, or may have a drug or alcohol problem. When these signs reveal themselves, they should be reported to a threat management team, which can then neutralize the threat, either by therapy, if rehabilitation is possible, or by firing the employee. Workplace and school Violence is usually preceded by warning signs." The ability to determine a "predisposition" for a behaviour does not mean that a person will make the "choice" to act on the feelings and internal thoughts. Every person on the planet can remember times when his thoughts were dangerous, immoral or otherwise unacceptable, falling below the standards set by societal and cultural "norms". Yet, we can have these thoughts in the privacy of our own mind. The trend in the application of mind control technology now would make our most private internal thoughts, as we wrestle with the temptations and choices of everyday life, subject to scrutiny by Government and employers. Who will define the rules for psycho-correction? Who will decide what is ethical and right in this area as it develops over the next decade?

Control of the Mind and Body

The predominant brain wave frequencies indicate the kind of activity taking place in the brain. There are four basic groups of brain wave frequencies which are associated with most mental activity. The first group, beta waves (13-35 Hertz or pulses per second), is associated with normal activity. The high end of this range is associated with stress or agitated states which can impair thinking and reasoning skills. The second group, alpha waves (8-12 Hertz), can indicate relaxation. Alpha frequencies are ideal for learning and focused mental functioning. The third group, theta waves (4-7 Hertz), indicates mental imagery, access to memories and internal mental focus. This state is often associa ted with young children, behavioural modification and sleep/dream states. The last group, ultra-slow delta waves (0.53 Hertz), is found when a person is in deep sleep. The general rule is that the brain's predominant wave frequency will be lowest in terms of pulses per second when a person is relaxed, and highest when a person is most alert or agitated.⁵⁴ External stimulation of the brain by electromagnetic means can cause the brain to be entrained or locked into phase with an external signal generator. Predominant brain waves can be driven or pushed into new frequency patterns by external stimulation. In other words, the external signal driver or impulse generator entrains the brain, overriding the normal frequencies and causing changes in the brain waves, which then cause changes in brain chemistry, which then cause changes in brain outputs in the form of thoughts, emotions or physical condition. As you are driven, so you arrive. Brain manipulation can be either beneficial or detrimental to the individual being impacted, depending on the level of knowledge or the intentions of the person controlling the technology. In combination with specific wave-forms, the various frequencies trigger precise chemical responses in the brain. The release of these neurochemicals causes specific reactions in the brain which result in feelings of fear, lust, depression, love, etc. All of these, and the full range of emotional/intellectual responses, are caused by very specific combinations of these brain chemicals which are released by frequency-specific electrical impulses. "Precise mixtures of these brain juices can produce extraordinarily specific mental states, such as fear of the dark, or intense concentration." The work in this area is advancing at a very rapid rate, with new discoveries being made regularly. Unlocking the knowledge of these specific frequencies will yield significant breakthroughs in understanding human health. Radiofrequency radiation, acting as a carrier for extremely low frequencies (ELF), can be used to entrain brain waves wirelessly.

The control of mind and body by using various forms of electromagnetic energy including radio signals, light pulsations, sound and other methods has resulted in several inventions and innovations. The positive health effects and uses have been pursued by private researchers round the world. In 1973, an "...apparatus for the treatment of neuropsychic and somatic disorders herein light, sound, VHF electromagnetic field and heat sources, respectively, are simultaneously applied by means of a control unit to the patient's central nervous system with a predetermined repetition rate. The light radiation and sound radiation sources are made so as to exert an adequate and monotonous influence of the light and sound radiation on the patient's visual analyzers and auditory analyzers, respectively." This results in the brain following the external stimulating source in triggering brain pattern changes which affect the brain immediately and directly. A simple invention patented in 1977 "...provides a device for improving upon the aforesaid application [see patent for full text] in assisting the induction of natural sleep. As stated above, this invention is concerned specifically with an improvement that will permit the creation of several waveforms such that an analgesic noise device can approximate soothing sounds of nature, i.e., waves, rain, wind." These kinds of devices are available everywhere and are noted for their calming effects in helping people relax and sleep.

In 1980, another patent was issued which disclosed "...a method and apparatus for producing a noise-like signal for inducing a hypnotic or anesthetic effect in a human being. The invention also has application in crowd control and consciousness level training (biofeedback). The invention may also be used in creating special musical effects." This device would have a profound effect in controlling individuals to a point otherwise only achievable through the application of hypnotherapy or drugs. A couple of years later, another device was engineered to create these types of effects, again using very subtle energy: "Brain wave patterns associated with relaxed and meditative states in a subject are gradually induced without deleterious chemical or neurological side effects."

Various systems were perfected and patents issued for controlling brain activity. These inventions generated a whole array of breakthroughs for controlling a person's emotional state, concentration and pain levels and creating other effects as well. In 1990, the results of a study strongly indicated that "...specific types of subjective experiences can be enhanced when extremely low frequency magnetic fields of less than 1 milligauss are generated through the brain at the level of the temporal lobes. Vestibular feelings (vibrations, floating), depersonalization (feeling detached, sense of a presence) and imaginings (vivid images from childhood) were more frequent within the field exposed groups than the sham field exposed group." In a 1996 "new age" invention, quartz crystals are used to create stress relief by slowing brain activity. "Physiological stress in a human subject is treated by generating a weak electromagnetic field about a quartz crystal. The crystal is stimulated by applying electrical pulses of pulse widths between 0.1 and 50 microseconds each at a pulse repetition rate of between 0.5k and 10k [500 and 10,000] pulses per second to a conductor positioned adjacent to the quartz crystal thereby generating a weak magnetic field. A subject is positioned within the weak magnetic field for a period of time sufficient to reduce stress." It is interesting that "New Age" thinkers have played on "crystal magic" as a way to get "in tune" with oneself and relax, and here is a quartz crystal being included as a component of this invention. Again, the crossovers between fiction and science continue to appear.

Consciousness training is also a big theme in cults, religious organisations and others pursuing the "New Age". Science has now gained a greater understanding of how the mind and brain work, so that what used to take years or even decades to achieve can now be mastered in weeks, days or even minutes. For instance, in 1996 a method and apparatus for the use in achieving alpha and theta brainwave states and effecting positive emotional states in humans was developed. Three years before, a patent was issued for a device which could create desired consciousness states: "...in the training of an individual to replicate such states of consciousness without further audio stimulation; and in the transferring of such states from one human being to another through the imposition of one person's EEG, superimposed on desired stereo signals, on another individual, by inducement of a binaural beat phenomenon." Thought transference?

This is interesting in that it speaks to the ideas alluded to earlier by the military in changing the memory of a person by imposing computer-manipulated signals which would integrate with the normal memory of a person. The possibility for abuse is obvious, and the opportunity for personal advancement is great. Imagine gaining education by the transfer of data directly into the human brain by these new methods rather than by the standard methods of learning. A serious consideration in developing these types of memory transfer systems is that they bypass normal intellectual filters: information is deposited into the brain as fact, without question or careful consideration. What happens when the new information conflicts with existing information? Would it be possible to include hidden information meant to unduly influence things like religious beliefs, politics or consumption of goods and services? The possibilities are immense and the ethical and moral questions surrounding these matters are equally large. We can no longer avoid the debate. In fact, the debate is lagging far behind the scientific advances. In the interim, there are some simple things we could all do to enhance our own, or our children's, learning capacity by applying simple and available knowledge. For instance, "researchers at the Center for the Neurobiology of Learning and Memory at University of California, Irvine, have determined that 10 minutes of listening to a Mozart piano sonata raised the measurable IQ of college students by up to nine points". This is a simple thing of great use to anyone seeking self-improvement.

Weapons of the Mind

A 1984 paper titled "The Electromagnetic Spectrum in Low-Intensity Conflict" said much about the military's interest in EMR: "The results of many studies that have been published in the last few years indicate that specific biological effects can be achieved by controlling the various parameters of the electromagnetic (EM) field. A few of the more important EM factors that can be manipulated are frequency, wave shape, rate of pulse onset, pulse duration, pulse amplitude, repetition rate, secondary modulation, and symmetry and asymmetry of the pulse. Many of the clinical effects of electromagnetic ra diation were first noticed using direct current applied directly to the skin. Later the same effects were obtained by applying external fields. Electromagnetic radiation has been reported in the literature to induce or enhance the following effects.

1. Stimulation of bone regeneration [in fractures]
2. Healing of normal fractures
3. Treatment of congenital pseudarthrosis
4. Healing of wounds
5. Electroanesthesia
6. Electroconvulsive therapy
7. Behavior modification in animals
8. Altered electroencephalograms in animals and humans
9. Altered brain morphology in animals
10. Effects of acupuncture
11. Treatment of drug addiction
12. Electrostimulation for relief of pain
13. Altered firing of neuronal cells

"These are but a few of the many biological effects and uses that have been reported over the past decade. They are not exhaustive and do not include many of the effects reported in the Soviet and East European literature. "As with most human endeavors, these applications of electromagnetic radiation have the potential for being a double-edged sword. They can produce significant benefits, yet at the same time can be exploited and used in a controlled manner for military or covert applications. This paper focuses on the potential uses of electromagnetic radiation in future low-intensity conflicts.

"Potential Military Applications of EMR

"The exploitation of this technology for military uses is still in its infancy and only recently has been recognized by the United States as a feasible option. A 1982 Air Force review of biotechnology had this to say. 'Currently available data allow the projection that specially generated radio frequency radiation (RFR) fields may pose powerful and revolutionary military threats. Electroshock therapy indicates the ability of induced electric current to completely interrupt mental functioning for short periods of time, to obtain cognition for longer periods and to restructure emotional response over prolonged intervals.' Experience with electroshock therapy, RFR experiments and the increasing understanding of the brain as an electrically mediated organ suggested the serious probability that impressed electromagnetic fields can be disruptive to purposeful behavior and may be capable of directing and or interrogating such behavior. Further, the passage of approximately 100 milliamperes through the myocardium can lead to cardiac standstill and death, again pointing to a speed-of-flight weapons effect.

'A rapidly scanning RFR system could provide an effective stun or kill capability over a large area. System effectiveness will be a function of wave form, field intensity, pulse widths, repetition frequency, and carrier frequency. The system can be developed using tissue and whole animal experimental studies, coupled with mechanisms and waveform effects research. 'Using relatively low-level RFR it may be possible to sensitize large military groups to extremely dispersed amounts of biological or chemical agents to which the unirradiated population would be immune. 'The potential applications of artificial electromagnetic fields are wide ranging and can be used in many military or quasi-military situations. Some of these potential uses include dealing with terrorist groups, crowd control, controlling breeches [sic] of security at military installations, and antipersonnel techniques in tactical warfare... One last area where electromagnetic radiation may prove to be of some value is in enhancing abilities of individuals for anomalous phenomena.'" Quite the papers for the 1980s. Stimulating anomalous phenomena was another interesting point revealed in the Air Force review. What could this mean? In one press report in November 1995, the interest of the CIA was disclosed when it was announced that for "...20 years, the United States has secretly used psychics in attempts to help drug enforcement agencies track down Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi and find plutonium in North Korea, the CIA and others con firm. The ESP spying operations code named 'Stargate' were unreliable, but three psychics continued to work out of Ft Meade, at least into July, researchers who evaluated the program for the CIA said..." It is also worth pointing out that this report coincided with the public disclosure by military personnel of this project. The story was revealed in David Morehouse's book Psychic Warrior.

Col. John Alexander, working out of Los Alamos and a major proponent of this area of research, was quoted as saying: "...there are weapons systems that operate on the power of the mind and whose lethal capacity has already been demonstrated ... The psychotronic weapon would be silent, difficult to detect, and would require only a human operator as a power source."

According to a paper on non-lethal weapons:

"An RF weapon currently under development is the high powered, very low frequency (VLF)

modulator. Working in the 2035 kHz spectrum, the frequency emits from a 12 meter antenna dish to form into a type of acoustic bullet. The weapon is especially convenient because the power level is easily adjustable. At its low setting, the acoustic bullet causes physical discomfort enough to deter most approaching threats. Incrementally increasing the power nets an effect of nausea, vomiting and abdominal pains. The highest settings can cause a person's bones to literally explode internally. Aimed at the head, the resonating skull bones have caused people to hear 'voices'." The weapon was researched by the Russian military more extensively than by the US. Indeed, "...the Russians actually offered the use of such a weapon to the FBI in the Branch Davidian standoff to make them think that 'God' was talking to them. Concerned with the unpredictability of what the voices might actually say to the followers, the FBI declined the offer. Another RF weapon that was ready for use back in 1978 was developed under the guise of Operation PIQUE. Developed by the CIA, the plan was to bounce high powered radio signals off the ionosphere to affect the mental functions of people in selected areas, including Eastern European nuclear installations." The use of the ionosphere in the CIA's experiments reminds one of the possibilities now available with systems such as HAARP, which was developed 15 years later. What is clear in all of this is that these systems have been developed and hidden from public view. The practice continues to this day. "The next area of non-lethal weapons is primarily used against machinery... these devices can either cause the machinery to stop functioning or to render it vulnerable to further, more lethal attacks. In addition to this effect, man has become very dependent upon the use of machines and is often rendered helpless in a situation when they become dysfunctional. Therefore, it is only appropriate that they are covered here. The primary anti-machinery arsenal includes the microwave weapon, the non-nuclear electromagnetic pulse, and the laser weapon. "US Special Operations Command has in its arsenal the portable microwave weapon. The capability of such a weapon is varied in that it can not only disrupt enemy communications, but can also superheat internal organs. Of course, directing this type of weapon towards personnel eliminates it from the non-lethal classification. Developed in the Los Alamos National Laboratory, the weapon forms its signal similar to the RF weapons discussed above in that it directs the energy into a high-powered pulse and destroys transistors and other electrical equipment... On an even smaller scale, a portable EMP weapon could be carried by ground forces to destroy the electrical components in an armored vehicle or tank. This capability is being developed with police forces to emit a pulse that would stop a car almost immediately." These systems offer both promises and risks as we move into the new century. What will be the public reaction to these systems? We suggest that the reaction will cause a significant change in the uses and further developments of these technologies. Additionally, we suspect that monitoring systems would be developed which would allow for the detection of these technologies in order to control abuse. Mind Control Victims Sometimes referred to as "wavies" or "beamers", these individuals are usually dismissed when asserting that they are the victims of mind control weapons testing. In fact: "University of South Florida researchers have published a study showing that fears of the Internet are repl acing the CIA and radio waves as a frequent delusion in psychiatric patients. In every case of Internet delusion documented by the researchers, the patient actually had little experience with computers." The problem is that it is difficult if not impossible to sort out which people might be victims and which are delusional. Attempts to determine the reality of the complaints are often the butt of jokes and fear. For example, the University of Albany has "...shut down the research of a psychology professor probing the 'X-Files' world of government surveillance and mind control. At conferences, in papers and research over two semesters, Professor Kathryn Kelley explored the claims of those who say they were surgically implanted with communications devices to read their thoughts." Since the release of our first book, Angels Don't Play This HAARP: Advances in Tesla Technology, we have heard from hundreds of people making such claims. We cannot sort out what might be real experimentation from that which resides only in the minds of these people. We believe that the claims should be taken seriously and that people should have some place to go in order to find the truth or gain the medical treatments they otherwise deserve. The history of the United States is littered with examples of people being exploited by scientists working under the cover of darkness provided by "black budgets". Could these reports have a factual basis? We believe that some do. Government control of the mind in order to impose its will on people is best summarised on the wall of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Memorial with an inscription that reads: "They [who] seek to establish systems of government based on the regimentation of all human beings by a handful of individual rulers...call this a new order. It is not new and it is not order."

Endnotes

1. US Air Force, New World Vistas: Air and Space Power for the 21st Century Ancillary Volume, Scientific Advisory Board (USAF), Washington, DC, Document #1 9960618040, 1996, pp. 89-90. EPI402
2. Foster, Sarah, "Cold War legend dies at 80: Famed as CIA's real-life 'Dr Strangelove'", Worldnetdaily, March 9, 1999. EPI279
3. Reppert, Barton, "The Zapping of an Embassy: 35 Years Later, The Mystery Lingers", AP, May 22, 1988. EPI1112
4. Advisory Committee Staff, Committee on Human Radiation Experiments, Methodological Review of Agency Data Collection Efforts: Initial Report on the Central Intelligence Agency Document Search, June 27, 1994. EPI579
5. Petersen, John L., The Road to 2015: Profiles of the Future, Waitte Group Press, 1994, ISBN 1-878739-85-9. EPI849
6. USAF, New World Vistas, ibid.
7. US EPA, Summary and Results of the April 26-27, 1993 Radiofrequency Radiation Conference, Volume 2: Papers, 402-R-95-011, March 1995. EPI728
8. Oscar, K.J., "Effects of low power microwaves on the local cerebral blood flow of conscious rats", Army Mobility Equipment Command, June 1, 1980. EPI1195
9. Delgado, Jos M.R., Physical Control of the Mind: Toward a Psychocivilized Society, Harper & Row Publishers, New York, 1969. EPI850
10. US Senate, Communist Interrogation, Indoctrination and Exploitation of American Military and Civilian Prisoners, Committee on Government Operations, Subcommittee on Investigations, 84th Congress, 2nd Session, December 31, 1956. EPI1131
11. Cooper, Pat, "US Enhances Mind Games", Defense News, April 17-23, 1995. EPI1154
- 11a. Chernishev, I., "Can Rulers Make 'Zombies' and Control the World?", Orienteer, February 1997, pp. 58-62.
12. Thomas, Timothy L., "The Mind Has No Firewall", Parameters, vol. XXVIII, no. 1, Spring 1998. EPI525
13. Brzezinski, Zbigniew, Between Two Ages: America's Role in the Technetronic Era, Viking Press, New York, 1970. EPI787
14. McGill, Peter, "'Mind Control Music' Stops Shoplifters", The Sydney Morning Herald, February 4, 1995. EPI95
15. US Patent #4,777,529, October 11, 1988, "Auditory Subliminal Programming System"; Inventors: Schultz et al.; Assignee: Richard M. Schultz and Associates, Inc. EPI265
16. US Patent #4,395,600, July 26, 1983, "Auditory Subliminal Message System and Method"; Inventors: Lundy et al. EPI264
17. US Patent #5,134,484, July 28, 1992, "Superimposing Method and Apparatus Useful for Subliminal Messages"; Inventor: Willson, Joseph; Assignee: MindsEye Educational Systems, Inc. EPI290
18. US Patent #5,270,800, December 14, 1993, "Subliminal Message Generator"; Inventor: Sweet, Robert L. EPI288
19. Hall, E. Gene, "Watch Carefully Now: Solving Crime in the 21st Century", Police, June 1999, vol. 23, no. 6. Source: NL ECTC Law Enforcement & Technology News Summary, June 17, 1999. EPI944
20. US Department of Defense (awarding agency), "Communicating via the Microwave Auditory

Effect", SBIR Contract Number F41624-95-C-9007. EPI277 21. ITV News Bureau, "A Psy-Ops Bonanza On The Desert", 1991, <http://www.mindspring.com/~silent/xx/daisy.htm>. EPI568 22. ITV News Bureau, "High Tech Psychological Warfare Arrives in the Middle East", 1991, <http://www.mindspring.com/~silent/xx/news.htm>. EPI567 23. Frey, Allan H., "Auditory System Response to Radio Frequency Energy", Aerospace Medicine, December 1961, vol. 32, pp. 1140-1142. EPI370 24. US Patent #2,995,633, August 8, 1961, "Means for Aiding Hearing"; Inventors: Puharich et al. EPI256 25. US Patent #3,170,993, February 23, 1965, "Means for Aiding Hearing by Electrical Stimulation of the Facial Nerve System"; Inventors: Henry K. Puharich and Joseph L. Lawrence. EPI1119 26. Frey, Allan H., "Human Auditory System Response to Modulated Electromagnetic Energy", Journal of Applied Physiology 17(4):689-692, 1962. EPI544 27. US Patent #3,393,279, July 16, 1968, "Nervous System Excitation Device"; Inventor: Flanagan, Gillis Patrick; Assignee: Listening Incorporated. EPI261 28. US Patent #3,647,970, March 7, 1972, "Method and System of Simplifying Speech Waveforms"; Inventor: Flanagan, Gillis P. 29. US Patent #3,566,347, Feb. 23, 1971, "Psycho-Acoustic Projector"; Inventor: Flanders, Andrew E.; Assignee: General Dynamics Corporation. EPI260 30. Sharp et al., "Generation of Acoustic Signals by Pulsed Microwave Energy", IEEE Transactions On Microwave Theory And Techniques, May 1974. EPI817 31. US Patent #4,877,027, Oct. 31, 1989, "Hearing System"; Inventor: Brunkan, Wayne. EPI1124 32. US Patent #4,858,612, Aug. 22, 1989, "Hearing Device"; Inventor: Stocklin, William L. EPI270 33. US Patent #4,877,027, Oct. 31, 1989, "Hearing System"; Inventor: Brunkan, Wayne B. EPI262 34. US Patent #5,159,703, Oct. 27, 1992, "Silent Subliminal Presentation System", Inventor: Lowry, Oliver M. EPI285 35. Scientists for Global Responsibility, "Non-Lethal Defence: The New Age Mental War Zone", issue 10, 1995. EPI810 36. US Patent #5,539,705, July 23, 1996, "Ultrasonic Speech Translator and Communication System"; Inventor: Akerman, M. Alfred et al.; Assignee: Martin Marietta Energy Systems. EPI293 37. Specter, Michael, "Scientists make brain cells grow", Anchorage Daily News, May 4, 1990. EPI527 38. Bishop, Jerry, "Nervy Scientists Move Toward Union Of Living Brain Cells With Microchips", Wall Street Journal, February 1, 1994, p. B3. EPI49 39. ONDCP, CTAC, "Counterdrug Research and Development Blueprint Update", <http://www.whitehousedrugpolicy.gov/scimed/blueprint99/execsumm.htm>. 40. Cohen, David, "Magnetic Fields of the Human Body", Physics Today, August 1975. EPI1179 41. US Patent #5,392,788, Feb. 28, 1995, "Method And Device For Interpreting concepts And Conceptual Thought From Brainwave Data And For Assisting For Diagnosis Of Brainwave Dysfunction"; Inventor: Hudspeth, William J. EPI1129 42. US Patent #5,507,291, April 16, 1996, "Method And An Associated Apparatus For Remotely Determining Information As To Person's Emotional State"; Inventors: Striibl et al. EPI1130 43. Watts, Susan, "Alien kidnaps may just be mind zaps", The Sydney Morning Herald, November 19, 1994. EPI816 44. Opall, Barbara, "US Explores Russian Mind-Control Technology", Defense News, January 11-17, 1993. EPI818 45. Persinger, M. et al., "Partial Amnesia for a Narrative Following Application of Theta Frequency EM Fields", Journal of Bioelectricity 4(2):481-494 (1985). EPI372 46. US Patent #5,036,858, Aug. 6, 1991, "Method And Apparatus For Changing Brain Wave Frequency"; Inventors: Carter et al. EPI1127 47. US Patent #3,951,134, April 20, 1976, "Apparatus And Method For Remotely Monitoring And Altering Brainwaves"; Inventor: Malech, Robert G.; Assignee: Dorne & Margolin Inc. EPI1122 48. "Advances in Neuroscience 'May Threaten Human Rights'", Nature, vol. 391, January 22, 1998. EPI116 49. Kahney, Leander, "A Cat's Eye Marvel", Wired.com News, October 7, 1999, at <http://www.wired.com/news/technology/story/22116.html>. EPI832 50. Delgado, Jos M.R., Physical Control of the Mind: Toward a Psychocivilized Society, Harper & Row, New York, 1969. EPI850 51. "DoD, Intel Agencies Look at Russian Mind Control Technology, Claims", Defense Electronics, July 1993. EPI538 52. Elliot, Dorinda and Barry, John, "A Subliminal Dr Strangelove", Newsweek, August 21, 1994. EPI542 53. Depue, Roger L. and Depue, Joanne M., To Dream, Perchance to Kill", Security Management, vol. 43, no. 6, July 1999. Source: NLECTC Law Enforcement & Technology News, Summary, July 8, 1999. EPI932 54. Hutchison, Michael, MegaBrain: New Tools and Techniques for Brain Growth and Mind Expansion, 1986. EPI1235 55. US Patent #5,356,368, Oct. 18, 1994, "Method and Apparatus for Inducing Desired States of Consciousness", Inventor: Monroe, Robert; Assignee:

Interstate Industries, Inc. EPI286 56. Hutchison, MegaBrain, op. cit., p. 114. EPI1235 57. US Patent #3,773,049, Nov. 20, 1973, "Apparatus for the Treatment of Neuropsychic and Somatic Diseases with Heat, Light, Sound and VHF Electromagnetic Radiation"; Inventors: Rabichev et al. EPI257 58. US Patent #4,034,741, July 12, 1977, "Noise Transmitter and Generator"; Inventors: Adams et al.; Assignee: Solitron Devices Inc. EPI267 59. US Patent #4,191,175, March 4, 1980, "Method and Apparatus for Repetitively Producing a Noise-Like Audible Signal", Inventor: Nagle, William L. EPI269 60. US Patent # 4,335,710, June 22, 1982, "Device for the Induction of Specific Brain Wave Patterns"; Inventor: Williamson, John D.; Assignee: Omnitronics Research Corporation. EPI292 61. US Patent #4,717,343, Jan. 5, 1988, "Method of Changing a Person's Behavior"; Inventor: Densky, Alan. EPI284 62. US Patent #4,834,701, May 30, 1989, "Apparatus for Inducing Frequency Reduction in Brainwave", Inventor: Masaki, Kazumi; Assignee: Hayashibara, Ken. EPI266 63. US Patent 4,889,526, Dec. 26, 1989, "Non-Invasive Method and Apparatus for Modulating Brain Signals Through an External Magnetic Or Electric Field To Reduce Pain"; Inventors: Rauscher, Elizabeth A. and Van Bise, William L.; Assignee: Megatech Laboratories, Inc. EPI268 64. US Patent #4,227,516, Oct. 14, 1990, "Apparatus for Electrophysiological Stimulation"; Inventors: Meland et al. EPI283 65. US Patent #4,883,067, Nov. 28, 1989, "Method and Apparatus for Translating the EEG into Music to Induce and Control Various Psychological and Physiological States and to Control a Musical Instrument"; Inventors: Knispel et al.; Assignee: Neurosonics, Inc. EPI282 66. US Patent # 5,123,899, June 23, 1992, "Method and System for Altering Consciousness"; Inventor: Gall, James. EPI289. 67. Patent # 5,352,181, Oct. 4, 1994, "Method and Recording For Producing Sounds and Messages to Achieve Alpha and Theta Brainwave States and Positive Emotional States in Humans"; Inventor: Davis, Mark E. EPI291 68. US Patent #5,289,438, Feb. 22, 1994, "Method and System For Altering Consciousness", Inventor: Gall, James. EPI333 69. Ruttan, Leslie A. et al., "Enhancement of Temporal Lobe-Related Experiences During Brief Exposures To Milligauss Intensity Extremely Low Frequency Magnetic Fields", Journal of Bioelectricity 9(1):33-54 (1990). EPI311 70. US Patent #5,562,597, Oct. 8, 1996, "Method and Apparatus for Reducing Physiological Stress"; Inventor: Van Dick, Robert C. EPI294 71. US Patent # 5,586,967, Dec. 24, 1996, "Method and Recording or Producing Sounds and Messages To Achieve Alpha and Theta Brainwave States in Humans", Inventor: Davis, Mark E. EPI296 72. US Patent #5,213,562, May 25, 1993, "Method of Inducing Mental, Emotional and Physical States of Consciousness, Including Specific Mental Activity in Human Beings"; Inventor: Monroe, Robert; Assignee: Interstate Industries, Inc. EPI287 73. Hotz, Robert Lee, "Listening to Mozart a real but temporary IQ builder, study says", Anchorage Daily News, October 15, 1993. EPI529 74. Tyler, Capt. Paul E., MC, USN, "The Electromagnetic Spectrum in Low-Intensity Conflict" in Lt. Col. David Dean (ed.), Low-Intensity Conflict and Modern Technology, Air University Press, June 1986. EPI709 75. Cole, Richard, "ESP spies, 'Stargate' are psychic reality", Saint Paul Pioneer Press, November 30, 1995. EPI491 76. Morehouse, David, Psychic Warrior, Michael Joseph Ltd, UK, St Martin's Press, USA, 1996. 77. Aftergood, Steven, "The 'Soft Kill' Fallacy", Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists, September/October 1994. EPI281 78. Suhajda, Joseph M., "Non-Lethal Weapons for Military Operations Other Than War", at <http://www.usafa.af.mil/wing/34edg/airman/suhajd~1.htm>. EPI348 79. ibid. 80. "Internet Feeds Delusions", Associated Press, July 5, 1999. EPI123 81. Brownstein, Andrew. "U. Albany Suspends implants research", Times Union, August 25, 1999. EPI833 82. Begich, Dr Nick and Jeane Manning, Angels Don't Play This HAARP: Advances in Tesla Technology, EarthPulse Press, Anchorage, 1995. 84. Lalli, Anthony N., "Human Research Subject Protection", at http://www.pw2.netcom.com~allalli/BillSite_analysis/paper_web.html. EPI619 EPI259 Filename: Mind Control.doc Directory: D:\epulse\test\epulseuploads\articles Template: E:\Documents and Settings\raja\Application Data\Microsoft\Templates\Normal.dot Title: Subject: Author: Keywords: Comments: Creation Date: Change Number: Last Saved On: Last Saved By: Total Editing Time: Last Printed On: Mind Control Dr. Nich Begich 1/7/2007 1:48 PM 31/15/2007 10:34 AM Daphne 8 Minutes 1/15/2007 11:18 AM As of Last Complete Printing Number of Pages: 66 Number of Words: 12,883 (approx.) Number of Characters: 73,434 (approx.)

1. AMERICANS cant wake up after 50 years because they have been transmitted not to, & to Strongly disbelieve this could ever be ALL shockingly true. A known hypnosis suggestion called Mind Control! Eyes Wide Shut & always missing the mark because it is not tangibles controlling THE PEOPLE but also coupled with directed sound waves to your mind in a DYSFUNCTIONAL AMERICA! SELF DENIALS & mind controlled ECONOMY-individuals!
2. Sound waves Mind Control is how they got by CONGRESS NOT READING full documents. See Video Uncovered! Hypnosis is the tool for Mind Control psyops used on govt & red tape. Always claiming to discontinue wrong doing is the CointelPro lies and CIA culture! WHO RUNS THE GLOBE, THE BOHEMIAN GROVE trickling down in culture behind the scenes with the book IMAGINARY WEAPONS The New Silent War with our money gone and the world banks. See Bin Ladens CIA set ups video to CREATE WARS.
3. Mind Controlled Media is set up with tricks of false thoughts transmitted during conversation, false memory of events, and output of written documents to CREATE SPIN on JOURNALISTS & civilians thus unknowingly creating PROPAGANDA, until now covering their tracks with blatant lies from our government. But decades of news from misunderstanding mind games, disputes, & slanders.Synthetic impairments.
4. Mind Controlled Media is NOW being engineered overtly to WHITEWASH with tangible excuses & discredit these truths since the Obama transition late 2008. Transmitted NOT TO READ OR BELIEVE THIS, engineered too busy and pre-empt!
5. Facts showed since the 70s mind control was experimented with COINTELPRO in major cities to increase crime for tax revenues. This never stopped and we were lied to as MKULTRA when AMERICA started to change and we could not live without locking our doors anymore, etc. Changed realities from propaganda standpoint s lifestyle! 1968 crime just JUMPED not LSD scapegoat again! Now terrorism and going Global!
6. In 1910 the Rockerfellers and JP Morgan Chase met secretly in Jeckyl Isl and to create the Federal Reserve with a blank check in Millions to start this.
7. Mind Control and Directed Energy Weapons cause and are responsible for MOST ILLNESSES, and KINESTHETIC (SENSES wikipedia) and Elec. Magnetic Fields, which cant be traced or cured. (MEMORY BLOCKS AND HOLDS-ALZHEIMER-DIMENTIA as back to the future), ADDHD, Equilibrium, Vision, Bladder, Colon, Leukemia, Numbness/ Anaesthesiology, FIBROMALGIA, PULMONARY, Bi-Polar, CONFUSION extra thought transmissions, MEMORY, DYSLEXIA, opposites suggestions to confuse, SKIN/BLOOD DISEASES, EPSTEINS BAR, VISUAL, HALLUCINATIONS, MIGRAINES, HOLOGRAMS, and CANCER, Anthrax, Valley Fever, Flu like symptoms, Insomnia is sleep deprivation, Short Term Memory erasures, COGNITIVE IMPAIRMENTS, UN-Necessary procedures, Bi-polar/ADD (most misdiagnosed in America!) Accidental falls, Williams Syndrome Motor Coordination & disorientation. False ALARMS all from the MIND; UNREALIZED forced speech emotions & mistakes, Epilepsy! (Dr Beardon) MORGELLANS! RLS IMMUNE and guiney pigs in Hospital data mining your results! SLEEP APNEA and DIABETES II
8. SPLIT PERSONALITIES/DEMENTIA is a brainwashing technique of NLP using remote electronic hypnosis, suggesting thoughts back and forth & shifts, once called BACK TO THE FUTURE with triggers of memory losses, INDUCED ERASURES & DELAYS IN YOUR LIFE! Misplacing your own items in trash, etc. Programmed MISFITS playing mind games since milk carton missing children recruited by coercion called Handlers. (Dr. Bowart and Ross)
9. Secret Govt CointelPro has been responsible for much worse crimes and to return covertly and would never sit on this kind of power with weapons nicely tucked away, even knowing that we are not threatened by Russia and Chinas Mind Control Weapons. (not launched)
10. Growing exponentially! Brian Glick calls it Guiding your Life without your knowledge (Spying & Disruption by Brian Glick-War at Home! Leading the witness, & PLAYING GOD (Project The Voice of God under MKULTRA) DEVIL in PEOPLEs minds, directing souls & destinies.(Duncan/Bowart)
11. Your life is engineered and sabotaged, your family, illnesses, CANCER, w ith directed energy weapons! POPULATION CONTROL, CHEMTRAILS with Barium, as being good in our childrens books, FDA conspiracy-murders, mind control, and attacks to most CIVILIANS.

12. Like CIA, radio hosts and media news, etc are transmitted with false information to leak as they do to combatants in case they are captured and tortured and they think it is the truth.

13. Pre-suggesting media radio hosts to appear psychic at times when Mind Control games are being used to emulate ancient predictions in the bible as natural. ie 2012 emulations and more.

14. Most CRIMES are mind controlled and innocent people are induced or transmitted to act and/or produce false witness. As with OJ using Mind Control in court cases, Judges, and prisons, tampering with minds not just evidence.

15. Our shadow Govt created the fake illness paranoia fear that the FBI is doing this mind control, as a scapegoat, giving it a name and a place in psychology, when it has been SYNTHETIC transmissions all along, with no mental illness or psychosis now in our books.

16. Millions of people were transmitted with Mind Control thoughts and hallucinations of Alien/UFO Shams making Millions on the drug and then projecting it onto the next generation.

17. THE MATRIX, BOURNE, 24 series, THE ISLAND, EAGLE EYE, BREACH, THE INTERNATIONAL, and ENEMY of the STATE, ANGER management, have much truths to them from SHADOW CIA transmissions to Hollywood minds, and who really controls this Country in DISGUISE.

18. Being dumbed down, bureaucracy, decreased MORALS in this country is individual MIND CONTROLS for years to seem as more GOVT CONTROL is necessary.

19. Gulf Coast of Floridas Red Tide is not natural but Govt corruption and manipulations killing people and animals, set ups, coverups, excuses-creating crimes unaware. Not telling the public of the Earths Natural cleansing capabilities . (tried to warn Congress since 2008 before the spill)

20. These weapons were used on the GULF WAR and unaware they surrendered under Mind Control without firing any shots. Today we are still in the Middle East because we need time to work on them and brainwash them. The new SILENT WARS.

21. that GUANTANAMO is big news and also a smokescreen/diversion to brainwash the public to pin responsibility on others in front of the World AGAIN, instead of themselves, OUR GOV/CIA, and why they want Patriot Act, Martial Law, and Fascism legal on US Soil with FEMA CAMPS. Mind Controlled Prisoners to be triggered from anchors of amplified fears to enhance them over time, trigger them for their intentions, mind read for answers & implant FALSE MEMORIES of guilt and publicly provoking the world to wars.

22. Your instinct and thoughts of your poor judgment on others & your feelings are not your own true self, their miscommunication are synthetically transmitted for sabotage & WARS.

23. ANTHRAX & contaminated FERTILIZERS Cross-Country is in our SOIL. First created sex, drugs, rock-n-roll corruptions to AIDS! Obama said it as many others and should, as all else!

24. DC was swept covertly for radiation and reporters wondered why it was quashed from media now overtly sweeping mosques!

25. The 13 AGENTS to testify for 911 Commission were cut off and MIS-communication electronic and verbal from SYNTHETIC COGNITIVE IMPAIRMENT chaos not to complete/SABOTAGED investigation. 2 separate thoughts transmitted in same conversation to cause misunderstandings, false hearing, reading, and never receiving info!

26. In 1996, MOST politician speeches Mind Controlled by these Weapons, before I knew about these weapons or Congressman Kucinich Space Preservation Act. The French believe Aliens control G. Bush, but just another scapegoat to blame and CointelPro project to raise pharmaceuticals as Prozac the Happy Pill epidemic, for example & VIAGRA from weapons.

27. CIA and Al Queda have a contract to the pipeline. The real conspiracy why we are there and the videos of setting up Bin Ladin and tampered evidence to the contrary!

28. The CIA claims mistakes and no agendas from DOD/Pentagon, while Rumsfeld board status with Bilderberger Group is being sued by Germany where they protested Freedom of thought is all part of CIA disguise and corruptions. Scapegoating elite groups instead of their weapons controlling them unconsciously. CIA took over completely with their weapons for power.
29. Wiretapping includes visuals in your home, work & streets, most don't know yet.
30. The CIA operates on the ground wearing yamakas to frame Jews, and destroyed fruit and crops against the Torah scriptures, as with our organic natural farms in the U S. Why?
31. That if, WE THE PEOPLE (CONSTITUENTS) compared notes, collectively from the beginning, and got together undivided, we would easily identify this has been going on as set ups behind the scenes of transmitted Mind Control individuals, that is already in the Millions. WE ARE RESPONSIBLE for our next generation and our HUMANITIES!
32. 911 was engineered to lose our freedoms, introduce population controls, Police State, Martial Law, suppressions, and cover ups on U S Soil with FEMA camps nefarious agendas. They didn't STOP or PREVENT 911 because they CREATED to provoke WARS on the streets as crimes in the U S in the 70s. THE REAL AND CLEVER REASONS FOR ALL THE SURVEILLANCE is to justify change to the CONSTITUTION. Connecting the dots to Conspiracy to World Bank Fed Reserve-Economy, for FASCISM AND GOVERNMENT GLOBAL MIND and MASS CONTROL or SLAVERY. As with Technology, just now and always disclosing to the public years later how they have already launched Martial Law on citizens and are now trying to make it legal to get away with it. They never tell you until it's too late techniques.
33. WHISTLEBLOWERS and Activists who report the same hypnotic Mind Control activities of COINTELPRO/NSA are targeted with no work/livelihood manipulations, difficulties in their lives, Cancer, Car accidents, discrediting/smearing campaigns, & misfortunes they call BAD LUCK. To suppress EXPOSURE for years! BUILD DISCREDIT SLANDER & Isolate!
34. Mind Control transmission are used to harass civilians and oppress the public against each other or take wrong paths since creating a synthetic Culture from PATTI HEARST, ALIENS, EXORCIST, JAWS, MOVIES and POPCORN, COVERT PROJECTS CAME OUT IN THE LATE 60S AND WAS SUPPRESSED, as John Lennon, and now many others claimed, and were all true. Kennedy and Monroe found out. Since Watergate and Deep Throat!
35. CIA in disguise are the computer hackers, virus, spam creators, and ALWAYS CREATING ENEMIES THEY NEED, AS IN OIL PIPELINE CONTRACTS WITH AL QAEDA and so many other wars and fights and crimes they create and induce or continue. (tactics)
36. ISRAELI ART STUDENTS were mind controlled where to live and accepted only in the areas to live as guided to set up and look involved as the CONTRARY OF CIA GUILT and to CREATE DOUBT and so much more BEARING FALSE WITNESS, false memory syndrome, fake gov help, INTERNET & google lawsuit, libraries, false accusations & detainment. Owning the www back door access & with your passwords & spy/surveillance.
37. VETERANS MIND CONTROL AND DREAMS AS FALSE POST TRAUMATIC STRESS (Manchurian called Lucid Dreams as virtual reality) with Agent Orange VIETNAM LAW SUIT emulated by mind control NSA attacking the Nervous System!
38. 911 was created and engineered with Mind Controlled Pilots during training on US Soil, and Dynamite at the bottom by CIA covered up even with witnesses suppressed.
39. 911 FRAUDULANT WAR was investigated in Europe for scientific proof on the toppling buildings of the Financial District in the Bible/Torah and now the Bankruptcies.
40. Mind Controlled MEDIA flashed spooky Halloween like letters of TERROR, across our TVs to reinforce Mind Control & false brainwashing fears/paranoia on U S Soil.
41. Outsiders comment about the media in the U S not serious & synthetically created Culture with genuine disgust and REALIZATIONS of this manipulated culture re and corruptions because of Mind Control. This has been transmitted to Corp/individuals and down the line!

42. CLASSIFIED BUDGET of Mind Controlling Humans and the use of DEW Electromagnetic Waves for Climate and Natural Disasters Manipulations take us down.

43. Ariel Sharon was zapped with Directed Energy Weapons (as others) because he knew the CIA was corrupt Sabotaging Israel and not happy to shake hands with G. Bush and more.

44. Neurological Psychotronics can make one catatonia, seem in shock induce stroke and heart attacks & comatose anyone as long as wanted, in your homes or streets.

45. The initial 24 series, keeps going in his role, with no emotion as Seals conditioned & Mind Controlled unknowingly, Military cutting off sensory (deprivation/disorientation) also unable to react, among other weapon symptoms, now adding robotic hardware as other cover ups.

46. SECRET Govt is swaying public opinion and Mind Controlled triggers to be good with rescues because they created in the first place and are hiding the fact that they are the Mother of Evil & extremely sadistic beyond imagination.

47. Our life is being manipulated & engineered with Mind Games, illnesses, & costing Millions in secret COINTELPRO budgets. EXPERIMENTS turned into MASS CONTROL! (Jim Keith)

48. Our Parents and Grandparents are targeted with these weapons of Mass Destruction on US Soil, in being the Country with the most Doctors visits from SENIORS as a result of these Neurological Weapons, Mind Control Hallucinating false issues, lasers & D.E.W.

49. If you see or find yourself in weird communication misunderstanding and/or audacity of people today, it is because of misfits in the Pentagon playing mind games on their laptop with the use Remote control Quantum Physics from NASA. Communication CHAOS! (Dr. B. Nelson)

50. Many years ago, the APA was in bed with the Military Intelligence to Mind Control them closely against belief of these weapons and torture. See Standing up to the Madness by Amy Goodman (The same as with AMA and FDA) Neuro Weapons & fake diseases!

51. Mind Control has been used for decades on MEDIA folks, coupled with intentional False thoughts causing misunderstandings and wrong PERCEPTIONS to create propagandized non-reality people live called COVERT Psyops. Also used on MILITARY personnel to think Jews are the EVILS at Silent/War GAMES and the NEW Silent Holocaust!

52. Most targeted ON THE JOB with Mind Controlled CIVILIANS who are Doctors, Lawyers, Judges, Pilots, Engineers, Activists, Media, Govt Employees, Drivers, Elders, Hollywood, SCIENTOLOGY, Polititians with sabotage from errors to intentional corruption.

53. Hoover was also quite eager to use his new authority to bring Hollywood into line with what he thought was their proper role in society (propaganda organ for the government) and while Senator McCarthy grabbed the headlines, Hoover was busy behind the scenes recruiting various people to inform on each other and fictionalizing the Hollywood community so that it could not resist him. Where ever there is MONEY thus POWER and IMMORALS, there is Mind Control first experimental then Population Controls for N. W. O.

54. WE THE PEOPLE need to expose Mind Control (CIA directed sound waves NLP hypnosis in your sleep & anytime) since MK ULTRA COINTELPRO & before NSA and NASA Astronauts. (See Bandler & Grinder former CIA taught to FBI & mass control)

55. You cannot be brainwashed with TV alone and Transmitted thoughts, beliefs, and feelings have to be planted first and triggered in your environment. This also explains 50 Years in the making New World Order coming for EVIL CONTROL and ROGUE FASCISM!

56. HAARP/HIPPA (The ultimate WEAPON and Conspiracy should be dismantled as should the secret CIA. Cutting off as OUT-FOXED video of media culture developments.

57. Most of the times if it doesn't make sense, or someone turns mean or against you, it is due to Mind Games manipulated with false thoughts transmitted around und you.

58. (A New Breed by DR. John Hall & The Herrific Mind Control in America! Satellite Terrorism in America. satweapons.com & Dr Walter Bowart radio interview, & I have seen no one yet with high enough CLEARANCE to know how its being done behind the scenes.

59. The plane going down in Buffalo, NY was a cover up of 911 mind controlled pilots creating false terrorism on US Soil again, Congress shock cover up, the recent 2009 madness to cover up wireless Mind Control WEAPONS, Spying Satellite installations & mission, accomplished. Knowing Arabs not are sophisticated or smart enough for these master minds!

60. Triggers and anchors transmitted to people is creating a laundry list of false illnesses and illusions. TV can only trigger you after being transmitted for effective brainwashed people who are anchored and UNREALIZED.

61. Morgellons disease (u-tube/CNN) for mind controlled doctors against the truth as the APA; So when doctors tell the People, ITS ALL IN THEIR HEAD, it is in a way true because THE SECRET GOVT has been putting it there synthetically for decades.

62. Millions are Mind Controlled into un-necessary medical procedures from direct Mind Games and mistakes by transmitting false thoughts to doctors and hallucinating pains to patients with a simple hypnotic radio wave to think and feel anything.

63. These transmitted Mind Control thoughts give you false perceptions about anyone you know or anything, changing your realities since MKULTRA in the 60s.

64. Most people are set up with MISCOMMUNICATIONS, rudeness, fingerpointing, & non sense, engineered TO DIVIDE your relationships, & created ANTI-SEMITISM covertly. Inducing a paranoid Country, SUPPRESSING HISTERIA!

65. Millions of Christians were Mind Controlled with Devil fears & Exorcism as a scapegoat, like Aliens because THEY ARE THE DEVILS. Billions made in Pharmaceutical & Healthcare .

66. Mind Control and LASERS of DIRECTED ENERGY WEAPONS in your home are killing you slowly and TRANSMITTING FEARS, ANXIETY, and PARANOIA of CRIMES on AMERICANS. This is easily done by transmitting ANCHORS & TRIGGERS on the public!

67. Others Countries are not paranoid of terrorism because their Govt didnt spend BILLIONS on transmitting their people with PARANOID thoughts of crimes and hallucinating thoughts. And made Millions along with FDA, and Healthcare!

68. In the 1960s First AMERICA was MIND CONTROLLED with intense CRIME increases on our streets & prisons with Paranoias they blamed on drugs, which the CIA brought in covertly and now, Today the same with Mind Control transmitted people to induce fighting CIA WAR they created AGAIN, and GLOBAL FASCISM mentality and conditioning, while changing laws to get away with it.

69. Govt has been creating, and releasing intentional lies to the media with hardware tangibles electronics to cover up Mind Controlled false thoughts and unaware of swayed facts as well. An intentional blend of lies, false perceptions & threats, since 2009.

70. Part of the Coup Detat was to take Jews out of powerful financial positions and topple Banking as in the Bible/Torah and Secret Govt is creating Messiah simulations.

71. Sharon Weinberger was another witness to these evil misfits behind powerful computer technologies using Quantum Physics and energy scalar waves for Mind Control.

72. We are just hearing about Mind Control from NSA Russell Tice and others because he accidentally found out and the Govt Censored all Books, Videos & Media successfully for 50 years with even more Mind Control DUMBING US DOWN one at a time & in mass.

73. Millions of PEOPLE thinking their bad luck or accidents are naturally occurring when they did not have to happen at all and someone is behind the scenes engineering their life events and accountable for it daily from simple mistakes to catastrophe, crimes & much worse.

74. These Weapons of Mass Destruction are wireless, undetectable, and are numbing and freezing body parts, throat, private parts, limbs, used with REMOTE VI

EWING in homes or streets to immobilize humans for hours or days at a time, more intense than anesthesiology, or morphine, or hypnosis used on the public unwittingly.

75. CIA/Elites have been Anti-Semitic since funding Hitler & Cointelpro funding the KKK etc.

76. The OUTRAGEOUS Truths collectively & connecting the dots! Why the Media CANT wake up, focus or expose the TIPS of the ICEBERG diversions! Manipulated events, news, just like the economy and health in AMERICA. THE MYSTERIES OF UNSOLVED CRIMES & MEDICINE by Secret Govt! HOW sick do they want you in AMERICA! Those calling the ACLU from Hospitals saying our government is using DIRECT ENERGY WEAPONS to electrocute them, & add organ pain during KEMO! Puppets in our daily lives and events with mind transmissions! AS EVIL AS UNBELIEVABLE and WHY didnt the ACLU or anyone ever hear of RUSSELL TICE in DC who was in the legal field during my visit in 09?

77. CIA is spreading anti-semitism covertly behind the scenes with Mind Control as their marionettes. We are almost all robots being led & misled.

78. PALESTINES were rejected from their own surrounding Arab Countries that America will use for more martial law war excuses for WARS THEY GENERATE and CREATE TO JUSTIFY FASCISM COMING AND TYRANNY, while looking like the humanitarian saviors due to the new signed executive order to bring them here, and denying it afterwards.

79. Most non-sense and Un-solved Mysteries are due to Mind Control Manipulations, as created COPY-CATS who are also programmed or induced to commit Crimes.

80. Mind controlled lies toward genocide of Jews and new world order! Debra Small says conspiracy of forces is Mind Control trickling down since the 70s when Americans use to say its in the water. Most feel it & never knew! Add ANTHRAX AIDS & SWINE.

81. Scott McCullen and G. Bush used propaganda and brainwash (utube demo) to sell the war and most still dont know 911 was also an inside job for fears and fascism, & bringing it home on US SOIL to start changing the Constitution of freedoms for EVIL TAKE OVER.

82. The use of Mind Control Psychotronic, Acoustics, Neurological Weapons, and Synthetic Telepathy uses on the Public, also the major cause of Global warming Manipulations.

83. CHEMTRAILS are in children SCHOOL books as good chemicals helping.

84. There should have been a revolution to overthrow this Secret Govt since the Bombing of our own buildings agenda, the installed satellites & spreading joke of Need Another Seven Astronauts, and the agenda of our economy, & oil crisis since 1973, etc when Big Brother started watching and Manipulating with Mind Control and brainwashing the Country with the opposite, and how good and successful it was and now covering their tracks with false fears yet again using Russia first and today Terrorism they created and provoked for U S Soil laws.

85. The public was deceived since 2007 when we struck Oil in North Shore of Alaska enough for 200 years that never made every front-page newspaper. Now comes excuses to scapegoat.

86. You have been directly transmitted not to believe this wicked Shadow Govt has been corrupting to rape human rights, dignity, privacy, & Gods will with this Mind Control.

87. The 1967 USS liberty-Project Philadelphia HALLUCINATIONS, blaming ISRAEL - mistake in identity set up, cutting off investigations (as usual) and the Start of ANTI-SEMITISM INDUCEMENTS born with the 1947 Act and CIA! Israel always defending itself against Shadow Gov't mind control induced anti-semitic propaganda they create and fan covertly.

88. CIA has been getting away with INTENTIONAL WAR CRIMES & ATTACKS on CIVILIANS since they were created with the 1947 ACT, ten fold of ISRAELs DEFENSES.

89. There's NO cure for skin CANCER (Blocked cures, because they create it all), no known cause of blood/skin diseases because peoples organs are being irradiated with ELF and EMF. Not just lame cell phones & microwaves!

90. The CIA brought the drugs in from South America, selling to kids, creating need for DEA generating crimes-tax dollar, and scapegoats to many other Secret t Govt Crimes. Now broadening Homeland Security and BIGGER government Control.

91. Katrina did not cause the walls to come down without a little help/push & sabotage from our friends/heros (FBI/CIA Secret Govt. Fema not responding appropriately to later justify Blackwater/Martial Law, rebuilding with golf courses, & infrastructure Govt Work, etc.

92. Mind Control and D.E.W. contribute largely to false test results, tampered electronics in homes, public buildings and automobiles. If you are targeted as an innocent civilian, these could appear as natural causes or malfunctions.

93. Victims report these are like demented children who play mind games behind a computer like playing in traffic all day with peoples lives and electronic communications which ARE THE KIDNAPPED CHILDREN we see on MILK CARTONS for decades like programmed DUNCAN OF INDIAN & quashed from exposures, now HANDLERS.

94. Mind Control experiments are being conducted with your life, for Behavior Modifications, dumbing down individuals, bad customer service and tyranny conditioning.

95. Mind Control is responsible for many tempers, suppression, fears, anxieties and suicides with transmitted suggestions alone, and blame drugs or economy, etc. The Agenda!

96. Mind Control is also used for population control and genocides deciding who lives and how they live covertly. Angels dont play this HAARP. THE ULTIMATE CONSPIRACY!

97. Mind controlled kids to commit shootings in schools is no different than those in the military, CIA creating sex, drugs, & rock n roll through Hollywood minds (then AIDS), other covert projects.

98. Even with terrorism in other countries, they feel safer on their streets & homes than AMERICANS because paranoia is added to TV with Mind Control since Crime was induced.

99. PYRAMID diet was created but not promoted on purpose while transmitting AMERICANS TO EAT & BE OBESE with Mind Control Urges, while encouraging Doctors & others to create unhealthy diets & eat synthetic foods, diet pills, INSTEAD OF GOD CREATED NATURAL FOOD FROM THE GROUND for ULTIMATE HEALTHY AMERICANS. ALL AGE NDA OF FDA as well! YOUR mental addictions are induced by the transmissions!

100. Govt Mind Control is for ULTIMATE Global POWER and will be ACCOMPLISHED WITH PHYCHOTRONICS if we THE PEOPLE dont stop them.

101. The average American would be astonished to learn the extent to which secret surveillance technology has advanced today with 100% remote manipulations, attacks, changed minds, bodies, of the human and animal, good or bad. They harass, manipulate, and kill and they dont approve the panacea to energy medicine, as we already know lasers are, & used Globally!

102. Military, Julianne McKinneys, Director, Electronic Surveillance Project-1994 letter-response. After Clintons partial admission and apology as past tense is the NSA caught red handed with Mass Remote Mind Control for evil New World Order brainwashing as a good thing.

103. Threats from CIA in July of 2007 where Muslim and Christians will try to bring down a new Holocaust of Jews and minorities. A sadistic Trouble-Making Cult & Culture!

104. All tangible hardware surveillance, corruptions, propaganda, and lies to the Media are diversions, aiding to brainwash and make humans ROBOTS and PUPPET S. One religion, One Cult, THE CIA-Book only found in France!

105. Mind Controlled Americans as more dumb and lazy and also conveniently justified the public to outsource overseas to save money.

106. Since the trades for cheap plastic products and cars, many were mind controlled as well as brainwashed with propaganda to buy. I wont tell you about mind controlled women and plastic surgery rampant, chivalry, and women differences because this would never end.

107. These weapons experimented on Civilians and war can be used for good or bad, illness or panacea, but are used for New World Control instead of potential Defense.

108. When weird things happen like ID theft, Cyberspace, & stalking, phone & internet issues, electronic, etc, it is mostly Mind Games and Mind Controlled op eratives called handlers.

109. Our Govt that start epidemics and sets trends, culture, and shapes us with the use of Mind Control weapons on a mass level including Population Control.

110. Most Americans are not dumb or obese, etc. just because they are born on US Soil. Just programmed and induced nefariously!

111. Mind Control Psychotronics and MKULTRA experiments have been growing into Mind Control since The Manchurian Candidate original Movie 1962, suppressed, and programmed not to be believed, as all else of mind control when discovered technologies.

112. You are being attacked with the use of these weapons that turn anyone or any animal against you by targeting the Central Nervous System with false negative thoughts.

113. Mind Control is also used to induce the public with obstacles to have an abundance of good books, documentary videos, & education, with immoral corruptions transmits.

114. Mass population who turned against Dixies Chicks, (video), Britney Spears and others would not have happened if not induced with NSA transmissions and sabotaged events, memories, thought/feelings, and miscommunications. Using us as pawns against each other.

115. Some are suing Corporations and Airlines when they should be suing the CIA.

116. White House Sexual Slavery goes on with women under Mind Control as CATHY OBRIEN, (Brice Taylor-utube.com) Anne Collins, The Sleep Room and satan child prostitution. HOW SICK & EVIL DO YOU REALLY BELIEVE YOUR GOVT IS. CointelPro is known to pick up on cults, fund them, and continue, and inducing them to appear natural and organically grown over time when exiting. Dr. Ross Institute and why its so prevalent & yet suppressed. Allegations to tempt individuals to crimes and corruptions as with tempting Clinton- scandall to be used against him for Blackmail! General Michael AQUINO/CIA/DIA.

117. If you drive a safe, well made car as BMW (as if we should not have the esteem to deserve the best) WHEN poor Countries had Mercedes for TAXIs and could expect a well made car until OUR Government STEPPED IN and promoted not condoned, lessor manufacturers of American made cars in America, promoting illegal speeds to pass law when illegal, thus creating more tax collections, health care, and deaths on the roads! MATERIALISTIC & PLASTIC SURGERIES also induced as CHANGED MINDS AND EMOTIONS!

118. We labor more hours per person per year than any other country with less vacation and pension benefits and THEY CALL US SPOILED. The Mind Game Manipulations of CIA!

119. We are in danger of our secret govt from these weapons and oppressions, losing civil rights mentality or on paper, and not so much Terrorism threats at all, on US Soil.

120. Your money is being spent in Millions on these experiments turned to Mass Mind Control CREATING JEWISH DIVISIONS as well as other targeted individuals or groups.

121. Hollywood has been the most Mind Controlled to corrupt television, thus the American morals and have been puppets individually controlled one way or another.

122. You everyone is directly induced with Mind Controlled thoughts and suggestions transmitted one at a time not to be healthy with food urges & no exercise, to commit immoral behaviors, and crimes, alcohol, depending on your weaknesses or genetics.

123. Everything about your genetics is being collected in a massive database and used nefariously without your knowledge including your entire profile. DATA MINING-your destiny!

124. These Mind Games include GUIDING YOUR LIFE and also manipulating and playing with psychics readings, which are also in their target used to help solving crimes.

125. Individuals are transmitted with this Mind Control thoughts to produce false controversial opposite lies on line and otherwise, to create doubt and disc redit the truth tellers.

126. G. Bush said that our energy will be just fine and that he will help one soul at a time. WOW! Not even oceans! Why was his assassination attempt in the 80s called off.

127. That if you find yourself in a war with your neighbors or at work with harassment, it is because of Mind Control Games to create and engineer wars.

128. The joke that went around in the 70s GO PLAY in TRAFFIC came not only from Mind Control but from traffic lights being purposely tampered with as Power outages.

129. That since I started writing this, Mind Control has been more rampant creating more false news to discredit these facts with doubt and endless excuses & covering their tracks.

130. We are isolated and suppressed from bringing this to light and know EXACTLY HOW AMERICA GOT THIS WAY! Dysfunctional, dumbed down, controlled, sickened, set up, framed, raped in many ways, destined for oppressions, bad luck and much worse! AMERICAN FEARS & PHOBIAS & RETIREES addicted to SLOT MACHINES & PILLS-Experiments to induced Gay and Lesbian desires for experiments, revolting pleasures, and overseas sales of remote views, induced women for breast augmentations and side effects of hormones in agriculture for premature growth have been underway as with experimented with bees to attack man as with animals or to sedate remotely! A synthetic America where our own Government does not want us healthy because they are engineering it and creating it as war on our streets! Kay Griggs Military Wife and Whistleblower and Jim Keith-Mass Control Human Engineering (soldiers, robots, and drones) HOWARD HUGHES!

WARNINGS to We the People

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE 5/28/2010 rev 11/2/11

CONTACT: Mireille Torjman Federal Whistleblower

Mobile 954.529.8684 ThewhiteroseII@yahoo.com

www.mireilletorjman.com for Supreme Court Lawsuit and Open Letter to Congress.

Have you figured it out yet!

Astonishing Revelations and Press to Israel pg 613-May 2010 pg 14.

Sibel Edmonds gagged, Ariel Sharon comatosed, as I, DC swept covertly as NY pre-911 TYRANNY pretext to SURRENDER CIVIL LIBERTIES decoys (illnesses in Directed energy) zaps, and NSA Russell Tice threatened and discredited, as I. Why hasn't the press--aside from MSNBC--covered NSA Tice's revelations! CANCER NEURO NLP; Science and humanity under SIEGE! Behavioral Science and Technology-Sound and Seismic Waves infiltrations. For the Suspension of the Constitution to Communism and the LAUNCH of a NEW Holocaust in manifest on U.S. Soil Mission after surveillance implementation. [Prescott Bush, slides] --IF you knew ALL this, you would NOT be making these CHOICES! SSP, Patriot Act, Mass Control Human Engineering: Beam Warfare, Electronic Mind Control, Psi War, One World Brain, Dreamscape, Hardwiring Humans, and Information Warfare. The Persinger Plan, illegal WARRANTLESS mind taps intercepted thoughts, Engineering Consent. Paranormal Activities: Thomas Drake NSA Whistleblower Espionage Case Exposes Psychic Spy Connection. Projects.. . Spacestar DARPA (Trailing 50 yrs behind science/tech)-Project Voice of God, playing GOD, Cult of Intelligence, and laws of attraction, breeding Power & greed!

All linked (Bear Stearns, Israel...) PsycheLeaks looks at the relationship between UK psychic Chris Robinson and indicted NSA whistleblower and former Senior Intelligence Official Thomas Drake. Other sources claim US National Security Agency inherited America's STAR GATE psychic spy program from CIA. Futurist, STARstream Research Share, SpaceStar Spies, Lies, & Polygraph Tape- Gary S. Bekkum May 25, 2011- Mind to Mind Communication. And, why has NSA whistle-blower Thomas Drake been charged with espionage?) I watched CBS 60 Minutes story with great interest Focused on wrong WMD!

ALL 2nd Level CIA covert Weapon of Mass Destruction Psychoenergetics, Synthetic Telepathy miscommunications! Neurology under Siege, shadowing computer use entrainment! Gifford Shooting assassinations surreptitiously and Black Cancer.

CIA is Sued Decades Later: BAY OF PIGS!!!!!!!!!! Operation MHCHAOS, ominous psychological warfare arsenalPlans to Psychocivilize You, Macrocosm Process; Americas

Leaders & worse.

The National Security State and the Assassination of JFK

The CIA, the Pentagon, and the "Peace President" by Andrew Gavin Marshall

(1959) Among the recommended provocations and pretexts to justify a war, the Joint Chiefs suggested that, a series of well coordinated incidents will be planned to take place in and around [the US military base at] Guantanamo to give genuine appearance of being done by hostile Cuban forces, including starting rumours, landing friendly Cubans in uniform outside of the base to stage attack on base in Cuban uniform, capturing friendly saboteurs inside the base, and have friendly Cubans start riots near the base main gate.[30] Further recommendations were to blow up ammunition inside the base; start fires, as well as burning aircraft on the base, or sabotage a ship in the harbor, or to even, sink [a] ship near harbor entrance. Conduct funerals for mock-victims.[31] One startling recommendation was that, We could blow up a US ship in Guantanamo Bay and blame Cuba, or that, we could blow up a drone (unmanned) vessel anywhere in the Cuban waters, and blame Cuba, and that, casualty lists in US newspapers would cause a helpful wave of national indignation.[32] However, the most disturbing aspect of Operation Northwoods was the recommendation that:

"We could develop a Communist Cuban terror campaign in the Miami area, in other Florida cities and even in Washington. Honolulu fake documents! (Like all else: shark in Egypt waters blamed on Israel, 911, Rumors, etc) An excuse in advance set up for everything and a Synthetic America!

With no danger to American Society, the entrapment from Bush /Obama "MANIPULATORS".... "The object is to terrify the American Public, so that they will surrender their civil liberties--Possibly the greatest extortion scheme in U.S. history." --It's only the BEGINNING! See below creating subservient civilians, assassinations and torture goes on illegally anyway. Legalizing it is only for us civilians N.W.O.

All 2nd LEVEL CIA-Sorcerer-NSA transmissions-current Assassinations: NSA, DOD Directed Energy Weapon frying life & earth; Taking us and Israel down duplicitous decoy.

The New (1975) weapon of war (mass destruction duped diversions) is out and was in the hands of Cult of Intelligence! HOW & WHY 911 mastermind/CONTROL ELF WEAPON! The root of all problems must be exposed and stopped before too late! See history collectively repeating by design! Cryptocracy's Plan to Psycho-civilize you. Emulating, inducing the Scriptures. Duping ALL- Thomas Drake case Psychic Spy Programs hiding behind Dragnet and SSP since 1947! Macrocosm OFFICIALS and Corp.

LEADERS

CIA JOHN LOFTUS on brasschecktv.com 2 videos of ISRAEL, CIA BUSH/HITLER DoD Yale Secret Society, CIA John LOFTUS DEPT of JUSTICE belong in JAIL----- funded Prescott Bush and RECRUITED NAZIS and FUNDING TERRORIST GROUPS with BRITISH- To crush ISRAEL- BEFORE DULLES ARAB NAZIS in CIA-911 to AGENDA next & since 1920. THE SECRET WAR AGAINST JEWS and more. THE WITNESS TREE.Part I and II <http://www.brasschecktv.com/videos/money-madness/how-america-lost-its-way-.html> <http://www.brasschecktv.com/videos/government-corruption/why-the-justice-department-doesntcatch-banksters-terrorists-and-other-enemies-of-the-nation.html>

ALL HIDING BEHIND SSP, Patriot Act since 1947 conspiracy take over slowly being introduced as New World Order MASS Brainwash-chunked to accept! The launch of a New Holocaust in manifest after trickery and the people's CONSENT of balancing LESS FREEDOM, Civil Rights and a suspension of the Constitution, after MISSION of COMMUNISM and Middle East. Tyranny infiltrations in the guise of 911. [Pg 9, 213] DARPA (trailing 50 yrs behind/suppressed) on BUDGET old CIA SCIENCE.

CYBERSYN; "The COUP for the Communist World: It is said Henry Kissinger was the one who intervened to put an end to the GRAND experiment. Salvador Allende was assassinated by Chileans who are reported to have been in the PAY of CIA, and Cybersyn went by the wayside. They thought! Today FCC coup to regulate the INTERNET; COMMUNISM infiltrations and attempts, KGB/Gestapo style Domestic Surveillance mind manipulations after the fact & covertly hijacked www & humans. One World Brain Pg 241. N.S.A. has a five-thousand-acre campus at Fort Meade protected by iris scanners and facial-recognition devices. The electric bill there is said to s urpass $$$ seventy million dollars a year." For civility and DNA cloning and/or data-mining, It does not protect. False sense of security.

CYBERNETICS; Helms; can be used in molding of a child's character Subdue & Ripping senses while there. odd series of events ARTICLES for decades on Ordinary folks Nationwide-leading to ... Attached. -Strange cases and deaths on my website with other documents from this weapon of MIND Control events & tricks on whistleblowers & Civility especially CIVIL rights agenda.

Secretary Geithner also highlighted Bear Stearns former Chief Operating Officer of Fixed Income, Paul Friedman, stated "Rumors were untrue until the telling of rumors made them true. This is how they do it (Project Stargate/Spacestar research DUPED by 2nd LEVEL as all else, and playing psychics). Then, GAO report (INVOKED TO SELL by FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD), PLANS selectively REDISTRIBUTING/TRANSFER OF WEALTH from Jews, and agenda unwittingly. (odd/strange series of events on individuals across Country/Globe) and CONGRESSMAN KUCINICH AGAIN how the TRANSFER OF MONIES with WARS----- after presenting a bill for SPACE PRESERVATION ACT to ban this mind control WEAPON. Including Mark Zuckerberg Facebook. Donation of millions for Science & Tech while setting him up for years.

The CIA succeeded in developing a whole range of psycho-weapons to expand its already ominous psychological warfare arsenal. With these capabilities, it was now possible to wage a new kind of war: a war which would take place invisibly, upon the battlefield of the human mind... [p. 19]

1997 DoD Briefing: 'Others' can set off earthquakes, volcanoes remotely using electromagnetic waves By Lori Price 28 Feb 2010 Secretary of Defense William S. Cohen, 28 April 1997: 'There are some reports, for example, that some countries have been trying to construct something like an Ebola Virus [OMG! Who would do such a thing?], and that would be a very dangerous phenomenon, to say the least. Alvin Toffler has written about this in terms of some scientists in their laboratories trying to devise certain types of pathogens that would be ethnic specific so that they could just eliminate certain ethnic groups and races; and others [L OL] are designing some sort of engineering, some sort of insects that can destroy specific crops. Others are engaging even in an eco-type of terrorism whereby they can alter the climate, set off earthquakes, volcanoes remotely through the use of electromagnetic waves.' --Just switch 'yours,' 'others' and 'they' with 'U.S.,' 'U.S.' and 'U.S.'. Imagine, after eight years of George W. Bush turbo-funding these lunatics, what they can do now.

(WAVES, Seismic, radio frying us) BP mind control transmitted human error! Tried to warn CONGRESS in 2008 and dismissed by disbelief. ELF CANCER directed energy at INDIVIDUALS being covered up as if from lame excuses and now Natural Disasters Corruptions infiltrated as all else. WATERFRONT Properties FL to NY under attack! Induced Climate ELF & Seismic Waves to De-populate and redistribute wealth/---again. 2nd LEVEL CIA (Terrorists) Mind CONTROLLING GLOBALIST to do THEIR MISSION for them. HUMANS are all PAWNS used in their U.S. Matrix since Alien Hallucinations to going Global!

Invisible Empire is bad enough; imagine the covert ops of ELF warfare arsenal and NSA transmissions Invisible WEAPON of Mass Destruction! See Military Complex Spending and horrific CRIMES & ills for Decades-Press Release and www.mireilletterjman.com

"Only the small secrets need to be protected. The big ones are kept secret by public incredulity." Marshall McLuhan

"If both the past and the external world exist only in the mind, and if the mind itself is controllable what then?" George Orwell

Published 1985 MACROCOSM: NEW WORLD ORDER MILLIONS Will go THROUGH "The PROCESS" (brainwash programming) INCLUDING MOST OF AMERICA'S CORPORATE LEADERS and OFFICIALS from Navy/ EDUCATION-"It was estimated that Millions of persons were (1985) put through this type of PROCESSING Breaking down of personalities and recondition..." Many already manipulated into their office long ago. College manipulations no one knows about. "Weird things happen when you join the bureau". Their shadow. Collectively-What do you think they've been doing and how we got here! Making sense of 50 years in the manifest-Wake up America! Wake up Washington! NSA transmissions Article, Leading psychiatrist, Dr. Walter BOWART pg 4 and more. -Char lotte Iserby, Bush Family/Society on Conspiracy to our education and schools before 1960s. (Whistleblower)

"It was either invisible warfare or PEACE, and everyone seemed to agree the economy would "suffer" from peace. Without war, it was believed, the economy would falter and depression would be the dividend of peace. Thus the advisors to the president began to think about what might motivate the U.S. economy as well as war did. They came up with several possibilities, the most fantastic of which was to fake an invasion from outer space... Resource Tab 1973-90% JFK believed CIA conspiracy today BUT IT IS UNWITTINGLY mind controlled!!! Dr. Walter Bowart Pg 6 # 21, 39.

The Weapon of Mass Destruction: DoD, Psychotronics, Synthetic Telepathy, DOE and a CIAs-2nd Level--Spinning our wheels and putting out fires/band aids for yrs without solve humanity's mind control at the root. THE FORCE BEHIND THE FORCES! Unveil them. Their own shadow is within (1973). Tesla's Chinese wall of defense... In formation warfare psyops transmitted thoughts, Article on MIND manipulating our SENATE STILL decades later 2nd level CIA FOIA 1972, "His God lurks Behind the electronic curtain, we find: The SORCERER, MANIPULATOR, CYBERNETICIST, the weaver of the DREAMscape" Jim Keith pg 245 Brilliant video below. They all said Abolish CIA and NSAct 1947. See Russia slide. Its ALL about you, it AFFECTS YOU daily and undun-wit.

OPERATION MIND CONTROL: CRYPTOCRACY'S PLAN TO PSYCHOCIVILIZE YOU- WITNESS in COURT NO Plane hit PENTAGON, TANGIBLE coupled with fear TRANSMISSIONS to manipulate and BRAINWASH you to VOTE for PATRIOT ACT is one example----- BEWARE!----- Facts below and on line with Appendices! There is a 18 U.S.C. 241 Conspiracy against rights since MLK, JFK unwitting false blame---

Puppets/Ants/Robots Everybodys doing the LOCOMOTION as ObamaMaxwells Silver Hammer Chapter The Body Electric Operation Northwoods repeated under new psyops and HOOVER warned too Horrible to imagine. Jerry E. Smith was an author, lecturer, poet, & editor. ... dies March 08, 2010... "Haarp: The Ultimate Weapon of the Conspiracy "(The Mind-Control Conspiracy Series) Lt Col Tom Bearden, Russia WAR NED worse! ELF SICKO American accelerated ills and newcomers. French scientist Kervran Russian scientist Kaznacheyev, who proved that any disease could be TRANSMITTED electromagnetically. (1975) Immune. Page 4.

NAZIS in the CIA (secret societies) but duping their own agents; are the shadow CIA unwitting: Magnus Olsson; Below CIA Vet Milt Beardon states; "That you know of 911 etc, They play a lot with Memory and make you invest to lose or win $$$ -investing ills, Aliens, and enemies. Magnus Olsson Sweden also stated CIA has NAZIS.

A plan to fascism for another Holocaust in MANIFEST if the CONSTITUTION IS NOT restored. 90 Billion Hadassah Jerusalem HospPg 8.

ALL RELATED TO PATRIOT ACT, disarming etc. DUPLICITOUS plans to take down Israel and WWII still being manipulated behind the scenes duping everyone. This 2nd level CIA is behind the electronic CURTAIN on Long Island Tower inception and JP Morgan funding

Bush was to be assassinated in the 1980s by Duncan OFinioan; didn't know why, but was intercepted, overridden by CIA & (triggered) to cancel mission (shoot) as ALL ELSE. CIA were the Aliens among us We are not alone since big Brothers watching was the buzz. Toggling between families homes. French civilians were transmitted Bush was controlled by Aliens for psyops.

Bowart, Walter, Leading Psychiatrist Blows Whistle on Profession: Proves 50 + years of Mind Control Were we Controlled? JFK Adventures and False Memory Syndrome Foundation, Schizophrenic offshoot since HITLER Weapon of Mass pg 9 Synthetic ills and Crimes & AZ. APPEASED everyone in the 70s after Patti Hearst and PARANOIA to not being born ill but developing it as you get older lame induced infiltration while psychocivilizing us. Cancer Jim Keith-Mass Control Human Engineering.

(Pushed/fell??? to his death) Cults in sheep skin! Duplicitous sabotaging behind the scenes APA and AMA (while in bed with DoD; Amy Goodman Standing up to the Madness) enemies close to take them down, to Medical books also for 50 years. FALSE RECORDS & Character/Perception ETC! And JFK no official of my Administration Psychotronics-Psychotechnologies, Psychoenergetics WARFARE also on APA & AMA in your doctor's office/Lawyer... skewed medicine, list of ills below. (1975) Planned false memories in psychologists patients and blamed them as with medical manipulations in Hospitals & offices.

VIDEO Mossad Microbiologist Joseph Moshes Baxter Ukraine Plague Warning. Posted by labvirus on November 7, 2009 Bioweapon disguised as a vaccine. He claimed that the vaccine contained an adjuvant (additive) designed to weaken the immune system, and replicated RNA from the virus responsible for the 1918 pandemic Spanish flu, causing global sickness and mass death.

The next day, this happened (see video) THE STRANGE CASE OF JOSEPH MOSHE:

This Joseph Moshe arrested in L.A. is likely a MOSSAD agent with a CONSCIENCE and has apparently been extradited immediately to Israel. Now his testimony, whatever it would have been, is still secure. Notice, the federal agents used an electro-magnetic pulse which knocked out his car, as well as any cell phone so he could not contact the U.S. Attorney he was obviously going to meet with. (As I) ELF immune scapegoats to hide as all else with propaganda mind controlled.

The immune system is so overloaded by the presence of the "shadow" diseases that its effectiveness is thinned out. "In short, alter the internal wave structure, and one creates a curved spacetime 'engine' that acts on mass in any fashion one chooses to design -- including initiate diseases . . . Now visualize one of these 'vacuum engines' or 'spacetime curvature engines' that acts on mass to generate the exact effects produced by anthrax. (Or any other disease one wishes) . . .

Call the virtual state of a disease engine the disease pattern in the "shadow" state, just prior to becoming observable. . Tom Bearden Army Lt. Col. (www.mireilleletorjman.com for all articles with notations)

Has America become a nation of psychotics? You would certainly think so, based on the explosion in the use of antipsychotic medications. In 2008, while old people with dementia are dosed, in large numbers, with drugs once reserved largely for schizophrenics. Americans and bipolar Mass psychosis in the US - Opinion - Al Jazeera English Pfizer -(Drugs (Rx tax)-ITS ALL FOR TAX REVENUE & POWER) as USA 1970s deployed VETS non-traced, GULF war & Ground 0.

Research Links Rise in Falluja Birth Defects and Cancers to US Assault Defects in newborns 11 times higher than normal 'War contaminants' from 2004 attack could be caused by Martin Chulov enclosed Published on Friday, December 31, 2010 by The Guardian/UK

The Dark Side of the Force: Creating and broadcasting disease

Speaking of the scalar wave induction of disease by longitudinal wave patterns Bearden refers to work by French scientist Kervran Russian scientist Kaznacheyev, who proved that any disease could be transmitted electromagnetically. How to "Broadcast" Diseases Longitudinal EM Biowars

Bearden explains how the new quantum potential weapons can be used to induce disease-at-a-distance in a population, or to "spread" the immune system so thin that a conventional bio-attack would be greatly potentiated. By "broadcasting" virtual disease patterns over a population, the immune system is so overloaded by the presence of the "shadow" diseases that its effectiveness is thinned out. "In short, alter the internal wave structure, and one creates a curved spacetime 'engine' that acts on mass in any fashion one chooses to design -- including initiate diseases . . . Now visualize one of these 'vacuum engines' or 'spacetime curvature engines' that acts on mass to generate the exact effects produced by anthrax. (Or any other disease one wishes) . . . Call the virtual state of a disease engine the disease pattern in the "shadow" state, just prior to becoming observable. . . . (see June 13, 1975)

7. In 1967, after Ramparts magazine exposed secret CIA funding of the National Student Association and numerous nonprofit organizations, President Johnson forbade CIA support of foundations or educational institutions. Inside the Agency there was no notion that this order meant ending relationships, such as the one with Geschickter. In his case, the agile CIA men simply transferred the funding from the foundation to a private company, of which his son was the secretary-treasurer.

8. Lying to Congress followed the pattern of lying to the press that some MKULTRA veterans adopted after the first revelations came out. For example, former Hum an Ecology Society director James Monroe told The New York Times on August 2, 1977 that "only about 25 to 30 percent" of the Society's budget came from the CIAa statement he knew to be false since the actual figure was well over 90 percent. His untruth allowed some other grantees to claim that their particular project was funded out of the non-Agency part of the Society. Pentagons source selection Board repeatedly recommended a bid by Boeing as both better and cheaper... DoD awarded to Gen. Dynamics" 2nd level manipulated.

DoD: McNamara, wrote in March 1969, issue of Washington Monthly Mag.; Few Americans are aware that about 90 % of the Major weapons systems that the defense Dept. procures ends up costing the Country at least twice as much as was originally estimated. The American Tax Payer is not getting their moneys worth???????? SAIC =CIASpacestar FBI lawsuit & Pursuant with Lawsuit by BOEING.

2 different thoughts etc; transmitted at the same time to create arguments, chaos, dis-information! Thoughts interfering on your speech, hearing, decisions for decades. First they build TRUST while set up.

Your destinies are being led or misled, mostly no coincidences and YOUR THOUGHTS are NOT your own. Dumbed down, Obese, busy, De-sensitized & Dehumanized robots by mind control individuals. Immigration mind controlled Americans as dumbed down and lazy to justify immigration; part of agenda.

SOA: Mind Manipulated in law impeding truth, creating doubts, infiltrations, and worse-GEORGE GREEN, ROBERT BAER CIA bomb makers. COVERT FEMA camps and Thousands built caskets under guise of HR 645 UNWIT. Massive ops wiki and brainwash underway! American homes and jobs, with our children since Apollo13 but with shadow Apollo 11 documented-7 witnesses never returned (Satellite) REMOTE VIEWING 24/7 spying is manipulating. Armies trained by our School of AMERICAS and set up mind controlling their people; South America now Working on ASIA. All Invaded Countries... Breaking The SOUND Barrier; Democracy NOW! pg 214+. BEAM WARFARE. SOA...It's everywhere including CIA VALERIE PLAME technology weapons, Bay of Pigs invasion, and Juan Cole Scandals. RIK and Air Force waste as SAIC etc. AGNAs Contract guards behaviors, linguistics and security in Embassies, F-22 waste DC, Govt lock down, & impeded, information warfare, in (bubble) kept in dark for yrs. during process and false beliefs! Why is Palestines economy growing 10% a yr. with new Malls and we cant Revolution in mass accordingly!

Death Ray for planes was Teslas invention in 1940 and a $2,000,000.00 device to zap and melt an airplane motor 250 miles away and an Invisible Chinese Wall of defense was built around the Country, no matter how large an attack, (Teleforce, manifests FREE energy and creates rays; zapping beams, the new invisible war). (Dr. Becker, Naomi Wolf, and Sharon Weinberger Imaginary Weapons).., this Warden cliff Tower is in full action in Long Island NY, along with 36 other stations or sites as GWEN, Globally that beam massive volume of Free Energy. (The New York Times, Sunday September 22, 1940-Science and Patents, Education News) One COSTLY energy zap causes by NLP suggestion transmitted to individuals; confusion, mistakes, trip/fall, body temp-freeze, heat, miscommunication, fatigue, focus/ concentration, radio-sleep (Kucinich-US patented under MKDELTA), and stalling any engine. HAARP, Body Electric, and Mass Control Human Engineering. Artificial intelligence..

Dr. MILTON FRIEDMAN- Freedoms ARE THE moral of HUMAN---Abolish most Agencies and WHY. <http://www.humanevents.com/UncommonKnowledge.php> FB. ECONOMIST (5 segments post-humously-2006)

Israel-framed while dividing all people to conquer! CIA predicts, (no creating) to carry out-water (WAR) and pricing shortage, 2015-mind control transmissions zaps dry heat in body and energy-taking us down, Israel, Africa. De-population Pentagon video staging us for next invasion ASSASSINATED Allison Des Forges in Hudson River mind control plane Crash-Staged and Senator Ed Ted Kennedy zapped. Both Civil Rights Africa, Water and Dry Land zapped already planning to invade them and brainwash one world govt. Emulating the Torah scriptures! Manchurians, and IRS, CIA bldgs/files in WT7! Surreptitious!

Major cities experiment to increase crime in the 70s by mind control EVOLVED never ceased GENERATING BIGGER GOVT, INDUCINGMISHAPS-MISFORTUNES, entrapment and no w TERRORISM? Infiltrations of BRAINWASHING SCHOOLS-WEAKEN their ARMYtake down ISRAEL and America going Global Agenda. Infiltrated Palestinians-Wars provoked still in manifest; Under the Auspices/Scapegoating Drugs they brought in Conspiracy . NOT from drugs or your TV- SEE TIME photo/Article (Oct 1971) below Infiltrations and excuses on all aspects of ELF attacks.

Egypt largest Military, Turkey Sibel gagged SSP created doubts and to hide conspiracy agenda of NWO) CIA masterminds. A public brainwashed to allow it unwittingly, in the White House, to next calamity and Global Domination Conspiracy of the minds! Connecting 50 yrs of dots! ie; General Anthony Zinni (wikipedia)Changed minds! (Brainwash on the job as many others, see how its done) CIA Predicts The Future 2015 - Water Resources. 2007 video/comments. (Unwitting agents channeled to Infiltrate) Waging War since the Church Committee 1974! Charges were made 2 administrations concerned and NEVER ABOLISHED. May be drawn into the fight trying to stop it John McWethy. Taking over the Globe under the disguise of helping others tactics. An unwitting population targeted in advance! DARPA (trailing Science 50 yrs as new MKULTRA) Psyops deployed 50 yrs on civilians. ELECTRONIC WARFARE! http://www.liveleak.com/view?i=bb0_1180923539 Mc Wethy video

Larry SilversteinOWNER of 911 TOWER 7, set up in advance to get insurance and transmitted forced speech/DECISIONto "pull" to firefighters as ifinvolved-NSA transmissions-SABOTAGED as Russell Tice Article Is the NSA conducting war on Americans (YES, tip of iceberg) 2006 and Media asked, why press didnt pick it up other than NBC? Operation Mockingbird propaganda unwittingly, updated remote viewing and impairment mind control as misunderstandings. A PRESIDENT WHO ONCE TOOK AN OATH TO CIVIL RIGHTS AND ACCUSED THE GOVERNMENT OF CREATING AIDS! They did! 911 They did!

Sunstein's Report-Cognitive impairment infiltration is unwitting NOT hired Gangs , creating illusion-Un-realized Kinesthetic! Creating false perception for decades on civilians. Reagan erased with Alzheimer mind control (NLP) CIA programming . OPERATION MIND CONTROL (1973) Plans to Psycho civilize you and MACROCOSM Americas Corporate Leaders and Official, AND civilians.

Un-Covered documentary CONGRESS MARIONETTES not READING infozapped, to invade Iraq. Mind controlled Out-Foxed video for years-media mockingbird unwittingly, UNREALIZED, updated! The joke culture, misfits in the pentagon cult of intelligence and a dysfunctional country! Allen Dulles 1957" Berle wrote in his diary. "If the scientists do what they have laid out for themselves, men will become manageable ants." Below www.mireilletterjman.com FULL disclosures.

Hadassah 90 Billions in Ponzi sabotage away from Jerusalem HOSP (Laser/vision) funding. Re-Distributing the WEALTH from Jews manipulating our economy further than Corporations. Always keeping their enemy close, destroying files & buildings . They took down the economy behind the scenes!

Ariel Sharon zapped into coma (as I),Directed Energy Weaponsas planes; because he knew the CIA was corrupt Sabotaging Israel. Kay Griggs Military whistleblower with MIND JABBING attacks (Secret Societies) 1910 Yale Prescott Bush FUNDED NAZI soldiers, KKK etcDoD.

1967 USS liberty-Project Philadelphia (Hallucinations) blaming ISRAEL- mistake in identity set up-framed, cutting off investigations & news coverage (as usual until exposed 2008 as the shuttle satellite cover up, Aliens, public corruption admissions, etc) Start of Anti-Semitism fanned unwittingly since 1947 Act.

Alien UFO Hallucinations Scapegoating with LSD (that CIA brought in and sold to kids). Making Million off the Pharmaceutical (Rx) TAXES (as ALCOHOL INDUCED URGES), now being sued from synthetic side effects and transmitted Synthetic illnesses. After they mind controlled you and your teacher, professor to push prescriptions and the greed transmitted to make commercial on your drug inducement on Americans- VETS Agent Orange non-traceable! Military CANCER and Leukemia, lumps, to all under the disguise of microwaves cells infiltrating crimes & wars! GROUND 0

Playing GOD (Project Voice of GOD) & devil-The CIA Cult of Intelligence born with National Security Act in 1947, Weapons Stations need to be dismantled ASAP. Buzz in Pentagon Synthetic Telepathy and Psychotronics predicted in 1967 video instant communication in the news un-wit, after

Public Speeches "Repeatedly staying the course" to brainwash invaded Countries with (excuses), GULF war, "The ENERGY will be just fine", (Not at all) "we will help on e soulat a time". Hillary "I will not channel my husband" (as in ghost-like transmissions sabotaged Clinton Rumsfeld: There is what you know, you don't know.... . Didnt mean to say that or thats not what I meant Obama dividing the people to conquer with They like to do that, one against the other Called JACKETING in psy ops. (Side effects of brainwash, and Mind Control conflictions). America; The Remote Cult of Intelligence!

SEARCH for MANCHURIAN ego states such as an imaginary childhood playmate and build it into a separate personality, unknown to the first. The hypnotist would communicate directly with this schizophrenic offshoot and command it to carry out specific deeds kamikaze pilot. Manchurian crimes creating a subservient society was not out of sight- by mind control waves." And worse.

GUANTANAMO scapegoats displays and focused on the wrong Weapons of mass destruction, brainwash and intelligence masterminded. (Nano thermal debris removed quickly). Cathy OBrien, Book TRANCE-formation SSP impeding truth. Never getting to full truth---INNOCENT and display for false blame. TIME/DELAYS for false confession Brainwash out memory & PLANT new before public contacts.

How the CIA Missed Stalin's Bomb, 1946-50-printed 2007 but updated 2008. ---Remote Viewing and surveillance CANNOT prevent anything as London Subway Bombing-(Staged)!!! Water and Odd/even days Petrol, CIA sabotage since 70s as drugs and crime all un-natural-inducing more plans for Florida.

Judge Napolitano, Lies the Government told you unwittingly until 2008 cover up pre-empted allegations with political and media transparency... DELUSIONS, RE-READ, and CONDONED corruptions! ILLUSIONS OF CRIMES statistics for 5 decades and mis perceptions mind controlled.

Market inflations and real estate pricing and gouging was all induced from the mind on each individual and as a mass, and part of conspiracy agenda. Corrupting American Minds. And, the suicide??? of a Jewish CFO after 3 months as interim accountant at FANNIE MAE fraud.

Jewish Aaron Russo died of Cancer recently after going public that Rockefeller told him the only reason the WOMENS liberation was allowed to occur successfully was to COLLECT TAXES from them. They also manipulate couples lives as The Firm John Marks also wrote only the participant knows of this and is not only army. In vading Countries Under pretext of oil etc. for take over of humanity.

Did you know CIA operates on the ground wearing Yamacas & M.C. soldiers to frame Jews, destroying fruit trees and crops against the Torah scriptures +, as with our organic natural farms in the U.S. Why?

Did you know that the ISRAELI ART STUDENTS were framed and mind controlled where to live and accepted only in the areas to live as guided to set up and look involved? CONTRARY OF CIA GUILT CREATING DOUBT and so much more BEARING FALSE WITNESS from a neighbor, false memory, fake Govt help spinning their wheels. INTERNET & Google lawsuit, libraries, false accusations & false detainments? Capable and do manipulate all Internet remotely with passwords and minds from spying surveillance. As with False imprisoned masses. Sabotaged 911 Commission never to see the light, as 9 DOJ Attorneys asking questions-Fired at once when they could not be brainwashed to go along, and Generation GAPS again. (see Bay of Pigs framing College Students in air recommendations in 1959 etc)

Did you know Mind Controlled People and Media is set up with tricks of false thoughts transmitted during conversation and output of written documents to put a SPIN on JOURNALISTS & civilians thus unknowingly creating PROPAGANDA, until now covering their tracks with blatant lies from our government? Decades of news from misunderstanding mind games, disputes, & slanders. No one high enough Q clearance! The behavioral sciences (Modification). Nevertheless, the final result is not the whole story of the CIA's attack on the mind. No one knows except the PARTICIPANT.

He called it Pain-Drug-Hypnosis and said it is a vicious war weapon ... The extensiveness of the use of this form of hypnotism in espionage work is now so widespread that it is long past the time when people should have become alarmed about it. [p. 75] Report

Duplicitous-Framing ISRAEL & piggybacked shadowing to scapegoat and set up! See how CIA tab +. INJECTED IDEOLOGY covertly INFILTRATING WORSE OVER TIME TO CHUNK & ACCEPT. BRAINWASH society and worse yet if not stopped and reversed. AND every thing is being mis-applied!

Israel, Seismic Energy to part sea & leave crevice, Israel small land & surrounded by 50 yrs of vast constant attacks, Israel has Palestinians who were EVICTED by their own people, Israel can't have chicken or cow suffer with Kosher scriptures and suffering---2nd level shadow CIA proven Diabolical! STOP Shadow CIA attacks-50 yrs PRESS FANNING Anti-Semitism and spinning all 2nd level CIA, Goldstone Report and 911, SS liberty ... dis-info, hallucinations, cognitive infiltrations, illusions, wearing Yamacas on the Ground in disguise, psyops on Israel and cover-ups. Catherine Fitts Whistleblower Cracks everywhere now. Leave Israel alone and we will have world peace! (Tice Article on SABOTAGE on all aspects of life.)

Inducing mind control on rioters coupled with funding them in Egypt to take them down WW3 as planned every time we invade a Country- see also George Green link video. 9/2010 Press release in SUPREME COURT below this one of ISRAEL whistleblowing CIA to take them down (1947 to current activities fanning opposites) as all our NEWS for decades by design. Information Warfare [1973].

DATA-MINING, why and SINCE 1973 FOIA includes genetics & 2nd Level CIA See Lt. Col Bearden slides and more of NEW frightening weapon the World has ever seen! RUSSIAN SCIENTIST SLIDE.

Mind Control-Directed Energy Weapons are responsible for MOST ILLNESSES, NEURO, Obesity, Immune, Central Nervous System. See Wired & Tice Article, 5 SENSES) KINESTHETIC wikipedia) Elec. Magnetic Fields. (MEMORY Mind/Body BLOCKS-ALZHEIMER-DIMENTIA as back to the future), Agent ORANGE, ADDHD, Equilibrium, Bladder, Colon, Leukemia, Numbness/ MS, Anesthesiology, AIDS, FIBROMALGIA, PULMONARY, Bi-Polar, CONFUSION extra thought transmissions, MEMORY, DYSLEXIA, opposites suggestions to confuse, SKIN/BLOOD Flow/DISEASES, EPSTEIN'S BAR, Vision Sight, HOLOGRAMS, HALLUCINATIONS, Parkinsons, MIGRAINES, CANCER, Anthrax, Valley Fever, Flu like symptoms, Insomnia is sleep deprivation, Thyroid, Short Term Memory, (intercepted thoughts) COGNITIVE IMPAIRMENTS, UN-Necessary procedures, Bi-polar/ADD (most misdiagnosed in America, Accidents, slip & falls, STROKES, Williams Syndrome Motor Coordination, Autism. & disorientation. False ALARMS all from the MIND; UNREALIZED forced speech emotions & mistakes, Epilepsy! (Dr Bearden) MORGELLANS! LIVER dialysis, kidney failures rampant in U.S. Hemorrhage energy heat pressure, Vaccine synthetic, ELF ills hiding behind PHARMACEUTICAL side effects..., RLS jolts of ELF light/elec, DIABETES II, and worse. HIDING BEHIND MSG or ASPERTAME including RETARDATION, Tourette, MUSCLE Controls, ELF reproduction and sweats on both male/female, STD, ARTHRITIS... much worse. INFLAMMATION, Burning feet (Lasers usually seniors), BLISTERS, SPLIT PERSONALITIES is a shift technique of NLP using remote electronic hypnosis, mood transmitted urges to act amplified thoughts, suggestions, thoughts back and forth, mind jabs-interrupt thoughts, with triggers of memory blocks, INDUCED ERASURES & DELAYS IN YOUR LIFE etc. Misplacing items in trash mind games. Programmed MISFITS Diabolic, playing mind games since milk carton missing children recruited by coercion called Handlers. They can't see from your eyes but tell you to LOOK first and take the credit. Seniors mostly, HEARING DEAFNESS, BLINDNESS and PANACEAS. Responsible for much worse, would never sit on this kind of power with Weapons nicely tucked away, knowing no threats by Russians or Chinas and never was by ELF.---Jerry Smith. There is more!!!

Have you been mind controlled not to believe? Diabolical did not stop with what you already know today, that, I assure you, was the burned part. Targeted for 5 years, tortured, and attempts to recruit for the CIA, now trained in NLP and the software from NASA with Woodpecker Scalar Waves that reach Russia but SHIELDED. It is intercepted in our air space as all else. I am a witness in danger and need to come forward and be heard to WARN the grave dangers, cover ups and every excuse possible for doubt including medicinal, that are in manifest. UNREALIZED NOW making it REAL and wit!

"Is the PENTAGON Science CRAZY ENOUGH?" Mind manipulations-Not just on Senators- See Articles/ Speeches Bottom Left. Remote Control Heart Attack Anyone! Explosions Decades ago.

WITHOUT A TRACE -Millions emails missing from WHITE HOUSE servers. Failed backups $2.5 mil in taxes to recover and NOTHING-2005 unwitting Pentagon's Unit: The Cult of Dead Cows! Also see CIA Stuxnet. CIA cyber crimes, ID theft, stalking, viruses, HACKERS.....! covering up, pawns since 2009. CIA cyber crimes, THEFT & Vandalism selectively, ON ALL CIVILITY, stalking, specific MS viruses creation, HACKERS, tampered communications, muting, redirected, manipulations, intercepted thoughts day or night.....! LOS ALAMOS LABS; STUXNET creation. AGAIN in the AUSPICES of losing your FREEDOMS infiltrations... Dr. Warloff and Moret.

Mysteries solved! Remote Viewing is upon you 24/7 since 1973-Science and Humanity under Siege with DoD Secret Society Psychotronics, Synthetic Telepathy DIRECTED ENERGY- (2nd Level CIA); THE WEAPON of MASS DESTRUCTION-ELF miscommunications Duping everyone today!

"It may have been the biggest story since the atom bomb. The headline, however, was small and ignored the larger issue. Drug Tests by CIA Held More Extensive Than Reported in 75, said the New York Times on July 16, 1977. ." "Zombie is a quaint, old-fashioned folklore word but its meaning becomes obscene when our children's minds are being controlled ... [p.17][Note:1]

Pentagon Misfits- programming civility since 50% of milk carton children kidnapped ARRESTED EMOTIONS AGGRANDIZEMENT (NARCISSISM)! To RAMPID crimes, corruption, to AGGRANDIZEMENT OF GOVERNMENT justifications FOR TAX REVENUES and Fascism teen...suicides, Diabetes, ECO. & ills-Bombers-erupted, CANCER, ALZHEIMER, Fibromyalgia, Immune See List (Project Montauk below L) The cult of Intelligence, documents. DRUGS do not make you commit crimes; the WILL does! How America was/is Mind Controlled behind scenes to Police crimes infiltrations and drugs, Politicians Military, Media, Channeled Hollywood minds, UN-REALIZED!

Ron Paul says: CIA runs Everything but this website content is HOW: SHADOW/2nd level took off (1973) one year prior Church Commission Report with psyop MHchaos-FOIA- NO WONDER BIG BROTHER has been into every ASPECT and PROFESSION of AMERICANS. Keeping enemies close. Picking up on everyone and their genetics and events or cults or investigation, TAMPERING with MINDS NOT JUST OUR CULTURE. Mistakes, Accidents, coincidences, your soul/ karma.

ELF directed energy weapon of mass.... Spread the word. We need a Revolution Abolish CIA 2nd level and NSAct. BP framed to cover up Gov't Lab Venice FL RED TIDE -ELF infects since 1947 below Democracy NOW Air Force paralysis with a decision made one way or other. TRIED TO WARN CONGRESS in 2008 with dismissed manipulations, sabotage, and disbelief. 911 Kamikaze Pilots Mind Controlled robots on US Soil (Manchurians) suicide bombers as are Globalists. Bohemian Grove culture burning babies etc... our Joke culture to the Globe pre 2008.

Our ENGINEERED CULTURE of INFILTRATIONS, COVER UPS and WHITEWASH (2008) The ROOT of ALL Problems, still in manifest! The Matrix began long ago and the spying is after the fact of CIA 2nd level-took off in 1973 one year prior. How you are letting mind control happen with brainwashing of disbelief... trickery of your will! Beliefs of their thoughts planted/transmitted as your own-daily manipulations

The rest of the world didn't ask until 1976 the type of questions we were facing in 1965.... Everybody was afraid of building the supersoldier who would take orders without questioning, like the kamikaze pilot. 70's Manchurian crimes Creating a subservient society was not out of sight- by mind control.

FBI HOOVER "clandestine warfare avowed objective had been WORLD DOMINATION by whatever means and COST!" FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, who ordered FBI agents to "expose, disrupt, misdirect, discredit, or otherwise neutralize" the activities of these movements and their leaders. Hoover disclosed how horrific these weapons were thus, hard to believe ..."

INVENTING/INDUCING and APPLIED (NLP) Paranoid Schizophrenia, Moods, Mental BLOCKS, Grandeur Aggrandizement, etc. is only a thought from a trigger and anchors NSA CIA shadow transmissions, amplifications. Tavistock: Best kept secret in America

ca and Govt RAND Corp primary function Brainwash -CIA NLP not Freudian mind control ills! AMA-Synthetic telepathy, false memory syndrome/ confession/ bearing false witness. Montauk Project (1943) A group which has as it's prime goal the further acquisition of ever-greater raw, oppressive power over the actual lives of it's own continued aggrandizement and enrichment at the expense not only of Earth's people but most certainly of the planet itself and all its many life forms Start of a LOCKED DOOR SOCIETY transmitted fears

Pretext for Tyranny Gifford Shooting always a new law to infiltrate the whitewashing of The Constitution & Human Rights. FREEDOM! Gifford decoy/ EXPLOIT of Manchurian Synthetic ills and CRIMES- Surreptitious ASSASSINATION of a FEDERAL JUDGE by Manchurians crimes. Civil rights African crops and surreptitious cover up-CIA MASTERMINDS/CONTROL. Surveillance under the AUSPICES of and in disguise of existing remote viewing from Satellite Engineered a Human Matrix! Suggested Moods, pre-and post Manipulations.

Civil rights Africa... CIA MASTERMINDS of AGENDA too busy, to dismiss this, & sensory deprivation unrealized stress induced and another year goes by of 50 with unwitting cognitive infiltration un-wit in disconnects in White House to next calamity. ITS not the PRESIDENT, its MIND CONTROL!

Mind Control-answer to all mis-information DC, GAZA disconnects 2009, RHETORIC, lies, dis-information GAPS, illusions, non-sense. GOLDSTONE REPORT, USS Liberty SET UPS... Mind Control Root of ALL problems. Talk about it FAN it! Looking beyond the messengers! CASES NEVER PROVEN in CRIMES AND SCIENCE settled-----!-----!

God Bless America, God Bless Humanity!

Assange

Secrets are for a reason and secret abuses are impossible to correct unless you know they are going on. Knowing their plans before they are implemented to oppose before they occur. If they are exposed by the people already suffering by the abuse, then the abuse has already occurred and it is too late.

Mind Controlled suicides and redistribution of wealth. Is there a needle mark under her arm as well?

When even one American -who has done wrong- is forced by fear to shut his mind and close his mouth, then all Americans are in peril. Harry S.Truman

JFK speech

The very word "secrecy" is repugnant in a free and open society; and we are as a people inherently and historically opposed to secret societies, to secret oaths and to secret proceedings. We decided long ago that the dangers of excessive and unwarranted concealment of pertinent facts far outweighed the dangers which are cited to justify it. Even today, there is little value in opposing the threat of a closed society by imitating its arbitrary restrictions. Even today, there is little value in insuring the survival of our nation if our traditions do not survive with it. And there is very grave danger that an announced need for increased security will be seized upon by those anxious to expand its meaning to the very limits of official censorship and concealment. That I do not intend to permit to the extent that it is in my control. And no official of my Administration, whether his rank is high or low, civilian or military, should interpret my words here tonight as an excuse to censor the news, to stifle dissent, to cover up our mistakes or to withhold from the press and the public the facts they deserve to know.

PLANNED WARS TO INFILTRATE COMMUNISM! Dividing all to conquer! Brainwashing & WHITEWASHING HISTORY is underway! THE MOTHER OF ALL EVIL-CIA Technology Changing minds and hearts, including Presidents! And vice versa CONTROLLING MENTAL BLOCKS. Disarming you-Gun Control, for a manipulated REVOLUTION hijacked passwords, www in the 90's, 911, now Exec. Order 11005 take over waterways martial law Katrina Massacres, Plans, to HR 1955 reversed freedom of thought! Unwittingly infiltrating NLP tactics Psyops. OPPOSITES! Dr. Robert Becker was the major researcher and writer on health dangers from electromagnetic fields; he died a few months ago, in summer 2008 warned INDUCED ELF/EMF-disconnects in White House to next calamity.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM, AND SCHOOL BOOKS WITH FALSE MEDICINE and FALSE TESTS RESULTS and Engineered lives all from the mind! Voting, www. and all tests can and are tampered. Have you read "Lies the Government told you"? READ twice- Perceptions in AMERICA-LONDON Subway CIA- INSIDE JOB- Remote Viewing, Surveillance and Searches -STAGED!

John Marks-CIA BUILDING/Search MANCHURIANS since Hitler (who had electronic epilepsy himself) and MKULTRA on German Soldiers--- You are not losing your minds THEY TAKE IT!-<http://www.freedomwatch.org/> Our Soldier admits guilt to representation of TERRORISM.

Press release below June 2008 was impeded from going out in Boston. The sender reported Disappeared; A growing number of Americans have reported symptoms that include but are not limited to severe physical trauma such as shocks, stings, burning, nausea, and sleep deprivation. Targeted individuals of domestic terrorism originate from many different backgrounds and are affected in a physical, psychological, social, and financial manner as a result of directed energy weapons assaults. The average American would be astonished to learn the extent to which secret surveillance technology has advanced from remote viewing and manipulation; torture of the human mind and body horrendous abuses. Measures must be taken to free "The mind control examined in this book is the control of ONE individual's mind by ANOTHER!" Guided, misled, by the public UNWITTINGLY used as pawns (jacketed) one against the other with everything the OPPOSITE, manipulated, and dysfunction all! (1973)

First. Then they came for the communists. I didn't object because I wasn't a communist.

Then they came for the trade-unionists. I didn't object because I wasn't a trade-unionist. Then they came for the Jews. I didn't object because I wasn't a Jew. Then they came for me and there was no one left to help me. "We must hang together or we will surely hang separately" ...Ben Franklin

This website information is awakening debunking/educating raising awareness, on humanity, a FULL DISCLOSURE Correction of 5 DECADES of 2nd level CIA mind controlled DIS-information, MIS-COMMUNICATION, non-sense, blinders/blocks, unconsciously, manipulating YOUR conversations, not on same wavelength) or/ sabotage created by Mind Control ELF waves & Energy, (1974) CIA Neuro-linguistic Programming. Directed ENERGY Weapon used nefariously deployed on ALL people as pawns UNWITTINGLY, illusions, robots, everybody's doing the locomotion, CANCER. "Information Warfare tactics" and the new ways to ASSASSINATE civilians currently. Not the Patriot Act after THE FACT as ALL else. SURREPTITIOUSLY! SLOW KILLS Legal!

130 Facts and Examples, see induced ills; LIST on bottom left and (Pharma (Rx) Taxes; Tab)- Collectively by a Mind Control victim Expert Witness (NLP) Federal Whistleblower 1st hand, Warning "We the People" "Impeded, Gagged, tortured, squashed, disrupted, threatened, for 5 years, now being set up +. Never believe anything until it is officially denied". Illusions scapegoating our Media after 50 years victims of created spin, dis-information WARFARE etc... by mind control UNREALIZED & cognitive impairment infiltrations on all people. "Why hasn't the press--aside from MSNBC--covered NSA Tice's revelations! Or mine. Let the people decide; Millions would come forward. BREACHED contracts OVERSEAS SPYING to manipulate.

Massive brainwash also in manifest! Another layer!

Dr. Robert O Becker was the major researcher and writer on health dangers from electromagnetic fields, he died a few months ago, in summer 2008 warned INDUCED ELF/EMF-"John Wayne and Susan Hayward died CANCER decades after movie and unexpected wind shift and MONSETTO wind? FARMING cases!" ANY ADDICTION, and FRAMING Tobacco Co. Page 307/347 THE BODY ELECTRIC DoD!

Summary information: CIA brainwashing We the People for decades engineering our lives and culture unwittingly with mind and body control, corruptions to destroy humanity (jacketing) one against the other divide and conquer world Domination selecting who will live. Wake up America. Wake up Washington! The secret holocaust & WWII in MANIFEST. Un-realized and programmed.

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=zeMZGGQ0ERk&feature=player_embedded THIS video is about the PROCESS. WASHINGTON will be shot after the CRISIS step 4 of mind control Brainwash over decades- slow kills... Do you believe a RUSSIAN or are you targeted? They always kill you when you are done serving. See below creating subs ervient civilians and torture goes on illegally anyway. Legalizing it is only for us civilians and what is coming (N.W.O. a silent holocaust) with no recourse or redress available on civil rights. Illusions, transmitted false thoughts, crimes infiltrated now Making it REAL. After 50 yrs of spy devices being installed and attached today overtly as all else shadowed.

The White Rose, was formed by students at the University of Munich in 1941 after serving the GERMAN ARMY, and executed by guillotine shouting Long Live Freedom-dropping leaflets in Revolution for SOCIAL JUSTICE <http://www.spartacus.schoolnet.co.uk/GERwhiterose.htm>

CIA bomb makers AND Mind Controlled Crimes Magnus Olsson Swede; CIA has Nazis but COVERT in Pentagon etc <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=EQQv-mfCUeg&feature=share> Memory Mind control to $ invest & lose ALL, and they play with the MEMORY A LOT. Former Hitler Youth Whistleblower Warns Of America's Nazi Future on line videos This is how they will KILL us! ISRAEL first! <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=VNJTUhZxaY&NR=1> V For 911 Vendetta Past Present and Future www.youtube.com --- brilliant!!!! George Green and Israel first Plans for WW3

EXPLOSIONS of: Alien hallucinations, ill list pg. 9, crimes, corruption culture, CANCER, obesity, dumb down bureaucracy, zombies, surreptitiously and unrealized infiltrations until 2008 explosions made overtly!

Number of American civilians who died worldwide in terrorist attacks last year: 8 - Minimum number who died after being struck by lightning: 29." Spinning their wheels freeing 6,000 terrorists falsely accused, while assassinating who they really want, and BILLIONS a YEAR just to surveil us nefariously and worse agendas still, un-wit. mireilletorjman.blogspot.com

Mind control planted ideas in advance as Hollywood and RUMORS of Bear Stearns, and Bay of Pigs starting them in advance including musicians. Playing psychics and mind games AND 911 prediction in 1999 by Coulter.

"I don't know whose idea it was, but we decided to kill ourselves because it was so horrendous what was happening," Ruth Madoff told the CBS program "60 Minutes," Michael Moore said OWS was already surfacing and ready to explode when he came in. He was the pawn. Stated can't stop it and 59% like never before on Democracy Now! OWS M Moore connect it to money pentagon mil complex and to corp being scapegoated and taken over ONLY reason came home from IRAQ is because we got kicked out or would be there decades more. But the 10 yr contract PATRIOT ACT; "Number of American civilians who died worldwide in terrorist attacks last year: 8 - Minimum number who died after being struck by lightning: 29." In last 10 yrs and $ 75 Billion later on us & Surveillance equip...

EVERY EFFORT HAS BEEN MADE TO SET ME UP, PRE-EMPT, DISCREDIT ME and cover up.

###

Directed Energy Weapons and the latest cover ups #19 The latest oil spill cover up of EMF/ELF SINCE 1947 Venice FL Labs Mind Control ERROR See #36 and #25 with allegations #23 to #50- Church Committee reported how our Politicians "too lax" then and now.

1997 DoD Briefing: 'Others' can set off earthquakes, volcanoes remotely using electromagnetic waves By Lori Price 28 Feb 2010 Secretary of Defense William S. Cohen, 28 April 1997: 'There are some reports, for example, that some countries have been trying to construct something like an Ebola Virus [OMG! Who would do such a thing?], and that would be a very dangerous phenomenon, to say the least. Alvin Toffler has written about this in terms of some scientists in their laboratories trying to devise certain types of pathogens that would be ethnic specific so that they could just eliminate certain ethnic groups and races; and others [LOL] are designing some sort of engineering, some sort of insects that can destroy specific crops. Others are engaging even in an eco-type of terrorism whereby they can alter the climate, set off earthquakes, volcanoes remotely through the use of electromagnetic waves.' --Just switch 'yours,' 'others' and 'they' with 'U.S.,' 'U.S.' and 'U.S.' This was in 1997. Imagine, after eight years of George W. Bush turbo-funding these lunatics, what they can do now. CIA COVERT OPS

Kay Griggs Military Wife and Whistleblower SECRET SOCIETY, and Jim Keith-Mass Control Human Engineering (soldiers, robots, and drones)

Copyright 2010 NSA Transmissions. All rights reserved.

Web Hosting by Yahoo! An expert witness, Certified Hypnotist trained in CIA Neuro Linguistic Programming techniques with NASA software and Military Patents.

NSA Transmissions-Mind Control, Death Rays for Planes, Cancer, Synthetic illnesses- Toppings ELF & Seismic Waves + Behind Scenes Focused on Wrong Weapon Mass Destruction TERRORISTS WITHIN, 1973 2nd Level CIA, Cryptocracy's Plan to Psycho-civilize You, Emulating Scriptures! ---How & Why 911, Economy. ALL from your minds! MA CROCOSM. Millions including America's Corp Leaders & Officials! "The Process." Israel Framed-engineered to go down.
Have you figured it out yet!

â ¢ NSA Tice-Hero under God
â ¢ US Supreme Court Case
â ¢ Israel-CIA Agenda- Press Releases
â ¢ Synthetic Telepathy-ills-TAXES
â ¢ Cancer 911 CIA
â ¢ Resources to Expose
â ¢ Interviews-Exhibits-Documents
â ¢ Lawsuit-Synthetic illnesses in America
CANCER Collectively! Connecting the dots! Wake up America! 50 yrs of nonsense, dysfunction, pointing fingers, disrespect, perception, corruption/crime
....

A PRESIDENT WHO ONCE TOOK AN OATH TO CIVIL RIGHTS AND ACCUSED THE GOVERNMENT OF CREATING AIDS!
They did!
911 They did! BP oil NSA transmissions contaminates & infects...IMMUNE SYSTEM & FERTILITY ELF/EMF...
MIND CONTROL ERROR-Latest oil spill cover up Govt LABS- ELF contamination SINCE 1947 Venice Florida's RED TIDE.
SCIENCE UNDER SIEGE

FALSE MEMORY SYNDROME FOUNDATION APA/AMA Framed-- BEHIND THE SCENES & MUCH MORE!

They won't let me speak! CIRCLES NON SENSE Rhetoric....

DEATH RAYS FOR PLANES-ONE ENERGY zap causes confusion, mistakes, trip, fall, body temp-freeze, heat, miscommunication, fatigue, focus/concentration, radio-sleep and stalling any engine Warden Cliff Towers in full action 1940 & airways wall protected and HUDSON assassination, must read lawsuit #25 b and c. Cult of Intelligence and Psychotronics!

(Synthetic illnesses) SICKENING-KILLING AMERICANS surreptitiously for 50 YEARS-Twice recommended for a Nobel Prize Dr. Robert Becker was the major researcher and writer on health dangers from electromagnetic fields, died a few months ago, in summer 2008 DIRECTED ELF CIA OPS

BLACK CANCER-women in politics discredited-collected this-CANCER below:

SENIORS doctor visits an American hobby-pills and ills! Air Force Article at Home TAB "Remote Control Heart Attack anyone"

Are you or someone you know sabotaged unwittingly? Do you have auto accidents, work or neighbor disputes, NON-SENSE, UNREALIZED, bad luck, obstacles, desensitized (sensory deprivation, false memory, mis-communication (CHAOS) MEMORY ERASURES, MIS-UNDERSTANDINGS, mis-informed, dis-information, spinning your wheels, addictions, mental blocks. Deaths, Cancer, Changes. CONTRARY OPPOSITE NEWS-DUPlicitous Taking back our courage and what this Country fought for and recognizing where the corruption and crimes are coming from. CIA must be dismantled as HAARP. A Revolution is necessary.

POWER in NUMBERS!

UN-Covered DOCUMENTARY-CONGRESS as MARIONETTES not reading documents to invade IRAQ streets and psyops CHAOS and Martial law on US soil for nefarious agenda. ALL mind controlled Weapons use behind scenes building WEBBED Lives setting up people like Manchurians. A Public used as Pawns in Chess game of wars on our STREETS! DR IGOR LEDOCHOWSKI-Street Hypnosis

This tells all why some utter â What is this world coming to? PLEASE HELP HUMANITY: It affects you, Talk about it, Expose it, Stop them! MILLION victims would come forward! Contact Congress.

Guided, engineered, recruited, and sabotaged synthetic telepathy, since 2007-I am hoping to make a difference and help as much as I can. It is too late for me but this has to be reported and dismantled. Minds are being blocked from thought process and belief with manipulations. I hope to finish my book of this horrific calamity of what I discovered and was informed of over 4 years and more. Bringing awareness to the people and accountability to this INTELLIGENCE EVOLVED into MASS CONTROL, massive corruption and CRIMES of HUMANITY, Economic manipulations. EXPOSE IT!

GOD BLESS!

DON'T BE PROGRAMMED NOT TO BELIEVE or not to READ like an ADDICTION to Self Destruct -They build discredit like a Manchurian!

â It was either invisible warfare or peace, and everyone seemed to agree the economy would "suffer" from peace. Without war, it was believed, the economy would falter and depression would be the dividend of peace. Thus the advisors to the president began to think about what might motivate the U.S. economy as well as war did. They came up with several possibilities, the most fantastic of which was to fake an invasion from outer space... Dr. Bowart 1978

Below is Book Cover Mass Control Engineering Human Consciousness and One side effect!

CANCER, LEUKEMIA, NERVOUS SYSTEM EXPLAINED AND STARTED WITH NSA TRANSMISSION WHEN DEPLOYED ON AMERICANS 1973 ELF/EMF. Heat lasers on your organs and skin/blood/LEUKEMIA..

Protect Whistleblowers Like They Did in 1777

This day marks the 40th anniversary of the release of the Pentagon Papers in the New York Times, and today, the Times ran an op-ed by NWC Executive Director Stephen M. Kohn that tells the story of the first-ever whistleblowers in the United States.

In 1777, a group of American sailors and marines blew the whistle on the first Commodore of the US Navy, accusing him of misconduct that included the torture of British soldiers. The Continental Congress did not throw the whistleblowers in solitary confinement, prosecute them, or execute them. Even in a time of war, the government did not use the "state secrets" privilege to hide these abuses. Instead, they passed a law that all whistleblowers should be protected, released all the records related to the whistleblowers' concerns, and used funds from Congress' meager treasury to protect the whistleblowers from retaliation.

TAKE ACTION! Stop Prosecuting National Security Whistleblowers

As a country we have moved so far away from what the Founding Fathers recognized at the foundation of democracy - freedom of speech. The federal government should immediately drop the criminal investigations and prosecutions of national security whistleblowers, and President Obama should pardon NSA whistleblower Thomas Drake.

On July 30, 1778, the Continental Congress enacted America's first whistleblower protection law. We ask that Congress declare July 30th National Whistleblower Day, honoring whistleblowers for their contributions throughout history.

Please send a letter to Congress demanding that they honor what the Founding Fathers did on July 30, 1778, in the midst of the American Revolution. Then pass this alert on to your friends and family.

Black women in politics discredited-collected this:

BLACK CANCER

DEATHS AND ILLNESSES

PAUL BATHER

Profession: Kentucky Alderman, Race: Black Complaint: Lawsuit against Louisville Metro Police Department Died of: Pancreatic Cancer

JUDGE MCANULTY

Profession: 1st (First) Black Judge on the Kentucky Supreme Court, Race: Black Lung Cancer that spread to his brain. Was forced to resign from the bench. Died of: Cancer - 2007- Age 59

CHUCK OLMSTEAD

Profession: WAS News Reporter, Race: Black Died of: Brain Aneurysm -2009

REVEREND COLEMAN

Profession: Civil Rights Worker, The Justice Resource Center, Louisville, Kentucky, Race: Black

Complaint: Participated in filing Class Action Lawsuit against Federal Judges in Louisville, Kentucky (inclusive of Heyburn, Simpson, et al)

Died of: Seizures - 2008, Age - 64

WILLIE BRIGHT

Profession: Metro Council Member, Race: Black Died of: Cancer - 2005

DAUGHTER OF LADY

Profession: Unknown, Worked on her Mother's Case against MSD in Louisville, Ky, Race: Black

Died of: Brain Aneurysm

VICKI PAGE

Profession: Previously worked for MSD in Louisville, Kentucky, Race: Black

Complaint: Participated in filing Class Action Lawsuit against Judges in Federal Court in Louisville, Kentucky (inclusive of Heyburn, Simpson, et al) Illness: (not sure of the names of all her illnesses)

NAME (MALE)

Profession: Previous Professor, Kentucky Rep. for Rainbow Push Coalition, Race: Black Brain Cancer

ELIZABETH ELLIOTT

Profession: Former Social Worker and Civil Rights Worker, Race: Black

Complaint: Participated in filing Class Action Lawsuit against Judges in Federal Court in Louisville, Kentucky (inclusive of Heyburn, Simpson, et al)

Illness: Diabetic, Kidney Dialysis, Weak Heart Valve

ROSE PERRY

Profession: Unknown, Race: White

Complaint: Participated in filing Class Action Lawsuit against Judges in Federal Court in Louisville, Kentucky (inclusive of Heyburn, Simpson, et al)

Illness: (not sure of the names of her illnesses) Threats: She started receiving hate Mail Mind Control: (Please be aware mind control is all thoughts to the 5 senses in suggestions 24/7 and not all physical effect of ELF/EMF, but have been nefariously abused secretly before patents.

The Ultimate Brave New World

Technologies for stimulating the brain and controlling the mind can have benefits, but they have a dark side that military and intelligence planners have been exploiting for decades.

Extracted from Nexus Magazine, Volume 13, Number 2

(February - March 2006 & April-May 2006) PO Box 30, Mapleton Qld 4560 Australia.

editor@nexusmagazine.com www.nexusmagazine.com

by Nick Begich, MD 2006 Extracted from: "Controlling the Human Mind 2006

It would also appear possible to create high fidelity speech in the human body, raising the possibility of covert suggestion and psychological direction... Thus, it may be possible to "talk" to selected adversaries in a fashion that would be most disturbing to them.

US Air Force, New World Vistas: Air and Space Power for the 21st Century

The idea that the brain can be made to function at a more efficient and directed level has been the subject of research by scientists, mystics, health practitioners and others for as long as mankind has contemplated such matters. In the last decade, advances in the science of the brain have begun to yield significant results. The results of the research are startling, challenging and, if misused, will be frightening. The certainty to be expected from the research is that it will continue to proceed. The idea that people can be impacted by external signal generators which create, for example, pulsed electromagnetic fields, pulsed light and pulsed sound signals is not new. The following information demonstrates some of the possibilities and gives hints of the potentials of the technology. On the positive side, researchers in the field of light and sound are making huge progress in a number of areas, including working with learning disabilities, attention deficit disorders, stroke recovery, accelerated learning, drug/alcohol addiction and enhanced human performance. The research has shown that certain brain states can be influenced in a way which causes changes within the brain itself. These changes allow individuals the possibility of influencing specific conditions in the mind and body otherwise thought beyond our direct control. The military and others interested in such things have also focused a large amount of research into this area for the purpose of enhancing the performance of soldiers while degrading the performance of adversaries. What is known is that great strides in the area of behaviour control are now possible with systems developed and under development by most sophisticated countries on the planet. These new technologies represent a much different approach to warfare which our government is describing as part of the "Revolution in Military affairs". While these new technologies offer much for military planners, they offer even more to citizens generally. Their potential use in military applications and "peacekeeping" creates the need for open debate of this new realm of intelligence-gathering, manipulation and warfare.

The most basic ethical questions regarding use of these technologies have not been adequately addressed. At the same time that defence and intelligence-gathering capabilities are being sought, independent researchers are fully engaged in s seeking positive uses for the technology. The potentials of the technology, like all technology, are great as both a destructive or constructive force for change. The idea of enhancing physical and mental performance while bypassing what heretofore was a long and arduous road to achieve the same results is exciting. Maintaining the research in the open literature and ensuring that constructive uses are encouraged is critical. I began looking into technologies for stimulating brain performance about fifteen years ago. At the time, there were limited tools available compared to what is now possible. Now it is possible to obtain light and sound, electrocranial and biofeedback tools for use in this exploration. Moreover, there are audio materials also available for use with most of these tools.

These audio materials can be used for learning languages, behaviour modification or enhanced performance. The biofeedback side of the new technology is being used to train people to reach specific desired brain states for optimum performance. The use of light and sound devices for stimulating brain activity which is conducive to accelerated learning and relaxation is a growing area of interest to many people. Moreover, the use of these tools in conjunction with biofeedback has been the subject of quickly evolving research. The combined technologies of brain state inducement and biofeedback offer exciting possibilities. It has been found with the combination that a person, in a matter of several weeks, can learn to modify purposefully his/her brain activity in a way which would have taken a Zen master twenty years to accomplish. It has been shown that some children with attention deficit disorders can be taught to regulate their brain activities so that they can learn efficiently without chemicals. It has been demonstrated that recovering stroke victims can more rapidly recover when working with brain-biofeedback practitioners and these new tools. The research is also teaching us a good deal about our suggestibility in terms of influences which have an impact on our behaviour. The underlying message that comes with the new technology is the necessity of providing safeguards against misuse. Additionally, recognition of the everyday stimulation we all get and the effect of these information inputs on our learning processes becomes more clear. The suggestibility of humans, particularly when in a fatigued condition, has been exploited by terrorists, cults and others in pursuit of their own aims. The passive suggestibility of radio and television as we weave in and out of the semi-sleep states is for the most part not even recognised. The passive learning situations become even more relevant when we consider how we "receive the news" in our daily lives. The ability to influence thinking, behaviour and performance is indeed a two-edged sword. The 1980s and 1990s were focused on building up the physical body. The 21st century will see a focus on building the mind and optimising mental performance. The idea of merging the new technologies into education is interesting and also calls into question who will decide what is to be learned. In the interim, the possibilities are incredible for those interested in such pursuits. The control of our mental function is no different than the control of the muscles in our bodies. Learning to control or coordinate the activity of our minds will propel our bodies through a much more productive and fuller life. The new tools may offer just such opportunities. On the other side of the issue is the potential for misuse and exploitation of the science. Military planners, law enforcement officials and others are now seeking the covert use of these technologies for controlling the ultimate "information processor" the Human Being.

MK-ULTRA

"Dr Gottlieb, born August 3, 1918, was the CIA's real-life 'Dr Strangelove' a brilliant

bio-chemist who designed and headed MKULTRA, the agency's most far-reaching drug and mind-control program at the height of the Cold War. Though the super-secret MKULTRA was ended in 1964, a streamlined version called MK-SEARCH was continued with Gottlieb in charge until 1972." During this period, substantial interest in mind control was stimulated by Soviet use of microwaves. In 1988, "thirty-five years after security officers first noticed that the Soviets were bombarding the US embassy in Moscow with microwave radiation, the US Government still has not determined conclusively or is unwilling to reveal the purpose behind the beams". The US government did know what was happening. The Soviets had developed methods f or disrupting the purposeful thought of humans and were using their knowledge to impact diplomats in the United States embassy in Moscow. In 1994, a report concerning the MKULTRA program was issued, containing the following information:

"In the 1950s and '60s, the CIA engaged in an extensive program of human experimentation, using drugs, psychological, and other means, in search of techniques to control human behavior for counterintelligence and covert action purposes." In

1973, the CIA purposefully destroyed most of the MKULTRA files concerning its research and testing on human behaviour. In 1977, the agency uncovered additional

MKULTRA files in the budget and fiscal records that were not indexed under the name MKULTRA. These documents detailed over 150 subprojects that the CIA funded in this area, but no evidence was uncovered at that time concerning the use of radiation. "The CIA did investigate the use and effect of microwaves on human beings in response to a Soviet practice of beaming microwaves on the US embassy. The agency determined that this was outside the scope of the Advisory Committee's purview. "...The Church Committee found some records, but also noted that the practice of MKULTRA at that time was 'to maintain no records of the planning and approval of test programs'. ...MKULTRA itself was technically closed out in 1964, but some of its work was transferred to the Office of Research and Development (ORD) within the DS&T under the name MKSEARCH and continued into the 1970s. "The

CIA worked closely with the Army in conducting the LSD experiments. This connection with the Army is significant because MKULTRA began at the same time that Secretary of Defense Wilson issued his 1953 directive to the military services on ethical guidelines for human experiments. "Throughout the course of MKULTRA, the CIA sponsored numerous experiments on unwitting humans. After the death of one such individual (Frank Olson, an army scientist, was given LSD in 1953 and committed suicide a week later), an internal CIA investigation warned about the dangers of such experimentation. The CIA persisted in this practice for at least the next ten years. After the 1963 IG [Inspector-General] report recommended termination of unwitting testing, Deputy Director for Plans Richard Helms (who later became Director of Central Intelligence) continued to advocate covert testing on the ground that 'positive operational capability to use drugs is diminishing, owing to a lack of realistic testing. With increasing knowledge of state of the art, we are less capable of staying up with the Soviet advances in this field'. ... Helms attributed the cessation of the unwitting testing to the high risk of embarrassment to the Agency as well as the 'moral problem'. He noted that no better covert situation had been devised than that which had been used, and that 'we have no answer to the moral issue'." They did have the answers to the moral questions on human experimentation but chose to ignore them, destroy the records, hide the truth and still continue in their efforts. Nothing has changed as each participating organisation, using national security laws, avoids disclosure and accountability. The records which were destroyed contained the evidence necessary perhaps to send some participants to jail for society's version of behaviour modification. Once again, there was no accountability and no recognition of the rights of the individuals damaged by these experiments.

Mind Wars

"For the first time in some 500 years, a scientific revolution has begun that will fundamentally change the world as much as the Renaissance and Enlightenment did. A handful of extraordinary new advances in science are taking humans quickly and deeply into areas that will have profound implications for the future." One of these areas is control of the human mind. The issues surrounding behaviour modification, mind control and information warfare become crystal clear as the facts unfold. The following is taken from a current military document, "The Information Revolution and the Future Air Force" by Colonel John A. Warden III, USAF, which clarifies their position in the emerging area of research, taking a much different direction than the one described above: "We're currently experiencing, on an unprecedented global basis, three simultaneous revolutions, any one of which would be more than enough to shock and confound us. The first revolution, a geopolitical revolution, sees a single dominant power in the world for the first time since the fall of Rome. The opportunities that are inherent in this situation are extraordinary, as are the pitfalls. Unfortunately, there is no one around that has first hand experience in how to deal with that kind of single power dominant world. "The second revolution, and there's a lot of discussion about this so far, is the information revolution. As other people have mentioned, it is following inexorably in tandem behind Moore's law of computing power. Attendant to it, though, is not the creation of new ideas and technologies, but also an exponential growth in the velocity of information dissemination, and for us that is of extraordinary importance. A key part of this information revolution has an awesome impact on competition. The business that introduced a new product ten years ago could count on probably five years before it had to look seriously at potential competitors based overseas. Today, you're lucky if you can count on five months or even five weeks before you are facing the overseas competitor. In today's world, success simply demands rapid introduction of successively new products or military systems. Success now goes to the organization which exploits information almost instantly, while failure is the near certain fate of the organization which tries to hoard or hide ideas. Real simple use it or you're going to lose it. "The third revolution, which is a little bit more complex, is the military/technological revolution, or in some places called the revolution in military affairs. I'm convinced that this is the first military technological revolution ever because we now have, for the first time, a conceptually different way to wage war. We can wage war in parallel now. In the past, communications and weapons technology, especially weapons accuracy, have constrained us to waging serial war. This changes almost everything. "Biological Process Control: As we look forward to the future, it seems likely that this nation will be involved in multiple conflicts where our military forces increasingly will be placed in situations where the application of full force capabilities of our military might cannot be applied. We will be involved intimately with hostile populations in situations where the application of non-lethal force will be the tactical or political preference. It appears likely that there are a number of physical agents that might actively, but largely benignly, interact or interfere with biological processes in an adversary in a manner that will provide our armed forces the tools to control these adversaries without extensive loss of life or property. These physical agents could include acoustic fields, optical fields, electromagnetic fields, and combinations thereof. This paper will address only the prospect of physical regulation of biological processes using electromagnetic fields. "Prior to the mid-21st century, there will be a virtual explosion of knowledge in the field of neuroscience. We will have achieved a clear understanding of how the human brain works, how it really controls the various functions of the body, and how it can be manipulated (both positively and negatively). One can envision the development of electromagnetic energy sources, the output of which can be pulsed, shaped, and focused, that can couple with the human body in a fashion that will allow one to prevent voluntary muscular movements, control emotions (and thus actions), produce sleep, transmit suggestions, interfere with both short-term and long-term memory, produce an experience set, and delete an experience set. This will open the door for the development of some novel capabilities that can be used in armed conflict, in terrorist/hostage situations, and in training. New weapons that offer the opportunity of control of an adversary without resorting to a lethal situation or to collateral casualties can be developed around this concept. This would offer significant improvements in the capabilities of our special operation forces. "Initial experimentation should be focused on the interaction of electromagnetic energy and the neuromuscular junctions involved in voluntary muscle control. Theories need to be developed, modeled, and tested in experimental preparations. Early testing using in vitro cell cultures of neural networks could provide the focus for more definitive intact animal testing. If successful, one could envision a weapon that would render an opponent incapable of taking any meaningful action involving any higher motor skills (e.g., using weapons, operating tracking systems). The prospect of a weapon to accomplish this when targeted against an individual target is reasonable; the prospect of a weapon effective against a massed force would seem to be more remote. Use of such a device in an enclosed area against multiple targets (hostage situation) may be more difficult than an individual target system, but probably feasible. " It would also appear to be possible to create high fidelity speech in the human body, raising the possibility of covert suggestion and psychological direction. When a high power microwave pulse in the gigahertz range strikes the human body, a very small temperature perturbation occurs. This is associated with a sudden expansion of the slightly heated tissue. This expansion is fast enough to produce an acoustic wave. If a pulse stream is used, it should be possible to create an internal acoustic field in the 515 kilohertz range, which is audible. Thus, it may be possible to 'talk' to selected adversaries in a fashion that would be most disturbing to them.

"In comparison to the discussion in the paragraphs above, the concept of imprinting an experience set is highly speculative, but nonetheless highly exciting. Modern electromagnetic scattering theory raises the prospect that ultra-short pulse scattering through the human brain can result in reflected signals that can be used to construct a reliable estimate of the degree of central nervous system arousal. The concept behind this 'remote EEG' is to scatter off of action potentials or ensembles of action potentials in major central nervous system tracts. Assuming we will understand how our skills are imprinted and recalled, it might be possible to take this concept one step further and duplicate the experience set in another individual. The prospect of providing a 'been there done that' knowledge base could provide a revolutionary change in our approach to specialized training. How this can be done or even if it can be done are significant unknowns [sic]. The impact of success would boggle the mind!" The above report was as a forecast for the year 2020. However, the reality is that these technologies already exist and there are a number of patents in the open literature which clearly show the possibilities. This research is not new but goes back to the 1950s. "A new class of weapons, based on electromagnetic fields, has been added to the muscles of the military organism. The C3I [Command, Control, Communications and Intelligence] doctrine is still growing and expanding. It would appear that the military may yet be able to completely control the minds of the civilian population." The targeting of civilian populations by the military is a significant departure from its history. In the past, the military has used persuasion through real information rather than using deliberate deception and mind manipulation to win populations over.

"A decoy and deception concept presently being considered is to remotely create the perception of noise in the heads of personnel by exposing them to low power, pulsed microwaves. When people are illuminated with properly modulated low power microwaves the sensation is reported as a buzzing, clicking, or hissing which seems to originate (regardless of the person's position in the field) within or just behind the head. The phenomena occurs [sic] at average power densities as low as microwatts per square centimeter with carrier frequencies from 0.4 to 3.0 GHz. By proper choice of pulse characteristics, intelligible speech may be created. Before this technique may be extended and used for military applications, an understanding of the basic principles must be developed. Such an understanding is not only required to optimize the use of the concept for camouflage, decoy and deception operations but is required to properly assess safety factors of such microwave exposure. Actual testing of certain systems has proven "that movements, sensations, emotions, desires, ideas, and a variety of psychological phenomena may be induced, inhibited, or modified by electrical stimulation of specific areas of the brain. These facts have changed the classical philosophical concept that the mind was beyond experimental reach." The first widespread interest in the subject of mind control hit the mainstream of military think-tanks after the Korean War when returning prisoners of war exhibited significant behavioural changes. In 1956, the following was written into the United States Congressional Record:

"Reports of the treatment of American prisoners of war in Korea have given rise to several popular misconceptions, of which the most widely publicized is 'brain washing'. The term itself has caught the public imagination and is used, very loosely, to describe any act committed against an individual by the Communists. Ac tual 'brainwashing' is a prolonged psychological process, designed to erase an individual's past beliefs and concepts and to substitute new ones. It is a highly coercive practice which is irreconcilable with universally accepted medical ethics. In the process of 'brainwashing', the efforts of many are directed against an individual. To be successful, it requires, among other things, that the individual be completely isolated from normal associations and environment." The ethical considerations have not changed, but the military's position on the ethics has changed as it has gained significant capabilities in these areas. "Psychological warfare is becoming increasingly important for US forces as they engage in peacekeeping operations. 'In the psychological operations area, we're always looking to build on our existing technologies, so much of this is evolutionary,' [military planner] Holmes said. 'It is critically important that we stay ahead of the technology curve.'" The temptation to dabble in this area has now overcome the ethical considerations. A Russian military article offered a slightly different slant to the problem, declaring that "humanity stands on the brink of a psychotronic war" with the mind and body as the focus. These "psychotronic" weapons aim to control or alter the psyche, or to attack the various sensory and data processing systems of the human organism. In both cases, the goal is to confuse or destroy the signals that normally keep the body in equilibrium.

According to a US Department of Defense directive (S-3600.1, December 9, 1996), "information warfare" is defined as "an information operation conducted during time of crisis or conflict to achieve or promote specific objectives over a specific adversary or adversaries". An "information operation" is defined in the same directive as "actions taken to affect adversary information and information systems". These "information systems" lie at the heart of the modernisation effort of the US armed forces and manifest themselves as hardware, software, communications capabilities and highly trained individuals. Information warfare has tended to ignore the role of the human body as an information or data processor in this quest for dominance, except in those cases where an individual's logic or rational thought may be upset via Dis-information or deception... Yet, the body is capable not only of being deceived, manipulated or mis-informed but also shut down or destroyed just as any other data-processing system. The "data" the body receives from external sources, such as electromagnetic, vortex or acoustic energy waves, or creates through its own electrical or chemical stimuli, can be manipulated or changed, just as the data (information) in any hardware system can be altered. If the ultimate target of information warfare is the information-dependent process, "whether human or automated", then the definition implies that human data-processing of internal and external signals can clearly be considered an aspect of information warfare.

On a much grander scale, the use of mind control was contemplated as far back as 1969

by a former science adviser to President Johnson. "Gordon J. F. Macdonald, a geophysicist specializing in problems of warfare, has written that accurately timed, artificially excited strokes 'could lead to a pattern of oscillations that produce relatively high power levels over certain regions of the earth... In this way, one could develop a system that would seriously impair the brain performance of very large populations in selected regions over an extended period..' This capability exists today through the use of systems which can stimulate the ionosphere to return a pulsed (modulated) signal which, at the right frequency, can override normal brain functions. By overriding the natural pulsations of the brain, chemical reactions are triggered which alter the emotional state of targeted populations. Subliminal Messages and commercial Uses One of the areas where this new technology is being used is in systems to dissuade shoplifters, using sound below the range of hearing. "Japanese shopkeepers are playing CDs with subliminal messages to curb the impulses of the growing band of shoplifters. The Mind Control CDs have sound-tracks of popular music or ocean waves, with encoded voices in seven languages...warning that anyone caught stealing will be reported to the police." A number of devices have been developed to influence behaviour in this way, and patents have been awarded. The following summations are taken from some of these patents dealing with both audio and video programming. Only this time, we are the program: "An auditory subliminal programming system includes a subliminal message encoder that generates fixed frequency security tones and combines them with a subliminal message signal to produce an encoded subliminal message signal which is recorded on audio tape or the like. A corresponding subliminal decoder/mixer is connected as part of a user's conventional stereo system and receives as inputs an audio program selected by the user and the encoded subliminal message." "Ambient audio signals from the customer shopping area within a store are sensed and fed to a signal processing circuit that produces a control signal which varies with variations in the amplitude of the sensed audio signals. A control circuit adjusts the amplitude of an auditory subliminal antishoppinglifting message to increase with increasing amplitudes of sensed audio signals and decrease with decreasing amplitudes of sensed audio signals. This amplitude controlled subliminal message may be mixed with background music and transmitted to the shopping area." "Data to be displayed is combined with a composite video signal. The data is stored in memory in digital form. Each byte of data is read out in sequential fashion to determine: the recurrence display rate of the data according to the frame sync pulses of the video signal; the location of the data within the video image according to the line sync pulses of the video signal; and the location of the data display within the video image according to the position information." "This invention is a combination of a subliminal message generator that is 100% user programmable for use with a television receiver.

The subliminal message generator periodically displays user specified messages for the normal television signal for [a] specific period of time. This permits an individual to employ a combination of subliminal and supraliminal therapy while watching television."

The above points may seem a bit complicated; however, they can be summarised. These patents are designed to provide a way to hide messages in video or audio formats, masking any suggestions that the programmer wishes to convey. These kinds of messages bypass the conscious mind and are acted upon by the person hearing them; they are not sorted out by the active mind. Although these technologies are being developed for personal use and as security measures, consider the possibilities for abuse by commercial interests where the messages might be "buy, buy, buy", "drink more, don't worry", or some other self-serving script. Should these systems be regulated? By whom and under what conditions? New Standards for What is a Memory "Nevada is currently the only state to allow witness testimony of a person who has undergone hypnosis. As of October 1, 1997, courts hearing both civil and criminal cases can take a hypnotically refreshed testimony, as long as the witness, if a minor, has had the informed consent of parent or guardian, and the person performing the hypnosis is any of the following: a health care provider, a clinical social worker licenced in accordance with 641B of Nevada Revised Statute, or a disinterested investigator." This issue will surely become more complex as technology advances in terms of evidence. When the day arrives that it is possible to change or alter memory completely, as suggested earlier by military officers, what then? How will we separate the real from the unreal? What will be the impact on the burden of proof in courts as it relates to "reasonable doubt"? Again, the emergence of the technology has first to be recognised as real before laws can be constructed and systems established for controlling misuse. Think how long it has taken the courts even to recognise hypnotherapy as valid science. We are hopeful that we will not have to wait so long for legislative bodies to take the initiative to address these issues. Auditory Effects The questions which this section raises are profound. Is it possible to transmit a signal to the brain of a person, from a distance, which deposits specific sounds, voice or other information which can be understood? Is it possible to transfer sound in a way where only the targeted person can hear the "voice in the head" and no one else hears a thing? Is it possible to shift a person's emotions using remote electromagnetic tools? The answer to each of these questions is a resounding "Yes!" The state of the science has passed even the most optimistic predictions, and the capabilities are here now. Military literature suggests that this is possible. A series of experiments, patents and independent research confirm that this technology exists today. While giving testimony to the European Parliament in 1998, I demonstrated one such device to the astonishment of those in attendance. This particular device required physical contact in order to work and was nearly forty years old. This area of research is one of the most important because it points to the ultimate weapon of political control: the ability to place information directly into the human brain, bypassing all normal filtering mechanisms. In 1995, the US Department of Defense put forward the contract, "Communicating via the Microwave Auditory Effect; Awarding Agency:

Department of Defense; SBIR Contract Number: F41624-95-C-9007". The description of this technology, which would be used for direct communications with military personnel, is written as follows: "Title: Communicating via the Microwave Auditory Effect

"Description: An innovative and revolutionary technology is described that offers a means of low-probability-of-intercept Radio Frequency (RF) communications. The feasibility of the concept has been established using both a low intensity laboratory system and a high power RF transmitter. Numerous military applications exist in areas of search and rescue, security and special operations." The feasibility was not only demonstrated in the laboratory but also in the field using a radio-frequency carrier. In the case of the Gulf War, we had always suspected that the reason the Iraqis gave up in mass was not because of the heavy bombardments but because they were being hit with new "nonlethal" systems which created fear and perhaps even worse. Our research uncovered reports which now confirm our suspicions as fact. "What the 'Voice of the Gulf' began broadcasting, along with prayers from the Koran and testimonials from well-treated Iraqi prisoners, was precise information on the units to be bombed each day, along with a new, silent psychological technique which induced thoughts of great fear in each soldier's mind..." This makes a great deal of sense today, given what has become increasingly known about mind-control weapons. "According to statements made by captured and deserting Iraqi soldiers, however, the most devastating and demoralizing programming was the first known military use of the new, high tech, type of subliminal messages referred to as ultra-high-frequency 'Silent Sounds' or 'Silent Subliminals'. "The use of these new techniques, we believe, went well beyond the injection of fear and may have involved more powerful signal generators which caused the other symptoms which the world observed, including head pain, bleeding from the nose, disorientation and nausea all possible with so-called nonlethal weapons. The questions which now remain: Are they still using the techniques like an electronic concentration camp in order to control the population? Is this part of the way in which modern governments will suppress rogue nations? The development of the technology followed a very traceable history which began in the early 1960s at the height of the Cold War. In 1961, Dr Allen Frey wrote: "Our data to date indicate that the human auditory system can respond to electromagnetic energy in at least a portion of the radio frequency (RF) spectrum. Further, this response is instantaneous and occurs at low power densities, densities which are well below that necessary for biological damage. For example, the effect has been induced with power densities 1/60 of the standard maximum safe level for continuous exposure. " This observation had incredible ramifications because it meant that within certain ranges RF could create a sound within the brain of a person at energy concentration levels considered too small to be significant. Later that year, a patent was issued to Henry K. Puharich and Joseph L. Lawrence which stated in part: "The present invention is directed to a means for auxiliary hearing communication, useful for improving hearing, for example, and relates more specifically to novel and improved arrangements for auxiliary hearing communications by effecting the transmission of sound signals through the dental structure and facial nervous system of the user."24 This crude device produced a signal which could be heard in the brain by inducing a vibration which was transferred through the bone in to the inner ear, where it was then carried to the brain via the nervous system. Puharich continued researching along this line, gaining an additional patent in 1965.25 Both of these inventions required physical contact with the head of the subject. By 1962, Dr Allan Frey had advanced his work and was able to create so und at a distance from the subject, using a pulsed (modulated) radio transmitter . "Using extremely low average power densities of electromagnetic energy, the perception of sounds was induced in normal and deaf humans. The effect was induced several hundred feet from the antenna the instant the transmitter was turned on , and is a function of carrier frequency and modulation." What was occurring in this research were the first attempts to "tune" into the brain of a human in the same manner as "tuning" into a radio station. The same energy was being used; it was just at a different frequency with a slight vibration (modulation) on the carrier wave which delivered the signal. In 1968, G. Patrick Flanagan was issued a patent for a device which also required physical contact with the skin of the subject. "This invention relates to electromagnetic excitation of the nervous system of a mammal and pertains more particularly to a method and apparatus for exciting the nervous system of a person with electromagnetic waves that are capable of causing that person to become conscious of information conveyed by the electromagnetic waves." This invention was much different than what others had created by that time, because this device actually sent a clear, audible signal through the nervous system to the brain. The device could be placed anywhere on the body, and a clear voice or music would appear in the head of the subject. This was a most unbelievable device which had actually been invented in the late 1950s . It had taken years to convince patent examiners that it worked. The initial patent was only granted after the dramatic demonstration of the device on a deaf employee of the US Patent Office. In 1972, a second patent was issued to G. Patrick Flanagan after being suppressed by the military since 1968. This device was much more efficient in that it converted a speech waveform into "a constant amplitude square wave in which the transitions between the amplitude extremes are spaced so as to carry the speech information". What this did is establish the code of modulation or timing sequences necessary for efficient transfers into the nervous system where the signals could be sent to the brain and decoded as sound in the same way that normal sound is decoded. The result was a clear and understandable sound. The military interest in auditory effects was present since the first inventions were patented, but in 1971 came a system which would allow troops to communicate through a radio transmitter which would render the enemy deaf and disoriented while allowing "friendly" combatants to communicate at the same time. The device is described as follows: "Broadly, this disclosure is directed to a system for producing aural and psychological disturbances and partial deafness of the enemy during combat situations. Essentially, a high directional beam is radiated from a plurality of distinct transducers and is modulated by a noise, code, or speech beat signal. The invention may utilize various forms and may include movable radiators mounted on a vehicle and oriented to converge at a desired point, independently positioned vehicles with a common frequency modulator, or means employed to modulate the acoustical beam with respect to a fixed frequency . During combat, friendly forces would be equipped with a reference generator to provide aural demodulation of the projected signal, thereby yielding an intelligible beat signal while enemy personnel would be rendered partially deaf by the projected signal as well as being unable to perceive any intelligence transmitted in the form of a modulated beat signal." What this says simply is that at-a-distance personal communication could be achieved by one's own forces while denying it to others and disabling adversaries at the same time. In 1974, it was noted that using a microwave a signal was changed (transduced) by the receiver into an acoustic signal. This signal was "heard" inside or just behind the head. The report stated: "...it was noticed that the apparent locus of the 'sound' moved from the observer's head to the absorber. That is, the absorber acted as a transducer from microwave energy to an acoustic signal. This observation, to the best of our knowledge, has not been described in the literature and may serve as a mechanism mediating the 'hearing' of pulsed microwave signals." By 1989, the science took another leap forward with the combination of the modulated signal on a microwave carrier. This provided a much more efficient delivery of the sound. It was reported: "Sound is induced in the head of a person by radiating the head with microwaves in the range of 100 megahertz to 10,000 megahertz that are modulated with a particular waveform. The waveform consists of frequency modulated bursts

. Each burst is made up of ten to twenty uniformly spaced pulses grouped tightly together. The burst width is between 500 nanoseconds and 100 microseconds. The pulse width is in the range of 10 nanoseconds to 1 microsecond. The bursts are frequency modulated by the audio input to create the sensation of hearing in the person whose head is irradiated." Two other patents awarded that year addressed this breakthrough. The first invention related to devices for aiding hearing in mammals: "The invention is based upon perception of sounds which is experienced in the brain when the brain is subjected to certain microwave radiation signals. "32 The second invention confirmed the earlier observations: "Sound is induced in the head of a person by radiating the head with microwaves in the range of 100 megahertz to 10,000 megahertz that are modulated with a particular waveform. The waveform consists of frequency modulated bursts. Each burst is made up of ten to twenty uniformly spaced pulses grouped tightly together." In 1992, another patent was issued with the following description: "A silent communications system in which nonaural carriers, in the very low or very high audio frequency range or in the adjacent ultrasonic frequency spectrum, are amplitude or frequency modulated with the desired intelligence and propagated acoustically or vibrationally, for inducement into the brain, typically through the use of loudspeakers, earphones or piezoelectric transducers." This device had limited practicality in that it required the person to be in contact with or in close proximity to the sending device. When examined together, each of these patents is seen to be a discrete step toward a new weapon system. In 1995, it was reported that in the early research, clear sound signals had been sent and received. It is difficult now to determine what level of military or other research was being advanced in these areas. The history is clear from congressional reports that this entire area was of great interest to the intelligence communities. According to Scientists for Global Responsibility: "Drs Alan Frey and Joseph Sharp conducted related research. Sharp himself took part in these experiments and reported that he heard and understood words transmitted in pulse-microwave analogs of the speaker's sound vibrations. Commenting on these studies, Dr Robert Becker, twice nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize, observed that such a device has obvious applications in covert operations designed to drive a target crazy with voices, or deliver undetectable instructions to a potential assassin." Then, in 1996 came another development, a "wireless communication system undetectable by radio frequency methods for converting audio signals, including human voice, to electronic signals in the ultrasonic frequency range, transmitting the ultrasonic signal by means of acoustic pressure waves across a carrier medium, including gases, liquids, or solids, and reconvertng the ultrasonic acoustical pressure waves back to the original audio signal". Although this was meant to be used with both receiving and sending hardware, what was determined were the modulation methods for transferring the signal. The real work was yet to be made public in the form of patents. However, the military claims in the area were starting to surface. What was known from experience was that patents were being held back by the government and confiscated by the military. When this intellectual property was seized, the inventors were given a choice: work for the government, or you cannot continue research or even talk about your invention under a national security order. Those who did not cooperate could have their work effectively shut down.

Brain-to-Computer Connections

Major steps are being made to connect biology to information technology. In 1990 came the news that "[s]cientists have succeeded for the first time in establishing a colony of human brain cells that divide and grow in laboratory dishes, an achievement with profound implications for understanding and treating a wide range of neurological disorders from epilepsy to Alzheimer's disease". According to a report in the Wall Street Journal in February 1994: "Researchers said they took a key first step toward creating electronic microchips that use living brain cells. The researchers said they had learned how to place embryonic brain cells in desired spots on silicon or glass chips and then induce the brain cells to grow along desired paths."

The other possibility is that both brain cells and computer hardware could be built in the laboratories, creating, perhaps, the first biologically augmented com puters.

What's on Your Mind?

A significant initiative was started for use in creating counter-drug measures: the Brain Imaging Technology Initiative. "This initiative establishes NIDA [National Institute on Drug Abuse] regional neuroimaging centers and represents an interagency cooperative endeavor funded by

CTAC [Counterdrug Technology Assessment Center], Department of Energy (DOE), and NIDA to develop new scientific tools (new radiotracers and technologies) for understanding the mechanisms of addiction and for the evaluation of new pharmacological treatments." Through

neuroimaging, not only could the stated objective be achieved, but through imaging a person's emotional states could be mapped, chemical influences determined and perhaps even specific thoughts read. Back in 1975, Physics Today reported: "Developments in ways to measure the extremely weak magnetic fields emanating from organs such as the heart, brain and lungs are leading to important new methods for diagnosing abnormal conditions.

" In 1995, a system for capturing and decoding brain signals was patented which includes a transducer for stimulating a person and EEG transducers for recording brainwave signals from the person. It also includes a computer for controlling and synchronising stimuli presented to the person and at the same time

recording brainwave signals, and either interpreting these signals using a model for conceptual, perceptual and emotional thought to correspond to the EEG signals of the person's thoughts or comparing the signals to normal brain signals from a normal population to diagnose and locate the origin of brain-dysfunctional underlying perception, conception and emotion. In other words, the device reads your mind by comparing your brain activity to other people's. In 1996 came this Orwellian development: "...a method for remotely determining information relating to a person's emotional state, as waveform energy having a predetermined frequency and a predetermined intensity is generated and wirelessly transmitted toward a remotely located subject. Waveform energy emitted from the subject is detected and automatically analyzed to derive information relating to the individual's emotional state. Physiological or physical parameters of blood pressure, pulse rate, pupil size, respiration rate and perspiration level are measured and compared with reference values to provide information utilizable in evaluating [an] interviewee's responses or possibly criminal intent in security sensitive areas."

This technology could be used for determining what a person might do, given his totally discernible interior emotions. This technology walks through any behavior wall a person can erect and goes straight to the brain to see what may be on a person's mind. Inducing behaviour rather than just reading a person's emotional state is the subject of one scientist's work in Canada. "Scientists are trying to recreate alien abductions in the laboratory... The experiment, to be run by Professor Michael Persinger, a neuroscientist at Laurentian University, of Sudbury, Ontario, consists of a converted motorcycle helmet with solenoids on its sides that set up magnetic fields across a subject's head." This experiment was carried out and was the subject of a Canadian Broadcasting System exposé on mind control. The segment ran on a program called undercurrents in February 1999. This author also appeared in that program, along with several others interested in this field. A 1993 report said that for over 20 years Dr Persinger "...has been working on a theory that connects not only UFOs and earthquakes, but also powerful electromagnetic fields and an explanation of paranormal beliefs in terms of unusual brain activity. He has also found that stimulating another area, the temporal lobes, can produce all sorts of mystical experiences, out-of-body sensations and other apparently paranormal phenomena." This doctor's work suggests that these experiences may be the result of activity in the brain and not the actual experiences of the individuals. He has had some measure of success in re-creating many of these experiences in his subjects. Dr Persinger is also known for his work in studying the effects of ELF [extra-lowfrequency waves] on memory and brain function. In 1991, a method for changing brain waves to a desired frequency was patented. A 1975 patent discussed a similar technology: a device and method for "...sensing brain waves at a position remote from a subject whereby electromagne tic signals of different frequencies are simultaneously transmitted to the brain of the subject in which the signals interfere with one another to yield a waveform which is modulated by the subject's brain waves. The interference waveform which is representative of the brain wave activity is retransmitted by the brain to a receiver where it is demodulated and amplified. The demodulated waveform is then displayed for visual viewing and then routed to a computer for further processing and analysis. The demodulated waveform also can be used to produce a compensating signal which is transmitted back to the brain to effect a desired change in electrical activity therein."⁴⁷ In simple terms, the brain's activity is mapped in order to read a person's emotional state, conceptual abilities or intellectual patterns. A second signal can be generated and sent back into the brain which overrides the natural signal, causing the brain's energy patterns to shift. This is the "brain entrainment" which causes the shift in consciousness. There are many uses of a positive nature for this kind of technology, as was mentioned at the front of this section, the important factor being who controls the technology and for what purpose.

In January 1998, the following encapsulating statement appeared in the leading scientific journal Nature, quoting Pasteur Institute neuroscientist Jean-Pierre Changeux, chairman of the French national bioethics committee: "But neuroscience also poses potential risks, he said, arguing that advances in cerebral imaging make the scope for invasion of privacy immense...it will become commonplace and capable of being used at a distance, he predicted. That will open the way for abuses such as invasion of personal liberty, control of behaviour and brainwashing." Dancing to the Tune of an Unknown Drummer In "...a dramatic demonstration of mind reading, neuroscientists have created videos of what a cat sees by using electrodes implanted in the animal's brain. 'Trying to understand how the brain codes information leads to the possibility of replacing parts of the nervous system with an artificial device,' he said." The scientist commenting on this technology Gattett Stanley, assistant professor of biomedical engineering at Harvard saw the future possibility of brain activity mapping being used in creating electronic components to replace damaged parts of the system. The use of mind-mapping had other possibilities as well. Similar research in controlling the behaviour of humans and animals was pursued by Dr Jos Delgado at Yale University, one of the leading research institutions in the United States.

Actual testing of certain systems proved that "movements, sensations, emotions, desires, ideas, and a variety of psychological phenomena may be induced, inhibited, or modified by electrical stimulation of specific areas of the brain".⁵⁰ By 1985, Dr Delgado was able to create these effects using only a radio signal sent to the brain remotely, using energy concentrations of less than 1/50th of what the Earth naturally produces. This discovery implied that frequency, waveform and pulse rate (modulation) were the important factors rather than the amount of energy being used. In considering this, it makes sense because the human body does not require high electromagnetic power concentration to regulate its normal functioning. The key was in finding the "tuning" mechanisms for locating the right "receiving station" in the brain. By 1993, publicly released information was being discussed as a result of information openly flowing out of Russia. Meetings were held to assess the threat: the "main purpose of the March meetings was described in the Psychotechnologies memo as to 'determine whether psycho-correction technologies represent a present or future threat to US national security in situations where inaudible commands might be used to alter behavior'". The threat assessment was likely to begin to condition Americans for the public acknowledgement of one of the government's long-held secrets: that the human mind and body can be controlled remotely, without a trace of evidence being left behind. In another quote, one of the leading researchers in this area,

Dr Igor Smirnov, began to announce his findings. "But psychological warfare experts on all sides still dream that they will one day control the enemy's mind. And in a tiny, dungeon-like lab in the basement of Moscow's ominously named Institute of Psycho-Correction, Smirnov and other Russian psychiatrists are already working on schizophrenics, drug addicts and cancer patients." The results of this research have been investigated and demonstrated to members of the intelligence community in the United States, and have even been demonstrated by Dr Smirnov in an interview for the Canadian television documentary Undercurrents. This issue is also an interesting one, as can be seen in this 1999 article excerpt.

"Fantasies are thought processes involving internal monologues and imaginative sequences which can motivate healthy people to constructive behaviour; likewise, they can inspire unbalanced individuals to destructive or dangerous behaviour. One conclusion from that research was that fantasy played a major role among violent criminals. Researchers learned that criminals often daydreamed their fantasies, and then practiced elements of those fantasies before committing their crime. FBI agents determined that violent criminals often exhibit telltale signs as children and as adults. Hence, disturbed employees or students may demonstrate signs of violent fantasies to close observers. Troubled individuals may be obsessively interested in music with violent lyrics, or may have a drug or alcohol problem. When these signs reveal themselves, they should be reported to a threat management team, which can then neutralize the threat, either by therapy, if rehabilitation is possible, or by firing the employee. Workplace and school Violence is usually preceded by warning signs." The ability to determine a "predisposition" for a behaviour does not mean that a person will make the "choice" to act on the feelings and internal thoughts. Every person on the planet can remember times when his thoughts were dangerous, immoral or otherwise unacceptable, falling below the standards set by societal and cultural "norms". Yet, we can have these thoughts in the privacy of our own mind. The trend in the application of mind control technology now would make our most private internal thoughts, as we wrestle with the temptations and choices of everyday life, subject to scrutiny by Government and employers. Who will define the rules for psycho-correction? Who will decide what is ethical and right in this area as it develops over the next decade?

Control of the Mind and Body

The predominant brain wave frequencies indicate the kind of activity taking place in the brain. There are four basic groups of brain wave frequencies which are associated with most mental activity. The first group, beta waves (13-35 Hertz or pulses per second), is associated with normal activity. The high end of this range is associated with stress or agitated states which can impair thinking and reasoning skills. The second group, alpha waves (8-12 Hertz), can indicate relaxation. Alpha frequencies are ideal for learning and focused mental functioning. The third group, theta waves (4-7 Hertz), indicates mental imagery, access to memories and internal mental focus. This state is often associated with young children, behavioural modification and sleep/dream states. The last group, ultra-slow delta waves (0.5-3 Hertz), is found when a person is in deep sleep. The general rule is that the brain's predominant wave frequency will be lowest in terms of pulses per second when a person is relaxed, and highest when a person is most alert or agitated.⁵⁴ External stimulation of the brain by electromagnetic means can cause the brain to be entrained or locked into phase with an external signal generator. Predominant brain waves can be driven or pushed into new frequency patterns by external stimulation. In other words, the external signal driver or impulse generator entrains the brain, overriding the normal frequencies and causing changes in the brain waves, which then cause changes in brain chemistry, which then cause changes in brain outputs in the form of thoughts, emotions or physical condition. As you are driven, so you arrive. Brain manipulation can be either beneficial or detrimental to the individual being impacted, depending on the level of knowledge or the intentions of the person controlling the technology. In combination with specific wave-forms, the various frequencies trigger precise chemical responses in the brain. The release of these neurochemicals causes specific reactions in the brain which result in feelings of fear, lust, depression, love, etc. All of these, and the full range of emotional/intellectual responses, are caused by very specific combinations of these brain chemicals which are released by frequency-specific electrical impulses. "Precise mixtures of these brain juices can produce extraordinarily specific mental states, such as fear of the dark, or intense concentration." The work in this area is advancing at a very rapid rate, with new discoveries being made regularly. Unlocking the knowledge of these specific frequencies will yield significant breakthroughs in understanding human health. Radiofrequency radiation, acting as a carrier for extremely low frequencies (ELF), can be used to entrain brain waves wirelessly.

The control of mind and body by using various forms of electromagnetic energy including radio signals, light pulsations, sound and other methods has resulted in several inventions and innovations. The positive health effects and uses have been pursued by private researchers round the world. In 1973, an "...apparatus for the treatment of neuropsychic and somatic disorders herein light, sound, VHF electromagnetic field and heat sources, respectively, are simultaneously applied by means of a control unit to the patient's central nervous system with a predetermined repetition rate. The light radiation and sound radiation sources are made so as to exert an adequate and monotonous influence of the light and sound radiation on the patient's visual analyzers and auditory analyzers, respectively." This results in the brain following the external stimulating source in triggering brain pattern changes which affect the brain immediately and directly. A simple invention patented in 1977 induction of natural sleep. As stated above, this invention is concerned specifically with an improvement "...provides a device for improving upon the aforesaid application [see patent for full text] in assisting the

that will permit the creation of several waveforms such that an analgesic noise device can approximate soothing sounds of nature, i.e., waves, rain, wind." These kinds of devices are available everywhere and are noted for their calming effects in helping people relax and sleep.

In 1980, another patent was issued which disclosed "...a method and apparatus for producing a noise-like signal for inducing a hypnotic or anesthetic effect in a human being. The invention also has application in crowd control and consciousness level training (biofeedback). The invention may also be used in creating special musical effects." This device would have a profound effect in controlling individuals to a point otherwise only achievable through the application of hypnotherapy or drugs. A couple of years later, another device was engineered to create these types of effects, again using very subtle energy: "Brain wave patterns associated with relaxed and meditative states in a subject are gradually induced without deleterious chemical or neurological side effects."

Various systems were perfected and patents issued for controlling brain activity. These inventions generated a whole array of breakthroughs for controlling a person's emotional state, concentration and pain levels and creating other effects as well. In 1990, the results of a study strongly indicated that "...specific types of subjective experiences can be enhanced when extremely low frequency magnetic fields of less than 1 milligauss are generated through the brain at the level of the temporal lobes. Vestibular feelings (vibrations, floating), depersonalization (feeling detached, sense of a presence) and imaginings (vivid images from childhood) were more frequent within the field exposed groups than the sham field exposed group." In a 1996 "new age" invention, quartz crystals are used to create stress relief by slowing brain activity. "Physiological stress in a human subject is treated by generating a weak electromagnetic field about a quartz crystal. The crystal is stimulated by applying electrical pulses of pulse widths between 0.1 and 50 microseconds each at a pulse repetition rate of between 0.5k and 10k [500 and 10,000] pulses per second to a conductor positioned adjacent to the quartz crystal thereby generating a weak magnetic field. A subject is positioned within the weak magnetic field for a period of time sufficient to reduce stress." It is interesting that "New Age" thinkers have played on "crystal magic" as a way to get "in tune" with oneself and relax, and here is a quartz crystal being included as a component of this invention. Again, the crossovers between fiction and science continue to appear.

Consciousness training is also a big theme in cults, religious organisations and others pursuing the "New Age". Science has now gained a greater understanding of how the mind and brain work, so that what used to take years or even decades to achieve can now be mastered in weeks, days or even minutes. For instance, in 1996 a method and apparatus for the use in achieving alpha and theta brainwave st ates and effecting positive emotional states in humans was developed. Three years before, a patent was issued for a device which could create desired consciousness states: "...in the training of an individual to replicate such states of consciousness without further audio stimulation; and in the transferring of such states from one human being to another through the imposition of one person's EEG, superimposed on desired stereo signals, on another individual, by inducement of a binaural beat phenomenon." Thought transference?

This is interesting in that it speaks to the ideas alluded to earlier by the military in changing the memory of a person by imposing computer-manipulated signals which would integrate with the normal memory of a person. The possibility for abuse is obvious, and the opportunity for personal advancement is great. Imagine gaining education by the transfer of data directly into the human brain by these new methods rather than by the standard methods of learning. A serious consideration in developing these types of memory transfer systems is that they bypass normal intellectual filters: information is deposited into the brain as fact, without question or careful consideration. What happens when the new information conflicts with existing information? Would it be possible to include hidden information meant to unduly influence things like religious beliefs, politics or consumption of goods and services? The possibilities are immense and the ethical and moral questions surrounding these matters are equally large. We can no longer avoid the debate. In fact, the debate is lagging far behind the scientific advances. In the interim, there are some simple things we could all do to enhance our own, or our children's, learning capacity by applying simple and available knowledge. For instance, "researchers at the Center for the Neurobiology of Learning and Memory at University of California, Irvine, have determined that 10 minutes of listening to a Mozart piano sonata raised the measurable IQ of college students by up to nine points". This is a simple thing of great use to anyone seeking self-improvement.

Weapons of the Mind

A 1984 paper titled "The Electromagnetic Spectrum in Low-Intensity Conflict" said much about the military's interest in EMR: "The results of many studies that have been published in the last few years indicate that specific biological effects can be achieved by controlling the various parameters of the electromagnetic (EM) field. A few of the more important EM factors that can be manipulated are frequency, wave shape, rate of pulse onset, pulse duration, pulse amplitude, repetition rate, secondary modulation, and symmetry and asymmetry of the pulse. Many of the clinical effects of electromagnetic radiation were first noticed using direct current applied directly to the skin. Later the same effects were obtained by applying external fields. Electromagnetic radiation has been reported in the literature to induce or enhance the following effects.

1. Stimulation of bone regeneration [in fractures]
2. Healing of normal fractures
3. Treatment of congenital pseudarthrosis
4. Healing of wounds
5. Electroanesthesia
6. Electroconvulsive therapy
7. Behavior modification in animals
8. Altered electroencephalograms in animals and humans
9. Altered brain morphology in animals
10. Effects of acupuncture
11. Treatment of drug addiction
12. Electrostimulation for relief of pain
13. Altered firing of neuronal cells

"These are but a few of the many biological effects and uses that have been reported over the past decade. They are not exhaustive and do not include many of the effects reported in the Soviet and East European literature. "As with most human endeavors, these applications of electromagnetic radiation have the potential for being a double-edged sword. They can produce significant benefits, yet at the same time can be exploited and used in a controlled manner for military or co vert applications. This paper focuses on the potential uses of electromagnetic radiation in future low-intensity conflicts.

"Potential Military Applications of EMR

"The exploitation of this technology for military uses is still in its infancy and only recently has been recognized by the United States as a feasible option. A 1982 Air Force review of biotechnology had this to say. 'Currently available data allow the projection that specially generated radio frequency radiation (RFR) fields may pose powerful and revolutionary military threats. Electroshock therapy indicates the ability of induced electric current to completely interrupt mental functioning for short periods of time, to obtain cognition for longer periods and to restructure emotional response over prolonged intervals.' Experience with electroshock therapy, RFR experiments and the increasing understanding of the brain as an electrically mediated organ suggested the serious probability that impressed electromagnetic fields can be disruptive to purposeful behavior and may be capable of directing and or interrogating such behavior. Further, the passage of approximately 100 milliamperes through the myocardium can lead to cardiac standstill and death, again pointing to a speed-of-flight weapons effect.

'A rapidly scanning RFR system could provide an effective stun or kill capability over a large area. System effectiveness will be a function of wave form, field intensity, pulse widths, repetition frequency, and carrier frequency. The system can be developed using tissue and whole animal experimental studies, coupled with mechanisms and waveform effects research. 'Using relatively low-level RFR it may be possible to sensitize large military groups to extremely dispersed amounts of biological or chemical agents to which the unirradiated population would be immune. 'The potential applications of artificial electromagnetic fields are wide ranging and can be used in many military or quasi-military situations. Some of these potential uses include dealing with terrorist groups, crowd control, controlling breeches [sic] of security at military installations, and antipersonnel techniques in tactical warfare... One last area where electromagnetic radiation may prove to be of some value is in enhancing abilities of individuals for anomalous phenomena.'" Quite the papers for the 1980s. Stimulating anomalous phenomena was another interesting point revealed in the Air Force review. What could this mean? In one press report in November 1995, the interest of the CIA was disclosed when it was announced that for "...20 years, the United States has secretly used psychics in attempts to help drug enforcement agencies track down Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi and find plutonium in North Korea, the CIA and others confirm. The ESP spying operations code named 'Stargate' were unreliable, but three psychics continued to work out of Ft Meade, at least into July, researchers who evaluated the program for the CIA said..." It is also worth pointing out that this report coincided with the public disclosure by military personnel of this project. The story was revealed in David Morehouse's book Psychic Warrior.

Col. John Alexander, working out of Los Alamos and a major proponent of this area of research, was quoted as saying: "...there are weapons systems that operate on the power of the mind and whose lethal capacity has already been demonstrated ... The psychotronic weapon would be silent, difficult to detect, and would require only a human operator as a power source."

According to a paper on non-lethal weapons:

"An RF weapon currently under development is the high powered, very low frequency (VLF)

modulator. Working in the 2035 kHz spectrum, the frequency emits from a 12 meter antenna dish to form into a type of acoustic bullet. The weapon is especially convenient because the power level is easily adjustable. At its low setting, the acoustic bullet causes physical discomfort enough to deter most approaching threats. Incrementally increasing the power nets an effect of nausea, vomiting and abdominal pains. The highest settings can cause a person's bones to literally explode internally. Aimed at the head, the resonating skull bones have caused people to hear 'voices'." The weapon was researched by the Russian military more extensively than by the US. Indeed, "...the Russians actually offered the use of such a weapon to the FBI in the Branch Davidian standoff to make them think that 'God' was talking to them. Concerned with the unpredictability of what the voices might actually say to the followers, the FBI declined the offer. Another RF weapon that was ready for use back in 1978 was developed under the guise of Operation PIQUE. Developed by the CIA, the plan was to bounce high powered radio signals off the ionosphere to affect the mental functions of people in selected areas, including Eastern European nuclear installations. "The use of the ionosphere in the CIA's experiments reminds one of the possibilities now available with systems such as HAARP, which was developed 15 years later. What is clear in all of this is that these systems have been developed and hidden from public view. The practice continues to this day. "The next area of non-lethal weapons is primarily used against machinery.. these devices can either cause the machinery to stop functioning or to render it vulnerable to further, more lethal attacks. In addition to this effect, man has become very dependent upon the use of machines and is often rendered helpless in a situation when they become dysfunctional. Therefore, it is only appropriate that they are covered here. The primary anti-machinery arsenal includes the microwave weapon, the non-nuclear electromagnetic pulse, and the laser weapon. "US Special Operations Command has in its arsenal the portable microwave weapon. The capability of such a weapon is varied in that it can not only disrupt enemy communications, but can also superheat internal organs. Of course, directing this type of weapon towards personnel eliminates it from the non-lethal classification. Developed in the Los Alamos National Laboratory, the weapon forms its signal similar to the RF weapons discussed above in that it directs the energy into a high-powered pulse and destroys transistors and other electrical equipment... On an even smaller scale, a portable EMP weapon could be carried by ground forces to destroy the electrical components in an armored vehicle or tank. This capability is being developed with police forces to emit a pulse that would stop a car almost immediately." These systems offer both promises and risks as we move into the new century. What will be the public reaction to these systems? We suggest that the reaction will cause a significant change in the uses and further developments of these technologies. Additionally, we suspect that monitoring systems would be developed which would allow for the detection of these technologies in order to control abuse. Mind Control Victims Sometimes referred to as "wavies" or "beamers", these individuals are usually dismissed when asserting that they are the victims of mind control weapons testing. In fact: "University of South Florida researchers have published a study showing that fears of the Internet are replacing the CIA and radio waves as a frequent delusion in psychiatric patients. In every case of Internet delusion documented by the researchers, the patient actually had little experience with computers." The problem is that it is difficult if not impossible to sort out which people might be victims and which are delusional. Attempts to determine the reality of the complaints are often the butt of jokes and fear. For example, the University of Albany has "...shut down the research of a psychology professor probing the 'X-Files' world of government surveillance and mind control. At conferences, in papers and research over two semesters, Professor Kathryn Kelley explored the claims of those who say they were surgically implanted with communications devices to read their thoughts." Since the release of our first book, Angels Don't Play This HAARP: Advances in Tesla Technology, we have heard from hundreds of people making such claims. We cannot sort out what might be real experimentation from that which resides only in the minds of these people. We believe that the claims should be taken seriously and that people should have some place to go in order to find the truth or gain the medical treatments they otherwise deserve. The history of the United States is littered with examples of people being exploited by scientists working under the cover of darkness provided by "black budgets". Could these reports have a factual basis? We believe that some do. Government control of the mind in order to impose its will on people is best summarised on the wall of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Memorial with an inscription that reads: "They [who] seek to establish systems of government based on the regimentation of all human beings by a handful of individual rulers...call this a new order. It is not new and it is not order."

Endnotes

1. US Air Force, New World Vistas: Air and Space Power for the 21st Century Ancillary Volume, Scientific Advisory Board (USAF), Washington, DC, Document #1 9960618040, 1996, pp. 89-90. EPI402
2. Foster, Sarah, "Cold War legend dies at 80: Famed as CIA's real-life 'Dr Strangelove'", Worldnetdaily, March 9, 1999. EPI279
3. Reppert, Barton, "The Zapping of an Embassy: 35 Years Later, The Mystery Lingers", AP, May 22, 1988. EPI1112
4. Advisory Committee Staff, Committee on Human Radiation Experiments, Methodological Review of Agency Data Collection Efforts: Initial Report on the Central Intelligence Agency Document Search, June 27, 1994. EPI579
5. Petersen, John L., The Road to 2015: Profiles of the Future, Waite Group Press, 1994, ISBN 1-878739-85-9. EPI849
6. USAF, New World Vistas, ibid.
7. US EPA, Summary and Results of the April 26-27, 1993 Radiofrequency Radiation Conference, Volume 2: Papers, 402-R-95-011, March 1995. EPI728
8. Oscar, K.J., "Effects of low power microwaves on the local cerebral blood flow of conscious rats", Army Mobility Equipment Command, June 1, 1980. EPI1195
9. Delgado, Jos M.R., Physical Control of the Mind: Toward a Psychocivilized Society, Harper & Row Publishers, New York, 1969. EPI850
10. US Senate, Communist Interrogation, Indoctrination and Exploitation of American Military and Civilian Prisoners, Committee on Government Operations, Subcommittee on Investigations, 84th Congress, 2nd Session, December 31, 1956. EPI1131
11. Cooper, Pat, "US Enhances Mind Games", Defense News, April 17-23, 1995. EPI1154
- 11a. Chernishev, I., "Can Rulers Make 'Zombies' and Control the World?", Orienteer, February 1997, pp. 58-62.
12. Thomas, Timothy L., "The Mind Has No Firewall", Parameters, vol. XXVIII, no. 1, Spring 1998. EPI525
13. Brzezinski, Zbigniew, Between Two Ages: America's Role in the Technetronic Era, Viking Press, New York, 1970. EPI787
14. McGill, Peter, "'Mind Control Music' Stops Shoplifters", The Sydney Morning Herald, February 4, 1995. EPI95
15. US Patent #4,777,529, October 11, 1988, "Auditory Subliminal Programming System"; Inventors: Schultz et al.; Assignee: Richard M. Schultz and Associates, Inc. EPI265
16. US Patent #4,395,600, July 26, 1983, "Auditory Subliminal Message System and Method"; Inventors: Lundy et al. EPI264
17. US Patent #5,134,484, July 28, 1992, "Superimposing Method and Apparatus Useful for Subliminal Messages"; Inventor: Willson, Joseph; Assignee: MindsEye Educational Systems, Inc. EPI290
18. US Patent #5,270,800, December 14, 1993, "Subliminal Message Generator"; Inventor: Sweet, Robert L. EPI288
19. Hall, E. Gene, "Watch Carefully Now: Solving Crime in the 21st Century", Police, June 1999, vol. 23, no. 6. Source: NL ECTC Law Enforcement & Technology News Summary, June 17, 1999. EPI944
20. US Department of Defense (awarding agency), "Communicating via the Microwave Auditory Effect", SBIR Contract Number F41624-95-C-9007. EPI277
21. ITV News Bureau, "A Psy-Ops Bonanza On The Desert", 1991, <http://www.mindspring.com/~silent/xx/daisy.htm>. EPI568
22. ITV News Bureau, "High Tech Psychological Warfare Arrives in the Middle East", 1991, <http://www.mindspring.com/~silent/xx/news.htm>. EPI567
23. Frey, Allan H., "Auditory System Response to Radio Frequency Energy", Aerospace Medicine, December 1961, vol. 32, pp. 1140-1142. EPI370
24. US Patent #2,995,633, August 8, 1961, "Means for Aiding Hearing"; Inventors: Puharich et al. EPI256
25. US Patent #3,170,993, February 23, 1965, "Means for Aiding Hearing by Electrical Stimulation of the Facial Nerve System"; Inventors: Henry K. Puharich and Joseph L. Lawrence. EPI1119
26. Frey, Allan H., "Human Auditory System Response to Modulated Electromagnetic Energy", Journal of Applied Physiology 17(4):689-692, 1962. EPI544
27. US Patent #3,393,279, July 16, 1968, "Nervous System Excitation Device"; Inventor: Flanagan, Gillis Patrick; Assignee: Listening Incorporated. EPI261
28. US Patent #3,647,970, March 7, 1972, "Method and System of Simplifying Speech Waveforms"; Inventor: Flanagan, Gillis P. 29. US Patent #3,566,347, Feb. 23, 1971, "Psycho-Acoustic Projector"; Inventor: Flanders, Andrew E.; Assignee: General Dynamics Corporation. EPI260
30. Sharp et al., "Generation of Acoustic Signals by Pulsed Microwave Energy", IEEE Transactions On Microwave Theory And Techniques, May 1974. EPI817
31. US Patent #4,877,027, Oct. 31, 1989, "Hearing System"; Inventor: Brunkan, Wayne. EPI1124
32. US Patent #4,858,612, Aug. 22, 1989, "Hearing Device"; Inventor: Stocklin, William L. EPI270
33. US Patent #4,877,027, Oct. 31, 1989, "Hearing System"; Inventor: Brunkan, Wayne B. EPI262
34. US Patent #5,159,703, Oct. 27, 1992, "Silent Subliminal Presentation System", In venter: Lowry, Oliver M. EPI285 35. Scientists for Global Responsibility, "Non-L ethal Defence: The New Age Mental War Zone", issue 10, 1995. EPI810 36. US Paten t #5,539,705, July 23, 1996, "Ultrasonic Speech Translator and Communication Sys tem"; Inventor: Akerman, M. Alfred et al.; Assignee: Martin Marietta Energy Syst ems. EPI293 37. Specter, Michael, "Scientists make brain cells grow", Anchorage Daily News, May 4, 1990. EPI527 38. Bishop, Jerry, "Nervy Scientists Move Toward Union Of Living Brain Cells With Microchips", Wall Street Journal, February 1, 1994, p. B3. EPI49 39. ONDCP, CTAC, "Counterdrug Research and Development Bluepr int Update", <http://www.whitehousedrugpolicy.gov/scimed/blueprint99/execsumm.htm>

 40. Cohen, David, "Magnetic Fields of the Human Body", Physics Today, August 19
 75. EPI1179 41. US Patent #5,392,788, Feb. 28, 1995, "Method And Device For Inte rpreting concepts And Conceptual Thought From Brainwave Data And For Assisting F or Diagnosis Of Brainwave Dysfunction"; Inventor: Hudspeth, William J. EPI1129 4 2. US Patent #5,507,291, April 16, 1996, "Method And An Associated Apparatus For Remotely Determining Information As To Person's Emotional State"; Inventors: St irbl et al. EPI1130 43. Watts, Susan, "Alien kidnaps may just be mind zaps", The Sydney Morning Herald, November 19, 1994. EPI816 44. Opall, Barbara, "US Explor es Russian Mind-Control Technology", Defense News, January 11-17, 1993. EPI818 4 5. Persinger, M. et al., "Partial Amnesia for a Narrative Following Application of Theta Frequency EM Fields", Journal of Bioelectricity 4(2):481-494 (1985). EP I372 46. US Patent #5,036,858, Aug. 6, 1991, "Method And Apparatus For Changing Brain Wave Frequency"; Inventors: Carter et al. EPI1127 47. US Patent #3,951,134
 , April 20, 1976, "Apparatus And Method For Remotely Monitoring And Altering Bra inwaves"; Inventor: Malech, Robert G.; Assignee: Dorne & Margolin Inc. EPI1122 4 8. "Advances in Neuroscience 'May Threaten Human Rights'", Nature, vol. 391, Jan uary 22, 1998. EPI116 49. Kahney, Leander, "A Cat's Eye Marvel", Wired.com News, October 7, 1999, at <http://www.wired.com/news/technology/story/22116.html>. EPI
 832 50. Delgado, Jos M.R., Physical Control of the Mind: Toward a Psychocivilize d Society, Harper & Row, New York, 1969. EPI850 51. "DoD, Intel Agencies Look at Russian Mind Control Technology, Claims", Defense Electronics, July 1993. EPI53
 8 52. Elliot, Dorinda and Barry, John, "A Subliminal Dr Strangelove", Newsweek, August 21, 1994. EPI542 53. Depue, Roger L. and Depue, Joanne M., To Dream, Perc hance to Kill", Security Management, vol. 43, no. 6, July 1999. Source: NLECTC L aw Enforcement & Technology News, Summary, July 8, 1999. EPI932 54. Hutchison, M ichael, MegaBrain: New Tools and Techniques for Brain Growth and Mind Expansion, 1986. EPI1235 55. US Patent #5,356,368, Oct. 18, 1994, "Method and Apparatus fo r Inducing Desired States of Consciousness", Inventor: Monroe, Robert; Assignee: Interstate Industries, Inc. EPI286 56. Hutchison, MegaBrain, op. cit., p. 114.
 EPI1235 57. US Patent #3,773,049, Nov. 20, 1973, "Apparatus for the Treatment of Neuropsychic and Somatic Diseases with Heat, Light, Sound and VHF Electromagnet ic Radiation"; Inventors: Rabichev et al. EPI257 58. US Patent #4,034,741, July 12, 1977, "Noise Transmitter and Generator"; Inventors: Adams et al.; Assignee: Solitron Devices Inc. EPI267 59. US Patent #4,191,175, March 4, 1980, "Method an d Apparatus for Repetitively Producing a Noise-Like Audible Signal", Inventor: N agle, William L. EPI269 60. US Patent # 4,335,710, June 22, 1982, "Device for th e Induction of Specific Brain Wave Patterns"; Inventor: Williamson, John D.; Ass ignee: Omnitronics Research Corporation. EPI292 61. US Patent #4,717,343, Jan. 5
 , 1988, "Method of Changing a Person's Behavior"; Inventor: Densky, Alan. EPI284 62. US Patent #4,834,701, May 30, 1989, "Apparatus for Inducing Frequency Reduc tion in Brainwave", Inventor: Masaki, Kazumi; Assignee: Hayashibara, Ken. EPI266 63. US Patent 4,889,526, Dec. 26, 1989, "Non-Invasive Method and Apparatus for Modulating Brain Signals Through an External Magnetic Or Electric Field To Reduc e Pain"; Inventors: Rauscher, Elizabeth A. and Van Bise, William L.; Assignee: M egatech Laboratories, Inc. EPI268 64. US Patent #4,227,516, Oct. 14, 1990, "Appa ratus for Electrophysiological Stimulation"; Inventors: Meland et al. EPI283 65.
 US Patent #4,883,067, Nov. 28, 1989, "Method and Apparatus for Translating the EEG into Music to Induce and Control Various Psychological and Physiological Sta tes and to Control a Musical Instrument"; Inventors: Knispel et al.; Assignee: N eurosonics, Inc. EPI282 66. US Patent # 5,123,899, June 23, 1992, "Method and Sy stem for Altering Consciousness"; Inventor: Gall, James. EPI289. 67. Patent # 5,

352,181, Oct. 4, 1994, "Method and Recording For Producing Sounds and Messages to Achieve Alpha and Theta Brainwave States and Positive Emotional States in Humans"; Inventor: Davis, Mark E. EPI291 68. US Patent #5,289,438, Feb. 22, 1994, "Method and System For Altering Consciousness", Inventor: Gall, James. EPI333 69. Ruttan, Leslie A. et al., "Enhancement of Temporal Lobe-Related Experiences During Brief Exposures To Milligauss Intensity Extremely Low Frequency Magnetic Fields", Journal of Bioelectricity 9(1):33-54 (1990). EPI311 70. US Patent #5,562,597, Oct. 8, 1996, "Method and Apparatus for Reducing Physiological Stress"; Inventor: Van Dick, Robert C. EPI294 71. US Patent # 5,586,967, Dec. 24, 1996, "Method and Recording or Producing Sounds and Messages To Achieve Alpha and Theta Brainwave States in Humans", Inventor: Davis, Mark E. EPI296 72. US Patent #5,213,562, May 25, 1993, "Method of Inducing Mental, Emotional and Physical States of Consciousness, Including Specific Mental Activity in Human Beings"; Inventor: Monroe, Robert; Assignee: Interstate Industries, Inc. EPI287 73. Hotz, Robert Lee, "Listening to Mozart a real but temporary IQ builder, study says", Anchorage Daily News, October 15, 1993. EPI529 74. Tyler, Capt. Paul E., MC, USN, "The Electromagnetic Spectrum in Low-Intensity Conflict" in Lt. Col. David Dean (ed.), Low-Intensity Conflict and Modern Technology, Air University Press, June 1986. EPI709 75. Cole, Richard, "ESP spies, 'Stargate' are psychic reality", Saint Paul Pioneer Press, November 30, 1995. EPI491 76. Morehouse, David, Psychic Warrior, Michael Joseph Ltd, UK, St Martin's Press, USA, 1996. 77. Aftergood, Steven, "The 'Soft Kill' Fallacy", Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists, September/October 1994. EPI281 78. Suhajda, Joseph M., "Non-Lethal Weapons for Military Operations Other Than War", at <http://www.usafa.af.mil/wing/34edg/airman/suhajd~1.htm>. EPI348 79. ibid. 80. "Internet Feeds Delusions", Associated Press, July 5, 1999. EPI123 81. Brownstein, Andrew. "U. Albany Suspends implants research", Times Union, August 25, 1999. EPI833 82. Begich, Dr Nick and Jeane Manning, Angels Don't Play This HAARP: Advances in Tesla Technology, EarthPulse Press, Anchorage, 1995. 84. Lalli, Anthony N., "Human Research Subject Protection", at http://www.pw2.netcom.com~allalli/BillSite_analysis/paper_web.html. EPI619 EPI259 Filename: Mind Control.doc Directory: D:\epulse\test\epulseuploads\articles Template: E:\Documents and Settings\raja\Application Data\Microsoft\Templates\Normal.dot Title: Subject: Author: Keywords: Comments: Creation Date: Change Number: Last Saved On: Last Saved By: Total Editing Time: Last Printed On: Mind Control Dr. Nick Begich 1/7/2007 1:48 PM 31/15/2007 10:34 AM Daphne 8 Minutes 1/15/2007 11:18 AM As of Last Complete Printing Number of Pages: 66 Number of Words: 12,883 (approx.) Number of Characters: 73,434 (approx.)

Your mind, body, money, and future!

PLEASE HELP HUMANITY: It affects you-Talk about it Expose it! Revolution it!

How we got here perfecting 50 years of MIND CONTROLLED AMERICANS.

SUSAN LINDAUER NY CASE with false accusations also to impede the TRUTH! FOR 50 YEARS in all MATTERS

FOOTNOTES and REFERENCES

DEATHS, CANCER, THREATS/BLACKMAIL, QUASHED MEDIA DOCUMENTARY

DR. WALTER BOWART, False Memory Syndrome Foundation-radio interview (CD Canada) and below info:

JIM KEITH banned books MASS CONTROL-ENGINEERING HUMAN CONSCIOUSNESS, Strange death and Body Electric (Dumbed down Americans)

AARON RUSSO of Rockefeller and Discredited

ALEX CONSTANTINE and the CIA and MEDIA, Operation Mockingbird and Major Universities The New Dark Ages Conspiracies 1980-1995

Carol White and Too Secret Too Long EIR, Volume 14, No 23.

DR. NICK BEGICH, Alaskan Politics and family targeted-TERRORIST HUNTER, anonymously

KAY GRIGGS, Military wife-current MIND CONTROL whistleblower (Secret Societies)

DR. BILL NELSON, Tom Beardon Govt Physicists and the INVISIBLE GOV/WAR

Naval Officer L. Ron Hubbard (1964) Wikipedia Mockingbird Operation Mind Control

DR. ROBERT DUNCAN, Partial knowledge-JAY KIMBALL torture in MS DR. DOUG ROKKE, DR IGOR LEDOCHOWSKI-Street Hypnosis and NLP Richard Bantler and John Grinder for mer CIA

Sharon Weinberger, Targeting 'Imaginary Weapons' MIND GAMES Pentagon investigati ve reporter.

Julianne McKinney, Military Intelligence and WHISTLEBLOWER

Senator Eric Adams, NY delayed then prevented from Senate hearing for victims in 2009 with home fire

KATHLEEN SULLIVAN (Shackled) Cathy OBrien and Daughter Kelly

BRICE TAYLOR, Thanks for the MEMORIES

Lynn Surgella Letter from President of Psychotronics Association and former Gove rnment Scientist

John Glenn, Former NASA astronaut, Military, and Senator letter 1997

Michael Scheuer, CIA 117 slides on 911 and most still dont have clearance of the se weapons on civilians,

Ted Gunderson, Bob Levin, Former agent, and OUTFOXED documentary videos CUTTING OFF, Dixie Chics INDUCED BUZZ with synthetic thoughts and emotion.

Sibel Edmonds, See her story, public articles and court pleadings

John Marks, Mark Phillips, Everyone attempting the truth with MASS CHOAS creatio ns from the top

Jesse Ventura-Former Seal, Covert CIA on US Soil against Mission, and changed we b site since. The former CIA site linking it to Hollywood and Scientology involv ements revamped when I wrote about it

Thomas Tamm, DOJ and 9 attorney terminations

Tom Beardon, Larry Klayman, Leuren Moret, CHARLES VIAR CIA Pandoras Box American hysterias

Duncan OFinioan, CD interviews Abducted Manchurian assassin for former President Bush in 1980s as milk cartons now misfits and handlers of CIA covert Q clearanc e

Police Barry Cooper, TX-doesnt know why he did it

CIA Ray Mc Govern Whistleblower Partial 911

John Perkins book on his story as one of the Federal Elite murderer.

OPEC Pastor LINDSEY WILLIAMS-Energy Non Crisis S/Be $1.50 a gal. World Bank Proi
t to collapse 1910 secret meeting on Jeckyl Island Fed Reserve! NOW whitewashing History with more overt crimes

Naomi wolf, (Yale) Give me liberty, and FREEDOM to FASCISM 10 steps NSA employee s all claim being hypnotized on the job SAME as other whistleblower claims Jim Guest Letter on Mind Control to Senate, Senator Patrick Leahy (A divided and less civil Country)

Ron Paul Wake Up Americans, Kevin Trudeau FDA lawsuits-Britney Spears, Dixie Chi cs sabotaged audiences creating and cutting off buzz.

Amy Goodman Stop the Madness, APA & AMA, Natl whistleblowers center.org

Judicial Watch, Freedom Watch, Institute for Accuracy, Citizens for legitimate g ov.

George Bush-Yale Member SKULL and BONES and New World Order,

Proof of Conspiracy-A new American View Matrix III, Val Valerian, ed., 1992

Constantine, Bowart: Acid Dreams-Human Rights Law Journal, Freedom of the Mind V ol. 3, No. 1-4

Ross MD; Dr Colin The CIA, Military Mind Control Building the Manchurian Candida te. April 18, 1996

Bowart, Walter, Leading Psychiatrist Blows Whistle on Profession: Proves 50 + ye ars of Mind Control MindNet Journal, Vol. 1, No. 94 and Were we Controlled? JFK
Adventures Unlimited Press, IL, 1997

December January 1993 Mind Control Techniques and Tactic

Market inflations and real estate pricing and gouging was all induced from the m ind on each individual and as a mass, and part of conspiracy agenda. Corrupting American Minds.

(Text Box comment Released by RareReactor) Office of Research and development

Author's Note

This book has grown out of the 16,000 pages of documents that the CIA released t o me under the Freedom of Information Act. Without these documents, the best inv estigative reporting in the world could not have produced a book, and the secrets of CIA mind-control work would have remained buried forever, as the men who knew them had always intended. From the documentary base, I was able to expand my knowledge through interviews and readings in the behavioral sciences. Nevertheless, the final result is not the whole story of the CIA's attack on the mind. Only a few insiders could have written that, and they choose to remain silent. I have done the best I can to make the book as accurate as possible, but I have been hampered by the refusal of most of the principal characters to be interviewed and by the CIA's destruction in 1973 of many of the key documents.

I want to extend special thanks to the congressional sponsors of the Freedom of Information Act. I would like to think that they had my kind of research in mind when they passed into law the idea that information about the government belongs to the people, not to the bureaucrats. I am also grateful to the CIA officials who made what must have been a rather unpleasant decision to release the documents and to those in the Agency who worked on the actual mechanics of release. From my point of view, the system has worked extremely well.

I must acknowledge that the system worked almost not at all during the first six months of my three-year

Freedom of Information struggle. Then in late 1975, Joseph Petrillo and Timothy Sullivan, two skilled and energetic lawyers with the firm of Fried, Frank, Shriver, Harris and Kampelman, entered the case. I had the distinct impression that the government attorneys took me much more seriously when my requests for documents started arriving on stationery with all those prominent partners at the top. An author should not need lawyers to write a book, but I would have had great difficulty without mine. I greatly appreciate their assistance.

What an author does need is editors, a publisher, researchers, consultants, and friends, and I have been particularly blessed with good ones. My very dear friend Taylor Branch edited the book, and I continue to be impressed with his great skill in making my ideas and language coherent. Taylor has also served as my agent, and in this capacity, too, he has done me great service.

I had a wonderful research team, without which I never could have sifted through the masses of material and run down leads in so many places. I thank them all, and I want to acknowledge their contributions. Diane St. Clair was the mainstay of the group. She put together a system for filing and cross-indexing that worked beyond all expectations. (Special thanks to Newsday's Bob Greene, whose suggestions for organizing a large investigation came to us through the auspices of Investigative Reporters and Editors, Inc.) Not until a week before the book was finally finished did I fail to find a document which I needed; X naturally, it was something I had misfiled myself. Diane also contributed greatly to the Cold War chapter. Richard Sokolow made similar contributions to the Mushroom and Safehouse chapters. His work was solid, and his energy boundless. Jay Peterzell delved deeply into Dr. Cameron's "depatterning" work in Montreal and stayed with it when others might have quit. Jay also did first-rate studies of brainwashing and sensory deprivation. Jim Mintz and Ken Cummins provided excellent assistance in the early research stage. The Center for National Security Studies, under my good friend Robert Borosage, provided physical support and research aid, and I would like to express my appreciation. My thanks also to Morton Halperin who continued the support when he became director of the Center. I also appreciated the help of Penny Bevis, Hannah Delaney, Florence Oliver, Aldora Whitman, Nick Fiore, and Monica Andres.

My sister, Dr. Patricia Greenfield, did excellent work on the CIA's interface with academia and on the Personality Assessment System. I want to acknowledge her contribution to the book and express my thanks and love. There has been a whole galaxy of people who have provided specialized help, and I would like to thank them all: Jeff Kohan, Eddie Becker, Sam Zuckerman, Matthew Messelson, Julian Robinson, Milton Kline, Marty Lee, M. J. Conklin, Alan Scheflin, Bonnie Goldstein, Paul Avery, Bill Mills, John Lilly, Humphrey Osmond, Julie Haggerty, Patrick Oster, Norman Kempster, Bill Richards, Paul Magnusson, Andy Sommer, Mark Cheshire, Sidney Cohen

, Paul Altmeyer, Fred and Elsa Kleiner, Dr. John Cavanagh, and Senator James Abo urezk and his staff.

I sent drafts of the first ten chapters to many of the people I interviewed (and several who refused to be interviewed). My aim was to have them correct any inaccuracies or point out material taken out of context. The comments of those who responded aided me considerably in preparing the final book. My thanks for their assistance to Albert Hofmann, Telford Taylor, Leo Alexander, Walter Langer, John Stockwell, William Hood, Samuel Thompson, Sidney Cohen, Milton Greenblatt, Gordon Wasson, James Moore, Laurence Hinkle, Charles Osgood, John Gittinger (for Chapter 10 only), and all the others who asked not to be identified.

Finally, I would like to express my appreciation to my publisher, Times Books, and especially to my editor John J. Simon. John, Tom Lipscomb, Roger Jellinek, Gyorgyi Voros, and John Gallagher all believed in this book from the beginning and provided outstanding support. Thanks also go to Judith H. McQuown, who copyedited the manuscript, and Rosalyn T. Badalamenti, Times Books' Production Editor, who oversaw the whole production process.

John Marks

Washington, D.C. October 26, 1978

PART I

ORIGINS OF MIND-CONTROL RESEARCH

World War II

On the outskirts of Basel, Switzerland, overlooking the Rhine, lies the worldwide headquarters of the Sandoz drug and chemical empire. There, on the afternoon of April 16, 1943, Dr. Albert Hofmann made an extraordinary discovery by accident. At 37, with close-cropped hair and rimless glasses, Hofmann headed the company's research program to develop marketable drugs out of natural products. He was hard at work in his laboratory that warm April day when a wave of dizziness suddenly overcame him. The strange sensation was not unpleasant, and Hofmann felt almost as though he were drunk.

But he became quite restless. His nerves seemed to run off in different directions. The inebriation was unlike anything he had ever known before. Leaving work early, Hofmann managed a wobbly bicycle-ride home. He lay down and closed his eyes, still unable to shake the dizziness. Now the light of day was disagreeably bright.

With the external world shut out, his mind raced along. He experienced what he would later describe as "an uninterrupted stream of fantastic images of extraordinary plasticity and vividness.... accompanied by an intense, kaleidoscope-like play of colors."

These visions subsided after a few hours, and Hofmann, ever the inquiring scientist, set out to find what caused them. He presumed he had somehow ingested one of the drugs with which he had been working that day, and his prime suspect was d-lysergic acid diethylamide, or LSD, a substance that he himself had first produced in the same lab five years earlier. As part of his search for a circulation stimulant, Hofmann had been examining derivatives of ergot, a fungus that attacks rye.

Ergot had a mysterious, contradictory reputation. In China and some Arab countries, it was thought to have medicinal powers, but in Europe it was associated with the horrible malady from the Middle Ages called St. Anthony's Fire, which struck periodically like the plague. The disease turned fingers and toes into blackened stumps and led to madness and death.

Hofmann guessed that he had absorbed some ergot derivative through his skin, perhaps while changing the filter paper in a suction bottle. To test his theory, he spent three days making up a fresh batch of LSD.

Cautiously he swallowed 250 micrograms (less than 1/100,000 of an ounce). Hofmann planned to take more gradually through the day to obtain a result, since no known drug had any effect on the human body in such infinitesimal amounts. He had no way of knowing that because of LSD's potency, he had already taken several times what would later be termed an ordinary dose.

Unexpectedly, this first speck of LSD took hold after about 40 minutes, and Hofm ann was off on the first self-induced "trip" of modern times.[1] Hofmann recalls he felt "horrific... I was afraid. I feared I was becoming crazy . I had the idea I was out of my body. I thought I had died. I did not know how it would finish. If you know you will come back from this very strange world, only then can you enjoy it." Of course, Hofmann had no way of knowing that he would return. While he had quickly recovered from his accidental trip three days earlier, he did not know how much LSD had caused it or whether the present dose was more than his body could detoxify. His mind kept veering off into an unknown dimension, but he was unable to appreciate much beyond his own terror.

Less than 200 miles from Hofmann's laboratory, doctors connected to the S.S. and Gestapo were doing experiments that led to the testing of mescaline (a drug which has many of the mind-changing qualities of LSD) on prisoners at Dachau. Germany's secret policeman had the notion, completely alien to Hofmann, that they could use drugs like mescaline to bring unwilling people under their control. According to research team member Walter Neff, the goal of the Dachau experiments was "to eliminate the will of the person examined." At Dachau, Nazis took the search for scientific knowledge of military value to its most awful extreme. There, in a closely guarded, fenced-off part of the camp, S.S. doctors studied such questions as the amount of time a downed airman could survive in the North Atlantic in February. Information of this sort was considered important to German security, since skilled pilots were in relatively short supply. So, at Heinrich Himmler's personal order, the doctors at Dachau simply sat by huge tubs of ice water with stopwatches and timed how long it took immersed prisoners to die. In other experiments, under the cover of "aviation medicine," inmates were crushed to death in high-altitude pressure chambers (to learn how high pilots could safely fly), and prisoners were shot, so that special blood coagulants could be tested on their wounds. The mescaline tests at Dachau run by Dr. Kurt Plotner were not nearly so lethal as the others in the "aviation" series, but the drug could still cause grave damage, particularly to anyone who already had some degree of mental instability. The danger was increased by the fact that the mescaline was administered covertly by S.S. men who spiked the prisoners' drinks. Unlike Dr. Hofmann, the subjects had no idea that a drug was causing their extreme disorientation. Many must have feared they had gone stark mad all on their own. Always, the subjects of these experiments were Jews, gypsies, Russians, and other groups on whose lives the Nazis placed little or no value. In no way were any of them true volunteers, although some may have come forward under the delusion that they would receive better treatment.

After the war, Neff told American investigators that the subjects showed a wide variety of reactions. Some became furious; others were melancholy or gay, as if they were drunk. Not surprisingly, "sentiments of hatred and revenge were exposed in every case." Neff noted that the drug caused certain people to reveal their "most intimate secrets." Still, the Germans were not ready to accept mescaline as a substitute for their more physical methods of interrogation. They went on to try hypnosis in combination with the drug, but they apparently never felt confident that they had found a way to assume command of their victim's mind.

Even as the S.S. doctors were carrying on their experiments at Dachau, the Office of Strategic Services (OSS), America's wartime intelligence agency, set up a "truth drug" committee under Dr. Winfred Overholser, head of St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Washington. The committee quickly tried and rejected mescaline, several barbiturates, and scopolamine. Then, during the spring of 1943, the committee decided that Cannabis indica marijuana showed the most promise, and it started a testing program in cooperation with the Manhattan Project, the TOP SECRET effort to build an atomic bomb.

It is not clear why OSS turned to the bomb makers for help, except that, as one former Project official puts it, "Our secret was so great, I guess we were safer than anyone else." Apparently, top Project leaders, who went to incredible lengths ths to preserve security, saw no danger in trying out drugs on their personnel. The Manhattan Project supplied the first dozen test subjects, who were asked to swallow a concentrated, liquid form of marijuana that an American pharmaceutical company furnished in small glass vials. A Project man who was present recalls: "It didn't work the way we wanted.

Apparently the human system would not take it all at once orally. The subjects would lean over and vomit." What is more, they disclosed no secrets, and one subject wound up in the hospital.

Back to the drawing board went the OSS experts. They decided that the best way to administer the marijuana was inhalation of its fumes. Attempts were made to pour the solution on burning charcoal, and an OSS officer named George White (who had already succeeded in knocking himself out with an overdose of the relatively potent substance) tried out the vapor, without sufficient effect, at St. Elizabeth's. Finally, the OSS group discovered a delivery system which had been known for years to jazz musicians and other users: the cigarette. OSS documents reported that smoking a mix of tobacco and the marijuana essence brought on a "state of irresponsibility, causing the subject to be loquacious and free in his impartation of information." The first field test of these marijuana-laced cigarettes took place on May 27, 1943. The subject was one August Del Gracio, who was described in OSS documents as a "notorious New York gangster." [2] George White, an Army captain who had come to OSS from the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, administered the drug by inviting Del Gracio up to his apartment for a smoke and a chat. White had been talking to Del Gracio earlier about securing the Mafia's cooperation to keep Axis agents out of the New York waterfront and to prepare the way for the invasion of Sicily. [3]

Del Gracio had already made it clear to White that he personally had taken part in killing informers who had squealed to the Feds. The gangster was as tough as they came, and if he could be induced to talk under the influence of a truth drug, certainly German prisoners could do so the reasoning went. White plied him with cigarettes until "subject became high and extremely garrulous." Over the next two hours, Del Gracio told the Federal agent about the ins and outs of the drug trade (revealing information so sensitive that the CIA deleted it from the OSS documents it released 34 years later). At one point in the conversation, after Del Gracio had begun to talk, the gangster told White, "Whatever you do, don't ever use any of the stuff I'm telling you." In a subsequent session, White packed the cigarettes with so much marijuana that Del Gracio became unconscious for about an hour. Yet, on the whole the experiment was considered a success in "loosening the subject's tongue."

While members of the truth-drug committee never believed that the concentrated marijuana could compel a person to confess his deepest secrets, they authorized White to push ahead with the testing. On the next stage, he and a Manhattan Project counterintelligence man borrowed 15 to 18 thick dossiers from the FBI and went off to try the marijuana on suspected Communist soldiers stationed in military camps outside Atlanta, Memphis, and New Orleans. According to White's Manhattan Project sidekick, a Harvard Law graduate and future judge, they worked out a standard interrogation technique: Before we went in, George and I would buy cigarettes, remove them from the bottom of the pack, use a hypodermic needle to put in the fluid, and leave the cigarettes in a shot glass to dry. Then, we resealed the pack.... We sat down with a particular soldier and tried to win his confidence. We would say something like "This is better than being overseas and getting shot at," and we would try to break them. We started asking questions from their [FBI] folder, and we would let them see that we had the folder on them... We had a pitcher of ice water on the table, and we knew the drug had taken effect when they reached for a glass. The stuff actually worked.... Everyone but one and he didn't smoke gave us more information than we had before.

The Manhattan Project lawyer remembers this swing through the South with George White as a "good time." The two men ate in the best restaurants and took in all the sights. "George was quite a guy," he says. "At the Roosevelt Hotel in New Or leans after we had interviewed our men, we were lying on the beds when George took out his pistol and shot his initials into the molding that ran along the ceiling. He used his .22 automatic, equipped with a silencer, and he emptied several clips." Asked if he tried out the truth drug himself, the lawyer says, "Yes. The cigarettes gave you a feeling of walking a couple of feet off the floor. I had a pleasant sensation of well-being. ... The fellows from my office wouldn't take a cigarette from me for the rest of the war."

Since World War II, the United States government, led by the Central Intelligence Agency, has searched secretly for ways to control human behavior. This book is about that search, which had its origins in World War II. The CIA programs were not only an extension of the OSS quest for a truth drug, but they also echoed such events as the Nazi experiments at Dachau and Albert Hofmann's discovery of LSD.

By probing the inner reaches of consciousness, Hofmann's research took him to the very frontiers of knowledge. As never before in history, the warring powers sought ideas from scientists capable of reaching those frontiers—ideas that could make the difference between victory and defeat. While Hofmann himself remained aloof, in the Swiss tradition, other scientists, like Albert Einstein, helped turn the abstractions of the laboratory into incredibly destructive weapons. Jules Verne's notions of spaceships touching the moon stopped being absurd when Wernher von Braun's rockets started pounding London. With their creations, the scientists reached beyond the speculations of science fiction. Never before had their discoveries been so breathtaking and so frightening. Albert Hofmann's work touched upon the fantasies of the mind—accessible, in ancient legends, to witches and wizards who used spells and potions to bring people under their sway. In the early scientific age, the dream of controlling the brain took on a modern form in Mary Shelley's creation, Dr. Frankenstein's monster. The dream would be updated again during the Cold War era to become the Manchurian Candidate, the assassin whose mind was controlled by a hostile government.[4] Who could say for certain that such a fantasy would not be turned into a reality like Verne's rocket stories or Einstein's calculations? And who should be surprised to learn that government agencies—specifically the CIA—would swoop down on Albert Hofmann's lab in an effort to harness the power over the mind that LSD seemed to hold?

From the Dachau experiments came the cruelty that man was capable of heaping upon his fellows in the name of advancing science and helping his country gain advantage in war. To say that the Dachau experiments are object lessons of how far people can stretch ends to justify means is to belittle by cliché what occurred in the concentration camps. Nothing the CIA ever did in its postwar search for mind-control technology came close to the callous killing of the Nazi "aviation research."

Nevertheless, in their attempts to find ways to manipulate people, Agency officials and their agents crossed many of the same ethical barriers. They experimented with dangerous and unknown techniques on people who had no idea what was happening. They systematically violated the free will and mental dignity of their subjects, and, like the Germans, they chose to victimize special groups of people whose existence they considered, out of prejudice and convenience, less worthy than their own. Wherever their extreme experiments went, the CIA sponsors picked for subjects their own equivalents of the Nazis' Jews and gypsies: mental patients, prostitutes, foreigners, drug addicts, and prisoners, often from minority ethnic groups.

In the postwar era, American officials straddled the ethical and the cutthroat approaches to scientific research. After an Allied tribunal had convicted the first echelon of surviving Nazi war criminals—the Grings and Speers—American prosecutors charged the Dachau doctors with "crimes against humanity" at a second Nuremberg trial. None of the German scientists expressed remorse. Most claimed that someone else had carried out the vilest experiments. All said that issues of moral and personal responsibility lity are moot in state-sponsored research. What is critical, testified Dr. Karl Brandt, Hitler's personal physician, is "whether the experiment is important or unimportant." Asked his attitude toward killing human beings in the course of medical research, Brandt replied, "Do you think that one can obtain any worthwhile fundamental results without a definite toll of lives?" The judges at Nuremberg rejected such defenses and put forth what came to be known as the Nuremberg Code on scientific research.[5] Its main points were simple: Researchers must obtain full voluntary consent from all subjects; experiments should yield fruitful results for the good of society that can be obtained in no other way; researchers should not conduct tests where death or serious injury might occur, "except, perhaps" when the supervising doctors also serve as subjects. The judges all Americans sentenced seven of the Germans, including Dr. Brandt, to death by hanging. Nine others received long prison sentences. Thus, the U.S. government put its full moral force behind the idea that there were limits on what scientists could do to human subjects, even when a country's security was thought to hang in the balance.

The Nuremberg Code has remained official American policy ever since 1946, but, even before the verdicts were in, special U.S. investigating teams were sifting through the experimental records at Dachau for information of military value. The report of one such team found that while part of the data was "inaccurate," some of the conclusions, if confirmed, would be "an important complement to existing knowledge." Military authorities sent the records, including a description of the mescaline and hypnosis experiments, back to the United States. None of the German mind-control research was ever made public.

Immediately after the war, large political currents began to shift in the world, as they always do. Allies became enemies and enemies became allies. Other changes were fresh and yet old. In the United States, the new Cold War against communism carried with it a piercing sense of fear and a sweeping sense of mission at least as far as American leaders were concerned. Out of these feelings and out of that overriding American faith in advancing technology came the CIA's attempts to tame hostile minds and make spy fantasies real. Experiments went forward and the CIA's scientists, sometimes obsessed, kept going back to their laboratories for one last adjustment. Some theories were crushed, while others emerged in unexpected ways that would have a greater impact outside the CIA than in the world of covert operations. Only one aspect remained constant during the quarter-century of active research: The CIA's interest in controlling the human mind had to remain absolutely secret.

World War II provided more than the grand themes of the CIA's behavioral programs. It also became the formative life experience of the principal CIA officials and, indeed, of the CIA itself as an institution. The secret derring-do of the OSS was new to the United States, and the ways of the OSS would grow into the ways of the CIA. OSS leaders would have their counterparts later in the Agency. CIA officials tended to have known the OSS men, to think like them, to copy their methods, and even, in some cases, to be the same people. When Agency officials wanted to launch their massive effort for mind control, for instance, they got out the old OSS documents and went about their goal in many of the same ways the OSS had. OSS leaders enlisted outside scientists; Agency officials also went to the most prestigious ones in academia and industry, soliciting aid for the good of the country. They even approached the same George White who had shot his initials in the hotel ceiling while on OSS assignment.

Years later, White's escapades with OSS and CIA would carry with them a humor clearly unintended at the time. To those directly involved, influencing human behavior was a deadly serious business, but qualities like bumbling and pure craziness shine through in hindsight. In the CIA's campaign, some of America's most distinguished behavioral scientists would stick all kinds of drugs and wires into their experimental subjects, often dismissing the obviously harmful effects with theories reminiscent of the learned nineteenth-century physicians who bled their patients with leeches and belittled the ignorance of anyone who questioned the te chnique. If the schemes of these scientists to control the mind had met with more success, they would be much less amusing. But so far, at least, the human spirit has apparently kept winning. That if anything is the saving grace of the mind-control campaign.

World War II signaled the end of American isolation and innocence, and the United States found it had a huge gap to close, with its enemies and allies alike, in applying underhanded tactics to war. Unlike Britain, which for hundreds of years had used covert operations to hold her empire together, the United States had no tradition of using subversion as a secret instrument of government policy. The Germans, the French, the Russians, and nearly everyone else had long been involved in this game, although no one seemed as good at it as the British.

Clandestine lobbying by British agents in the United States led directly to President Franklin Roosevelt's creation of the organization that became OSS in 1942. This was the first American agency set up to wage secret, unlimited war. Roosevelt placed it under the command of a Wall Street lawyer and World War I military hero, General William "Wild Bill" Donovan. A burly, vigorous Republican millionaire with great intellectual curiosity, Donovan started as White House intelligence adviser even before Pearl Harbor, and he had direct access to the President.

Learning at the feet of the British who made available their expertise, if not all their secrets, Donovan put together an organization where nothing had existed before. A Columbia College and Columbia Law graduate himself, he tended to turn to the gentlemanly preserves of the Eastern establishment for recruits. (The initials OSS were said to stand for "Oh So Social.") Friends or friends of friends could be trusted. "Old boys" were the stalwarts of the British secret service, and, as with most other aspects of OSS, the Americans followed suit.

One of Donovan's new recruits was Richard Helms, a young newspaper executive then best known for having gained an interview with Adolf Hitler in 1936 while working for United Press. Having gone to Le Rosey, the same Swiss prep school as the Shah of Iran, and then on to clubby Williams College Helms moved easily among the young OSS men. He was already more taciturn than the jovial Donovan, but he was equally ambitious and skilled as a judge of character. For Helms, OSS spywork began a lifelong career. He would become the most important sponsor of mind-control research within the CIA, nurturing and promoting it throughout his steady climb to the top position in the Agency.

Like every major wartime official from President Roosevelt down, General Donovan believed that World War II was in large measure a battle of science and organization. The idea was to mobilize science for defense, and the Roosevelt administration set up a costly, intertwining network of research programs to deal with everything from splitting the atom to preventing mental breakdowns in combat. Donovan named Boston industrialist Stanley Lovell to head OSS Research and Development and to be the secret agency's liaison with the government scientific community.

A Cornell graduate and a self-described "saucepan chemist," Lovell was a confident energetic man with a particular knack for coming up with offbeat ideas and selling them to others. Like most of his generation, he was an outspoken patriot. He wrote in his diary shortly after Pearl Harbor: "As James Hilton said, 'Once at war, to reason is treason.' My job is clear to do all that is in me to help America."

General Donovan minced no words in laying out what he expected of Lovell: "I need every subtle device and every underhanded trick to use against the Germans and Japanese by our own people but especially by the underground resistance programs in all the occupied countries. You'll have to invent them all, Lovell, because you're going to be my man." Thus Lovell recalled his marching orders from Donovan, which he instantly received on being introduced to the blustery, hyperactive OSS chief. Lovell had never met anyone with Donovan's personal magnetism.

Lovell quickly turned to some of the leading lights in the academic and private sectors. A special group called Division 19 within James Conant's National Defense Research Committee was set up to produce "miscellaneous weapons" for OSS and B

British intelligence. Lovell's strategy, he later wrote, was "to stimulate the Peck's Bad Boy beneath the surface of every American scientist and to say to him, 'Throw all your normal law-abiding concepts out the window. Here's a chance to raise merry hell.'"

Dr. George Kistiakowsky, the Harvard chemist who worked on explosives research during the war (and who became science adviser to Presidents Eisenhower and Kennedy) remembers Stanley Lovell well: "Stan came to us and asked us to develop ways for camouflaging explosives which could be smuggled into enemy countries." Kistiakowsky and an associate came up with a substance which was dubbed "Aunt Jemima" because it looked and tasted like pancake mix. Says Kistiakowsky: "You could bake bread or other things out of it. I personally took it to a high-level meeting at the War Department and ate cookies in front of all those characters to show them what a wonderful invention it was. All you had to do was attach a powerful detonator, and it exploded with the force of dynamite." Thus disguised, "Aunt Jemima" could be slipped into occupied lands. It was credited with blowing up at least one major bridge in China.

Lovell encouraged OSS behavioral scientists to find something that would offend Japanese cultural sensibilities. His staff anthropologists reported back that nothing was so shameful to the Japanese soldier as his bowel movements. Lovell then had the chemists work up a skatole compound which duplicated the odor of diarrhea. It was loaded into collapsible tubes, flown to China, and distributed to children in enemy-occupied cities. When a Japanese officer appeared on a crowded street, the kids were encouraged to slip up behind him and squirt the liquid on the seat of his pants. Lovell named the product "Who? Me?" and he credited it with costing the Japanese "face."

Unlike most weapons, "Who? Me?" was not designed to kill or maim. It was a "harassment substance" designed to lower the morale of individual Japanese. The inspiration came from academicians who tried to make a science of human behavior. During World War II, the behavioral sciences were still very much in their infancy, but OSS well before most of the outside world recognized their potential in warfare. Psychology and psychiatry, sociology, and anthropology all seemed to offer insights that could be exploited to manipulate the enemy.

General Donovan himself believed that the techniques of psychoanalysis might be turned on Adolf Hitler to get a better idea of "the things that made him tick," as Donovan put it. Donovan gave the job of being the Fuhrer's analyst to Walter Langer, a Cambridge, Massachusetts psychoanalyst whose older brother William had taken leave from a chair of history at Harvard to head OSS Research and Analysis.[6] Langer protested that a study of Hitler based on available data would be highly uncertain and that conventional psychiatric and psychoanalytic methods could not be used without direct access to the patient. Donovan was not the sort to be deterred by such details. He told Langer to go ahead anyway.

With the help of a small research staff, Langer looked through everything he could find on Hitler and interviewed a number of people who had known the German leader. Aware of the severe limitations on his information, but left no choice by General Donovan, Langer plowed ahead and wrote up a final study. It pegged Hitler as a "neurotic psychopath" and proceeded to pick apart the Fuhrer's psyche. Langer, since retired to Florida, believes he came "pretty close" to describing the real Adolf Hitler. He is particularly proud of his predictions that the Nazi leader would become increasingly disturbed as Germany suffered more and more defeats and that he would commit suicide rather than face capture.

One reason for psychoanalyzing Hitler was to uncover vulnerabilities that could be covertly exploited. Stanley Lovell seized upon one of Langer's ideas that Hitler might have feminine tendencies and got permission from the OSS hierarchy to see if he could push the Fuhrer over the gender line.[7] "The hope was that his moustache would fall off and his voice become soprano," Lovell wrote. Lovell used 0

SS's agent network to try to slip female sex hormones into Hitler's food, but no thing apparently came of it. Nor was there ever any payoff to other Lovell schemes to blind Hitler permanently with mustard gas or to use a drug to exacerbate his suspected epilepsy. The main problem in these operations all of which were tried was to get Hitler to take the medicine. Failure of the delivery schemes also kept Hitler alive

OSS was simultaneously trying to poison him.[8]

Without question, murdering a man was a decisive way to influence his behavior, and OSS scientists developed an arsenal of chemical and biological poisons that included the incredibly potent botulinus toxin, whose delivery system was a gelatin capsule smaller than the head of a pin. Lovell and his associates also realized there were less drastic ways to manipulate an enemy's behavior, and they came up with a line of products to cause sickness, itching, baldness, diarrhea, and/or the odor thereof. They had less success finding a drug to compel truth telling, but it was not for lack of trying.

Chemical and biological substances had been used in wartime long before OSS came on the scene. Both sides had used poison gas in World War I; during the early part of World War II, the Japanese had dropped deadly germs on China and caused epidemics; and throughout the war, the Allies and Axis powers alike had built up chemical and biological warfare (CBW) stockpiles, whose main function turned out, in the end, to be deterring the other side. Military men tended to look on CBW as a way of destroying whole armies and even populations. Like the world's other secret services, OSS individualized CBW and made it into a way of selectively but secretly embarrassing, disorienting, incapacitating, injuring, or killing an enemy.

As diversified as were Lovell's scientific duties for OSS, they were narrow in comparison with those of his main counterpart in the CIA's postwar mind-control program, Dr. Sidney Gottlieb. Gottlieb would preside over investigations that ranged from advanced research in amnesia by electroshock to dragnet searches through the jungles of Latin America for toxic leaves and barks. Fully in the tradition of making Hitler moustacheless, Gottlieb's office would devise a scheme to make Fidel Castro's beard fall out; like Lovell, Gottlieb would personally provide operators with deadly poisons to assassinate foreign leaders like the Congo's Patrice Lumumba, and he would be equally at ease discussing possible applications of new research in neurology. On a much greater scale than Lovell's, Gottlieb would track down every conceivable gimmick that might give one person leverage over another's mind. Gottlieb would preside over arcane fields from handwriting analysis to stress creation, and he would rise through the Agency along with his bureaucratic patron, Richard Helms.

Early in the war, General Donovan got another idea from the British, whose psychologists and psychiatrists had devised a testing program to predict the performance of military officers. Donovan thought such a program might help OSS sort through the masses of recruits who were being rushed through training. To create an assessment system for Americans, Donovan called in Harvard psychology professor Henry "Harry" Murray. In 1938 Murray had written Explorations of Personality, a notable book which laid out a whole battery of tests that could be used to size up the personalities of individuals. "Spying is attractive to loonies," states Murray. "Psychopaths, who are people who spend their lives making up stories, revel in the field." The program's prime objective, according to Murray, was keeping out the crazies, as well as the "sloths, irritants, bad actors, and free talkers."

Always in a hurry, Donovan gave Murray and a distinguished group of colleagues only 15 days until the first candidates arrived to be assessed. In the interim, they took over a spacious estate outside Washington as their headquarters. In a series of hurried meetings, they put together an assessment system that combined German and British methods with Murray's earlier research. It tested a recruit's ability to stand up under pressure, to be a leader, to hold liquor, to lie skillfully, and to read a person's character by the nature of his clothing.

More than 30 years after the war, Murray remains modest in his claims for the as assessment system, saying that it was only an aid in weeding out the "horrors" among OSS candidates. Nevertheless, the secret agency's leaders believed in its results, and Murray's system became a fixture in OSS, testing Americans and foreign agents alike. Some of Murray's young behavioral scientists, like John Gardner,[9] would go on to become prominent in public affairs, and, more importantly, the OSS assessment program would be recognized as a milestone in American psychology. It was the first systematic effort to evaluate an individual's personality in order to predict his future behavior. After the war, personality assessment would become a new field in itself, and some of Murray's assistants would go on to establish OSS-like systems at large corporations, starting with AT&T. They also would set up study programs at universities, beginning with the University of California at Berkeley.[10] As would happen repeatedly with the CIA's mind-control research, OSS was years ahead of public developments in behavioral theory and application.

In the postwar years, Murray would be superseded by a young Oklahoma psychologist John Gittinger, who would rise in the CIA on the strength of his ideas about how to make a hard science out of personality assessment and how to use it to manipulate people. Gittinger would build an office within CIA that refined both Murray's assessment function and Walter Langer's indirect analysis of foreign leaders. Gittinger's methods would become an integral part of everyday Agency operations, and he would become Sid Gottlieb's protégé.

Stanley Lovell reasoned that a good way to kill Hitler and the OSS man was always looking for ideas would be to hypnotically control a German prisoner to hate the Gestapo and the Nazi regime and then to give the subject a hypnotic suggestion to assassinate the Führer. The OSS candidate would be let loose in Germany where he would take the desired action, "being under a compulsion that might not be denied," as Lovell wrote.

Lovell sought advice on whether this scheme would work from New York psychiatrist Lawrence Kubie and from the famed Menninger brothers, Karl and William. The Menningers reported that the weight of the evidence showed hypnotism to be incapable of making people do anything that they would not otherwise do. Equally negative, Dr. Kubie added that if a German prisoner had a logical reason to kill Hitler or anyone else, he would not need hypnotism to motivate him.

Lovell and his coworkers apparently accepted this skeptical view of hypnosis, as did the overwhelming majority of psychologists and psychiatrists in the country. At the time, hypnosis was considered a fringe activity, and there was little recognition of either its validity or its usefulness for any purpose let alone covert operations. Yet there were a handful of serious experimenters in the field who believed in its military potential. The most vocal partisan of this view was the head of the Psychology Department at Colgate University, George "Esty" Estabrooks. Since the early 1930s, Estabrooks had periodically ventured out from his sleepy upstate campus to advise the military on applications of hypnotism.

Estabrooks acknowledged that hypnosis did not work on everyone and that only one person in five made a good enough subject to be placed in a deep trance, or state of somnambulism. He believed that only these subjects could be induced to do things against their apparent will as reveal secrets or commit crimes. He had watched respected members of the community make fools of themselves in the hands of stage hypnotists, and he had compelled his own students to reveal fraternity secrets and the details of private love affairs all of which the subjects presumably did not want to do.

Still his experience was limited. Estabrooks realized that the only certain way to know whether a person would commit a crime like murder under hypnosis was to have the person kill someone. Unwilling to settle the issue on his own by trying the experiment, he felt that government sanction of the process would relieve the hypnotist of personal responsibility. "Any 'accidents' that might occur during the experiments will simply be charged to profit and loss," he wrote, "a very trifling portion of that enormous wastage in human life which is part and parcel of war."

After Pearl Harbor, Estabrooks offered his ideas to OSS, but they were not accep ted by anyone in government willing to carry them to their logical conclusion. He was reduced to writing books about the potential use of hypnotism in warfare. Cassandra-like, he tried to warn America of the perils posed by hypnotic control. His 1945 novel, Death in the Mind, concerned a series of seemingly treasonable acts committed by Allied personnel: an American submarine captain torpedoes one of our own battleships, and the beautiful heroine starts acting in an irrational way which serves the enemy. After a perilous investigation, secret agent Johnny Evans learns that the Germans have been hypnotizing Allied personnel and conditioning them to obey Nazi commands. Evans and his cohorts, shaken by the many ways hypnotism can be used against them, set up elaborate countermeasures and then cannot resist going on the offensive. Objections are heard from the heroine, who by this time has been brutally and rather graphically tortured. She complains that "doing things to people's minds" is "a loathsome way to fight." Her qualms are brushed aside by Johnny Evans, her lover and boss. He sets off after the Germans to tamper with their minds; Make them traitors; Make them work for us."

In the aftermath of the war, as the U.S. national security apparatus was being constructed, the leaders of the Central Intelligence Agency would adopt Johnny Evans' mission almost in those very words. Richard Helms, Sid Gottlieb, John Gittinger, George White, and many others would undertake a far-flung and complicated assault on the human mind. In hypnosis and many other fields, scientists even more eager than George Estabrooks would seek CIA approval for the kinds of experiments they would not dare perform on their own. Sometimes the Agency men concurred; on other occasions, they reserved such experiments for themselves. They would tamper with many minds and inevitably cause some to be damaged. In the end, they would minimize and hide their deeds, and they would live to see doubts raised about the health of their own minds.

Notes

The information on Albert Hofmann's first LSD trip and background on LSD came from an interview by the author with Hofmann, a paper by Hofmann called "The Discovery of LSD and Subsequent investigations on Naturally Occurring Hallucinogens," another interview with Hofmann by Michael Horowitz printed in the June 1976 High Times magazine, and from a CIA document on LSD produced by the Office of Scientific Intelligence, August 30, 1955, titled "The Strategic Medical Significance of LSD-25." Information on the German mescaline and hypnosis experiments at Dachau came from "Technical Report no. 331-45, German Aviation Research at the Dachau Concentration Camp," October, 1945, US Naval Technical Mission in Europe, found in the papers of Dr. Henry Beecher. Additional information came from Trials of War Criminals Before the Nuremberg Tribunal, the book Doctors of Infamy by Alexander Mitscherlich and Fred Mielke (New York: H. Schuman, 1949), interviews with prosecution team members Telford Taylor, Leo Alexander, and James McHaney, and an article by Dr. Leo Alexander, "Sociopsychologic Structure of the SS," Archives of Neurology and Psychiatry, May, 1948, Vol. 59, pp. 622-34.

The OSS experience in testing marijuana was described in interviews with several former Manhattan Project counterintelligence men, an OSS document dated June 21, 1943, Subject: Development of "truth drug," given the CIA identification number A/B, I, 12/1; from document A/B, I, 64/34, undated, Subject: Memorandum Relative to the use of truth drug in interrogation; document dated June 2, 1943, Subject: Memorandum on T. D. A "confidential memorandum," dated April 4, 1954, found in the papers of George White, also was helpful. The quote on US prisoners passing through Manchuria came from document 19, 18 June 1953, Subject: ARTICHOKE Conference.

The information on Stanley Lovell came from his book, Of Spies and Strategems (Englewood Cliffs, N.J.: Prentice-Hall, 1963), from interviews with his son Richard, a perusal of his remaining papers, interviews with George Kistiakowsky and several OSS veterans, and from "Science in World War II, the Office of Scientific Research and Development" in Chemistry: A History of the Chemistry Components of the National Defense Research Committee, edited by W. A. Noyes, Jr. (Boston: Little, Brown & Company, 1948). Dr. Walter Langer provided information about his psychoanalytic portrait of Hitler, as did his book, The Mind of Adolf Hitler (New York: Basic Books, 1972). Dr. Henry Murray also gave an interview, as did several OSS men who had been through his assessment course. Murray's work is described at length in a book published after the war by the OSS Assessment staff, Assessment of Men (New York: Rinehart & Company, 1948). Material on George Estabrooks came from his books, Hypnotism (New York: E. P. Dutton and Co., 1945) and Death in the Mind, co-authored with Richard Lockridge (New York: E. P. Dutton, 1945), and interviews with his daughter, Doreen Estabrooks Michl, former colleagues, and Dr. Milton Kline.

Footnotes

1. While Hofmann specifically used the word "trip" in a 1977 interview to describe his consciousness-altering experience, the word obviously had no such meaning in 1943 and is used here anachronistically.
2. Del Gracio's name was deleted by the CIA from the OSS document that described the incident, but his identity was learned from the papers of George White, whose widow donated them to Foothills College in Los Altos, California. CIA officials cut virtually all the names from the roughly 16,000 pages of its own papers and the few score pages from OSS that it released to me under the Freedom of Information Act. However, as in this case, many of the names could be found through collateral sources.
3. Naval intelligence officers eventually made a deal in which mob leaders promised to cooperate, and as a direct result, New York Governor Thomas Dewey ordered Del Gracio's chief, boss of bosses, Charles "Lucky" Luciano freed from jail in 1946.
4. The term "Manchurian Candidate" came into the language in 1959 when author Richard Condon made it the title of his best-selling novel that later became a popular movie starring Laurence Harvey and Frank Sinatra. The story was about a joint Soviet-Chinese plot to take an American soldier captured in Korea, condition him at a special brainwashing center located in Manchuria, and create a remote-controlled assassin who was supposed to kill the President of the United States. Condon consulted with a wide variety of experts while researching the book, and some inside sources may well have filled him in on the gist of a discussion that took place at a 1953 meeting at the CIA on behavior control. Said one participant, "... individuals who had come out of North Korea across the Soviet Union to freedom recently apparently had a blank period of disorientation while passing through a special zone in Manchuria." The CIA and military men at this session promised to seek more information, but the matter never came up again in either the documents released by the Agency or in the interviews done for this book.
5. The Code was suggested in essentially its final form by prosecution team consultant, Dr. Leo Alexander, a Boston psychiatrist.
6. Four months before Pearl Harbor, Donovan had enlisted Walter Langer to put together a nationwide network of analysts to study the morale of the country's young men, who, it was widely feared, were not enthusiastic about fighting a foreign war. Pearl Harbor seemed to solve this morale problem, but Langer stayed with Donovan as a part-time psychoanalytic consultant.
7. Langer wrote that Hitler was "masochistic in the extreme inasmuch as he derives sexual pleasure from punishment inflicted on his own body. There is every reason to suppose that during his early years, instead of identifying himself with his father as most boys do, he identified with his mother. This was perhaps easier for him than for most boys since, as we have seen, there is a large feminine component in his physical makeup.... His extreme sentimentality, his emotionality, his occasional softness, and his weeping, even after he became Chancellor, may be regarded as manifestations of a fundamental pattern that undoubtedly had its origin in his relationship to his mother."
8. Although historians have long known that OSS men had been in touch with the G erman officers who tried to assassinate Hitler in 1944, the fact that OSS independently was trying to murder him has eluded scholars of the period. Stanley Lovell gave away the secret in his 1963 book, Of Spies and Strategems, but he used such casual and obscure words that the researchers apparently did not notice. Lovell wrote: "I supplied now and then a carbamate or other quietus medication, all to be injected into der Fhrer's carrots, beets, or whatever." A "quietus medicine" is a generic term for a lethal poison, of which carbamates are one type.

9. Gardner, a psychologist teaching at Mount Holyoke College, helped Murray set up the original program and went on to open the West Coast OSS assessment site at a converted beach club in San Juan Capistrano. After the war, he would become Secretary of HEW in the Johnson administration and founder of Common Cause.

10. Murray is not at all enthusiastic with the spinoffs. "Some of the things done with it turn your stomach," he declares.

CIA officials started preliminary work on drugs and hypnosis shortly after the Agency's creation in 1947, but the behavior-control program did not really get going until the Hungarian government put Josef Cardinal Mindszenty on trial in 1949. With a glazed look in his eyes, Mindszenty confessed to crimes of treason he apparently did not commit. His performance recalled the Moscow purge trials of 1937 and 1938 at which tough and dedicated party apparatchiks had meekly pleaded guilty to long series of improbable offenses. These and a string of postwar trials in other Eastern European countries seemed staged, eerie, and unreal. CIA men felt they had to know how the Communists had rendered the defendants zombielike. In the Mindszenty case, a CIA Security Memorandum declared that "some unknown force" had controlled the Cardinal, and the memo speculated that the communist authorities had used hypnosis on him. In the summer of 1949, the Agency's head of Scientific Intelligence made a special trip to Western Europe to find out more about what the Soviets were doing and "to apply special methods of interrogation for the purpose of evaluation of Russian practices." In other words, fearful that the communists might have used drugs and hypnosis on prisoners, a senior CIA official used exactly the same techniques on refugees and returned prisoners from Eastern Europe. On returning to the United States, this official recommended two courses of action: first, that the Agency consider setting up an escape operation to free Mindszenty; and second, that the CIA train and send to Europe a team skilled in special interrogation methods of the type he had tried out in Europe.

By the spring of 1950, several other CIA branches were contemplating the operational use of hypnosis. The Office of Security, whose main job was to protect Agency personnel and facilities from enemy penetration, moved to centralize all activity in this and other behavioral fields. The Security chief, Sheffield Edwards, a former army colonel who a decade later would personally handle joint CIA-Mafia operations, took the initiative by calling a meeting of all interested Agency parties and proposing that interrogation teams be formed under Security's command. Security would use the teams to check out agents and defectors for the whole CIA. Each team would consist of a psychiatrist, a polygraph (lie detector) expert trained in hypnosis, and a technician. Edwards agreed not to use the teams operationally without the permission of a high-level committee. He called the project BLUEBIRD, a code name which, like all Agency names, had no significance except perhaps to the person who chose it. Edwards classified the program TOP SECRET and stressed the extraordinary need for secrecy. On April 20, 1950, CIA director Roscoe Hillenkoetter approved BLUEBIRD and authorized the use of unvouchered funds to pay for its most sensitive areas. The CIA's behavior-control program now had a bureaucratic structure.

The chief of Scientific Intelligence attended the original BLUEBIRD meeting in Sheffield Edwards' office and assured those present that his office would keep trying to gather all possible data on foreign, particularly Russian, efforts in the behavioral field. Not long afterward, his representative arranged to inspect the Nuremberg Tribunal records to see if they co ntained anything useful to BLUEBIRD. According to a CIA psychologist who looked over the German research, the Agency did not find much of specific help. "It was a real horror story, but we learned what human beings were capable of," he recalls. "There were some experiments on pain, but they were so mixed up with sadism as not to be useful.... How the victim coped was very interesting." At the beginning, at least, there was cooperation between the scientists and the interrogators in the CIA.

Researchers from Security (who had no special expertise but who were experienced in police work) and researchers from Scientific Intelligence (who lacked operational background but who had academic training) pored jointly over all the open literature and secret reports. They quickly realized that the only way to build an effective defense against mind control was to understand its offensive possibilities. The line between offense and defense if it ever existed soon became so blurred as to be meaningless. Nearly every Agency document stressed goals like "controlling an individual to the point where he will do our bidding against his will and even against such fundamental laws of nature as self-preservation." On reading one such memo, an Agency officer wrote to his boss: "If this is supposed to be covered up as a defensive feasibility study, it's pretty damn transparent."

Three months after the Director approved BLUEBIRD, the first team traveled to Japan to try out behavioral techniques on human subjects probably suspected double agents. The three men arrived in Tokyo in July 1950, about a month after the start of the Korean War. No one needed to impress upon them the importance of their mission. The Security Office ordered them to conceal their true purpose from even the U.S. military authorities with whom they worked in Japan, using the cover that they would be performing "intensive polygraph" work. In stifling, debilitating heat and humidity, they tried out combinations of the depressant sodium amytal with the stimulant benzedrine on each of four subjects, the last two of whom also received a second stimulant, picrotoxin. They also tried to induce amnesia. The team considered the tests successful, but the CIA documents available on the trip give only the sketchiest outline of what happened. [1] Then around October 1950, the BLUEBIRD team used "advanced" techniques on 25 subjects, apparently North Korean prisoners of war.

By the end of that year, a Security operator, Morse Allen, had become the head of the BLUEBIRD program. Forty years old at the time, Allen had spent most of his earlier career rooting out the domestic communist threat, starting in the late 1930s when he had joined the Civil Service Commission and set up its first security files on communists. ("He knows their methods," wrote a CIA colleague.) During World War II, Allen had served with Naval intelligence, first pursuing leftists in New York and then landing with the Marines on Okinawa. After the war, he went to the State Department, only to leave in the late 1940s because he felt the Department was whitewashing certain communist cases. He soon joined the CIA's Office of Security. A suspicious man by inclination and training, Allen took nothing at face value. Like all counterintelligence or security operators, his job was to show why things are not what they seem to be. He was always thinking ahead and behind, punching holes in surface realities. Allen had no academic training for behavioral research (although he did take a short course in hypnotism, a subject that fascinated him). He saw the BLUEBIRD job as one that called for studying every last method the communists might use against the United States and figuring out ways to counter them.

The CIA had schooled Morse Allen in one field which in the CIA's early days became an important part of covert operations: the use of the polygraph. Probably more than any intelligence service in the world, the Agency developed the habit of strapping its foreign agents and eventually, its own employees into the "box." The polygraph measures physiological changes that might show lying: heartbeat, blood pressure, perspiration, and the like. It has never been foolproof. In 1949 the Office of Security estimated that it worked successfully on seven out of eight cases, a very high fraction but not one high enough for those in search of certainty. A psychopathic liar, a hypnotized person, or a specially trained professional can "beat" the machine. Moreover, the skill of the person running the polygraph aph and asking the questions determines how well the device will work. "A good operator can make brilliant use of the polygraph without plugging it in," claims one veteran CIA case officer. Others maintain only somewhat less extravagantly that its chief value is to deter agents tempted to switch loyalties or reveal secrets. The power of the machine real and imagined to detect infidelity and dishonesty can be an intimidating factor.[2] Nevertheless, the polygraph cannot compel truth. Like Pinocchio's nose, it only indicates lying. In addition, the machine requires enough physical control over the subject to strap him in. For years, the CIA tried to overcome this limitation by developing a "super" polygraph that could be aimed from afar or concealed in a chair.

In this field, as in many others, no behavior control scheme was too farfetched to investigate, and Agency scientists did make some progress.

In December 1950, Morse Allen told his boss, Paul Gaynor, a retired brigadier general with a long background in counterintelligence and interrogation that he had heard of experiments with an "electro-sleep" machine in a Richmond, Virginia hospital. Such an invention appealed to Allen because it supposedly put people to sleep without shock or convulsions. The BLUEBIRD team had been using drugs to bring on a state similar to a hypnotic trance, and Allen hoped this machine would allow an operator to put people into deep sleep without having to resort to chemicals. In theory, all an operator had to do was to attach the electrode-tipped wires to the subject's head and let the machine do the rest. It cost about $250 and was about twice the size of a table-model dictating machine. "Although it would not be feasible to use it on any of our own people because there is at least a theoretical danger of temporary brain damage," Morse Allen wrote, "it would possibly be of value in certain areas in connection with POW interrogation or on individuals of interest to this Agency." The machine never worked well enough to get into the testing stage for the CIA.

At the end of 1951, Allen talked to a famed psychiatrist (whose name, like most of the others, the CIA has deleted from the documents released) about a gruesome but more practical technique. This psychiatrist, a cleared Agency consultant, reported that electroshock treatments could produce amnesia for varying lengths of time and that he had been able to obtain information from patients as they came out of the stupor that followed shock treatments. He also reported that a lower setting of the Reiter electroshock machine produced an "excruciating pain" that, while nontherapeutic, could be effective as "a third degree method" to make someone talk. Morse Allen asked if the psychiatrist had ever taken advantage of the "groggy" period that followed normal electroshock to gain hypnotic control of his patients. No, replied the psychiatrist, but he would try it in the near future and report back to the Agency. The psychiatrist also mentioned that continued electroshock treatments could gradually reduce a subject to the "vegetable level," and that these treatments could not be detected unless the subject was given EEG tests within two weeks. At the end of a memo laying out this information, Allen noted that portable, battery-driven electroshock machines had come on the market.

Shortly after this Morse Allen report, the Office of Scientific Intelligence recommended that this same psychiatrist be given $100,000 in research funds "to develop electric shock and hypnotic techniques." While Allen thought this subject worth pursuing, he had some qualms about the ultimate application of the shock treatments: "The objections would, of course, apply to the use of electroshock if the end result was creation of a 'vegetable.' [I] believe that these techniques should not be considered except in gravest emergencies, and neutralization by confinement and/or removal from the area would be far more appropriate and certainly safer."

In 1952 the Office of Scientific Intelligence proposed giving another private doctor $100,000 to develop BLUEBIRD-related "neurosurgical techniques" presumably lobotomy-connected.[3] Similarly, the Security office planned to use outside consultants to find out about such techniques as ultrasonics, vibrations, concussions, high and low pressure, the uses of various gases in airtight chambers, diet variations, caffeine ine, fatigue, radiation, heat and cold, and changing light. Agency officials looked into all these areas and many others. Some they studied intensively; others they merely discussed with consultants.

The BLUEBIRD mind-control program began when Stalin was still alive, when the memory of Hitler was fresh, and the terrifying prospect of global nuclear war was just sinking into popular consciousness. The Soviet Union had subjugated most of Eastern Europe, and a Communist party had taken control over the world's most populous nation, China. War had broken out in Korea, and Senator Joseph McCarthy's anti-Communist crusade was on the rise in the United States. In both foreign and domestic politics, the prevailing mood was one of fear even paranoia.

American officials have pointed to the Cold War atmosphere ever since as an excuse for crimes and excesses committed then and afterward. One recurring litany in national security investigations has been the testimony of the exposed official citing Cold War hysteria to justify an act that he or she would not otherwise defend. The apprehensions of the Cold War do not provide a moral or legal shield for such acts, but they do help explain them. Even when the apprehensions were not well founded, they were no less real to the people involved.

It was also a time when the United States had achieved a new preeminence in the world. After World War II, American officials wielded the kind of power that diplomats frequently dream of. They established new alliances, new rulers, and even new nations to suit their purposes. They dispensed guns, favors, and aid to scores of nations. Consequently, American officials were noticed, respected, and pampered wherever they went as never before. Their new sense of importance and their Cold War fears often made a dangerous combination it is a fact of human nature that anyone who is both puffed up and afraid is someone to watch out for.

In 1947 the National Security Act created not only the CIA but also the National Security Council in sum, the command structure for the Cold War. Wartime OSS leaders like William Donovan and Allen Dulles lobbied feverishly for the Act. Officials within the new command structure soon put their fear and their grandiose notions to work. Reacting to the perceived threat, they adopted a ruthless and warlike posture toward anyone they considered an enemy most especially the Soviet Union. They took it upon themselves to fight communism and things that might lead to communism everywhere in the world. Few citizens disagreed with them; they appeared to express the sentiments of most Americans in that era, but national security officials still preferred to act in secrecy. A secret study commission under former President Hoover captured the spirit of their call to clandestine warfare:

It is now clear we are facing an implacable enemy whose avowed objective is world domination by whatever means and at whatever cost. There are no rules in such a game. Hitherto acceptable long-standing American concepts of "fair play" must be reconsidered. We must develop effective espionage and counterespionage services and must learn to subvert, sabotage, and destroy our enemies by more clever, more sophisticated, and more effective methods than those used against us.

The men in the new CIA took this job quite seriously. "We felt we were the first line of defense in the anti-Communist crusade," recalls Harry Rositzke, an early head of the Agency's Soviet Division. "There was a clear and heady sense of mission a sense of what a huge job this was." Michael Burke, who was chief of CIA covert operations in Germany before going on to head the New York Yankees and Madison Square Garden, agrees: "It was riveting.... One was totally absorbed in something that has become misunderstood now, but the Cold War in those days was a very real thing with hundreds of thousands of Soviet troops, tanks, and planes poised on the East German border, capable of moving to the English Channel in forty-eight hours." Hugh Cunningham, an Agency official who stayed on for many years, remembers that survival itself was at stake, "What you were made to feel was that the country was in desperate peril and we had to do whatever it took to save it."

BLUEBIRD and the CIA's later mind-control programs sprang from such alarm. As a matter of course, the CIA was also required to learn the methods and intentions of all possible foes. "If the CIA had not tried to find out what the Russians were doing with mind-altering drugs in the early 1950s, I think the then-Director should have been fired," says Ray Cline, a former Deputy Director of the Agency. High Agency officials felt they had to know what the Russians were up to. Nevertheless, a careful reading of the contemporaneous CIA documents almost three decades later indicates that if the Russians were scoring breakthroughs in the behavior-control field whose author they almost certainly were not, the CIA lacked intelligence to prove that. For example, a 1952 Security document, which admittedly had an axe to grind with the Office of Scientific Intelligence, called the data gathered on the Soviet programs "extremely poor." The author noted that the Agency's information was based on "second- or third-hand rumors, unsupported statements and non-factual data." [4] Apparently, the fears and fantasies aroused by the Mindszenty trial and the subsequent Korean War "brainwashing" furor outstripped the facts on hand.

The prevalent CIA notion of a "mind-control gap" was as much of a myth as the later bomber and missile "gaps." In any case, beyond the defensive curiosity, mind control took on a momentum of its own.

As unique and frightening as the Cold War was, it did not cause people working for the government to react much differently to each other or power than at other times in American history. Bureaucratic squabbling went on right through the most chilling years of the behavior-control program. No matter how alarmed CIA officials became over the Russian peril, they still managed to quarrel with their internal rivals over control of Agency funds and manpower. Between 1950 and 1952, responsibility for mind control went from the Office of Security to the Scientific Intelligence unit back to Security again. In the process, BLUEBIRD was rechristened ARTICHOKE. The bureaucratic wars were drawn-out affairs, baffling to outsiders; yet many of the crucial turns in behavioral research came out of essentially bureaucratic considerations on the part of the contending officials. In general, the Office of Security was full of pragmatists who were anxious to weed out communists (and homosexuals) everywhere. They believed the intellectuals from Scientific Intelligence had failed to produce "one new, usable paper, suggestion, drug, instrument, name of an individual, etc., etc.," as one document puts it. The learned gentlemen from Scientific Intelligence felt that the former cops, military men, and investigators in Security lacked the technical background to handle so awesome a task as controlling the human mind.

"Jurisdictional conflict was constant in this area," a Senate committee would state in 1976. A 1952 report to the chief of the CIA's Medical Staff (itself a participant in the infighting) drew a harsher conclusion:

"There exists a glaring lack of cooperation among the various intra-Agency groups fostered by petty jealousies and personality differences that result in the retardation of the enhancing and advancing of the Agency as a body." When Security took ARTICHOKE back from Scientific Intelligence in 1952, the victory lasted only two and one-half years before most of the behavioral work went to yet another CIA outfit, full of Ph.D.s with operational experience, the Technical Services Staff (TSS). [5]

There was bureaucratic warfare outside the CIA as well, although there were early gestures toward interagency cooperation. In April 1951 the CIA Director approved liaison with Army, Navy, and Air Force intelligence to avoid duplication of effort. The Army and Navy were both looking for truth drugs, while the prime concern of the Air Force was interrogation techniques used on downed pilots. Representatives of each service attended regular meetings to discuss ARTICHOKE matters. The Agency also invited the FBI, but J. Edgar Hoover's men stayed away.

During their brief period of cooperation, the military and the CIA also exchanged information with the British and Canadian governments. At the first session in June 1951, the British representative announced at the outset that there had been nothing new in the interrogation business since the days of the Inquisition and that there was little hope of achieving valuable results through research. He wanted to concentrate on propaganda and political warfare as they applied to such threats as communist penetration of trade unions. The CIA's minutes of the session record that this skeptical Englishman finally agreed to the importance of behavioral research, but one doubts the sincerity of this conversion. The minutes also record a consensus of "no conclusive evidence" that either Western countries or the Soviets had made any "revolutionary progress" in the field, and describe Soviet methods as "remarkably similar . . . to the age-old methods." Nonetheless, the representatives of the three countries agreed to continue investigating behavior-control methods because of their importance to "cold war operations." To what extent the British and Canadians continued cannot be told. The CIA did not stop until the 1970s. Bureaucratic conflict was not the only aspect of ordinary government life that persisted through the Cold War. Officials also maintained their normal awareness of the ethical and legal consequences of their decisions. Often they went through contorted rationalizations and took steps to protect themselves, but at least they recognized and paused over the various ethical lines before crossing them. It would be unfair to say that all moral awareness evaporated. Officials agonized over the consequences of their acts, and much of the bureaucratic record of behavior control is the history of officials dealing with moral conflicts as they arose. The Security office barely managed to recruit the team psychiatrist in time for the first mission to Japan, and for years, Agency officials had trouble attracting qualified medical men to the project. Speculating why, one Agency memo listed such reasons as the CIA's comparatively low salaries for doctors and ARTICHOKE's narrow professional scope, adding that a candidate's "ethics might be such that he might not care to cooperate in certain more revolutionary phases of our project." This consideration became explicit in Agency recruiting. During the talent search, another CIA memo stated by another doctor seemed suitable: "His ethics are such that he would be completely cooperative in any phase of our program, regardless of how revolutionary it may be."

The matter was even more troublesome in the task of obtaining guinea pigs for mind-control experiments. "Our biggest current problem," noted one CIA memo, "is to find suitable subjects." The men from ARTICHOKE found their most convenient source among the flotsam and jetsam of the international spy trade: "individuals of dubious loyalty, suspected agents or plants, subjects having known reason for deception, etc." as one Agency document described them. ARTICHOKE officials looked on these people as "unique research material," from whom meaningful secrets might be extracted while the experiments went on. see MACROCOSM mind controlled OFFICIALS themselves

It is fair to say that the CIA operators tended to put less value on the lives of these subjects than they did on those of American college students, upon whom preliminary, more benign testing was done. They tailored the subjects to suit the ethical sensitivity of the experiment. A psychiatrist who worked on an ARTICHOKE team stresses that no one from the Agency wanted subjects to be hurt. Yet he and his colleagues were willing to treat dubious defectors and agents in a way which not only would be professionally unethical in the United States but also an indictable crime. In short, these subjects were, if not expendable, at least not particularly prized as human beings. As a CIA psychologist who worked for a decade in the behavior-control program, puts it, "One did not put a high premium on the civil rights of a person who was treasonable to his own country or who was operating effectively to destroy us." Another ex-Agency psychologist observes that CIA operators did not have "a universal concept of mankind" and thus were willing to do things to foreigners that they would have been reluctant to try on Americans. "It was strictly a patriotic vision," he says.

ARTICHOKE officials never seemed to be able to find enough subjects. The professional operators particularly the traditionalists were reluctant to turn over agents to the Security men with their unproved methods. The field men did not particu larly want outsiders, such as the ARTICHOKE crew, getting mixed up in their operations. In the spy business, agents are very valuable property indeed, and operators tend to be very protective of them. Thus the ARTICHOKE teams were given mostly the dregs of the clandestine underworld to work on.

Inexorably, the ARTICHOKE men crossed the clear ethical lines. Morse Allen believed it proved little or nothing to experiment on volunteers who gave their informed consent. For all their efforts to act naturally, volunteers still knew they were playing in a make-believe game. Consciously or intuitively, they understood that no one would allow them to be harmed. Allen felt that only by testing subjects "for whom much is at stake (perhaps life and death)," as he wrote, could he get reliable results relevant to operations. In documents and conversation, Allen and his coworkers called such realistic tests "terminal experiments" terminal in the sense that the experiment would be carried through to completion. It would not end when the subject felt like going home or when he or his best interest was about to be harmed. Indeed, the subject usually had no idea that he had ever been part of an experiment.

In every field of behavior control, academic researchers took the work only so far. From Morse Allen's perspective, somebody then had to do the terminal experiment to find out how well the technique worked in the real world: how drugs affected unwitting subjects, how massive electroshock influenced memory, how prolonged sensory deprivation disturbed the mind. By definition, terminal experiments went beyond conventional ethical and legal limits. The ultimate terminal experiments caused death, but ARTICHOKE sources state that those were forbidden.

For career CIA officials, exceeding these limits in the name of national security became part of the job, although individual operators usually had personal lines they would not cross. Most academics wanted no part of the game at this stage nor did Agency men always like having these outsiders around. If academic and medical consultants were brought along for the terminal phase, they usually did the work overseas, in secret. As Cornell Medical School's famed neurologist Harold Wolff explained in a research proposal he made to the CIA, when any of the tests involved doing harm to the subjects, "We expect the Agency to make available suitable subjects and a proper place for the performance of the necessary experiments." Any professional caught trying the kinds of things the Agency came to sponsor holding subjects prisoner, shooting them full of unwanted drugs probably would have been arrested for kidnapping or aggravated assault. Certainly such a researcher would have been disgraced among his peers. Yet, by performing the same experiment under the CIA's banner, he had no worry from the law. His colleagues could not censure him because they had no idea what he was doing. And he could take pride in helping his country.

Without having been there in person, no one can know exactly what it felt like to take part in a terminal experiment. In any case, the subjects probably do not have fond memories of the experience. While the researchers sometimes resembled Alphonse and Gastone, they took themselves and their work very seriously. Now they are either dead, or, for their own reasons, they do not want to talk about the tests. Only in the following case have I been able to piece together anything approaching a firsthand account of a terminal experiment, and this one is quite mild compared to the others the ARTICHOKE men planned.

Notes

The origins of the CIA's ARTICHOKE program and accounts of the early testing came from the following agency Documents # 192, 15 January 1953; #3, 17 May 1949; A/B, I, 8/1, 24 February 1949; February 10, 1951 memo on Special Interrogations (no document #); A/B, II, 30/2, 28 September 1949; #5, 15 August 1949; #8, 27 September 1949; #6, 23 August 1949; #13, 5 April 1950; #18, 9 May 1950; #142 (transmittal slip), 19 May 1952; #124, 25 January 1952; A/B, IV, 23/32, 3 March 1952; #23, 21 June 1950; #10, 27 February 1950; #37, 27 October 1950; A/B, I, 39/1, 12 De ember 1950; A/B, II, 2/2, 5 March 1952; A/B, II, 2/1, 15 February 1952; A/B, V, 134/3, 3 December 1951; A/B, I, 38/5, 1 June 1951; and #400, undated, "Specific Cases of Overseas Testing and Applications of Behavioral Drugs."

The documents were supplemented by interviews with Ray Cline, Harry Rositzke, Michael Burke, Hugh Cunningham, and several other ex-CIA men who asked to remain anonymous. The Final Report of the Select Committee to Study Governmental Operations with Respect to Intelligence (henceforth called the Church Committee Report) provided useful background.

Documents giving background on terminal experiments include #A/B, II, 10/57; #A/B, II, 10/58, 31 August, 1954; #A/B, II, 10/17, 27 September 1954; and #A/B, I, 76/4, 21 March 1955.

Footnotes

1. For a better-documented case of narcotherapy and narcohypnosis, see Chapter 3

2. While the regular polygraphing of CIA career employees apparently never has turned up a penetration agent in the ranks, it almost certainly has a deterrent effect on those considering coming out of the homosexual closet or on those considering dipping into the large sums of cash dispensed from proverbial black bags.

3. Whether the Agency ultimately funded this or the electric-shock proposal cited above cannot be determined from the documents.

4. The CIA refused to supply either a briefing or additional material when I asked for more background on Soviet behavior-control programs.

5. This Agency component, responsible for providing the supporting gadgets, disguises, forgeries, secret writing, and weapons, has been called during its history the Technical Services Division and the Office of Technical Services as well as TSS, the name which will be used throughout this book.

The Professor and the "A" Treatment The three men were all part of the same Navy team, traveling together to Germany. Their trip was so sensitive that they had been ordered to ignore each other, even as they waited in the terminal at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington on a sweltering August morning in 1952. Just the month before, Gary Cooper had opened in High Noon, and the notion of showdown whether with outlaws or communists was in the air. With war still raging in Korea, security consciousness was high. Even so, the secrecy surrounding this Navy mission went well beyond ordinary TOP SECRET restrictions, for the team was slated to link up in Frankfurt with a contingent from the most hush-hush agency of all, the CIA. Then the combined group was going to perform dangerous experiments on human subjects. Both Navy and CIA officials believed that any disclosure about these tests would cause grave harm to the American national interest.

The Navy team sweated out a two-hour delay at Andrews before the four-engine military transport finally took off. Not until the plane touched down at the American field in the Azores did one of the group, a representative of Naval intelligence, flash a prearranged signal indicating that they were not being watched and they could talk. "It was all this cloak-and-dagger crap," recalls another participant, Dr. Samuel Thompson, a psychiatrist, physiologist, and pharmacologist who was also a Navy commander.

The third man in the party was G. Richard Wendt, chairman of the Psychology Department at the University of Rochester and a part-time Navy contractor. A small 46-year-old man with graying blond hair and a fair-sized paunch, Wendt had been the only one with companionship during the hours of decreed silence. He had brought along his attractive young assistant, ostensibly to help him with the experiments. She was not well received by the Navy men, nor would she be appreciated by the CIA operators in Frankfurt. The behavior-control field was very much a man's world, except when women subjects were used. The professor's relationship with this particular lady was destined to become a source of friction with his fellow experimenters, and, eventually, a topic of official CIA reporting.

In theory, Professor Wendt worked under Dr. Thompson's supervision in a highly classified Navy program called Project CHATTER, but the strong-minded psychologist did not take anyone's orders easily. Very much an independent spirit, Wendt ironically, had accepted CHATTER's goal of weakening, if not eliminating, free will in others. The Navy program, which had started in 1947, was aimed at developing a truth drug that would force people to reveal their innermost secrets.

Thompson, who inherited Wendt and CHATTER in 1951 when he became head of psychiatric research at the Naval Medical Research Institute, remembers Naval intelligence telling him of the need for a truth drug in case "someone planted an A-bomb in one of our cities and we had twelve hours to find out from a person where it was. What could we do to make him talk?" Thompson concedes he was always "negative" about the possibility that such a drug could ever exist, but he cites the fear that the Russians might develop their own miracle potion as reason enough to justify the program. Also, Thompson and the other U.S. officials could not resist looking for a pill or panacea that would somehow make their side all-knowing or all-powerful.

Professor Wendt had experimented with drugs for the Navy before he became involved in the search for a truth serum. His earlier work had been on the use of Dramamine and other methods to prevent motion sickness, and now that he was doing more sensitive research, the Navy hid it under the cover of continuing his "motion sickness" study. At the end of 1950, the Navy gave Wendt a $300,000 contract to study such substances as barbiturates, amphetamines, alcohol, and heroin. To preserve secrecy, which often reached fetish proportions in mind-control research, the money flowed to him not through Navy channels but out of the Secretary of Defense's contingency fund. For those drugs that were not available from pharmaceutical companies, Navy officials went to the Federal Bureau of Narcotics. The commissioner of Narcotics personally signed the papers, and special couriers carried pouches of illegal drugs through Washington streets and then up to the professor at Rochester. Receipts show that the Bureau sent the Navy 30 grams of pure heroin and 11 pounds of "Mexican grown" marijuana, among other drugs

Like most serious drug researchers, Wendt sampled everything first before testing on assistants and students. The drug that took up the most space in his first progress report was heroin. He had become his own prime subject. At weekly intervals, he told the Navy, the psychologist gave himself heroin injections and then wrote down his reactions as he moved through the "full range" of his life: driving, shopping, recreation, manual work, family relations, and sexual activity. He noted in himself "slight euphoria . . . heightened aesthetic appreciation . . . absentminded behavior . . . lack of desire to operate at full speed . . . lack of desire for alcohol . . . possibly reduced sex interest . . . feeling of physical well-being." He concluded in his report that heroin could have "some, but slight value for interrogation" if used on someone "worked on for a long period of time." [1]

Wendt never had any trouble getting student volunteers. He simply posted a notice on a campus bulletin board, and he wound up with a long waiting list. He chose only men subjects over 21, and he paid everyone accepted after a long interview $1.00 an hour. With so much government money to spend, he hired over 20 staff assistants, and he built a whole new testing facility in the attic of the school library. Wendt was cautious with his students, and he apparently did not share the hard drugs with them. He usually tested subjects in small groups four to eight at a time. He and his associates watched through a two-way mirror and wrote down the subjects' reactions. He always used both placebos (inert substances) and drugs; the students never knew what if anything they were taking. According to Dr. Thompson, to have alerted them in advance and thus given themselves a chance to steel themselves up "would have spoiled the experiment."

Nonetheless, Wendt's procedure was a far cry from true unwitting testing. Any drug that was powerful enough to break through an enemy's resistance could have a traumatic effect on the person taking it particularly if the subject was totally unaware of what was happening. The Navy research plan was to do preliminary studies on subjects like Wendt's students, and then, as soon as the drug showed promise, to try it under field conditions. Under normal scientific research, the operational tests would not have been run before the basic work was finished. But the Navy could not wait. The drugs were to be tested on involuntary subjects. Thompson readily admits that this procedure was "unethical," but he says, "We felt we had to do it for the good of country."

During the summer of 1952, Professor Wendt announced that he had found a concoction "so special" that it would be "the answer" to the truth-drug problem, as Thompson recalls it. "I thought it would be a good idea to call the Agency," says Thompson. "I thought they might have someone with something to spill." Wendt was adamant on one point: He would not tell anyone in the Navy or the CIA what his potion contained. He would only demonstrate. Neither the CHATTER nor ARTICHOKE teams could resist the bait. The Navy had no source of subjects for terminal experiments, but the CIA men agreed to furnish the human beings in Germany even though they had no idea what Wendt had in store for his guinea pigs. The CIA named the operation CASTIGATE.

After settling into a Frankfurt hotel, Wendt, Thompson, and the Naval Intelligence man set out to meet the ARTICHOKE crew at the local CIA headquarters. It was located in the huge, elongated building that had housed the I. G. Farben industrial complex until the end of the war. The frantic bustle of a U.S. military installation provided ideal cover for this CIA base, and the arrival of a few new Americans attracted no special attention. The Navy group passed quickly through the lobby and rode up the elevator. At the CIA outer office, the team members had to show identification, and Thompson says they were frisked. The Naval Intelligence man had to check his revolver.

A secretary ushered the Navy group in to meet the ARTICHOKE contingent, which had arrived earlier from Washington. The party included team leader Morse Allen, his boss in the Office of Security, Paul Gaynor, and a prominent Washington psychiatrist who regularly left his private practice to fly off on special missions for the Agency. Also present were case officers from the CIA's Frankfurt base who had taken care of the support arrangements the most important of which was supplying the subjects.

Everyone at the meeting wanted to know what drugs Wendt was going to use on the five selected subjects, who included one known double agent, one suspected double, and the three defectors. The professor still was not talking. Dr. Thompson asked what would happen if something went wrong and the subject died. He recalls one of the Frankfurt CIA men replying, "Disposal of the body would be no problem."

After the session ended, Thompson took Wendt aside and pointed out that since the professor, unlike

Thompson, was neither a psychiatrist nor a pharmacologist, he was acting irresponsibly in not having a qualified physician standing by with antidotes in case of trouble. Wendt finally relented and confided in

Thompson that he was going to slip the subjects a combination of the depressant Seconal, the stimulant

Dexedrine, and tetrahydrocannabinol, the active ingredient in marijuana. Thompson was dumbfounded. He remembers wanting to shoot Wendt on the spot. These were all well-known drugs that had been thoroughly tested. Indeed, even the idea of mixing Seconal and Dexedrine was not original: The combined drug already had its own brand name Dexamyl (and it would eventually have a street name,

"the goofball"). Thompson quickly passed on to the CIA men what Wendt had in mind. [2] They, too, were more than a little disappointed. Nevertheless, there was never any thought of stopping the experiments. The ARTICHOKE team had its own methods to try, even if Wendt's proved a failure, and the whole affair had developed its own momentum. Since this was one of the early ARTICHOKE trips into the field, the team was still working to perfect the logistics of testing. It had reser ved two CIA "safehouses" in the countryside not far from Frankfurt, and Americans had been assigned to guard the experimental sites. Agency managers had already completed the paperwork for the installation of hidden microphones and two-way mirrors, so all the team members could monitor the interrogations. The first safehouse proved to be a solid old farmhouse set picturesquely in the middle of green fields, far from the nearest dwelling. The ARTICHOKE and CHATTER groups drove up just as the CIA's carpenters were cleaning up the mess they had made in ripping a hole through the building's thick walls. The house had existed for several hundred years without an observation glass peering in on the sitting room, and it had put up some structural resistance to the workmen.

Subject #1 arrived in the early afternoon, delivered in a CIA sedan by armed operators, who had and cuffed him, shackled his feet, and made him lie down on the floor of the back seat. Agency officials described him as a suspected Russian agent, about 40 years old, who had a "Don Juan complex." One can only imagine how the subject must have reacted to these rather inconsistent Americans who only a few hours earlier had literally grabbed him out of confinement, harshly bound him, and sat more or less on top of him as they wandered through idyllic German farm country, and who now were telling him to relax as they engaged him in friendly conversation and offered him a beer. He had no way of knowing that it would be the last unspiked drink he would have for quite some time.

On the following morning, the testing started in earnest. Wendt put 20 mg. of Seconal in the subject's breakfast and then followed up with 50 mg. of Dexedrine in each of his two morning cups of coffee. Wendt gave him a second dose of Seconal in his luncheon beer. The subject was obviously not his normal self whatever that was. What was clear was that Wendt was in way over his head, and even the little professor seemed to realize it. "I don't know how to deal with these people," he told the CIA psychiatric consultant. Wendt flatly refused to examine the subject, leaving the interrogation to the consultant. For his part, the consultant had little success in extracting information not already known to the CIA.

The third day was more of the same: Seconal with breakfast, Dexedrine and marijuana in a glass of water afterwards. The only break from the previous day's routine came at 10:10 A.M. when the subject was allowed to play a short poker game. Then he was given more of Wendt's drugs in two red capsules that were, he was told, "a prescription for his nerves." By 2:40 P.M., Wendt declared that this subject was not the right personality type for his treatment. He explained to his disgusted colleagues that if someone is determined to lie, these drugs will only make him a better liar. He said that the marijuana extract produced a feeling of not wanting to hold anything back and that it worked best on people who wanted to tell the truth but were afraid to. OSS had discovered the same thing almost a decade earlier. Wendt retired temporarily from the scene, and the others concluded it would be a shame to waste a good subject. They decided to give him the "A" (for ARTICHOKE) treatment. This, too, was not very original. It had been used during the war to interrogate prisoners and treat shell-shocked soldiers. As practiced on the suspected Russian agent, it consisted of injecting enough sodium pentothal into the vein of his arm to knock him out and then, twenty minutes later, stimulating him back to semiconsciousness with a shot of Benzedrine. In this case, the benzedrine did not revive the subject enough to suit the psychiatric consultant and he told Dr. Thompson to give the subject another 10 mg. ten minutes later. This put the subject into a state somewhere between waking and sleeping almost comatose and yet bug-eyed. In hypnotic tones that had to be translated into Russian by an interpreter, the consultant used the technique of "regression" to convince the subject he was talking to his wife Eva at some earlier time in his life. This was no easy trick, since a male interpreter was playing Eva. Nevertheless, the consultant states he could "create any fantasy" with 60 to 70 percent of his patients, using narcotherapy ( as in this case) or hypnosis. For roughly an hour, the subject seemed to have no idea he was not speaking with his wife but with CIA operatives trying to find out about his relationship with Soviet intelligence. When the subject started to doze, the consultant had Thompson give him a doubled jolt of Benzedrine. A half hour later, the subject began to weep violently. The consultant decided to end the session, and in his most soothing voice, he urged the subject to fall asleep.

As the subject calmed down, the consultant suggested, with friendly and soothing words, that the subject would remember nothing of the experience when he woke up.

Inducing amnesia was an important Agency goal. "From the ARTICHOKE point of view," states a 1952 document, "the greater the amnesia produced, the more effective the results." Obviously if a victim remembered the "A" treatment, it would stop being a closely guarded ARTICHOKE secret. Presumably, some subject who really did work for the Russians would tell them how the Americans had worked him over. This reality made "disposal" of ARTICHOKE subjects a particular problem. Killing them seems to have been ruled out, but Agency officials made sure that some stayed in foreign prisons for long periods of time. While in numerous specific cases, ARTICHOKE team members claimed success in making their subjects forget, their outside consultants had told them "that short of cutting a subject's throat, a true amnesia cannot be guaranteed." As early as 1950, the Agency had put out a contract to a private researcher to find a memory-destroying drug, but to no apparent avail.[3] In any case, it would be unreasonable to assume that over the years at least one ARTICHOKE subject did not shake off the amnesic commands and tell the Russians what happened to him. As was so often the case with CIA operations, the enemy probably had a much better idea of the Agency's activities than the folks back home.

Back at the safehouse, Wendt was far from through. Four more subjects would be brought to him. The next one was an alleged double agent whom the CIA had code-named EXPLOSIVE. Agency documents describe him as a Russian "professional agent type" and "a hard-boiled individual who apparently has the ability to lie consistently but not very effectively." He was no stranger to ARTICHOKE team members who, a few months before, had plied him with a mixture of drugs and hypnosis under the cover of a "psychiatric-medical" exam. At that time, a professional hypnotist had accompanied the team, and he had given his commands through an elaborate intercom system to an interpreter who, in turn, was apparently able to put EXPLOSIVE under.[4] Afterward, the team reported to the CIA's Director that EXPLOSIVE had revealed "extremely valuable" information and that he had been made to forge his interrogation through a hypnotically induced amnesia. Since that time EXPLOSIVE had been kept in custody. Now he was being brought out to give Professor Wendt a crack at him with the Seconal-Dexedrine-marijuana combination.

This time, Wendt gave the subject all three drugs together in one beer, delivered at the cocktail hour.

Next came Seconal in a dinner beer and then all three once more in a postprandial beer. There were little, if any, positive results. Wendt ended the session after midnight and commented, "At least we learned one thing from this experiment. The people you have to deal with here are different from American college students."

During the next week, the CIA men brought Wendt three more subjects, with little success. The general attitude toward Wendt became, in Thompson's words, "hostile as all hell." Both the Agency and the Navy groups questioned his competence. With one subject, the professor declared he had given too strong a dose; with the next, too weak. While he had advertised his drugs as tasteless, the subjects realized they had swallowed something. As one subject in the next room was being interrogated in Russian that no one was bothering to translate, Wendt took to playing the same pattern on the piano over and over for a half hour. While the final subject was being questioned, Wendt and his female assistant got a little tipsy on beer. Wendt became so distracted during this experiment that he finally admitted, "My thoughts are elsewhere." His assistant began to giggle. Her presence had become like an open sore which was made more painful when Mrs. Wendt showed up in Frankfurt and the professor threatened to jump off a church tower, Thompson recalls.

Wendt is not alive to give his version of what happened, but both CIA and Navy sources are consistent in their description of him. ARTICHOKE team leader Morse Allen felt he had been the victim of "a fraud or at least a gross misinterpretation," and he described the trip as "a waste of time and money." A man who usually hid his feelings, Allen became livid when Wendt's assistant measured drugs out with a penknife. He recommended in his final report that those who develop drugs not be allowed to participate in future field testing. "This, of course, does not mean that experimental work is condemned by the ARTICHOKE team," he wrote, "but a common sense approach in this direction will preclude arguments, alibis, and complaints as in the recent situation." In keeping with this "common sense approach," he also recommended that as "an absolute rule," no women be allowed on ARTICHOKE missions because of the possible danger and because "personal convenience, toilet facilities, etc., are complicated by the presence of women."

Morse Allen and his ARTICHOKE mates returned to the States still convinced that they could find ways to control human behavior, but the Navy men were shaken. Their primary contractor had turned out to be a tremendous embarrassment. Dr. Thompson stated he could never work with Wendt again. Navy officials soon summoned Wendt to Bethesda and told him they were canceling their support for his research. Adding insult to injury, they told him they expected refund of all unspent money. While the Navy managers made some effort to continue CHATTER at other institutions, the program never recovered from the Wendt fiasco. By the end of the next year, 1953, the Korean War had ended and the Navy abandoned CHATTER altogether.

Over the next two decades, the Navy would still sponsor large amounts of specialized behavioral research, and the Army would invest huge sums in schemes to incapacitate whole armies with powerful drugs. But the CIA clearly pulled far into the lead in mind control. In those areas in which military research continued, the Agency stayed way ahead. The CIA consistently was out on what was called the "cutting edge" of the research, sponsoring the lion's share of the most harrowing experiments. ARTICHOKE and its successor CIA programs became an enormous effort that harnessed the energies of hundreds of scientists.

The experience of the CIA psychiatric consultant provides a small personal glimpse of how it felt to be a soldier in the mind-control campaign. This psychiatrist, who insists on anonymity, estimates that he made between 125 and 150 trips overseas on Agency operations from 1952 through his retirement in 1966. "To be a psychiatrist chasing off to Europe instead of just seeing the same patients year after year, that was extraordinary," he reminisces. "I wish I was back in those days. I never got tired of it." He says his assignments called for "practicing psychiatry in an ideal way, which meant you didn't become involved with your patients. You weren't supposed to." Asked how he felt about using drugs on unwitting foreigners, he snaps, "Depends which side you were on. I never hurt anyone. . . . We were at war."

For the most part, the psychiatrist stopped giving the "A" treatment after the mid-1950s but he continued to use his professional skills to assess and manipulate agents and defectors. His job was to help find out if a subject was under another country's control and to recommend how the person could be switched to the CIA's. In this work, he was contributing to the mainstream of CIA activity that permeates its institutional existence from its operations to its internal politics to its social life: the notion of controlling people. Finding reliable ways to do that is a primary CIA goal, and the business is often a brutal one. As former CIA Director Richard Helms stated in Senate testimony, "The clandestine operator . . . is trained to believe you can't count on the honesty of your agent to do exactly what you want or to report accurately unless you own him body and soul."

Like all the world's secret services, the CIA sought to find the best methods of owning people and making sure they stayed owned. How could an operator be sure of an agent's loyalties? Refugees and defectors were flooding Western Europe, an d the CIA wanted to exploit them. Which ones were telling the truth? Who was a deception agent or a provocateur. The Anglo-American secret invasion of Albania had failed miserably. Had they been betrayed?[5] Whom could the CIA trust?

One way to try to answer these questions is to use physical duressor torture. Aside from its ethical drawbacks, however, physical brutality simply does not work very well. As a senior counterintelligence official explains, "If you have a blowtorch up someone's ass, he'll give you tactical information." Yet he will not be willing or able to play the modern espionage game on the level desired by the CIA. One Agency document excludes the use of torture "because such inhuman treatment is not only out of keeping with the traditions of this country, but of dubious effectiveness as compared with various supplemental psychoanalytical techniques."

The second and most popular method to get answers is traditional spy tradecraft.

Given enough time, a good interrogator can very often find out a person's secrets. He applies persuasion and mental seduction, mixed with psychological pressures of every description emotional carrots and sticks. A successful covert operator uses the same sorts of techniques in recruiting agents and making sure they stay in line. While the rest of the population may dabble in this sort of manipulation, the professional operator does it for a living, and he operates mostly outside the system of restraints that normally govern personal relationships. "I never gave a thought to legality or morality," states a retired and quite cynical Agency case officer with over 20 years' experience. "Frankly, I did what worked."

The operator pursues people he can turn into "controlled sources" agents willing to do his bidding either in supplying intelligence or taking covert action. He seeks people in a position to do something useful for the Agency or who someday might be in such a position, perhaps with CIA aid. Once he picks his target, he usually looks for a weakness or vulnerability he can play on. Like a good fisherman, the clever operator knows that the way to hook his prey is to choose an appropriate bait, which the target will think he is seizing because he wants to. The hook has to be firmly implanted; the agent sometimes tries to escape once he understands the implications of betraying his country. While the case officer might try to convince him he is acting for the good of his homeland, the agent must still face up to being branded a traitor.

Does every man have his price? Not exactly, states the senior counterintelligence man, but he believes a shrewd operator can usually find a way to reach anyone, particularly through his family. In developing countries, the Agency has caused family members to be arrested and mistreated by the local police, given or withheld medical care for a sick child, and, more prosaically, provided scholarships for a relative to study abroad. This kind of tactic does not work as well on a Russian or Western European, who does not live in a society where the CIA can exert pressure so easily. Like a doctor's bedside manner or a lawyer's courtroom style, spy tradecraft is highly personalized.

Different case officers swear by different approaches, and successful methods are carefully observed and copied. Most CIA operators seem to prefer using an ideological lure if they can. John Stockwell, who left the Agency in 1977 to write a book about CIA operations in Angola, believes his best agents were "people convinced they were doing the right thing . . . who disliked communists and felt the CIA was the right organization." Stockwell recalls his Agency instructors "hammering away at the positive aspect of recruitment. This was where they established the myth of CIA case officers being good guys. They said we didn't use negative control, and we always made the relationship so that both parties were better off for having worked together." More cynical operators, like the one quoted above, take a different view: "You can't create real motivation in a person by waving the flag or by saying this is for the future good of democracy. You've got to have a firmer hold than that.... His opinions can change." This ex-operator favors approaches based either on revenge or helping the agent advance his career: Those are good motives because they can be created with the individual.... Maybe you start with a Communist party cell member and you help him become a district committee member by eliminating his competition, or you help him get a position where he can get even with someone. At the same time, he's giving you more and more information as he moves forward, and if you ever surface his reports, he's out of business. You've really got him wrapped up. You don't even have to tell him. He realizes it himself. No matter what the approach to the prospective agent, the case officer tries to make money a factor in the relationship. Sometimes the whole recruiting pitch revolves around enrichment. In other instances, the case officer allows the target the illusion that he has sold out for higher motives. Always, however, the operator tries to use money to make the agent dependent. The situation can become sticky with money-minded agents when the case officer insists that part or all of the payments be placed in escrow, to prevent attracting undue attention. But even cash does not create control in the spy business. As the cynical case officer puts it, "Money is tenuous because somebody can always offer more."

Surprisingly, each of the CIA operators sampled agrees that overt blackmail is a highly overrated form of control. The senior counterintelligence man notes that while the Russians frequently use some variety of entrapmentsexual or otherwise the CIA rarely did. "Very few [Agency] case officers were tough enough" to pull it off and sustain it, he says. "Anytime an agent has been forced to cooperate, you can take it for granted that he has two things on his mind: he is looking for a way out and for revenge. Given the slightest opportunity, he will hit you right between the eyes." Blackmail could backfire in unexpected ways. John Stockwell remembers an agent in Southeast Asia who wanted to quit: "The case officer leaned on the guy and said, 'Look, friend, we still need your intelligence, and we have receipts you signed which we can turn over to the local police.' The agent blew his brains out, leaving a suicide note regretting his cooperation with the CIA and telling how the Agency had tried to blackmail him. It caused some problems with the local government."

The case officer always tries to weave an ever-tightening web of control around his agent. His methods of doing so are so personal and so basic that they often reveal more about the case officer himself than the agent, reflecting his outlook and his personal philosophy. The cynical operator describes his usual technique, which turns out to be a form of false idealism: "You've got to treat a man as an equal and convince him you're partners in this thing. Even if he's a communist party member, you can't deal with him like a crumb. You sit down with him and ask how are the kids, and you remember that he told you last time that his son was having trouble in school. You build personal rapport. If you treat him like dirt or an object of use, eventually he'll turn on you or drop off the bandwagon."

John Stockwell's approach relies on the power of imagination in a humdrum world:

"I always felt the real key was that you were offering something special a real secret life something that he and you only knew made him different from all the pedestrian paper shufflers in a government office or a boring party cell meeting. Everybody has a little of Walter Mitty in him what a relief to know you really do work for the CIA in your spare time."

Sometimes a case officer wants to get the agent to do something he does not think he wants to do. One former CIA operator uses a highly charged metaphor to describe how he did it: "Sometimes one partner in a relationship wants to get into deviations from standard sex. If you have some control, you might be able to force your partner to try different things, but it's much better to lead her down the road a step at a time, to discuss it and fantasize until eventually she's saying, 'Let's try this thing.' If her inhibitions and moral reservations are eroded and she is turned on, it's much more fun and there's less chance of blowback [exposure, in spy talk].... It's the same with an agent." All case officers and particularly counterintelligence men harbor recurring fears that their agents will betray them. The suspicious professional looks for telltale signs like lateness, nervousness, or inconsistency. He relies on his intuition. "The more you've been around agents, the more likely you are to sense that something isn't what it should be," comments the senior counterintelligence man. "It's like with children."

No matter how skillfully practiced, traditional spycraft provides only incomplete answers to the nagging question of how much the Agency can really trust an agent. All the sixth sense, digging, and deductive reasoning in the world do not produce certainty in a field that is based on deception and lies. Whereas the British, who invented the game, have historically understood the need for patience and a stiff upper lip, Americans tend to look for quick answers, often by using the latest technology. "We were very gimmick-prone," says the senior counterintelligence official. Gimmicks machines, drugs, technical tricks comprise the third method of behavior control, after torture and tradecraft.

Like safecrackers who swear by the skill in their fingertips, most of the Agency's mainstream operators disparage newfangled gadgets. Many now claim that drugs, hypnosis, and other exotic methods actually detract from good tradecraft because they make operators careless and lazy.

Nevertheless, the operators and their high-level sponsors, like Allen Dulles and Richard Helms, consistently pushed for the magic technique the deus ex machina that would solve their problems. Caught in the muck and frustration of ordinary spywork, operators hoped for a miracle tool. Faced with liars and deceivers, they longed for a truth drug. Surrounded by people who knew too much, they sought a way to create amnesia. They dreamed of finding means to make unwilling people carry out specific tasks, such as stealing documents, provoking a fight, killing someone, or otherwise committing an antisocial act. Secret agents recruited by more traditional appeals to idealism, greed, ambition, or fear had always done such deeds, but they usually gave their spymasters headaches in the process. Sometimes they balked. Moreover, first they had to agree to serve the CIA. The best tradecraft in the world seldom works against a well-motivated target. (The cynical operator recalls offering the head of Cuban intelligence $1,000,000 in 1966 at a Madrid hotel only to receive a flat rejection.) Plagued by the unsureness, Agency officials hoped to take the randomness indeed, the free will out of agent handling. As one psychologist who worked on behavior control describes it, "The problem of every intelligence operation is how do you remove the human element? The operators would come to us and ask for the human element to be removed." Thus the impetus toward mind-control research came not only from the lure of science and the fantasies of science fiction, it also came from the heart of the spy business.

Notes

The primary sources for the material on Professor Wendt's trip to Frankfurt were Dr. Samuel V. Thompson then of the Navy, the CIA psychiatric consultant, several of Wendt's former associates, as well as three CIA documents that described the testing: Document # 168, 19 September 1952, Subject: "Project LGQ"; Document # 168, 18 September 1952, Subject: Field Trip of ARTICHOKE team, 20 August-September 1952; and #A/B, II, 33/21, undated, Subject: Special Comments.

Information on the Navy's Project CHATTER came from the Church Committee Report, Book I, pp. 337-38. Declassified Navy Documents N-23, February 13, 1951, Subject: Procurement of Certain Drugs; N-27, undated, Subject: Project CHATTER; N-29, undated, Subject: Status Report: Studies of Motion Sickness, Vestibular Function, and Effects of Drugs; N-35, October 27, 1951, Interim Report; N-38, 30 September, 1952, Memorandum for File; and N-39, 28 October, 1952, Memorandum for File. The information on the heroin found in Wendt's safe comes from the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, October 2, 1977 and considerable background on Wendt's Rochester testing program was found in the Rochester Times-Union, January 28, 1955. The CIA quote on heroin came from May 15, 1952 OSI Memorandum to the Deputy Director, CIA, Subject: Special Interrogation.

Information on the Agency's interest in amnesia came from 14 January 1952 memo,

Subject: BLUEBIRD/ARTICHOKE, Proposed Research; 7 March 1951, Subject: Informal Discussion with Chief [deleted] Regarding "Disposal"; 1 May 1951, Subject: Recommendation for Disposal of Maximum Custody Defectors; and #A/B, I, 75/13, undated, Subject: Amnesia.

The quote from Homer on nepenthe was found in Sidney Cohen's The Beyond Within: The LSD Story (New York: Atheneum, 1972).

The section on control came from interviews with John Stockwell and several other former CIA men.

Footnotes

1. What Wendt appears to have been getting at namely, that repeated shots of heroin might have an effect on interrogation was stated explicitly in a 1952 CIA document which declared the drug "can be useful in reverse because of the stresses produced when . . . withdrawn from those addicted." Wendt's interest in heroin seems to have lasted to his death in 1977, long after his experiments had stopped.

The woman who cleaned out his safe at that time told the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle she found a quantity of the white powder, along with syringes and a good many other drugs.

2. Being good undercover operators, the CIA men never let on to Wendt that they knew his secret, and Wendt was not about to give it away. Toward the end of the trip, he told the consultant he would feel "unpatriotic" if he were to share his secret because the ARTICHOKE team was "not competent" to use the drugs.

3. Homer reported the ancient Greeks had such a substance nepenthe "a drug to lull all pain and anger, and bring forgetfulness of every sorrow."

4. Neither Morse Allen nor anyone else on the ARTICHOKE teams spoke any foreign languages. Allen believed that the difficulty in communicating with the guinea pigs hampered ARTICHOKE research.

5. The answer was yes, in the sense that Soviet agent Harold "Kim" Philby, working as British intelligence's liaison with the CIA apparently informed his spymasters of specific plans to set up anticommunist resistance movements in Albania and all over Eastern Europe. The Russians almost certainly learned about CIA plans to overthrow communist rule in Eastern Europe and in the Soviet Union itself. Knowing of such operations presumably increased Soviet hostility.

PART II

INTELLIGENCE OR "WITCHES POTIONS"

LSD

Albert Hofmann's discovery of LSD in 1943 may have begun a new age in the exploration of the human mind, but it took six years for word to reach America. Even after Hofmann and his coworkers in Switzerland published their work in a 1947 article, no one in the United States seemed to notice. Then in 1949, a famous Viennese doctor named Otto Kauders traveled to the United States in search of research funds. He gave a conference at Boston Psychopathic Hospital, [1] a pioneering mental-health institution affiliated with Harvard Medical School, and he spoke about a new experimental drug called d-lysergic acid diethylamide. Milton Greenblatt, the hospital's research director, vividly recalls Kauders' description of how an infinitesimally small dose had rendered Dr. Hofmann temporarily "crazy." "We were very interested in anything that could make someone schizophrenic," says Greenblatt. If the drug really did induce psychosis for a short time, the Boston doctors reasoned, an antidote which they hoped to find might cure schizophrenia. It would take many years of research to show that LSD did not, in fact, produce a "model psychosis," but to the Boston doctors in 1949, the drug showed incredible promise. Max Rinkel, a neuro-psychiatrist and refugee from Hitler's Germany, was so intrigued by Kauders' presentation that he quickly contacted Sandoz, the huge Swiss pharmaceutical firm where Albert Hofmann worked. Sandoz officials arranged to ship some LSD across the Atlantic.

The first American trip followed. The subject was Robert Hyde, a Vermont-born psychiatrist who was Boston Psychopathic's number-two man. A bold, innovative sort, Hyde took it for granted that there would be no testing program until he tried the drug. With Rinkel and the hospital's senior physician, H. Jackson DeShon looking on, Hyde drank a glass of water with 100 micrograms of LSD in it less than half Hofmann's dose, but still a hefty jolt. DeShon describes Hyde's reaction as "nothing very startling." The perpetually active Hyde insisted on making his normal hospital rounds while his colleagues tagged along. Rinkel later told a scientific conference that Hyde became "quite paranoid, saying that we had not given him anything. He also berated us and said the company had cheated us, given us plain water. That was not Dr. Hyde's normal behavior; he is a very pleasant man." Hyde's first experience was hardly as dramatic as Albert Hofmann's, but then the Boston psychiatrist had not, like Hofmann, set off on a voyage into the complete unknown. For better or worse, LSD had come to America in 1949 and had embarked on a strange trip of its own. Academic researchers would study it in search of knowledge that would benefit all mankind. Intelligence agencies, particularly the CIA, would subsidize and shape the form of much of this work to learn how the drug could be used to break the will of enemy agents, unlock secrets in the minds of trained spies, and otherwise manipulate human behavior. These two strains of helping people and of controlling them would coexist rather comfortably through the 1950s. Then, in the 1960s, LSD would escape from the closed world of scholar and spy, and it would play a major role in causing a cultural upheaval that would have an impact both on global politics and on intimate personal beliefs. The trip would wind up to borrow some hyperbole from the musical Hair with "the youth of America on LSD."

The counterculture generation was not yet out of the nursery, however, when Bob Hyde went tripping: Hyde himself would not become a secret CIA consultant for several years. The CIA and the military intelligence agencies were just setting out on their quest for drugs and other exotic methods to take possession of people's minds. The ancient desire to control enemies through magical spells and potions had come alive again, and several offices within the CIA competed to become the head controllers. Men from the Office of Security's ARTICHOKE program were struggling as they had OSS before them to find a truth drug or hypnotic method that would aid in interrogation. Concurrently, the Technical Services Staff (TSS) was investigating in much greater depth the whole area of applying chemical and biological warfare (CBW) to covert operations. TSS was the lineal descendent of Stanley Lovell's Research and Development unit in OSS, and its officials kept alive much of the excitement and urgency of the World War II days when Lovell had tried to bring out the Peck's Bad Boy in American scientists.

Specialists from TSS furnished backup equipment for secret operations: false papers, bugs, taps, suicide pills, explosive seashells, transmitters hidden in false teeth, cameras in tobacco pouches, invisible inks, and the like. In later years, these gadget wizards from TSS would become known for supplying some of history's more ludicrous landmarks, such as Howard Hunt's ill-fitting red wig; but in the early days of the CIA, they gave promise of transforming the spy world.

Within TSS, there existed a Chemical Division with functions that few others even in TSS knew about. These had to do with using chemicals (and germs) against specific people. From 1951 to 1956, the years when the CIA's interest in LSD peaked, Sidney Gottlieb, a native of the Bronx with a Ph.D. in chemistry from Cal Tech, headed this division. (And for most of the years until 1973, he would oversee TSS's behavioral programs from one job or another.) Only 33 years old when he took over the Chemical Division, Gottlieb had managed to overcome a pronounced stammer and a clubfoot to rise through Agency ranks. Described by several acquaintances as a "compensator," Gottlieb prided himself on his ability, despite his obvious handicaps, to pursue his cherished hobby, folk dancing. On returning from secret missions overseas, he invariably brought back a new step that he would dance with surprising grace. He could call out instructions for the most complicated dances without a break in his voice, infecting others with enthusiasm. A man of unorthodox tastes, Gottlieb lived in a former slave cabin that he had remodeled himself with his wife, the daughter of Presbyterian missionaries in India, and his four chi ldren. Each morning, he rose at 5:30 to milk the goats he kept on his 15 acres outside Washington. The Gottliebs drank only goat's milk, and they made their own cheese. They also raised Christmas trees which they sold to the outside world. Greatly respected by his former colleagues, Gottlieb, who refused to be interviewed for this book, is described as a humanist, a man of intellectual humility and strength, willing to carry out, as one ex-associate puts it, "the tough things that had to be done." This associate fondly recalls, "When you watched him, you gained more and more respect because he was willing to work so hard to get an idea across. He left himself totally exposed. It was more important for us to get the idea than for him not to stutter." One idea he got across was that the Agency should investigate the potential use of the obscure new drug, LSD, as a spy weapon.

At the top ranks of the Clandestine Services (officially called the Directorate of Operations but popularly known as the "dirty tricks department"), Sid Gottlieb had a champion who appreciated his qualities, Richard Helms. For two decades, Gottlieb would move into progressively higher positions in the wake of Helms' climb to the highest position in the Agency. Helms, the tall, smooth "preppie," apparently liked the way the Jewish chemist, who had started out at Manhattan's City College, could thread his way through complicated technical problems and make them understandable to nonscientists. Gottlieb was loyal and he followed orders. Although many people lay in the chain of command between the two men, Helms preferred to avoid bureaucratic niceties by dealing directly with Gottlieb.

On April 3, 1953, Helms proposed to Director Allen Dulles that the CIA set up a program under Gottlieb for "covert use of biological and chemical materials." Helms made clear that the Agency could use these methods in "present and future clandestine operations" and then added, "Aside from the offensive potential, the development of a comprehensive capability in this field . . . gives us a thorough knowledge of the enemy's theoretical potential, thus enabling us to defend ourselves against a foe who might not be as restrained in the use of these techniques as we are." Once again, as it would throughout the history of the behavioral programs, defense justified offense. Ray Cline, often a bureaucratic rival of Helms, notes the spirit in which the future Director pushed this program: "Helms fancied himself a pretty tough cookie. It was fashionable among that group to fancy they were rather impersonal about dangers, risks, and human life. Helms would think it sentimental and foolish to be against something like this."

On April 13, 1953 the same day that the Pentagon announced that any U.S. prisoner refusing repatriation in Korea would be listed as a deserter and shot if caught Allen Dulles approved the program, essentially as put forth by Helms. Dulles took note of the "ultra-sensitive work" involved and agreed that the project would be called MKULTRA.[2] He approved an initial budget of $300,000, exempted the program from normal CIA financial controls, and allowed TSS to start up research projects

"without the signing of the usual contracts or other written agreements." Dulles ordered the Agency's bookkeepers to pay the costs blindly on the signatures of Sid Gottlieb and Willis Gibbons, a former U.S. Rubber executive who headed TSS.

As is so often the case in government, the activity that Allen Dulles approved with MKULTRA was already under way, even before he gave it a bureaucratic structure.

Under the code name MKDELTA, the Clandestine Services had set up procedures the year before to govern the use of CBW products. (MKDELTA now became the operational side of MKULTRA.) Also in 1952, TSS had made an agreement with the Special Operations Division (SOD) of the Army's biological research center at Fort Detrick, Maryland whereby SOD would produce germ weapons for the CIA's use (with the program called MKNAOMI). Sid Gottlieb later testified that the purpose of these programs was "to investigate whether and how it was possible to modify an individual's behavior by covert means. The context in which this investigation was started was that of the height of the Cold War with the Korean War just winding down; with the CIA organizing its resources to liberate Eastern Europe by paramilitary means; and with the threat of Soviet aggression very real and tangible, as exemplified by the recent Berlin airlift" (which occurred in 1948).

In the early days of MKULTRA, the roughly six TSS professionals who worked on the program spent a good deal of their time considering the possibilities of LSD.[3] "The most fascinating thing about it," says one of them, "was that such minute quantities had such a terrific effect." Albert Hofmann had gone off into another world after swallowing less than 1/100,000 of an ounce. Scientists had known about the mind-altering qualities of drugs like mescaline since the late nineteenth century, but LSD was several thousand times more potent. Hashish had been around for millennia, but LSD was roughly a million times stronger (by weight). A two-suitcase suitcase could hold enough LSD to turn on every man, woman, and child in the United States. "We thought about the possibility of putting some in a city water supply and having the citizens wander around in a more or less happy state, not terribly interested in defending themselves," recalls the TSS man. But incapacitating such large numbers of people fell to the Army Chemical Corps, which also tested LSD and even stronger hallucinogens. The CIA was concentrating on individuals. TSS officials understood that LSD distorted a person's sense of reality, and they felt compelled to learn whether it could alter someone's basic loyalties. Could the CIA make spies out of tripping Russians or vice versa? In the early 1950s, when the Agency developed an almost desperate need to know more about LSD, almost no outside information existed on the subject. Sandoz had done some clinical studies, as had a few other places, including Boston Psychopathic, but the work generally had not moved much beyond the horse-and-buggy stage. The MKULTRA team had literally hundreds of questions about LSD's physiological, psychological, chemical, and social effects. Did it have any antidotes? What happened if it were combined with other drugs? Did it affect everyone the same way? What was the effect of doubling the dose? And so on.

TSS first sought answers from academic researchers, who, on the whole, gladly cooperated and let the Agency pick their brains. But CIA officials realized that no one would undertake a quick and systematic study of the drug unless the Agency itself paid the bill. Almost no government or private money was then available for what had been dubbed "experimental psychiatry." Sandoz wanted the drug tested, for its own commercial reasons, but beyond supplying it free to researchers, it would not assume the costs. The National Institutes of Mental Health had an interest in LSD's relationship to mental illness, but CIA officials wanted to know how the drug affected normal people, not sick ones. Only the military services, essentially for the same reasons as the CIA, were willing to sink much money into LSD, and the Agency men were not about to defer to them. They chose instead to take the lead in effect to create a whole new field of research.

Suddenly there was a huge new market for grants in academia, as Sid Gottlieb and his aides began to fund LSD projects at prestigious institutions. The Agency's LSD pathfinders can be identified: Bob Hyde's group at Boston Psychopathic, Harold Abramson at Mt. Sinai Hospital and Columbia University in New York, Carl Pfeiffer at the University of Illinois Medical School, Harris Isbell of the NIMH-sponsored Addiction Research Center in Lexington, Kentucky, Louis Jolyon West at the University of Oklahoma, and Harold Hodge's group at the University of Rochester. The Agency disguised its involvement by passing the money through two conduits: the Josiah Macy, Jr. Foundation, a rich establishment institution which served as a cutout (intermediary) only for a year or two, and the Geschickter Fund for Medical Research, a Washington, D.C. family foundation, whose head, Dr. Charles Geschickter, provided the Agency with a variety of services for more than a decade. Reflexively, TSS officials felt they had to keep the CIA connection secret. They could only "assume," according to a 1955 study, that Soviet scientists understood the drug's "strategic importance" and were capable of making it themselves. They did not want to spur the Russians into starting their own LSD program or into devising countermeasures.

The CIA's secrecy was also clearly aimed at the folks back home. As a 1963 Inspector General's report stated, "Research in the manipulation of human behavior is considered by many authorities in medicine and related fields to be professionally unethical"; therefore, openness would put "in jeopardy" the reputations of the outside researchers. Moreover, the CIA Inspector General declared that disclosure of certain MKULTRA activities could result in "serious adverse reaction" among the American public.

At Boston Psychopathic, there were various levels of concealment. Only Bob Hyde and his boss, the hospital superintendent, knew officially that the CIA was funding the hospital's LSD program from 1952 on, to the tune of about $40,000 a year. Yet, according to another member of the Hyde group, Dr. DeShon, all senior staff understood where the money really came from. "We agreed not to discuss it," says DeShon. "I don't see any objection to this. We never gave it to anyone without his consent and without explaining it in detail." Hospital officials told the volunteer subjects something about the nature of the experiments but nothing about their origins or purpose. None of the subjects had any idea that the CIA was paying for the probing of their minds and would use the results for its own purposes; most of the staff was similarly ignorant.

Like Hyde, almost all the researchers tried LSD on themselves. Indeed, many believed they gained real insight into what it felt like to be mentally ill, useful knowledge for health professionals who spent their lives treating people supposedly sick in the head. Hyde set up a multidisciplinary program virtually unheard of at the time that brought together psychiatrists, psychologists, and physiologists. As subjects, they used each other, hospital patients, and volunteers mostly students from the Boston area. They worked through a long sequence of experiments that served to isolate variable after variable. Palming themselves off as foundation officials, the men from MKULTRA frequently visited to observe and suggest areas of future research. One Agency man, who himself tripped several times under Hyde's general supervision, remembers that he and his colleagues would pass on a nugget that another contractor like Harold Abramson had gleaned and ask Hyde to perform a follow-up test that might answer a question of interest to the Agency. Despite these tangents, the main body of research proceeded in a planned and orderly fashion. The researchers learned that while some subjects seemed to become schizophrenic, many others did not. Surprisingly, true schizophrenics showed little reaction at all to LSD, unless given massive doses. The Hyde group found out that the quality of a person's reaction was determined mainly by the person's basic personality structure (set) and the environment (setting) in which he or she took the drug. The subject's expectation of what would happen also played a major part. More than anything else, LSD tended to intensify the subject's existing characteristics of ten to extremes. A little suspicion could grow into major paranoia, particularly in the company of people perceived as threatening.

Unbeknownst to his fellow researchers, the energetic Dr. Hyde also advised the CIA on using LSD in covert operations. A CIA officer who worked with him recalls:

"The idea would be to give him the details of what had happened [with a case], and he would speculate. As a sharp M.D. in the old-school sense, he would look at things in ways that a lot of recent bright lights couldn't get.... He had a good sense of make-do." The Agency paid Hyde for his time as a consultant, and TSS officials eventually set aside a special MKULTRA subproject as Hyde's private funding mechanism. Hyde received funds from yet another MKULTRA subproject that TSS men created for him in 1954, so he could serve as a cutout for Agency purchases of rare chemicals. His first buy was to be $32,000 worth of corynanthine, a possible antidote to LSD, that would not be traced to the CIA.

Bob Hyde died in 1976 at the age of 66, widely hailed as a pacesetter in mental health. His medical and intelligence colleagues speak highly of him both personally and professionally. Like most of his generation, he apparently considered helping the CIA a patriotic duty. An Agency officer states that Hyde never raised doubts about his covert work. "He wouldn't moralize. He had a lot of trust in the people he was dealing with [from the CIA]. He had pretty well reached the conclusion that if they deci ded to do something [operationally], they had tried whatever else there was and were willing to risk it."

Most of the CIA's academic researchers published articles on their work in professional journals, but those long, scholarly reports often gave an incomplete picture of the research. In effect, the scientists would write openly about how LSD affects a patient's pulse rate, but they would tell only the CIA how the drug could be used to ruin that patient's marriage or memory. Those researchers who were aware of the Agency's sponsorship seldom published anything remotely connected to the instrumental and rather unpleasant questions the MKULTRA men posed for investigation. That was true of Hyde and of Harold Abramson, the New York allergist who became one of the first Johnny Apple seeds of LSD by giving it to a number of his distinguished colleagues. Abramson documented all sorts of experiments on topics like the effects of LSD on Siamese fighting fish and snails,[4] but he never wrote a word about one of his early LSD assignments from the Agency. In a 1953 document, Sid Gottlieb listed subjects he expected Abramson to investigate with the $85,000 the Agency was furnishing him. Gottlieb wanted "operationally pertinent materials along the following lines: a. Disturbance of Memory; b. Discrediting by Aberrant Behavior; c. Alteration of Sex Patterns; d. Eliciting of Information; e. Suggestibility;

f. Creation of Dependence." Dr. Harris Isbell, whose work the CIA funded through Navy cover with the approval of the Director of the National Institutes of Health, published his principal findings, but he did not mention how he obtained his subjects. As Director of the Addiction Research Center at the huge Federal drug hospital in Lexington, Kentucky, he had access to a literally captive population. Inmates heard on the grapevine that if they volunteered for Isbell's program, they would be rewarded either in the drug of their choice or in time off from their sentences. Most of the addicts chose drugs usually heroin or morphine of a purity seldom seen on the street. The subjects signed an approval form, but they were not told the names of the experimental drugs or the probable effects. This mattered little, since the "volunteers" probably would have granted their informed consent to virtually anything to get hard drugs.

Given Isbell's almost unlimited supply of subjects, TSS officials used the Lexington facility as a place to make quick tests of promising but untried drugs and to perform specialized experiments they could not easily duplicate elsewhere. For instance, Isbell did one study for which it would have been impossible to attract student volunteers. He kept seven men on LSD for 77 straight days.[5] Such an experiment is as chilling as it is astonishing both to lovers and haters of LSD. Nearly 20 years after Dr. Isbell's early work, counterculture journalist Hunter S. Thompson delighted and frightened his readers with accounts of drug binges lasting a few days, during which Thompson felt his brain boiling away in the sun, his nerves wrapping around enormous barbed wire forts, and his remaining faculties reduced to their reptilian antecedents. Even Thompson would shudder at the thought of 77 days straight on LSD, and it is doubtful he would joke about the idea. To Dr. Isbell, it was just another experiment. "I have had seven patients who have now been taking the drug for more than 42 days," he wrote in the middle of the test, which he called "the most amazing demonstration of drug tolerance I have ever seen." Isbell tried to "break through this tolerance" by giving triple and quadruple doses of LSD to the inmates.

Filled with intense curiosity, Isbell tried out a wide variety of unproven drugs on his subjects. Just as soon as a new batch of scopolamine, rivea seeds, or bufotenine arrived from the CIA or NIMH, he would start testing. His relish for the task occasionally shone through the dull scientific reports. "I will write you a letter as soon as I can get the stuff into a man or two," he informed his Agency contact.

No corresponding feeling shone through for the inmates, however. In his few reco rded personal comments, he complained that his subjects tended to be afraid of the doctors and were not as open in describing their experiences as the experimenters would have wished. Although Isbell made an effort to "break through the barriers" with the subjects, who were nearly all black drug addicts, Isbell finally decided "in all probability, this type of behavior is to be expected with patients of this type." The subjects have long since scattered, and no one apparently has measured the aftereffects of the more extreme experiments on them.

One subject who could be found spent only a brief time with Dr. Isbell. Eddie Flowers was 19 years old and had been in Lexington for about a year when he signed up for Isbell's program. He lied about his age to get in, claiming he was 21. All he cared about was getting some drugs. He moved into the experimental wing of the hospital where the food was better and he could listen to music. He loved heroin but knew nothing about drugs like LSD. One day he took something in a graham cracker. No one ever told him the name, but his description sounds like it made him tripbadly, to be sure. "It was the worst shit I ever had," he says. He hallucinated and suffered for 16 or 17 hours. "I was frightened. I wouldn't take it again." Still, Flowers earned enough "points" in the experiment to qualify for his "payoff in heroin. All he had to do was knock on a little window down the hall. This was the drug bank. The man in charge kept a list of the amount of the hard drug each inmate had in his account. Flowers just had to say how much he wanted to withdraw and note the method of payment. "If you wanted it in the vein, you got it there," recalls Flowers who now works in a Washington, D.C. drug rehabilitation center.

Dr. Isbell refuses all request for interviews. He did tell a Senate subcommittee in 1975 that he inherited the drug payoff system when he came to Lexington and that "it was the custom in those days.... The ethical codes were not so highly developed, and there was a great need to know in order to protect the public in assessing the potential use of narcotics.... I personally think we did a very excellent job."

For every Isbell, Hyde, or Abramson who did TSS contract work, there were dozens of others who simply served as casual CIA informants, some witting and some not. Each TSS project officer had a skull session with dozens of recognized experts several times a year.

"That was the only way a tiny staff like Sid Gottlieb's could possibly keep on top of the burgeoning behavioral sciences," says an ex-CIA official. "There would be no way you could do it by library research or the Ph.D. dissertation approach." The TSS men always asked their contacts for the names of others they could talk to, and the contacts would pass them on to other interesting scientists.

In LSD research, TSS officers benefited from the energetic intelligence gathering of their contractors, particularly Harold Abramson. Abramson talked regularly to virtually everyone interested in the drug, including the few early researchers not funded by the Agency or the military, and he reported his findings to TSS.

In addition, he served as reporting secretary of two conference series sponsored by the Agency's sometime conduit, the Macy Foundation. These series each lasted over five year periods in the 1950s; one dealt with "Problems of Consciousness" and the other with "Neuropharmacology." Held once a year in the genteel surroundings of the Princeton Inn, the Macy Foundation conferences brought together TSS's (and the military's) leading contractors, as part of a group of roughly 25 with the multidisciplinary background that TSS officials so loved. The participants came from all over the social sciences and included such luminaries as Margaret Mead and Jean Piaget. The topics discussed usually mirrored TSS's interests at the time, and the conferences served as a spawning ground for ideas that allowed researchers to engage in some healthy cross-fertilization.

Beyond the academic world, TSS looked to the pharmaceutical companies as another source on drugs and for a continuing supply of new products to test. TSS's Ray Treichler handled the liaison function, and this secretive little man built up close relationships with many of the industry's key executives. He had a particular knack for convincing them he would not reveal their trade secrets. Sometimes claiming to be from the Army Chemical Corps and sometimes admitting his CIA connection, Treichler would ask for samples of drugs that were either highly poisonous, or, in the words of the onetime director of research of a large company, "caused hypertension, increased blood pressure, or led to other odd physiological activity."

Dealing with American drug companies posed no particular problems for TSS. Most cooperated in any way they could. But relations with Sandoz were more complicated. The giant Swiss firm had a monopoly on the Western world's production of LSD until 1953. Agency officials feared that Sandoz would somehow allow large quantities to reach the Russians. Since information on LSD's chemical structure and effects was publicly available from 1947 on, the Russians could have produced it any time they felt it worthwhile. Thus, the Agency's phobia about Sandoz seems rather irrational, but it unquestionably did exist.

On two occasions early in the Cold War, the entire CIA hierarchy went into a dither over reports that Sandoz might allow large amounts of LSD to reach Communist countries. In 1951 reports came in through military channels that the Russians had obtained some 50 million doses from Sandoz. Horrendous visions of what the Russians might do with such a stockpile circulated in the CIA, where officials did not find out the intelligence was false for several years. There was an even greater uproar in 1953 when more reports came in, again through military intelligence, that Sandoz wanted to sell the astounding quantity of 10 kilos (22 pounds) of LSD enough for about 100 million doses on the open market.

A top-level coordinating committee which included CIA and Pentagon representatives unanimously recommended that the Agency put up $240,000 to buy it all. Allen Dulles gave his approval, and off went two CIA representatives to Switzerland, presumably with a black bag full of cash. They met with the president of Sandoz and other top executives. The Sandoz men stated that the company had never made anything approaching 10 kilos of LSD and that, in fact, since the discovery of the drug 10 years before, its total production had been only 40 grams (about 1 1/2 ounces). [6] The manufacturing process moved quite slowly at that time because Sandoz used real ergot, which could not be grown in large quantities. Nevertheless, Sandoz executives, being good Swiss businessmen, offered to supply the U.S. Government with 100 grams weekly for an indefinite period, if the Americans would pay a fair price. Twice the Sandoz president thanked the CIA men for being willing to take the nonexistent 10 kilos off the market. While he said the company now regretted it had ever discovered LSD in the first place, he promised that Sandoz would not let the drug fall into communist hands. The Sandoz president mentioned that various Americans had in the past made "covert and sideways" approaches to Sandoz to find out about LSD, and he agreed to keep the U.S. Government informed of all future production and shipping of the drug. He also agreed to pass on any intelligence about Eastern European interest in LSD. The Sandoz executives ask ed only that their arrangement with the CIA be kept "in the very strictest confidence." All around the world, the CIA tried to stay on top of the LSD supply. Back home in Indianapolis, Eli Lilly & Company was even then working on a process to synthesize LSD. Agency officials felt uncomfortable having to rely on a foreign company for their supply, and in 1953 they asked Lilly executives to make them up a batch, which the company subsequently donated to the government. Then, in 1954, Lilly scored a major breakthrough when its researchers worked out a complicated 12- to 15-step process to manufacture first lysergic acid (the basic building block) and then LSD itself from chemicals available on the open market. Given a relatively sophisticated lab, a competent chemist could now make LSD without a supply of the hard-to-grow ergot fungus. Lilly officers confidentially informed the government of their triumph. They also held an unprecedented press conference to trumpet their synthesis of lysergic acid, but they did not publish for another five years their success with the closely related LSD.

TSS officials soon sent a memo to Allen Dulles, explaining that the Lilly discovery was important because the government henceforth could buy LSD in "tonnage quantities," which made it a potential chemical-warfare agent. The memo writer pointed out, however, that from the MKULTRA point of view, the discovery made no difference since TSS was working on ways to use the drug only in small-scale covert operations, and the Agency had no trouble getting the limited amounts it needed. But now the Army Chemical Corps and the Air Force could get their collective hands on enough LSD to turn on the world. Sharing the drug with the Army here, setting up research programs there, keeping track of it everywhere, the CIA generally presided over the LSD scene during the 1950s. To be sure, the military services played a part and funded their own research programs.[7] So did the National Institutes of Health, to a lesser extent. Yet both the military services and the NIH allowed themselves to be co-opted by the CIA as funding conduits and intelligence sources. The Food and Drug Administration also supplied the Agency with confidential information on drug testing. Of the Western world's two LSD manufacturers, one Eli Lilly gave its entire (small) supply to the CIA and the military. The other Sandoz informed Agency representatives every time it shipped the drug. If somehow the CIA missed anything with all these sources, the Agency still had its own network of scholar-spies, the most active of whom was Harold Abramson who kept it informed of all new developments in the LSD field. While the CIA may not have totally cornered the LSD market in the 1950s, it certainly had a good measure of control the very power it sought over human behavior. Sid Gottlieb and his colleagues at MKULTRA soaked up pools of information about LSD and other drugs from all outside sources, but they saved for themselves the research they really cared about: operational testing. Trained in both science and espionage, they believed they could bridge the huge gap between experimenting in the laboratory and using drugs to outsmart the enemy.

Therefore the leaders of MKULTRA initiated their own series of drug experiments that paralleled and drew information from the external research. As practical men of action, unlimited by restrictive academic standards, they did not feel the need to keep their tests in strict scientific sequence. They wanted results now not next year. If a drug showed promise, they felt no qualms about trying it out operationally before all the test results came in. As early as 1953, for instance, Sid Gottlieb went overseas with a supply of a hallucinogenic drug almost certainly LSD. With unknown results, he arranged for it to be slipped to a speaker at a political rally, presumably to see if it would make a fool of him. These were freewheeling days within the CIA then a young agency whose bureaucratic arteries had not started to harden. The leaders of MKULTRA had high hopes for LSD. It appeared to be an awesome substance, whose advent, like the ancient discovery of fire, would bring out primitive responses of fear and worship in people. Only a speck of LSD could take a strongwilled man and turn his most basic perceptions into willowy shadows. Time, space, right, wrong, order, and the notion of what was possible all took on new faces. LSD was a frightening weapon, and it took a swashbuckling boldness for the leaders of MKULTRA to prepare for operational testing the way they first did: by taking it themselves. They tripped at the office. They tripped at safehouses, and sometimes they traveled to Boston to trip under Bob Hyde's penetrating gaze. Always they observed, questioned, and analyzed each other. LSD seemed to remove inhibitions, and they thought they could use it to find out what went on in the mind underneath all the outside acts and pretensions. If they could get at the inner self, they reasoned, they could better manipulate a person or keep him from being manipulated. The men from MKULTRA were trying LSD in the early 1950s when Stalin lived and Joe McCarthy raged. It was a foreboding time, even for those not professionally responsible for doomsday poisons. Not surprisingly, Sid Gottlieb and colleagues who tried LSD did not think of the drug as something that might enhance creativity or cause transcendental experiences. Those notions would not come along for years. By and large, there was thought to be only one prevailing and hardheaded version of reality, which was "normal," and everything else was "crazy." An LSD trip made people temporarily crazy, which meant potentially vulnerable to the CIA men (and mentally ill, to the doctors). The CIA experimenters did not trip for the experience itself, or to get high, or to sample new realities. They were testing a weapon; for their purposes, they might as well have been in a ballistics lab.

Despite this prevailing attitude in the Agency, at least one MKULTRA pioneer recalls that his first trip expanded his conception of reality: "I was shaky at first, but then I just experienced it and had a high. I felt that everything was working right. I was like a locomotive going at top efficiency. Sure there was stress, but not in a debilitating way. It was like the stress of an engine pulling the longest train it's ever pulled." This CIA veteran describes seeing all the colors of the rainbow growing out of cracks in the sidewalk. He had always disliked cracks as signs of imperfection, but suddenly the cracks became natural stress lines that measured the vibrations of the universe. He saw people with blemished faces, which he had previously found slightly repulsive. "I had a change of values about faces," he says. "Hooked noses or crooked teeth would become beautiful for that person. Something had turned loose in me, and all I had done was shift my attitude. Reality hadn't changed, but I had. That was all the difference in the world between seeing something ugly and seeing truth and beauty."

At the end of this day of his first trip, the CIA man and his colleagues had an alcohol party to help come down. "I had a lump in my throat," he recalls wistfully. Although he had never done such a thing before, he wept in front of his coworkers. "I didn't want to leave it. I felt I would be going back to a place where I wouldn't be able to hold on to this kind of beauty. I felt very unhappy. The people who wrote the report on me said I had experienced depression, but they didn't understand why I felt so bad. They thought I had had a bad trip."

This CIA man says that others with his general personality tended to enjoy themselves on LSD, but that the stereotypical CIA operator (particularly the extreme counterintelligence type who mistrusts everyone and everything) usually had negative reactions. The drug simply exaggerated his paranoia. For these operators, the official notes, "dark evil things would begin to lurk around," and they would decide the experimenters were plotting against them.

The TSS team understood it would be next to impossible to allay the fears of this ever-vigilant, suspicious sort, although they might use LSD to disorient or generally confuse such a person. However, they toyed with the idea that LSD could be applied to better advantage on more trusting types. Could a clever foe "re educate" such a person with a skillful application of LSD? Speculating on this question, the CIA official states that while under the influence of the drug, "you tend to have a more global view of things. I found it awfully hard when stoned to maintain the notion: I am a U.S. citizen my country right or wrong.... You tend to have these good higher feelings. You are more open to the brotherhood-of-man idea and more susceptible to the seamy sides of your own society.... I think this is exactly what happened during the 1960s, but it didn't make people more communist. It just made them less inclined to identify with the U.S. They took a plague-on-both-your-houses position."

As to whether his former colleagues in TSS had the same perception of the LSD experience, the man replies, "I think everybody understood that if you had a good trip, you had a kind of above-it-all look into reality. What we subsequently found was that when you came down, you remembered the experience, but you didn't switch identities. You really didn't have that kind of feeling. You weren't as suspicious of people. You listened to them, but you also saw through them more easily and clearly. We decided that this wasn't the kind of thing that was going to make a guy into a turncoat to his own country. The more we worked with it, the less we became convinced this was what the communists were using for brainwashing."

The early LSD tests both outside and inside the Agency had gone well enough that the MKULTRA scientists moved forward to the next stage on the road to "field" use: They tried the drug out on people by surprise. This, after all, would be the way an operator would give or get the drug. First they decided to spring it on each other without warning. They agreed among themselves that a coworker might slip it to them at any time. (In what may be an apocryphal story, a TSS staff man says that one of his former colleagues always brought his own bottle of wine to office parties and carried it with him at all times.) Unwitting doses became an occupational hazard. MKULTRA men usually took these unplanned trips in stride, but occasionally they turned nasty. Two TSS veterans tell the story of a coworker who drank some LSD-laced coffee during his morning break. Within an hour, states one veteran, "he sort of knew he had it, but he couldn't pull himself together. Sometimes you take it, and you start the process of maintaining your composure. But this grabbed him before he was aware, and it got away from him." Filled with fear, the CIA man fled the building that then housed TSS, located on the edge of the Mall near Washington's great monuments. Having lost sight of him, his colleagues searched frantically, but he managed to escape. The hallucinating Agency man worked his way across one of the Potomac bridges and apparently cut his last links with rationality. "He reported afterwards that every automobile that came by was a terrible monster with fantastic eyes, out to get him personally," says the veteran. "Each time a car passed, he would huddle down against the parapet, terribly frightened. It was a real horror trip for him. I mean, it was hours of agony. It was like a dream that never stops with someone chasing you."

After about an hour and a half, the victim's coworkers found him on the Virginia side of the Potomac, crouched under a fountain, trembling. "It was awfully hard to persuade him that his friends were his friends at that point," recalls the colleague. "He was alone in the world, and everyone was hostile. He'd become a full-blown paranoid. If it had lasted for two weeks, we'd have plunked him in a mental hospital." Fortunately for him, the CIA man came down by the end of the day. This was not the first, last, or most tragic bad trip in the Agency's testing program.[8]

By late 1953, only six months after Allen Dulles had formally created MKULTRA, TSS officials were already well into the last stage of their research: systematic use of LSD on "outsiders" who had no idea they had received the drug. These victims simply felt their moorings slip away in the midst of an ordinary day, for no apparent reason, and no one really knew how they would react.

Sid Gottlieb was ready for the operational experiments. He considered LSD to be such a secret substance that he gave it a private code name ("serunim") by which he and his colleagues often referred to the drug, even behind the CIA's heavily guarded doors. In retrospect, it seems more than bizarre that CIA officialsmen responsible for the nation's intelligence and alertness when the hot and cold wars against the communists were at their peak would be sneaking LSD into each other's coffee cups and thereby subjecting themselves to the unknown frontiers of experimental drugs. But these side trips did not seem to change the sense of reality of Gottlieb or of high CIA officials, who took LSD on several occasions. The drug did not transform Gottlieb out of the mind set of a master scientist-spy, a protégé of Richard Helms in the CIA's inner circle. He never stopped milking his goats at 5:30 every morning.

The CIA leaders' early achievements with LSD were impressive. They had not invented the drug, but they had gotten in on the American ground floor and done nearly everything else. They were years ahead of the scientific literature let alone the public and spies win by being ahead. They had monopolized the supply of LSD and dominated the research by creating much of it themselves. They had used money and other blandishments to build a network of scientists and doctors whose work they could direct and turn to their own use. All that remained between them and major espionage successes was the performance of the drug in the field.

That, however, turned out to be a considerable stumbling block. LSD had an incredibly powerful effect on people, but not in ways the CIA could predict or control.

Notes

The description of Robert Hyde's first trip came from interviews with Dr. Milton Greenblatt, Dr. J. Herbert DeShon, and a talk by Max Rinkel at the 2nd Macy Conference on Neuropharmacology, pp. 235-36, edited by Harold A. Abramson, 1955: Madison Printing Company. The descriptions of TSS and Sidney Gottlieb came from interviews with Ray Cline, John Stockwell, about 10 other ex-CIA officers, and other friends of Gottlieb.

Memos quoted on the early MKULTRA program include Memorandum from ADDP Helms to DCI Dulles, 4/3/53, Tab A, pp. 1-2 (quoted in Church Committee Report, Book I); APF A-1, April 13, 1953, Memorandum for Deputy Director (Administration, Subject: Project MKULTRA Extremely Sensitive Research and Development Program; #A/B,I,64/6, 6 February 1952, Memorandum for the Record, Subject: Contract with [deleted] #A/B,I,64/29, undated, Memorandum for Technical Services Staff, Subject: Alcohol Antagonists and Accelerators, Research and Development Project. The Gottlieb quote is from Hearing before the Subcommittee on Health and Scientific Research of the Senate Committee on Human Resources, September 21, 1977, p. 206.

The background data on LSD came particularly from The Beyond Within: The LSD Story by Sidney Cohen (New York: Atheneum, 1972). Other sources included Origins of Psychopharmacology: From CPZ to LSD by Anne E. Caldwell (Springfield, III.: Charles C. Thomas, 1970) and Document 352, "An OSI Study of the Strategic Medical Importance of LSD-25," 30 August 1955.

TSS's use of outside researchers came from interviews with four former TSSers. MKULTRA Subprojects 8, 10, 63, and 66 described Robert Hyde's work. Subprojects 7, 27, and 40 concerned Harold Abramson. Hodge's work was in subprojects 17 and 46. Carl Pfeiffer's Agency connection, along with Hyde's, Abramson's, and Isbell's, was laid out by Lyman B. Kirkpatrick, Memorandum for the Record, 1 December 1953, Subject: Conversation with Dr. Willis Gibbons of TSS re Olson Case (found at p. 1030, Kennedy Subcommittee 1975 Biomedical and Behavioral Research Hearings). Isbell's testing program was also described at those hearings, as it was in Document # 14, 24 July, 1953, Memo For: Liaison & Security Officer/TSS, Subject #71 An Account of the Chemical Division's Contacts in the National Institute of Health; Document #37, 14 July 1954, subject [deleted]; and Document # 41, 31 August, 1956, subject; trip to Lexington, Ky., 21-23 August 1956. Isbell's program was further described in a "Report on ADAMHA Involvement in LSD Research," found at p. 993 of 1975 Kennedy subcommittee hearings. The firsthand account of the actual testing came from an interview with Edward M. Flowers, Washington, D.C. The section on TSS's noncontract informants came from interviews with TSS sources, reading the proceedings of the Macy Conferences on "Problems of Consciousness" and "Neuropharmacology," and interviews with several participants including Sidney Cohen, Humphrey Osmond, and Hudson Hoagland. The material on CIA's relations with Sandoz and Eli Lilly came from Document #24, 16 November, 1953, Subject: ARTICHOKE Conference; Document #268, 23 October, 1953, Subject: Meeting in Director's Office at 1100 hours on 23 October with Mr. Wisner and [deleted]; Document # 316, 6 January, 1954, Subject: Lysergic Acid Diethylamide (LSD25); and Document #338, 26 October 1954, Subject: Potential Large Scale Availability of LSD through newly discovered synthesis by [deleted]; interviews with Sandoz and Lilly former executives; interviews with TSS sources; and Sidney Gottlieb's testimony before Kennedy subcommittee, 1977, p. 203.

Henry Beecher's US government connections were detailed in his private papers, in a report on the Swiss-

LSD death to the CIA at p. 396, Church Committee Report, Book I, and in interviews with two of his former associates.

The description of TSS's internal testing progression comes from interviews with former staff members. The short reference to Sid Gottlieb's arranging for LSD to be given a speaker at a political rally comes from Document #A/B, II, 26/8, 9 June 1954, Subject: MKULTRA. Henry Beecher's report to the CIA on the Swiss suicide is found at p. 396, Church Committee Report, Book I.

Footnotes

1. During the 1950s, Boston Psychopathic changed its name to Massachusetts Mental Health Center, the name it bears today.
2. Pronounced M-K-ULTRA. The MK digraph simply identified it as a TSS project. As for the ULTRA part, it may have had its etymological roots in the most closely guarded Anglo-American World War II intelligence secret, the ULTRA program, which handled the cracking of German military codes. While good espionage tradecraft called for cryptonyms to have no special meaning, wartime experiences were still very much on the minds of men like Allen Dulles.
3. By no means did TSS neglect other drugs. It looked at hundreds of others from cocaine to nicotine, with special emphasis on special-purpose substances. One 1952 memo talked about the urgent operational need for a chemical "producing general listlessness and lethargy." Another mentioned finding a TSS later did a potion to accelerate the effects of liquor, called an "alcohol extender."
4. As happened to Albert Hofmann the first time, Abramson once unknowingly ingested some LSD, probably by swallowing water from his spiked snail tank. He started to feel bad, but with his wife's help, he finally pinpointed the cause. According to brain and dolphin expert John Lilly, who heard the story from Mrs. Abramson, Harold was greatly relieved that his discomfort was not grave. "Oh, it's not hing serious," he said. "It's just an LSD psychosis. I'll just go to bed and sleep it off."

5. Army researchers, as usual running about five years behind the CIA, became interested in the sustained use of LSD as an interrogation device during 1961 field tests (called Operation THIRD CHANCE). The Army men tested the drug in Europe on nine foreigners and one American, a black soldier named James Thornwell, accused of stealing classified documents. While Thornwell was reacting to the drug under extremely stressful conditions, his captors threatened "to extend the state indefinitely, even to a permanent condition of insanity," according to an Army document. Thornwell is now suing the U.S. government for $30 million. In one of those twists that Washington insiders take for granted and outsiders do not quite believe, Terry Lenzner, a partner of the same law firm seeking this huge sum for Thornwell, is the lawyer for Sid Gottlieb, the man who oversaw the 77-day trips at Lexington and even more dangerous LSD testing.

6. A 1975 CIA document clears up the mystery of how the Agency's military sources could have made such a huge error in estimating Sandoz's LSD supply (and probably also explains the earlier inaccurate report that the Russians had bought 50,000,000 doses). What happened, according to the document, was that the U.S. military attach in Switzerland did not know the difference between a milligram (1/1,000 of a gram) and a kilogram (1,000 grams). This mix-up threw all his calculations off by a factor of 1,000,000.

7. Military security agencies supported the LSD work of such well-known researchers as Amedeo Marrazzi of the University of Minnesota and Missouri Institute of Psychiatry, Henry Beecher of Harvard and Massachusetts General Hospital, Charles Savage while he was at the Naval Medical Research Institute, James Dille of the University of Washington, Gerald Klee of the University of Maryland Medical School, Neil Burch of Baylor University (who performed later experiments for the CIA), and Paul Hoch and James Cattell of the New York State Psychiatric Institute, whose forced injections of a mescaline derivative led to the 1953 death of New York tennis professional Harold Blauer. (Dr. Cattell later told Army investigators, "We didn't know whether it was dog piss or what it was we were giving him.")

8. TSS officials had long known that LSD could be quite dangerous. In 1952, Harvard Medical School's Henry Beecher who regularly gave the Agency information on his talks with European colleagues, reported that a Swiss doctor had suffered severe depression after taking the drug and had killed herself three weeks later. Concerning the Case of Dr. Frank Olsen

In November 1953, Sid Gottlieb decided to test LSD on a group of scientists from the Army Chemical Corps' Special Operations Division (SOD) at Fort Detrick in Frederick, Maryland. Although the Clandestine Services hierarchy had twice put TSS under strict notice not to use LSD without permission from above, Gottlieb must have felt that trying the drug on SOD men was not so different from giving it to his colleagues at the office. After all, officials at TSS and SOD worked intimately together, and they shared one of the darkest secrets of the Cold War: that the U.S. government maintained the capability which it would use at times to kill or incapacitate selected people with biological weapons. Only a handful of the highest CIA officials knew that TSS was paying SOD about $200,000 a year in return for operational systems to infect foes with disease.

Gottlieb planned to drop the LSD on the SOD men in the splendid isolation of a three-day working retreat. Twice a year, the SOD and TSS men who collaborated on MKNAOMI, their joint program, held a planning session at a remote site where they could brainstorm without interruption. On November 18, 1953, they gathered at Deep Creek Lodge, a log building in the woods of Western Maryland. It had been built as a Boy Scout camp 25 years earlier. Surrounded by the water of a mountain lake on three sides, with the peaks of the Appalachian chain looking down over the thick forest, the lodge was isolated enough for even the most security conscious spy. Only an occasional hunter was likely to wander through after the summer months.

Dr. John Schwab, who had founded SOD in 1950, Lt. Colonel Vincent Ruwet, its current chief, and Dr. Frank Olson, its temporary head earlier that year, led the D etrick group. These germ warriors came under the cover of being wildlife writers and lecturers off on a busman's holiday. They carefully removed the Fort Detrick parking stickers from their cars before setting out. Sid Gottlieb brought three co-workers from the Agency, including his deputy Robert Lashbrook. They met in the living room of the lodge, in front of a roaring blaze in the huge walk-in fireplace. Then they split off into smaller groups for specialized meetings. The survivors among those who attended these sessions remain as tight-lipped as ever, willing to share a few details of the general atmosphere but none of the substance. However, from other sources at Fort Detrick and from government documents, the MKNAOMI research can be pieced together. It was this program that was discussed during the fateful retreat. Under MKNAOMI, the SOD men developed a whole arsenal of toxic substances for CIA use. If Agency operators needed to kill someone in a few seconds with, say, a suicide pill, SOD provided super-deadly shellfish toxin.[1] On his ill-fated U-2 flight over the Soviet Union in 1960, Francis Gary Powers carried and chose not to use a drill bit coated with this poison concealed in a silver dollar. While perfect for someone anxious to die or kill instantly, shellfish toxin offered no time to escape and could be traced easily. More useful for assassination, CIA and SOD men decided, was botulinum. With an incubation period of 8 to 12 hours, it allowed the killer time to separate himself from the deed. Agency operators would later supply pills laced with this lethal food poison to its Mafia allies for inclusion in Fidel Castro's milkshake. If CIA officials wanted an assassination to look like a death from natural causes, they could choose from a long list of deadly diseases that normally occurred in particular countries. Thus in 1960, Clandestine Services chief Richard Bissell asked Sid Gottlieb to pick out an appropriate malady to kill the Congo's Patrice Lumumba. Gottlieb told the Senate investigators that he selected one that "was supposed to produce a disease that was . . . indigenous to that area [of West Africa] and that could be fatal." Gottlieb personally carried the bacteria to the Congo, but this murderous operation was scrubbed before Lumumba could be infected. (The Congolese leader was killed shortly thereafter under circumstances that still are not clear.) When CIA operators merely wanted to be rid of somebody temporarily, SOD stockpiled for them about a dozen diseases and toxins of varying strengths. At the relatively benign end of the SOD list stood Staph. enterotoxin, a mild form of food poisoning mild compared to botulinum. This Staph. infection almost never killed and simply incapacitated its victim for 3 to 6 hours. Under the skilled guidance of Sid Gottlieb's wartime predecessor, Stanley Lovell, OSS had used this very substance to prevent Nazi official Hjalmar Schacht from attending an economic conference during the war. More virulent in the SOD arsenal was Venezuelan equine encephalomyelitis virus. It usually immobilized a person for 2 to 5 days and kept him in a weakened state for several more weeks. If the Agency wanted to incapacitate someone for a period of months, SOD had two different kinds of brucellosis.[2]

A former senior official at Fort Detrick was kind enough to run me through all the germs and toxins SOD kept for the CIA, listing their advantages and disadvantages. Before doing so, he emphasized that SOD was also trying to work out ways to protect U.S. citizens and installations from attack with similar substances. "You can't have a serious defense," he says, "unless someone has thought about offense." He stated that Japan made repeated biological attacks against China during World War II which was one reason for starting the American program.[3] He knows of no use since by the Soviet Union or any other power.

According to the Detrick official, anyone contemplating use of a biological product had to consider many other factors besides toxicity and incubation period.

Can the germ be detected easily and countered with a vaccine? He notes that anthrax, a fatal disease (when inhaled) that SOD stored for CIA, has the advantage of symptoms that resemble pneumonia; similarly, Venezuelan equine encephalomyelitis can be mistaken for the grippe. While vaccines do exist for many of the stockpiled diseases, SOD was forever developing more virulent strains. "I don't know of any organism susceptible to a drug that can't be made more resistant," states the Detrick man.

Did the disease have a high degree of secondary spread? SOD preferred it not to, because these germ warfare men did not want to start epidemic that was the job of others at Fort Detrick.

Was the organism stable? How did humidity affect it? SOD considered these and many other factors.

To the CIA, perhaps the most important question was whether it could covertly deliver the germ to infect the right person. One branch of SOD specialized in building delivery systems, the most famous of which now is the dart gun fashioned out of a .45 pistol that ex-CIA Director William Colby displayed to the world at a 1975 Senate hearing. The Agency had long been after SOD to develop a "non-discernible microbioinoculator" which could give people deadly shots that, according to a CIA document, could not be "easily detected upon a detailed autopsy." SOD also rigged up aerosol sprays that could be fired by remote control, including a fluorescent starter that was activated by turning on the light, a cigarette lighter that sprayed when lit, and an engine head bolt that shot off as the engine heated. "If you're going to infect people, the most likely way is respiratory," notes the high Detrick official. "Everybody breathes, but you might not get them to eat."

Frank Olson specialized in the airborne delivery of disease. He had been working in the field ever since 1943, when he came to Fort Detrick as one of the original military officers in the U. S. biological warfare program. Before the end of the war, he developed a painful ulcer condition that led him to seek a medical discharge from the uniformed military, but he had stayed on as a civilian. He joined SOD when it started in 1950. Obviously good at what he did, Olson served for several months as acting chief of SOD in 1952-53 but asked to be relieved when the added stress caused his ulcer to flare up. He happily returned to his lesser post as a branch chief, where he had fewer administrative duties and could spend more time in the laboratory. A lover of practical jokes, Olson was very popular among his many friends. He was an outgoing man, but, like most of his generation, he kept his inner feelings to himself. His great passion was his family, and he spent most of his spare time playing with his three kids and helping around the house. He had met his wife while they both studied at the University of Wisconsin.

Olson attended all the sessions and apparently did everything expected of him during the first two days at the lodge. After dinner on Thursday, November 19, 1953 the same day that a Washington Post editorial decried the use of dogs in chemical experiments Olson shared a drink of Cointreau with all but two of the men present. (One had a heart condition; the other, a reformed alcoholic, did not drink.) Unbeknownst to the SOD men, Sid Gottlieb had decided to spike the liqueur with LSD.[4]

"To me, everyone was pretty normal," says SOD's Benjamin Wilson. "No one was aware anything had happened until Gottlieb mentioned it. [20 minutes after the drink] Gottlieb asked if we had noticed anything wrong. Everyone was aware, once it was brought to their attention." They tried to continue their discussion, but once the drug took hold, the meeting deteriorated into laughter and boisterous conversation. Two of the SOD men apparently got into an all-night philosophical conversation that had nothing to do with biological warfare. Ruwet remembers it as "the most frightening experience I ever had or hope to have." Ben Wilson recalls that "Olson was psychotic. He couldn't understand what happened. He thought someone was playing tricks on him.... One of his favorite expressions was 'You guys are a bunch of thespians.'"

Olson and most of the others became increasingly uncomfortable and could not sleep.[5] When the group gathered in the morning, Olson was still agitated, obviously disturbed, as were several of his colleagues. The meeting had turned sour, and no one really wanted to do more business. They all straggled home during the day. Alice Olson remembers her husband coming in before dinner that evening: "He said nothing. He just sat there. Ordinarily when he came back from a trip, he'd tell me about the things he could what they had to eat, that sort of thing. During dinner, I said, 'It's a damned shame the adults in this family don't communicate anymore.' He said, 'Wait until the kids get to bed and I'll talk to you.' " Later that night, Frank Olson told his wife he had made "a terrible mistake," that his colleagues had laughed at him and humiliated him. Mrs. Olson assured him that the others were his friends, that they would not make fun of him. Still, Olson would not tell her any more. He kept his fears bottled up inside, and he shared nothing of his growing feeling that someone was out to get him. Alice Olson was accustomed to his keeping secrets. Although she realized he worked on biological warfare, they never talked about it. She had had only little glimpses of his profession. He complained about the painful shots he was always taking.[6] He almost never took a bath at home because he showered upon entering and leaving his office every day. When a Detrick employee died of anthrax (one of three fatalities in the base's 27-year history), Frank Olson told his wife the man had died of pneumonia.

Alice Olson had never even seen the building where her husband worked. Fort Detrick was built on the principle of concentric circles, with secrets concealed inside secrets. To enter the inner regions where SOD operated, one needed not only the highest security clearance but a "need to know" authorization. Her husband was not about to break out of a career of government imposed secrecy to tell her about the TOP SECRET experiment that Sid Gottlieb had performed on him. The Olsons spent an uncommunicative weekend together. On Sunday they sat on the davenport in their living room, holding hands something they had not done for a long time. "It was a rotten November day," recalls Mrs. Olson. "The fog outside was so thick you could hardly see out the front door. Frank's depression was dreadful." Finally, she recalls, they packed up the three young children, and went off to the local theater. The film turned out to be Luther. "It was a very serious movie," remembers Mrs. Olson, "not a good one to see when you're depressed."

The following day, Olson appeared at 7:30 A.M. in the office of his boss, Lieutenant Colonel Ruwet. To Ruwet, Olson seemed "agitated." He told Ruwet he wanted either to quit or be fired. Taken aback, Ruwet reassured Olson that his conduct at the lodge had been "beyond reproach." Seemingly satisfied and relieved, Olson agreed to stay on and spent the rest of the day on routine SOD business. That evening, the Olsons spent their most lighthearted evening since before the retreat to Deep Creek Lodge, and they planned a farewell party for a colleague the following Saturday night.

Tuesday morning, Ruwet again arrived at his office to find a disturbed Frank Olson waiting for him. Olson said he felt "all mixed up" and questioned his own competence. He said that he should not have left the Army during the war because of his ulcer and that he lacked the ability to do his present work. After an hour, Ruwet decided Olson needed "psychiatric attention." Ruwet apparently felt that the CIA had caused Olson's problem in the first place, and instead of sending him to the base hospital, he called Gottlieb's deputy Robert Lashbrook to arrange for Olson to see a psychiatrist.

After a hurried conference, Lashbrook and Gottlieb decided to send Olson to Dr. Harold Abramson in New York. Abramson had no formal training in psychiatry and did not hold himself out to be a psychiatrist. He was an allergist and immunologist interested in treating the problems of the mind. Gottlieb chose him because he had a TOP SECRET CIA security clearance and because he had been working with LSD under Agency contract for several years. Gottlieb was obviously protecting his own bureaucratic position by not letting anyone outside TSS know what he had done. Having failed to observe the order to seek higher approval for LSD use, Gottlieb proceeded to violate another CIA regulation. It states, in effect, that whenever a potential flap arises that might embarrass the CIA or lead to a break in secrecy, those involved should immediately call the Office of Security. For health problems like Olson's, Security and the CIA medical office keep a long list of doctors (and psychiatrists) with TOP SECRET clearance who can provide treatment.

Gottlieb had other plans for Frank Olson, and off to New York went the disturbed SOD biochemist in the company of Ruwet and Lashbrook. Olson alternately improved and sank deeper and deeper into his feelings of depression, inadequacy, guilt, and paranoia. He began to think that the CIA was putting a stimulant like Benzedrine in his coffee to keep him awake and that it was the Agency that was out to get him. That first day in New York, Abramson saw Olson at his office. Then at 10:30 in the evening, the allergist visited Olson in his hotel room, armed with a bottle of bourbon and a bottle of the sedative Nembutalan unusual combination for a doctor to give to someone with symptoms like Olson's.

Before Olson's appointment with Dr. Abramson the following day, he and Ruwet accompanied Lashbrook on a visit to a famous New York magician named John Mulholland, whom TSS had put under contract to prepare a manual that would apply "the magician's art to covert activities." An expert at pulling rabbits out of hats could easily find new and better ways to slip drugs into drinks, and Gottlieb signed up Mulholland to work on, among other things, "the delivery of various materials to unwitting subjects." Lashbrook thought that the magician might amuse Olson, but Olson became "highly suspicious." The group tactfully cut their visit short, and Lashbrook dropped Olson off at Abramson's office. After an hour's consultation with Abramson that afternoon the allergist gave Olson permission to return to Frederick the following day, Thanksgiving, to be with his family. Olson, Ruwet, and Lashbrook had plane reservations for Thursday morning, so that night, in a preholiday attempt to lift spirits, they all went to see the Rodgers and Hammerstein hit musical, Me and Juliet. Olson became upset during the first act and told Ruwet that he knew people were waiting outside the theater to arrest him. Olson and Ruwet left the show at intermission, and the two old friends walked back to the Statler Hotel, near Penn Station. Later, while Ruwet slept in the next bed, Olson crept out of the hotel and wandered the streets. Gripped by the delusion that he was following Ruwet's orders, he tore up all his paper money and threw his wallet down a chute. At 5:30 A.M., Ruwet and Lashbrook found him sitting in the Statler lobby with his hat and coat on.

They checked out of the hotel and caught the plane back to Washington. An SOD driver picked Olson and Ruwet up at National Airport and started to drive them back to Frederick. As they drove up Wisconsin Avenue, Olson had the driver pull into a Howard Johnson's parking lot. He told Ruwet that he was "ashamed" to see his family in his present state and that he feared he might become violent with his children. Ruwet suggested he go back to see Abramson in New York, and Olson agreed. Ruwet and Olson drove back to Lashbrook's apartment on New Hampshire Avenue off Dupont Circle, and Lashbrook summoned Sid Gottlieb from Thanksgiving dinner in Virginia. All agreed that Lashbrook would take Olson back to New York while Ruwet would go back to Frederick to explain the situation to Mrs. Olson and to see his own family. (Ruwet was Olson's friend, whereas Lashbrook was no more than a professional acquaintance. Olson's son Eric believes that his father's mental state suffered when Ruwet left him in the hands of the CIA's Lashbrook, especially since Olson felt the CIA was "out to get him.") Olson and Lashbrook flew to LaGuardia airport and went to see Abramson at his Long Island office. Then the two men ate a joyless Thanksgiving dinner at a local restaurant. Friday morning Abramson drove them into Manhattan. Abramson, an allergist, finally realized that he had more on his hands with Olson than he could handle, and he recommended hospitalization. He wrote afterward that Olson "was in a psychotic state . . . with delusions of persecution." Olson agreed to enter Chestnut Lodge, a Rockville, Maryland sanitarium that had CIA-cleared psychiatrists on the staff. They could not get plane reservations until the next morning, so Olson and Lashbrook decided to spend one last night at the Statler. They took a room on the tenth floor. With his spirits revived, Olson dared to call his wife for the first time since he had left originally for New York. They had a pleasant talk, which left her feeling better.

In the early hours of the morning, Lashbrook woke up just in time to see Frank Olson crash through the drawn blinds and closed window on a dead run.

Within seconds, as a crowd gathered around Olson's shattered body on the street below, the cover-up started. Lashbrook called Gottlieb to tell him what had happened before he notified the police. Next, Lashbrook called Abramson, who, according to Lashbrook, "wanted to be kept out of the thing completely." Abramson soon called back and offered to assist. When the police arrived, Lashbrook told them he worked for the Defense Department. He said he had no idea why Olson killed himself, but he did know that the dead man had "suffered from ulcers." The detectives assigned to the case later reported that getting information out of Lashbrook was "like pulling teeth." They speculated to each other that the case could be a homicide with homosexual overtones, but they soon dropped their inquiries when Ruwet and Abramson verified Lashbrook's sketchy account and invoked high government connections.

Back in Washington, Sid Gottlieb finally felt compelled to tell the Office of Security about the Olson case. Director Allen Dulles personally ordered Inspector General Lyman Kirkpatrick to make a full investigation, but first, Agency officials tried to make sure that no outsider would tie Olson's death either to the CIA or LSD. Teams of Security officers were soon scurrying around New York and Washington, making sure the Agency had covered its tracks. One interviewed Lashbrook and then accompanied him to a meeting with Abramson. When Lashbrook and Abramson asked the security officer to leave them alone, he complied and then, in the best traditions of his office, listened in on the conversation covertly. From his report on their talk, it can safely be said that Lashbrook and Abramson conspired to make sure they told identical stories. Lashbrook dictated to Abramson, who made a recording of the symptoms that Olson was supposed to be suffering from and the problems that were bothering him. Lashbrook even stated that Mrs. Olson had suggested her husband see a psychiatrist months before the LSD incident.[7] Lashbrook's comments appeared in three reports Abramson submitted to the CIA, but these reports were internally inconsistent. In one memo, Abramson wrote that Olson's "psychotic state . . . seemed to have been crystallized by [the LSD] experiment." In a later report, Abramson called the LSD dose "therapeutic" and said he believed "this dosage could hardly have had any significant role in the course of events that followed.[8]

The CIA officially but secretly took the position that the LSD had "triggered" Olson's suicide. Agency officials worked industriously behind the scenes to make sure that Mrs. Olson received an adequate government pension two-thirds of her husband's base pay. Ruwet, who had threatened to expose the whole affair if Mrs. Olson did not get the pension, submitted a form saying Olson had died of a "classified illness." Gottlieb and Lashbrook kept trying to have it both ways in regard to giving Olson LSD, according to the CIA's General Counsel. They acknowledged LSD's triggering function in his death, but they also claimed it was "practically impossible" for the drug to have harmful aftereffects. The General Counsel called these two positions "completely inconsistent," and he wrote he was "not happy with what seems to me a very casual attitude on the part of TSS representatives to the way this experiment was conducted and to their remarks that this is just one of the risks running with scientific investigation."

As part of his investigation, Inspector General Kirkpatrick sequestered Gottlieb's LSD files, which Kirkpatrick remembers did not make Gottlieb at all happy. "I brought out his stutter," says Kirkpatrick with a wry smile. "He was quite concerned about his future." Kirkpatrick eventually recommended that some form of reprimand be given to Gottlieb, TSS chief Willis Gibbons, and TSS deputy chief James "Trapper" Drum, who had waited 20 days after Olson's death to admit that Gottlieb had cleared the experiment with him. Others opposed Kirkpatrick's recommendation. Admiral Luis deFlores, the Agency's Research Chairman, sent a personal memo to Allen Dulles saying reprimands would be an "injustice" and would hinder "the spirit of initiative and enthusiasm so necessary in our work." The Director's office went along, and Kirkpatrick began the tortuous process of preparing letters for Dulles' signature that would say Gottlieb, Gibbons, and Drum had done something wrong, but nothing too wrong. Kirkpatrick went through six drafts of the Gottlieb letter alone before he came up with acceptable wording. He started out by saying TSS officials had exercised "exceedingly bad judgment." That was too harsh for high Agency officials, so Kirkpatrick tried "very poor judgment." Still too hard. He settled for "poor judgment." The TSS officials were told that they should not consider the letters to be reprimands and that no record of the letters would be put in their personnel files where they could conceivably harm future careers. The Olson family up in Frederick did not get off so easily. Ruwet told them Olson had jumped or fallen out of the window in New York, but he mentioned not a word about the LSD, whose effects Ruwet himself believed had led to Olson's death. Ever the good soldier, Ruwet could not bring himself to talk about the classified experiment even to ease Alice Olson's sorrow. Mrs. Olson did not want to accept the idea that her husband had willfully committed suicide. "It was very important to me almost the core of my life that my children not feel their father had walked out on them," recalls Mrs. Olson. For the next 22 years, Alice Olson had no harder evidence than her own belief that her husband did not desert her and the family. Then in June 1975, the Rockefeller Commission studying illegal CIA domestic operations reported that a man fitting Frank Olson's description had leaped from a New York hotel window after the CIA had given him LSD without his knowledge. The Olson family read about the incident in the Washington Post. Daughter Lisa Olson Hayward and her husband went to see Ruwet, who had retired from the Army and settled in Frederick. In an emotional meeting, Ruwet confirmed that Olson was the man and said he could not tell the family earlier because he did not have permission. Ruwet tried to discourage them from going public or seeking compensation from the government, but the Olson family did both. [9] On national television, Alice Olson and each of her grown children took turns reading from a prepared family statement:

We feel our family has been violated by the CIA in two ways," it said. "First, Frank Olson was experimented upon illegally and negligently. Second, the true nature of his death was concealed for twenty-two years.... In telling our story, we are concerned that neither the personal pain this family has experienced nor the moral and political outrage we feel be slighted. Only in this way can Frank Olson's death become part of American memory and serve the purpose of political and ethical reform so urgently needed in our society.

The statement went on to compare the Olsons with families in the Third World "whose hopes for a better life were destroyed by CIA intervention." Although Eric Olson read those words in behalf of the whole family, they reflected more the politics of the children than the feelings of their mother, Alice Olson. An incredibly strong woman who seems to have made her peace with the world, Mrs. Olson went back to college after her husband's death, got a degree, and held the family together while she taught school. She has no malice in her heart toward Vin Ruwet, her friend who withheld that vital piece of information from her all those years. He comforted her and gave support during the most difficult of times, and she deeply appreciates that. Mrs. Olson defends Ruwet by saying he was in "a bad position," but then she stops in mid-sentence and says, "If I had only been given some indication that it was the pressure of work.... If only I had had something I could have told the kids. I don't know how [Ruwet] could have done it either. It was a terrible thing for a man who loved him." "I'm not vindictive toward Vin [Ruwet]," reflects Mrs. Olson. "Gottlieb is a different question. He was despicable." She tells how Gottlieb and Lashbrook both attended Olson's funeral in Frederick and contributed to a memorial fund. A week or two later, the two men asked to visit her. She knew they did not work at Detrick, but she did not really understand where they came from or their role. "I didn't want to see them," she notes. "Vin told me it would make them feel better. I didn't want an ounce of flesh from them. I didn't think it was necessary, but, okay, I agreed. In retrospect, it was so bizarre, it makes me sick . . . I was a sucker for them." Gottlieb and Lashbrook apparently never returned to the biological warfare offices at SOD. Little else changed, however. Ray Treichler and Henry Bortner took over CIA's liaison with SOD. SOD continued to manufacture and stockpile bacteriological agents for the CIA until 1969, when President Richard Nixon renounced the use of biological warfare tactics.

And presumably, someone replaced Frank Olson.

Notes

The description of the CIA's relationship with SOD at Fort Detrick comes from interviews with several ex-Fort Detrick employees; Church Committee hearings on "Unauthorized Storage of Toxic Agents, Volume 1; Church Committee "Summary Report on CIA Investigation of MKNAOMI" found in Report, Book I, pp. 360-63; and/ Kennedy subcommittee hearings on Biological Testing Involving Human Subjects by the Department of Defense, 1977. The details of Sid Gottlieb's involvement in the plot to kill Patrice Lumumba are found in the Church Committee's Interim Report on "Alleged Assassination Plots Involving Foreign Leaders," pp. 20-21. The Church committee allowed Gottlieb to be listed under the pseudonym Victor Scheider, but several sources confirm Gottlieb's true identity, as does the biographic data on him submitted to the Kennedy subcommittee by the CIA, which puts him in the same job attributed to "Scheider" at the same time. The plot to give botulinum to Fidel Castro is outlined in the Assassination report, pp. 79 83. The incident with the Iraqi colonel is on p. 181 of the same report.

The several inches of CIA documents on the Olson case were released by the Olson family in 1976 and can be found in the printed volume of the 1975 Kennedy subcommittee hearings on Biomedical and Behavioral Research, pp.1005-1132. They form the base of much of the narrative, along with interviews with Alice Olson, Eric Olson, Benjamin Wilson, and several other ex-SOD men (who added next to nothing). Information also was gleaned from Vincent Ruwet's testimony before the Kennedy subcommittee in 1975, pp. 138-45 and the Church committee's summary of the affair, Book I, pp. 394-403. The quote on Harold Abramson's intention to give his patients unwitting doses of LSD is found in MKULTRA subproject 7, June 8, 1953, letter to Dr. [deleted]. Magician John Mulholland's work for the Agency is described in MKULTRA subprojects 19 and 34.

Footnotes

1. Toxins are chemical substances, not living organisms, derived from biological agents. While they can make people sick or dead, they cannot reproduce themselves like bacteria. Because of their biological origin, toxins came under the responsibility of Fort Detrick rather than Edgewood Arsenal, the facility which handled the chemical side of America's chemical and biological warfare (CBW) programs.

2. Brucellosis may well have been the disease that Gottlieb selected in the spring of 1960 when the Clandestine Services' Health Alteration Committee approved an operation to disable an Iraqi colonel, said to be "promoting Soviet-bloc political interests" for at least three months. Gottlieb told the Church committee that he had a monogrammed handkerchief treated with the incapacitating agency, and then mailed it to the colonel. CIA officials told the committee that the colonel was shot by a firing squad which the Agency had nothing to do with before the handkerchief arrived.

3. For some reason, the U.S. government has made it a point not to release information about Japanese use of biological warfare. The senior Detrick source says, "We knew they sprayed Manchuria. We had the results of how they produced and disseminated [the biological agents, including anthrax].... I read the autopsy reports myself. We had people who went over to Japan after the war."

4. Gottlieb stated just after Olson's death, at a time when he was trying to minimize his own culpability, that he had talked to the SOD men about LSD and that they had agreed in general terms to the desirability of unwitting testing. Two of the SOD group in interviews and a third in congressional testimony flatly deny the Gottlieb version. Gottlieb and the SOD men all agree Gottlieb gave no advance warning that he was giving them a drug in their liqueur.

5. For the very reason that most trips last about eight hours no matter what time a subject takes the drug, virtually all experimenters, including TSS's own contractors, give LSD in the morning to avoid the discomfort of sleepless nights.

6. To enter the SOD building, in addition to needing an incredibly hard-to-get security clearance, one had to have an up-to-date shot card with anywhere from 10 to 20 immunizations listed. The process was so painful and time consuming that at one point in the 1960s the general who headed the whole Army Chemical Corps decided against inspecting SOD and getting an on-the-spot briefing. When asked about this incident, an SOD veteran who had earlier resigned said, "That's the way we kept them out. Those [military] types didn't need to know. Most of the security violations came from the top level.... He could have gone in without shots if he had insisted. The safety director would have protested, but he could have."

7. Mrs. Olson says that this is an outright lie.

8. Nonpsychiatrist Abramson who allowed chemist Lashbrook to tell him about his patient's complexes clearly had a strange idea what was "therapeutic" or psychotherapeutic, for that matter. In Abramson's 1953 proposal to the CIA for $85,000 to study LSD, he wrote that over the next year he "hoped" to give hospital patients "who are essentially normal from a psychiatric point of view . . . unwitting doses of the drug for psychotherapeutic purposes." His treatment brings to mind the William Burroughs character in Naked Lunch who states; "Now, boys, you won't see this operation performed very often, and there's a reason for that . . . you see, it has absolutely no medical value."

9. President Gerald Ford later personally apologized to the Olson family, and Congress passed a bill in 1976 to pay $750,000 in compensation to Mrs. Olson and her three children. The family voluntarily abandoned the suit.

Them Unwitting: The Safehouses

Frank Olson's death could have been a major setback for the Agency's LSD testing, but the program, like Sid Gottlieb's career, emerged essentially unscathed. High CIA officials did call a temporary halt to all experiments while they investigated the Olson case and re-examined the general policy. They cabled the two field stations that had supplies of the drug (Manila and Atsugi, Japan) not to use it for the time being, and they even took away Sid Gottlieb's own private supply and had it locked up in his boss' safe, to which no one else had the combination. In the end, however, Allen Dulles accepted the view Richard Helms put forth that the only "operationally realistic" way to test drugs was to try them on unwitting people. Helms noted that experiments which gave advance warning would be "pro forma at best and result in a false sense of accomplishment and readiness." For Allen Dulles and his top aides, the possible importance of LSD clearly outweighed the risks and ethical problem of slipping the drug to involuntary subjects. They gave Gottlieb back his LSD.

Once the CIA's top echelon had made its decision to continue unwitting testing, there remained, in Richard Helms' words, "only then the question of how best to do it." The Agency's role in the Olson affair had come too perilously close to leaking out for the comfort of the security-minded, so TSS officials simply had to work out a testing system with better cover. That meant finding subjects who could not be so easily traced back to the Agency.

Well before Olson's death, Gottlieb and the MKULTRA crew had started pondering how best to do unwitting testing. They considered using an American police force to test drugs on prisoners, informants, and suspects, but they knew that some local politicians would inevitably find out. In the Agency view, such people could not be trusted to keep sensitive secrets. TSS officials thought about trying Federal prisons or hospitals, but, when sounded out, the Bureau of Prisons refused to go along with true unwitting testing (as opposed to the voluntary, if coercive, form practiced on drug addicts in Kentucky). They contemplated moving the program overseas, where they and the ARTICHOKE teams were already performing operational experiments, but they decided if they tested on the scale they thought was necessary, so many foreigners would have to know that it would pose an unacceptable security risk.

Sid Gottlieb is remembered as the brainstorming genius of the MKULTRA group and the one with a real talent for showing others, without hurting their feelings, why their schemes would not work. States an ex-colleague who admires him greatly, "In the final analysis, Sid was like a good soldier if the job had to be done, he did it. Once the decision was made, he found the most effective way."

In this case, Gottlieb came up with the solution after reading through old OSS files on Stanley Lovell's search for a truth drug. Gottlieb noted that Lovell had used George White, a prewar employee of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, to test concentrated marijuana. Besides trying the drug out on Manhattan Project volunteers and unknowing suspected Communists, White had slipped some to August Del Gracio, the Lucky Luciano lieutenant. White had called the experiment a great success. If it had not been if Del Gracio had somehow caught on to the drugging Gottlieb realized that the gangster would never have gone to the police or the press. His survival as a criminal required he remain quiet about even the worst indignities heaped upon him by government agents.

To Gottlieb, underworld types looked like ideal test subjects. Nevertheless, according to one TSS source, "We were not about to fool around with the Mafia." Instead, this source says they chose "the borderline underworld" prostitutes, drug addicts, and other small-timers who would be powerless to seek any sort of revenge if they ever found out what the CIA had done to them. In addition to their being unlikely whistle-blowers, such people lived in a world where an unwitting dose of some drug usually knock out drops was an occupational hazard anyway. They would therefore be better equipped to deal with and recover from a surprise LSD trip than the population as a whole. Or so TSS officials rationalized. "They could at least say to themselves, 'Here I go again. I've been slipped a mickey,'" says a TSS veteran. Furthermore, this veteran remembers, his former colleagues reasoned that if they had to violate the civil rights of anyone, they might as well choose a group of marginal people.

George White himself had left OSS after the war and returned to the Narcotics Bureau. In 1952 he was working in the New York office. As a high-ranking narcotics agent, White had a perfect excuse to be around drugs and people who used them. He had proved during the war that he had a talent for clandestine work, and he certainly had no qualms when it came to unwitting testing. With his job, he had access to all the possible subjects the Agency would need, and if he could use LSD or any other drug to find out more about drug trafficking, so much the better. From a security viewpoint, CIA officials could easily deny any connection to anything White did, and he clearly was not the crybaby type. For Sid Gottlieb, George White was clearly the one. The MKULTRA chief decided to contact White directly to see if he might be interested in picking up with the CIA where he had left off with OSS.

Always careful to observe bureaucratic protocol,

Gottlieb first approached Harry Anslinger, the longtime head of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, and got permission to use White on a part-time basis. Then Gottlieb traveled to New York and made his pitch to the narcotics agent, who stood 5'7", weighed over 200 pounds, shaved his head, and looked something like an extremely menacing bowling ball. After an early-morning meeting, White scrawled in his sweat-stained, leather-bound diary for that day, June 9, 1952: "Gottlieb proposed I be a CIA consultantI agree." By writing down such a thing and using Gottlieb's true name,[1] White had broken CIA security regulations even before he started work. But then, White was never known as a man who followed rules. Despite the high priority that TSS put on drug testing, White's security approval did not come through until almost a year later. "It was only last month that I got cleared," the outspoken narcotics agent wrote to a friend in 1953. "I then learned that a couple of crewcut, pipe-smoking punks had either known meor heard of meduring OSS days and had decided I was 'too rough' for their league and promptly blackballed me. It was only when my sponsors discovered the root of the trouble they were able to bypass the blockade. After all, fellas, I didn't go to Princeton."

People either loved or hated George White, and he had made some powerful enemies, including New York Governor Thomas Dewey and J. Edgar Hoover. Dewey would later help block White from becoming the head of the Narcotics Bureau in New York City, a job White sorely wanted. For some forgotten reason, Hoover had managed to stop White from being hired by the CIA in the Agency's early days, at a time when he would have preferred to leave narcotics work altogether. These were two of the biggest disappointments of his life. White's previous exclusion from the CIA may explain why he jumped so eagerly at Gottlieb's offer and why at the same time he privately heaped contempt on those who worked for the Agency. A remarkably heavy drinker, who would sometimes finish off a bottle of gin in one sitting, White often mocked the CIA crowd over cocktails. "He thought they were a joke," recalls one longtime crony. "They were too complicated, and they had other people do their heavy stuff." Unlike his CIA counterparts, White loved the glare of publicity. A man who gloried in talking about himself and cultivating a hard-nosed image, White knew how to milk a drug bust for all it was wortha skill that grew out of early years spent as a newspaper reporter in San Francisco and Los Angeles. In search of a more financially secure profession, he had joined the Narcotics Bureau in 1934, but he continued to pal around with journalists, particularly those who wrote favorably about him. Not only did he come across in the press as a cop hero, but he helped to shape the picture of future Kojaks by serving as a consultant to one of the early-television detective series. To start a raid, he would dramatically tip his hat to signal his agentsand to let the photographers know that the time had come to snap his picture. "He was sort of vainglorious," says another good friend, "the kind of guy who if he did something, didn't mind having the world know about it." [2]

The scientists from TSS, with their Ph.D.s and lack of street experience, could not help admiring White for his swashbuckling image. Unlike the men from MKULTRA, who, for all their pretensions, had never worked as real-live spies, White had put his life on the line for OSS overseas and had supposedly killed a Japanese agent with his bare hands. The face of one ex-TSS man lit up, like a little boy's on Christmas morning, as he told of racing around New York in George White's car and parking illegally with no fear of the law. "We were Ivy League, white, middle-class," notes another former TSSer. "We were naive, totally naive about this, and he felt pretty expert. He knew the whores, the pimps, the people who brought in the drugs. He'd purportedly been in a number of shootouts where he'd captured millions of dollars worth of heroin.... He was a pretty wild man. I know I was afraid of him. You couldn't control this guy . . . I had a little trouble telling who was controlling who in those days."

White lived with extreme personal contradictions. As could be expected of a narcotics agent, he violently opposed drugs. Yet he died largely because his beloved alcohol had destroyed his liver. He had tried everything else, from marijuana to LSD, and wrote an acquaintance, "I did feel at times I was having a 'mind-expanding' experience but this vanished like a dream immediately after the session." He was a law-enforcement official who regularly violated the law. Indeed, the CIA turned to him because of his willingness to use the power of his office to ride roughshod over the rights of others in the name of "national security," when he tested LSD for the Agency, in the name of stamping out drug abuse, for the Narcotics Bureau. As yet another close associate summed up White's attitude toward his job, "He really believed the ends justified the means."

George White's "pragmatic" approach meshed perfectly with Sid Gottlieb's needs for drug testing. In May 1953 the two men, who wound up going folk dancing together several times, formally joined forces. In CIA jargon, White became MKULTRA subproject #3. Under this arrangement, White rented two adjacent Greenwich Village apartments, posing as the sometime artist and seaman "Morgan Hall." White agreed to lure guinea pigs to the "safehouse" as the Agency men called the apartment, slip them drugs, and report the results to Gottlieb and the others in TSS. For its part, the CIA let the Narcotics Bureau use the place for undercover activities (and often for personal pleasure) whenever no Agency work was scheduled, and the CIA paid all the bills, including the cost of keeping a well-stocked liquor cabinet and a substantial bonus for White. Gottlieb personally handed over the first $4,000 in cash, to cover the initial costs of furnishing the safehouse in the lavish style that White felt befitted him.

Gottlieb did not limit his interest to drugs. He and other TSS officials wanted to try out surveillance equipment. CIA technicians quickly installed see-through mirrors and microphones through which eavesdroppers could film, photograph, and record the action. "Things go wrong with listening devices and two-way mirrors, so you build these things to find out what works and what doesn't," says a TSS source. "If you are going to entrap, you've got to give the guy pictures [flagrante delicto] and voice recordings. Once you learn how to do it so that the whole thing looks comfortable, cozy, and safe, then you can transport the technology overseas and use it." This TSS man notes that the Agency put to work in the bedrooms of Europe some of the techniques developed in the George White safehouse operation.

In the safehouse's first months, White tested LSD, several kinds of knockout drops, and that old OSS standby, essence of marijuana. He served up the drugs in food, drink, and cigarettes and then tried to worm information usually on narcotics matters from his "guests." Sometimes MKULTRA men came up from Washington to watch the action. A September 1953 entry in White's diary noted: "Lashbrook at 81 Bedford Street Owen Winkle and LSD surprise can wash." Sid Gottlieb's deputy, Robert Lashbrook, served as "project monitor" for the New York safehouse.[3]

White had only been running the safehouse six months when Olson died (in Lashbrook's company), and Agency officials suspended the operation for re-evaluation. They soon allowed him to restart it, and then Gottlieb had to order White to slow down again. A New York State commissioner had summoned the narcotics agent to explain his role in the deal that wound up with Governor Dewey pardoning Lucky Luciano after the war. The commissioner was asking questions that touched on White's use of marijuana on Del Gracio, and Gottlieb feared that word of the CIA's current testing might somehow leak out. This storm also soon passed, but then, in early 1955, the Narcotics Bureau transferred White to San Francisco to become chief agent there. Happy with White's performance, Gottlieb decided to let him take the entire safehouse operation with him to the Coast. White closed up the Greenwich Village apartments, leaving behind unreceipted "tips" for the landlord "to clear up any difficulties about the alterations and damages," as a CIA document put it.[4]

White soon rented a suitable "pad" (as he always called it) on Telegraph Hill, with a stunning view of San Francisco Bay, the Golden Gate Bridge, and Alcatraz. To supplement the furniture he brought from the New York safehouse, he went out and bought items that gave the place the air of the brothel it was to become: Toulouse-Lautrec posters, a picture of a French cancan dancer, and photos of manacled women in black stockings. "It was supposed to look rich," recalls a narcotics agent who regularly visited, "but it was furnished like crap." White hired a friend's company to install bugging equipment, and William Hawkins, a 25-year-old electronics whiz then studying at Berkley put in four DD-4 microphones disguised as electrical wall outlets and hooked them up to two F-301 tape recorders, which agents monitored in an adjacent "listening post." Hawkins remembers that White "kept a pitcher of martinis in the refrigerator, and he'd watch me for a while as I installed a microphone and then slip off." For his own personal "observation post," White had a portable toilet set up behind a two-way mirror, where he could watch the proceedings, usually with drink in hand.

The San Francisco safehouse specialized in prostitutes. "But this was before The Hite Report and before any hooker had written a book," recalls a TSS man, "so first we had to go out and learn about their world. In the beginning, we didn't know what a john was or what a pimp did." Sid Gottlieb decided to send his top staff psychologist, John Gittinger, to San Francisco to probe the demimonde.

George White supplied the prostitutes for the study, although White, in turn, delegated much of the pimping function to one of his assistants, Ira "Ike" Feldman. A muscular but very short man, whom even the 5'7" White towered over, Feldman tried even harder than his boss to act tough. Dressed in suede shoes, a suit with flared trousers, a hat with a turned-up brim, and a huge zircon ring that was supposed to look like a diamond, Feldman first came to San Francisco on an undercover assignment posing as an East Coast mobster looking to make a big heroin buy. Using a drug-addicted prostitute name Janet Jones, whose common-law husband states that Feldman paid her off with heroin, the undercover man lured a number of suspected drug dealers to the "pad" and helped White make arrests.

As the chief Federal narcotics agent in San Francisco, White was in a position to reward or punish a prostitute. He set up a system whereby he and Feldman provided Gittinger with all the hookers the psychologist wanted. White paid off the women with a fixed number of "chits." For each chit, White owed one favor. "So the next time the girl was arrested with a john," says an MKULTRA veteran, "she would give the cop George White's phone number. The police all knew White and cooperated with him without asking questions. They would release the girl if he said so. White would keep good records of how many chits each person had and how many she used. No money was exchanged, but five chits were worth $500 to $1,000." Prostitutes were not the only beneficiaries of White's largess. The narcotics agent worked out a similar system to forgive the transgressions of small time drug pushers when the MKULTRA men wanted to talk to them about "the rules of their game," according to the source.

TSS officials wanted to find out everything they could about how to apply sex to spying, and the prostitute project became a general learning and then training ground for CIA carnal operations. After all, states one TSS official, "We did quite a study of prostitutes and their behavior.... At first nobody really knew how to use them. How do you train them? How do you work them? How do you take a woman who is willing to use her body to get money out of a guy to get things which are much more important, like state secrets. I don't care how beautiful she is educating the ordinary prostitute up to that level is not a simple task."

The TSS men continually tried to refine their knowledge. They realized that prostitutes often wheedled extra money out of a customer by suggesting some additional service as male orgasm neared. They wondered if this might not also be a good time to seek sensitive information. "But no," says the source, "we found the guy was focused solely on hormonal needs. He was not thinking of his career or anything else at that point." The TSS experts discovered that the postsexual, light-up-cigarette period was much better suited to their ulterior motives. Says the source:

Most men who go to prostitutes are prepared for the fact that [after the act] she's beginning to work to get herself out of there, so she can get back on the street to make some more money. . . . To find a prostitute who is willing to stay is a hell of a shock to anyone used to prostitutes. It has a tremendous effect on the guy. It's a boost to his ego if she's telling him he was really neat, and she wants to stay for a few more hours.... Most of the time, he gets pretty vulnerable. What the hell's he going to talk about? Not the sex, so he starts talking about his business. It's at this time she can lead him gently. But you have to train prostitutes to do that. Their natural inclination is to do exactly the opposite. The men from MKULTRA learned a great deal about varying sexual preferences. One of them says:

We didn't know in those days about hidden sadism and all that sort of stuff. We learned a lot about human nature in the bedroom. We began to understand that when people wanted sex, it wasn't just what we had thought of you know, the missionary position.... We started to pick up knowledge that could be used in operations, but with a lot of it we never figured out any way to use it operationally. We just learned.... All these ideas did not come to us at once. But evolving over three or four years in which these studies were going on, things emerged which we tried. Our knowledge of prostitutes' behavior became pretty damn good. . . . This comes across now that somehow we were just playing around and we just found all these exotic ways to waste the taxpayers' money on satisfying our hidden urges. I'm not saying that watching prostitutes was not exciting or something like that. But what I am saying was there was a purpose to the whole business.[5]

In the best tradition of Mata Hari, the CIA did use sex as a clandestine weapon, although apparently not so frequently as the Russians. While many in the Agency believed that it simply did not work very well, others like CIA operators in Berlin during the mid-1960s felt prostitutes could be a prime source of intelligence. Agency men in that city used a network of hookers to good advantage so they told visitors from headquarters. Yet, with its high proportion of Catholics and Mormons not to mention the Protestant ethic of many of its top leaders the Agency definitely had limits beyond which prudery took over. For instance, a TSS veteran says that a good number of case officers wanted no part of homosexual entrapment operations. And to go a step further, he recalls one senior KGB man who told too many sexual jokes about young boys. "It didn't take too long to recognize that he was more than a little fascinated by youths," says the source. "I took the trouble to point out he was probably too good, too well-trained, to be either entrapped or to give away secrets. But he would have been tempted toward a compromising position by a preteen. I mentioned this, and they said, 'As a psychological observer, you're probably quite right. But what the hell are we going to do about it? Where are we going to get a twelve-year-old boy?' " The source believes that if the Russian had had a taste for older men, U.S. intelligence might have mounted an operation, "but the idea of a twelve-year-old boy was just more than anybody could stomach."

As the TSS men learned more about the San Francisco hustlers, they ventured outside the safehouse to try out various clandestine-delivery gimmicks in public places like restaurants, bars, and beaches. They practiced ways to slip LSD to citizens of the demimonde while buying them a drink or lighting up a cigarette, and they then tried to observe the effects when the drug took hold. Because the MKULTRA scientists did not move smoothly among the very kinds of people they were testing, they occasionally lost an unwitting victim in a crowdthereby sending a stranger off alone with a head full of LSD. In a larger sense, all the test victims would become lost. As a matter of policy, Sid Gottlieb ordered that virtually no records be kept of the testing. In 1973, when Gottlieb retired from the Agency, he and Richard Helms agreed to destroy what they thought were the few existing documents on the program. Neither Gottlieb nor any other MKULTRA man has owned up to having given LSD to an unknowing subject, or even to observing such an experimentexcept of course in the case of Frank Olson. Olson's death left behind a paper trail outside of Gottlieb's control and that hence could not be denied. Otherwise, Gottlieb and his colleagues have put all the blame for actual testing on George White, who is not alive to defend himself. One reason the MKULTRA veterans have gone to such lengths to conceal their role is obvious: fear of lawsuits from victims claiming damaged health.

At the time of the experiments, the subjects' health did not cause undue concern. At the safehouse, where most of the testing took place, doctors were seldom present. Dr. James Hamilton, a Stanford Medical School psychiatrist and White's OSS colleague, visited the place from time to time, apparently for studies connected to unwitting drug experiments and deviant sexual practices. Yet neither Hamilton nor any other doctor provided much medical supervision. From his perch atop the toilet seat, George White could do no more than make surface observations of his drugged victims. Even an experienced doctor would have had difficulty handling White's role. In addition to LSD, which they knew could cause serious, if not fatal problems, TSS officials gave White even more exotic experimental drugs to test, drugs that other Agency contractors may or may not have already used on human subjects. "If we were scared enough of a drug not to try it out on ourselves, we sent it to San Francisco," recalls a TSS source. According to a 1963 report by CIA Inspector General John Earman, "In a number of instances, however, the test subject has become ill for hours or days, including hospitalization in at least one case, and [White] could only follow up by guarded inquiry after the test subject's return to normal life. Possible sickness and attendant economic loss are inherent contingent effects of the testing."

The Inspector General noted that the whole program could be compromised if an outside doctor made a "correct diagnosis of an illness." Thus, the MKULTRA team not only made some people sick but had a vested interest in keeping doctors from finding out what was really wrong. If that bothered the Inspector General, he did not report his qualms, but he did say he feared "serious damage to the Agency" in the event of public exposure. The Inspector General was only somewhat reassured by the fact that George White "maintain[ed] close working relations with local police authorities which could be utilized to protect the activity in critical situations."

If TSS officials had been willing to stick with their original target group of marginal underworld types, they would have had little to fear from the police. After all, George White was the police. But increasingly they used the safehouse to test drugs, in the Inspector General's words, "on individuals of all social levels, high and low, native American and foreign." After all, they were looking for an operational payoff, and they knew people reacted differently to LSD according to everything from health and mood to personality structure. If TSS officials wanted to slip LSD to foreign leaders, as they contemplated doing to Fidel Castro, they would try to spring an unwitting dose on somebody as similar as possible. They used the safehouse for "dry runs" in the intermediate stage between the laboratory and actual operations.

For these dress rehearsals, George White and his staff procurer, Ike Feldman, enticed men to the apartment with prostitutes. An unsuspecting john would think he had bought a night of pleasure, go back to a strange apartment, and wind up zonked. A CIA document that survived Sid Gottlieb's shredding recorded this process. Its author, Gottlieb himself, could not break a lifelong habit of using nondescriptive language. For the MKULTRA chief, the whores were "certain individuals who covertly administer this material to other people in accordance with [White's] instructions." White normally paid the women $100 in Agency funds for their night's work, and Gottlieb's prose reached new bureaucratic heights as he explained why the prostitutes did not sign for the money: "Due to the highly unorthodox nature of these activities and the considerable risk incurred by these individuals, it is impossible to require that they provide a receipt for these payments or that they indicate the precise manner in which the funds were spent." The CIA's auditors had to settle for canceled checks which White cashed himself and marked either "Stormy" or, just as appropriately, "Undercover Agent." The program was also referred to as "Operation Midnight Climax."

TSS officials found the San Francisco safehouse so successful that they opened a branch office, also under George White's auspices, across the Golden Gate on the beach in Marin County.[6] Unlike the downtown apartment, where an MKULTRA man says "you could bring people in for quickies after lunch," the suburban Marin County outlet proved useful for experiments that required relative isolation. There, TSS scientists tested such MKULTRA specialties as stink bombs, itching and sneezing powders, and diarrhea inducers. TSS's Ray Treichler, the Stanford chemist, sent these "harassment substances" out to California for testing by White, along with such delivery systems as a mechanical launcher that could throw a foul-smelling object 100 yards, glass ampules that could be stepped on in a crowd to release any of Treichler's powders, a fine hypodermic needle to inject drugs through the cork in a wine bottle, and a drug-coated swizzle stick.

TSS men also planned to use the Marin County safehouse for an ill-fated experiment that began when staff psychologists David Rhodes and Walter Pasternak spent a week circulating in bars, inviting strangers to a party. They wanted to spray LSD from an aerosol can on their guests, but according to Rhodes' Senate testimony, "the weather defeated us." In the heat of the summer, they could not close the doors and windows long enough for the LSD to hang in the air and be inhaled. Sensing a botched operation, their MKULTRA colleague, John Gittinger (who brought the drug out from Washington) shut himself in the bathroom and let go with the spray. Still, Rhodes testified, Gittinger did not get high, and the CIA men apparently scrubbed the party.[7]

The MKULTRA crew continued unwitting testing until the summer of 1963 when the Agency's Inspector General stumbled across the safehouses during a regular inspection of TSS activities. This happened not long after Director John McCone had appointed John Earman to the Inspector General position.[8] Much to the displeasure of Sid Gottlieb and Richard Helms, Earman questioned the propriety of the safehouses, and he insisted that Director McCone be given a full briefing. Although President Kennedy had put McCone in charge of the Agency the year before, Helms the professional's professional had not bothered to tell his outsider boss about some of the CIA's most sensitive activities, including the safehouses and the CIA-Mafia assassination plots.[9] Faced with Earman's demands, Helms surely one of history's most clever bureaucrats volunteered to tell McCone himself about the safehouses (rather than have Earman present a negative view of the program). Sure enough, Helms told Earman afterward, McCone raised no objections to unwitting testing (as Helms described it). A determined man and a rather brave one, Earman countered with a full written report to McCone recommending that the safehouses be closed. The Inspector General cited the risks of exposure and pointed out that many people both inside and outside the Agency found "the concepts involved in manipulating human behavior . . . to be distasteful and unethical." McCone reacted by putting off a final decision but suspending unwitting testing in the meantime. Over the next year, Helms, who then headed the Clandestine Services, wrote at least three memos urging resumption. He cited "indications . . . of an apparent Soviet aggressiveness in the field of covertly administered chemicals which are, to say the least, inexplicable and disturbing," and he claimed the CIA's "positive operational capacity to use drugs is diminishing owing to a lack of realistic testing." [10] To Richard Helms, the importance of the program exceeded the risks and the ethical questions, although he did admit, "We have no answer to the moral issue." McCone simply did nothing for two years. The director's indecision had the effect of killing the program, nevertheless. TSS officials closed the San Francisco safehouse in 1965 and the New York one in 1966.

Years later in a personal letter to Sid Gottlieb, George White wrote an epitaph for his role with the CIA: "I was a very minor missionary, actually a heretic, but I toiled wholeheartedly in the vineyards because it was fun, fun, fun. Where else could a red-blooded American boy lie, kill, cheat, steal, rape, and pillage with the sanction and blessing of the All-Highest?"

After 10 years of unwitting testing, the men from MKULTRA apparently scored no major breakthroughs with LSD or other drugs. They found no effective truth drug, recruitment pill, or aphrodisiac. LSD had not opened up the mind to CIA control. "We had thought at first that this was the secret that was going to unlock the universe," says a TSS veteran. "We found that human beings had resources far greater than imagined." Yet despite the lack of precision and uncertainty, the CIA still made field use of LSD and other drugs that had worked their way through the MKULTRA testing progression. A 1957 report showed that TSS had already moved 6 drugs out of the experimental stage and into active use. Up to that time, CIA operators had utilized LSD and other psychochemicals against 33 targets in 6 different operations. Agency officials hoped in these cases either to discredit the subject by making him seem insane or to "create within the individual a mental and emotional situation which will release him from the restraint of self-control and induce him to reveal information willingly under adroit manipulation." The Agency has consistently refused to release details of these operations, and TSS sources who talk rather freely about other matters seem to develop amnesia when the subject of field use comes up. Nevertheless, it can be said that the CIA did establish a relationship with an unnamed foreign secret service to interrogate prisoners with LSD-like drugs. CIA operators participated directly in these interrogations, which continued at least until 1966. Often the Agency showed more concern for the safety of its operational targets abroad than it did for its unwitting victims in San Francisco, since some of the foreign subjects were given medical examinations before being slipped the drug. [11]

In these operations, CIA men sometimes brought in local doctors for reasons that had nothing to do with the welfare of the patient. Instead, the doctor's role was to certify the apparent insanity of a victim who had been unwittingly dosed with LSD or an even more durable psychochemical like BZ (which causes trips lasting a week or more and which tends to induce violent behavior). If a doctor were to prescribe hospitalization or other severe treatment, the effect on the subject could be devastating. He would suffer not only the experience itself, including possible confinement in a mental institution, but also social stigma. In most countries, even the suggestion of mental problems severely damages an individual's professional and personal standing (as Thomas Eagleton, the recipient of some shock therapy, can testify). "It's an old technique," says an MKULTRA veteran. "You neutralize someone by having their constituency doubt them." The Church committee confirms that the Agency used this technique at least several times to assassinate a target's character.[12]

Still, the Clandestine Services did not frequently call on TSS for LSD or other drugs. Many operators had practical and ethical objections. In part to overcome such objections and also to find better ways to use chemical and biological substances in covert operations, Sid Gottlieb moved up in 1959 to become Assistant for Scientific Matters to the Clandestine Services chief. Gottlieb found that TSS had kept the MKULTRA programs so secret that many field people did not even know what techniques were available. He wrote that tight controls over field use in MKDELTA operations "may have generated a general defeatism among case officers," who feared they would not receive permission or that the procedure was not worth the effort. Gottlieb tried to correct these shortcomings by providing more information on the drug arsenal to senior operators and by streamlining the approval process. He had less luck in overcoming views that drugs do not work or are not reliable, and that their operational use leads to laziness and poor tradecraft.

If the MKULTRA program had ever found that LSD or any other drug really did turn a man into a puppet, Sid Gottlieb would have had no trouble surmounting all those biases. Instead, Gottlieb and his fellow searchers came frustratingly close but always fell short of finding a reliable control mechanism. LSD certainly penetrated to the innermost regions of the mind. It could spring loose a whole gamut of feelings, from terror to insight. But in the end, the human psyche proved so complex that even the most skilled manipulator could not anticipate all the variables. He could use LSD and other drugs to chip away at free will. He could score temporary victories, and he could alter moods, perceptions sometimes even beliefs. He had the power to cause great harm, but ultimately he could not conquer the human spirit.

Notes

The CIA's reaction to Frank Olson's death is described in numerous memos released by the Agency to the Olson family, which can be found at pp.1005-1132 of the Kennedy Subcommittee 1975 hearings on Biomedical and Behavioral Research. See particularly at p. 1077, 18 December 1953, Subject: The Suicide of Frank Olson and at p. 1027, 1 December 1953, Subject: Use of LSD.

Richard Helms' views on unwitting testing are found in Document #448, 17 December 1963, Subject: Testing of Psychochemicals and Related Materials and in a memorandum to the CIA Director, June 9, 1964, quoted from on page 402 of the Church Committee Report, Book I.

George White's diary and letters were donated by his widow to Foothills Junior College, Los Altos, California and are the source of a treasure chest of material on him, including his letter to a friend explaining his almost being "blackballed" from the CIA, the various diary entries cited, including references to folk-dancing with Gottlieb, the interview with Hal Lipset where he explains his philosophy on chasing criminals, and his letter to Sid Gottlieb dated November 21, (probably) 1972.

The New York and San Francisco safehouses run by George White are the subjects of MKULTRA subprojects 3,14,16,42, and 149. White's tips to the landlord are described in 42-156, his liquor bills in 42-157, "dryruns" in 42-91. The New York safehouse run by Charles Siragusa is subproject 132. The "intermediate" tests are described in document 132-59.

Paul Avery, a San Francisco freelance writer associated with the Center for Investigative Reporting in Oakland, California interviewed William Hawkins and provided assistance on the details of the San Francisco safehouse and George White's background. Additional information on White came from interviews with his widow, several former colleagues in the Narcotics Bureau, and other knowledgeable sources in various San Francisco law-enforcement agencies. An ex-Narcotics Bureau official told of Dr. James Hamilton's study of unusual sexual practices and the description of his unwitting drug testing comes from MKULTRA subproject 2, which is his subproject.

Ray Treichler discussed some of his work with harassment substances in testimony before the Kennedy subcommittee on September 20, 1977, pp. 105-8. He delivered his testimony under the pseudonym "Philip Goldman."

"The Gang that Couldn't Spray Straight" article appeared in the September 20, 1977 Washington Post. Richard Helms' decision not to tell John McCone about the CIA's connection to the Mafia in assassination attempts against Castro is described in the Church Committee's Assassination report, pp. 102-3.

The 1957 Inspector General's Report on TSS, Document #417 and the 1963 inspection of MKULTRA, 14 August 1963, Document #59 provided considerable detail throughout the entire chapter. The Church Committee Report on MKULTRA in Book I, pp. 385-422 also provided considerable information.

Sid Gottlieb's job as Assistant to the Clandestine Services chief for Scientific Matters is described in Document #74 (operational series) 20 October 1959, Subject: Application of Imaginative Research on the Behavioral and Physical Sciences to [deleted] Problems" and in the 1963 Inspector General's report.

Interviews with ex-CIA Inspector General Lyman Kirkpatrick, another former Inspector General's staff employee, and several ex-TSS staffers contributed significantly to this chapter.

Helms' letter to the Warren Commission on "Soviet Brainwashing Techniques," dated 19 June 1964, was obtained from the National Archives.

The material on the CIA's operational use of LSD came from the Church Committee Report, Book I, pp. 399-403 and from an affidavit filed in the Federal Court case of John D. Marks v. Central Intelligence Agency, et. al., Civil Action No. 76-2073 by Eloise R. Page, Chief, Policy and Coordination Staff of the CIA's Directorate of Operations. In listing all the reasons why the Agency should not provide the operational documents, Ms. Page gave some information on what was in the documents. The passages on TSS's and the Medical Office's positions on the use of LSD came from a memo written by James Angleton, Chief, Counterintelligence Staff on December 12, 1957 quoted in part at p. 401 of the Church Committee Report, Book I.

Footnotes

1. CIA operators and agents all had cover names by which they were supposed to be called even in classified documents. Gottlieb was "Sherman R. Grifford." George White became "Morgan Hall."
2. One case which put White in every newspaper in the country was his 1949 arrest of blues singer Billie Holliday on an opium charge. To prove she had been set up and was not then using drugs, the singer checked into a California sanitarium that had been recommended by a friend of a friend, Dr. James Hamilton. The jury then acquitted her. Hamilton's involvement is bizarre because he had worked with George White testing truth drugs for OSS, and the two men were good friends. White may have put his own role in perspective when he told a 1970 interviewer he "enjoyed" chasing criminals. "It was a game for me," he said. "I felt quite a bit of compassion for a number of the people that I found it necessary to put in jail, particularly when you'd see the things that would happen to their families. I'd give them a chance to stay out of jail and take care of their families by giving me information, perhaps, and they would stubbornly refuse to do so. They wouldn't be a rat, as they would put it."
3. Despite this indication from White's diary that Lashbrook came to the New York safehouse for an "LSD surprise" and despite his signature on papers authorizing the subproject, Lashbrook flatly denied all firsthand knowledge of George White's testing in 1977 Senate testimony. Subcommittee chairman Edward Kennedy did not press Lashbrook, nor did he refer the matter to the Justice Department for possible perjury charges.
4. This was just one of many expenditures that would drive CIA auditors wild while going over George White's accounts. Others included $44.04 for a telescope, liquor bills over $1,000 "with no record as to the necessity of its use," and $31.75 to make an on-the-spot payment to a neighborhood lady whose car he hit. The reason stated for using government funds for the last expense: "It was important to maintain security and forestall an insurance investigation."
5. In 1984, George Orwell wrote about government-encouraged prostitution: "Mere debauchery did not matter very much, so long as it was furtive and joyless, and only involved the women of a submerged and despised class."
6. In 1961 MKULTRA officials started a third safehouse in New York, also under the Narcotics Bureau's supervision. This one was handled by Charles Siragusa who, like White, was a senior agent and OSS veteran.

7. Rhodes' testimony about this incident, which had been set up in advance with Senator Edward Kennedy's staff, brought on the inevitable "Gang That Couldn't Spray Straight" headline in the Washington Post. This approach turned the public perception of a deadly serious program into a kind of practical joke carried out badly by a bunch of bumbler.

8. Lyman Kirkpatrick, the longtime Inspector General who had then recently left the job to take a higher Agency post, had personally known of the safehouse operation since right after Olson's death and had never raised any noticeable objection. He now states he was "shocked" by the unwitting testing, but that he "didn't have the authority to follow up . . . I was trying to determine what the tolerable limits were of what I could do and still keep my job."

9. Trying to explain why he had specifically decided not to inform the CIA Director about the Agency's relationship with the mob, Helms stated to the Church committee, "Mr. McCone was relatively new to this organization, and I guess I must have thought to myself, well this is going to look peculiar to him . . . This was, you know not a very savory effort." Presumably, Helms had similar reasons for not telling McCone about the unwitting drug-testing in the safehouses.

10. Helms was a master of telling different people different stories to suit his purposes. At the precise time he was raising the Soviet menace to push McCone into letting the unwitting testing continue, he wrote the Warren Commission that not only did Soviet behavioral research lag five years behind the West's but that "there is no present evidence that the Soviets have any singular, new potent, drugs . . . to force a course of action on an individual."

11. TSS officials led by Sid Gottlieb, who were responsible for the operational use of LSD abroad, took the position that there was "no danger medically" in unwitting doses and that neither giving a medical exam or having a doctor present was necessary. The Agency's Medical Office disagreed, saying the drug was "medically dangerous." In 1957 Inspector General Lyman Kirkpatrick noted it would be "unrealistic" to give the Medical Office what amounted to veto power over covert operations by letting Agency doctors rule on the health hazard to subjects in the field.

12. While I was doing the research for this book, many people approached me claiming to be victims of CIA drugging plots. Although I listened carefully to all and realized that some might be authentic victims, I had no way of distinguishing between someone acting strangely and someone made to act strangely. Perhaps the most insidious aspect of this whole technique is that anyone blaming his aberrant behavior on a drug or on the CIA gets labeled a hopeless paranoid and his case is thrown into the crank file. There is no better cover than operating on the edge of madness.

One leftist professor in a Latin American university who had opposed the CIA says that he was working alone in his office one day in 1974 when a strange woman entered and jabbed his wrist with a pin stuck in a small round object. Almost immediately, he became irrational, broke glasses, and threw water in colleagues' faces. He says his students spotted an ambulance waiting for him out front. They spirited him out the back door and took him home, where he tripped (or had psychotic episodes) for more than a week. He calls the experience a mix of "heaven and hell," and he shudders at the thought that he might have spent the time in a hospital "with nurses and straitjackets." Although he eventually returned to his post at the university, he states that it took him several years to recover the credibility he lost the day he "went crazy at the office." If the CIA was involved, it had neutralized a foe.

93

Mushrooms to Counterculture

The MKULTRA scientists reaped little but disaster, mischief, and disappointment from their efforts to use LSD as a miracle weapon against the minds of their opponents. Nevertheless, their insatiable need to try every possibility led them to test hundreds of other substances, including all the drugs that would later be called psychedelic. These drugs were known to have great potency. They were derived from natural botanical products, and the men from MKULTRA believed from the beginning that rare organic materials might somehow have the greatest effect on the human mind. The most amazing of the psychedelics came from odd corners of the natural world. Albert Hofmann created LSD largely out of ergot, a fungus that grows on rye; mescaline is nothing more than the synthetic essence of peyote cactus. Psilocybin, the drug that Timothy Leary preferred to LSD for his Harvard experiments, was synthesized from exotic Mexican mushrooms that occupy a special place in CIA history. When the MKULTRA team first embarked on its mind-control explorations, the "magic mushroom" was only a rumor or fable in the linear history of the Western world. On nothing more than the possibility that the legend was based on fact, the Agency's scientists tracked the mushroom to the most remote parts of Mexico and then spent lavishly to test and develop its mind-altering properties. The results, like the LSD legacy, were as startling as they were unintended.

Among the botanicals that mankind has always turned to for intoxicants and poisons, mushrooms stand out. There is something enchantingly odd about the damp little buttons that can thrill a gourmet or kill one, depending on the subtle differences among the countless varieties. These fungi have a long record in unorthodox warfare. Two thousand years before the CIA looked to unleash powerful mushrooms in covert operations, the Roman Empress Agrippina eliminated her husband Claudius with a dish of poisonous mushrooms. According to Roman history, Agrippina wanted the emperor dead so that her son Nero could take the throne. She planned to take advantage of Claudius' love for the delicious Amanita caesarea mushroom, but she had to choose carefully among its deadly look-alikes. The poison could not be "sudden and instantaneous in its operation, lest the desperate achievement should be discovered," wrote Gordon and Valentina Wasson in their monumental and definitive work, Mushrooms, Russia and History. The Empress settled on the lethal Amanita phalloides, a fungus the Wassons considered well suited to the crime: "The victim would not give away the game by abnormal indispositions at the meal, but when the seizure came he would be so severely stricken that thereafter he would no longer be in command of his own affairs." Agrippina knew her mushrooms, and Nero became Emperor.

CIA mind-control specialists sought to emulate and surpass that kind of sophistication, as it might apply to any conceivable drug. Their fixation on the "magic mushroom" grew indirectly out of a meeting between drug experts and Morse Allen, head of the Agency's ARTICHOKE program, in October 1952. One expert told Allen about a shrub called piule, whose seeds had long been used as an intoxicant by Mexican Indians at religious ceremonies. Allen, who wanted to know about anything that distorted reality, immediately arranged for a young CIA scientist to take a Mexican field trip and gather samples of piule as well as other plants of "high narcotic and toxic value of interest to ARTICHOKE."

That young scientist arrived in Mexico City early in 1953. He could not advertise the true purpose of his trip because of ARTICHOKE's extreme secrecy, so he assumed cover as a researcher interested in finding native plants which were anesthetics. Fluent in Spanish and familiar with Mexico, he had no trouble moving around the country, meeting with leading experts on botanicals. Then he was off into the mountains south of the capital with his own field-testing equipment, gathering specimens and testing them crudely on the spot. By February, he had collected sacks full of material, including 10 pounds of piule. Before leaving Mexico to look for more samples around the Caribbean, the young scientist heard amazing tales about special mushrooms that grew only in the hot and rainy summer months. Such stories had circulated among Europeans in Mexico since Cortez had conquered the country early in the sixteenth century. Spanish friars had reported that the Aztecs used strange mushrooms in their religious ceremonies, which these converters of the heathens described as "demonic holy communions." Aztec priests called the special mushrooms teonanactl, "God's flesh." But Cortez's plunderers soon lost track of the rite, as did the traders and anthropologists who followed in their wake. Only the legend survived.

Back in Washington, the young scientist's samples went straight to the labs, and Agency officials scoured the historical record for accounts of the strange mushrooms. Morse Allen himself, though responsible in ARTICHOKE research for everything from the polygraph to hypnosis, took the trouble to go through the Indian lore. "Very early accounts of the ceremonies of some tribes of Mexican Indians show that mushrooms are used to produce hallucinations and to create intoxication in connection with religious festivals," he wrote. "In addition, this literature shows that witch doctors or 'divinators' used some types of mushrooms to produce confessions or to locate stolen objects or to predict the future." Here was a possible truth drug, Morse Allen reasoned. "Since it had been determined that no area of human knowledge is to be left unexplored in connection with the ARTICHOKE program, it was therefore regarded as essential that the peculiar qualities of the mushroom be explored...." Allen declared. "Full consideration," he concluded, should be given to sending an Agency man back to Mexico during the summer. The CIA had begun its quest for "God's flesh." Characteristically, Morse Allen was planning ahead in case the CIA's searchers came up with a mushroom worth having in large quantities. He knew that the supply from the tropics varied by season, and, anyway, it would be impractical to go to Mexico for fungi each time an operational need popped up. So Allen decided to see if it were possible to grow the mushrooms at home, either outdoors or in hothouses. On June 24, 1953, he and an associate drove from Washington to Toughkenamon, Pennsylvania, in the heart of "the largest mushroom-growing area in the world." At a three-hour session with the captains of the mushroom industry, Allen explained the government's interest in poisonous and narcotic fungi. Allen reported that the meeting "was primarily designed to obtain a 'foothold' in the center of the mushroom-growing industry where, if requirements for mushroom growing were demanded, it would be done by professionals in the trade." The mushroom executives were quite reluctant to grow toxic products because they knew that any accidental publicity would scare their customers. In the end, however, their patriotism won out, and they agreed to grow any kind of fungus the government desired. Allen considered the trip a great success. As useful as this commitment might be, an element of chance remained as long as the CIA had to depend on the natural process. But if the Agency could find synthetic equivalents for the active ingredients, it could manufacture rather than grow its own supply. Toward this goal of bypassing nature, Morse Allen had little choice but to turn for help to the man who the following year would wrest most of the ARTICHOKE functions from his grasp: Sid Gottlieb. Gottlieb, himself a Ph.D. in chemistry, had scientists working for him who knew what to do on the level of test tubes and beakers. Allen ran ARTICHOKE out of the Office of Security, which was not equipped for work on the frontiers of science. Gottlieb and his colleagues moved quickly into the mysteries of the Mexican hallucinogens. They went to work on the chemical structures of the piule and other plants that Morse Allen's emissary brought back from his field trip, but they neglected to report their findings to the bureaucratically outflanked Allen. Gottlieb and the MKULTRA crew soon got caught up in the search for the magic mushroom. While TSS had its own limited laboratory facilities, it depended on secret contractors for most research and development. Working with an associate, a cadaverously thin chemistry Ph.D. named Henry Bortner, Gottlieb passed the tropical plants to a string of corporate and academic researchers. One of them, Dr. James Moore, a 29-year-old chemist at Parke, Davis & Company in Detroit, was destined to be the first man in the CIA camp to taste the magic mushroom. Moore's career was typical of the specialists in the CIA's vast network of private contractors. His path to the mushroom led through several jobs and offbeat assignments, always with Agency funds and direction behind him. A precise, meticulous man of scientific habits, Moore was hardly the sort one would expect to find chasing psychedelic drugs. Such pursuits began for him in March 1953, when he had returned to his lab at Parke, Davis after a year of postdoctoral research at the University of Basel. His supervisor had called him in with an intriguing proposal: How would he like to work inside the company on a CIA contract? "Those were not particularly prosperous times, and the company was glad to get someone else to pay my salary [$8,000 a year]," notes Moore 25 years later. "If I had thought I was participating in a scheme run by a small band of mad individuals, I would have demurred." He accepted the job.

The Agency contracted with Parke, Davis, as it did with numerous other drug companies, universities, and government agencies to develop behavioral products and poisons from botanicals. CIA-funded chemists extracted deadly substances like the arrow-poison curare from natural products, while others worked on ways to deliver these poisons most effectively, like the "nondiscernible microbioinoculator" (or dart gun) that the Army Chemical Corps invented. CIA-connected botanists collected and then chemists analyzed botanicals from all over the tropics: a leaf that killed cattle, several plants deadly to fish, another leaf that caused hair to fall out, sap that caused temporary blindness, and a host of other natural products that could alter moods, dull or stimulate nerves, or generally disorient people. Among the plants Moore investigated was Jamaica dogwood, a plant used by Caribbean natives to stun fish so they could be easily captured for food. This work resulted in the isolation of several new substances, one of which Moore named "lisetin," in honor of his daughter.

Moore had no trouble adjusting to the secrecy demanded by his CIA sponsors, having worked on the Manhattan Project as a graduate student. He dealt only with his own case officer, Henry Bortner, and two or three other CIA men in TSS. Once Moore completed his chemical work on a particular substance, he turned the results over to Bortner and apparently never learned of the follow-up. Moore worked in his own little isolated compartment, and he soon recognized that the Agency preferred contractors who did not ask questions about what was going on in the next box.

In 1955 Moore left private industry for academia, moving from Detroit to the relatively placid setting of the University of Delaware in Newark. The school made him an assistant professor, and he moved into a lab in the Georgian red-brick building that housed the chemistry department. Along with his family, Moore brought his CIA contract then worth $16,000 a year, of which he received $650 per month, with the rest going to pay research assistants and overhead. Although the Agency allowed a few top university officials to be briefed on his secret connection, Moore appeared to his colleagues and students to be a normal professor who had a healthy research grant from the Geschickter Fund for Medical Research in Washington.

In the world of natural products particularly mushrooms the CIA soon made Moore a full-service agent. With some help from his CIA friends, he made contact with the leading lights in mycology (the study of mushrooms), attended professional meetings, and arranged for others to send him samples. From the CIA's point of view, he could not have had better cover. As Sid Gottlieb wrote, Moore "maintains the fiction that the botanical specimens he collects are for his own use since his field interest is natural-product chemistry." Under this pretext, Moore had a perfect excuse to make and purchase for the CIA chemicals that the Agency did not want traced. Over the years, Moore billed the Agency for hundreds of purchases, including 50 cents for an unidentified pamphlet, $433.13 for a particular shipment of mescaline, $1147.60 for a large quantity of mushrooms, and $12,000 for a quarter-ton of fluothane, an inhalation anesthetic. He shipped his purchases on as Bortner directed.

Moore eventually became a kind of short-order cook for what CIA documents call "offensive CW, BW" weapons at "very low cost and in a few days' time . . ." If there were an operational need, Bortner had only to call in the order, and Moore would whip up a batch of a "reputed depilatory" or hallucinogens like DMT or the incredibly potent BZ. On one occasion in 1963, Moore prepared a small dose of a very lethal carbamate poison the same substance that OSS used two decades earlier to try to kill Adolf Hitler. Moore charged the Agency his regular consulting fee, $100, for this service.

"Did I ever consider what would have happened if this stuff were given to unwitting people?" Moore asks, reflecting on his CIA days. "No. Particularly no. Had I been given that information, I think I would have been prepared to accept that. If I had been knee-jerk about testing on unwitting subjects, I wouldn't have been the type of person they would have used. There was nothing that I did that struck me as being so sinister and deadly.... It was all investigative."

James Moore was only one of many CIA specialists on the lookout for the magic mushroom. For three years after Morse Allen's man returned from Mexico with his tales of wonder, Moore and the others in the Agency's network pushed their lines of inquiry among contacts and travelers into Mexican villages so remote that Spanish had barely penetrated. Yet they found no magic mushrooms. Given their efforts, it was ironic that the man who beat them to "God's flesh" was neither a spy nor a scientist, but a banker. It was R. Gordon Wasson, vice-president of J. P. Morgan & Company, amateur mycologist, and co-author with his wife Valentina of Mushrooms, Russia and History. Nearly 30 years earlier, Wasson and his Russian-born wife had become fascinated by the different ways that societies deal with the mushroom, and they followed their lifelong obsession with these fungi, in all their glory, all over the globe.[1] They found whole nationalities, such as the Russians and the Catalans, were mycophiles, while others like the Spaniards and the Anglo-Saxons were not. They learned that in ancient Greece and Rome there was a belief that certain kinds of mushrooms were brought into being by lightning bolts. They discovered that widely scattered peoples, including desert Arabs, Siberians, Chinese, and Maoris of New Zealand, have shared the idea that mushrooms have supernatural connections. Their book appeared in limited edition, selling new in 1957 for $125. It contains facts and legends, lovingly told, as well as beautiful photographs of nearly every known species of mushroom. Inevitably, the Wassons heard tell of "God's flesh," and in 1953 they started spending their vacations pursuing it. They took their first unsuccessful trek to Mexico about the time James Moore got connected to the CIA and Morse Allen met with the Pennsylvania mushroom executives. They had no luck until their third expedition, when Gordon Wasson and his traveling companion, Allan Richardson, found their holy grail high in the mountains above Oaxaca. On June 29, 1955, they entered the town hall in a village called Huautla de Jimenez. There, they found a young Indian about 35, sitting by a large table in an upstairs room. Unlike most people in the village, he spoke Spanish. "He had a friendly manner," Wasson later wrote, "and I took a chance. Leaning over the table, I asked him earnestly and in a low voice if I could speak to him in confidence. Instantly curious, he encouraged me. 'Will you,' I went on, 'help me learn the secrets of the divine mushroom?'" and I used the Indian name nti sheeto, correctly pronouncing it with glottal stop and tonal differentiation of the syllables. When [he] recovered from his surprise he said warmly that nothing could be easier."

Shortly thereafter, the Indian led Wasson and Richardson down into a deep ravine where mushrooms were growing in abundance. The white men snapped picture after picture of the fungi and picked a cardboard box-full. Then, in the heavy humid heat of the afternoon, the Indian led them up the mountain to a woman who performed the ancient mushroom rite. Her name was Maria Sabina. She was not only a curandera, or shaman, of "the highest quality," wrote Wasson, but a "seora sin mancha, a woman without stain." Wasson described her as middle-aged and short, "with a spirituality in her expression that struck us at once. She had a presence. We showed our mushrooms to the woman and her daughter. They cried out in rapture over the firmness, the fresh beauty and abundance of our young specimens. Through the interpreter we asked if they would serve us that night. They said yes."

That night, Wasson, Richardson, and about 20 Indians gathered in one of the village's adobe houses. The natives wore their best clothes and were friendly to the white strangers. The host provided chocolate drinks, which evoked for Wasson accounts of similar beverages being served early Spanish writers. Maria Sabina sat on a mat before a simple altar table that was adorned with the images of the Child Jesus and the Baptism in Jordan. After cleaning the mushrooms, she handed them out to all the adults present, keeping 26 for herself and giving Wasson and Richardson 12 each.

Maria Sabina put out the last candle about midnight, and she chanted haunting, tightly measured melodies. The Indian celebrants responded with deep feeling. Both Wasson and Richardson began to experience intense hallucinations that did not diminish until about 4:00 A.M. "We were never more wide awake, and the visions came whether our eyes were open or closed," Wasson wrote: They emerged from the center of the field of our vision, opening up as they came, now rushing, now slowly at the pace that our will chose. They were vivid in color, always harmonious. They began with art motifs, such as might decorate carpets or textiles or wallpaper or the drawing board of an architect. Then they evolved into palaces with courts, arcades, gardensresplendent palaces with semiprecious stones.... Could the miraculous mobility that I was now enjoying be the explanation for the flying witches that played some important part in the folklore and fairy tales of northern Europe? These reflections passed through my mind at the very time that I was seeing the vision, for the effect of the mushrooms is to bring about a fission of the spirit, a split in the person, a kind of schizophrenia, with the rational side continuing to reason and to observe the sensations that the other side is enjoying. The mind is attached by an elastic cord to the vagrant senses.

Thus Gordon Wasson described the first known mushroom trip by "outsiders" in recorded history. The CIA's men missed the event, but they quickly learned of it, even though Wasson's visit was a private noninstitutional one to a place where material civilization had not reached. Such swiftness was assured by the breadth of the Agency's informant network, which included formal liaison arrangements with agencies like the Agriculture Department and the FDA and informal contacts all over the world. A botanist in Mexico City sent the report that reached both CIA headquarters and then James Moore. In the best bureaucratic form, the CIA description of Wasson's visions stated sparsely that the New York banker thought he saw "a multitude of architectural forms." Still, "God's flesh" had been located, and the MKULTRA leaders snatched up information that Wasson planned to return the following summer and bring back some mushrooms.

During the intervening winter, James Moore wrote Wasson "out of the blue," as Wasson recalls and expressed a desire to look into the chemical properties of Mexican fungi. Moore eventually suggested that he would like to accompany Wasson's party, and, to sweeten the proposition, he mentioned that he knew a foundation that might be willing to help underwrite the expedition. Sure enough, the CIA's conduit, the Geschickter Fund, made a $2,000 grant. Inside the MKULTRA program, the quest for the divine mushroom became Subproject 58.

Joining Moore and Wasson on the 1956 trip were the world-renowned French mycologist Roger Heim and a colleague from the Sorbonne. The party made the final leg of the trip, one at a time, in a tiny Cessna, but when it was Moore's turn, the load proved too much for the plane. The pilot suddenly took a dramatic right angle turn through a narrow canyon and made an unscheduled stop on the side of a hill. Immediately on landing, an Indian girl ran out and slid blocks under the wheels, so the plane would not roll back into a ravine. The pilot decided to lighten the load by leaving Moore among the local Indians, who spoke neither English nor Spanish. Later in the day, the plane returned and picked up the shaken Moore.

Finally in Huautla, sleeping on a dirt floor and eating local food, everyone reveled in the primitiveness of the adventure except Moore, who suffered. In addition to diarrhea, he recalls, "I had a terribly bad cold, we damned near starved to death, and I itched all over." Beyond his physical woes, Moore became more and more alienated from the others, who got on famously. Moore was a "complainer," according to Wasson. "He had no empathy for what was going on," recalls Wasson. "He was like a landlubber at sea. He got sick to his stomach and hated it all." Moore states, "Our relationship deteriorated during the course of the trip."

Wasson returned to the same Maria Sabina who had led him to the high ground the year before. Again the ritual started well after dark and, for everyone but Moore, it was an enchanted evening. Sings Wasson: "I had the most superb feelinga feeling of ecstasy. You're raised to a height where you have not been in everyday lifenot ever." Moore, on the other hand, never left the lowlands. His description: "There was all this chanting in the dialect. Then they passed the mushrooms around, and we chewed them up. I did feel the hallucinogenic effect, although 'disoriented' would be a better word to describe my reaction."

Soon thereafter, Moore returned to Delaware with a bag of mushroomsjust in time to take his pregnant wife to the hospital for delivery. After dropping her off with the obstetrician, he continued down the hall to another doctor about his digestion. Already a thin man, Moore had lost 15 pounds. Over the next week, he slowly nursed himself back to health. He reported in to Bortner and started preliminary work in his lab to isolate the active ingredient in the mushrooms. Bortner urged him on; the men from MKULTRA were excited at the prospect that they might be able to create "a completely new chemical agent." They wanted their own private supply of "God's flesh." Sid Gottlieb wrote that if Moore succeeded, it was "quite possible" that the new drugs could "remain an Agency secret."

Gottlieb's dream of a CIA monopoly on the divine mushroom vanished quickly under the influence of unwanted competitors, and indeed, the Agency soon faced a control problem of burgeoning proportions. While Moore toiled in his lab, Roger Heim in Paris unexpectedly pulled off the remarkable feat of growing the mushrooms in artificial culture from spore prints he had made in Mexico. Heim then sent samples to none other than Albert Hofmann, the discoverer of LSD, who quickly isolated and chemically reproduced the active chemical ingredient. He named it psilocybin.

The dignified Swiss chemist had beaten out the CIA, [2] and the men from MKULTRA found themselves trying to obtain formulas and supplies from overseas. Instead of locking up the world's supply of the drug in a safe somewhere, they had to keep track of disbursements from Sandoz, as they were doing with LSD. Defeated by the old master, Moore laid his own work aside and sent away to Sandoz for a supply of psilocybin.

This lapse in control still did not quash the hopes of Agency officials that the mushroom might become a powerful weapon in covert operations. Agency scientists rushed it into the experimental stage. Within three summers of the first trip with James Moore, the CIA's queasy professor from America, the mushroom had journeyed through laboratories on two continents, and its chemical essence had worked its way back to Agency conduits and a contractor who would test it. In Kentucky, Dr. Harris Isbell ordered psilocybin injected into nine black inmates at the narcotics prison. His staff laid the subjects out on beds as the drug took hold and measured physical symptoms every hour: blood pressure, knee-jerk reflexes, rectal temperature, precise diameter of eye pupils, and so on. In addition, they recorded the inmates' various subjective feelings:

After 30 minutes, anxiety became quite definite and was expressed as consisting of fear that something evil was going to happen, fear of insanity, or of death.... At times patients had the sensation that they could see the blood and bones in their own body or in that of another person. They reported many fantasies or dreamlike states in which they seemed to be elsewhere. Fantastic experiences, such as trips to the moon or living in gorgeous castles were occasionally reported.... Two of the 9 patients . . . felt their experiences were caused by the experimenters controlling their minds....

Experimental data piled up, with operational testing to follow.

But the magic mushroom never became a good spy weapon. It made people behave strangely but no one could predict where their trips would take them. Agency officials craved certainty.

On the other hand, Gordon Wasson found revelation.

After a lifetime of exploring and adoring mushrooms, he had discovered the greatest wonder of all in that remote Indian village. His experience inspired him to write an account of his journey for the "Great Adventures" series in Life magazine. The story, spread across 17 pages of text and color photographs, was called "Seeking the Magic Mushroom: A New York banker goes to Mexico's mountains to participate in the age-old rituals of Indians who chew strange growths that produce visions." In 1957, before the Russian sputnik shook America later that year, Life introduced its millions of readers to the mysteries of hallucinogens, with a tone of glowing but dignified respect. Wasson wrote movingly of his long search for mushroom lore, and he became positively rhapsodic in reflecting on his Mexican "trip":

In man's evolutionary past, as he groped his way out from his lowly past, there must have come a moment in time when he discovered the secret of the hallucinatory mushrooms. Their effect on him, as I see it, could only have been profound, a detonator to new ideas. For the mushrooms revealed to him worlds beyond the horizons known to him, in space and time, even worlds on a different plane of being, a heaven and perhaps a hell.

For the credulous, primitive mind, the mushrooms must have reinforced mightily the idea of the miraculous. Many emotions are shared by men with the animal kingdom, but awe and reverence and the fear of God are peculiar to men. When we bear in mind the beatific sense of awe and ecstasy and caritas engendered by the divine mushrooms, one is emboldened to the point of asking whether they may not have planted in primitive man the very idea of God. The article caused a sensation in the United States, where people had already been awakened to ideas like these by Aldous Huxley's The Doors of Perception. It lured waves of respectable adultsprecursors of later hippie travelers to Mexico in search of their own curanderas. (Wasson came to have mixed feelings about the response to his story, after several tiny Mexican villages were all but trampled by American tourists on the prowl for divinity.) One person whose curiosity was stimulated by the article was a young psychology professor named Timothy Leary. In 1959, in Mexico on vacation, he ate his first mushrooms. He recalls he "had no idea it was going to change my life." Leary had just been promised tenure at Harvard, but his life of conventional prestige lost appeal for him within five hours of swallowing the mushroom: "The revelation had come. The veil had been pulled back.... The prophetic call. The works. God had spoken."

Having responded to a Life article about an expedition that was partially funded by the CIA, Leary returned to a Harvard campus where students and professors had for years served as subjects for CIA- and military-funded LSD experiments. His career as a drug prophet lay before him. Soon he would be quoting in his own Kamasutra from the CIA's contractor Harold Abramson and others, brought together for scholarly drug conferences by the sometime Agency conduit, the Macy Foundation.

With LSD, as with mushrooms, the men from MKULTRA remained oblivious, for the most part, to the rebellious effect of the drug culture in the United States. "I don't think we were paying any attention to it," recalls a TSS official. The CIA's scientists looked at drugs from a different perspective and went on trying to fashion their spy arsenal. Through the entire 1960s and into the 1970s, the Agency would scour Latin America for poisonous and narcotic plants.[3] Earlier, TSS officials and contractors actually kept spreading the magic touch of drugs by forever pressing new university researchers into the field. Boston Psychopathic's Max Rinkel stirred up the interest of Rochester's Harold Hodge and told him how to get a grant from the Agency conduit, the Geschickter Fund. Hodge's group found a way to put a radioactive marker into LSD, and the MKULTRA crew made sure that the specially treated substance found its way to still more scientists. When a contractor like Harold Abramson spoke highly of the drug at a new conference or seminar, tens or hundreds of scientists, health professionals, and subjectsusually studentswould wind up trying LSD.

One day in 1954, Ralph Blum, a senior at Harvard on his way to a career as a successful author, heard from a friend that doctors at Boston Psychopathic would pay $25 to anyone willing to spend a day as a happy schizophrenic. Blum could not resist. He applied, passed the screening process, took a whole battery of Wechsler psychological tests, and was told to report back on a given morning. That day, he was shown into a room with five other Harvard students. Project director Bob Hyde joined them and struck Blum as a reassuring father figure. Someone brought in a tray with six little glasses full of water and LSD. The students drank up. For Blum, the drug did not take hold for about an hour and a half somewhat longer than the average. While Hyde was in the process of interviewing him, Blum felt his mind shift gears. "I looked at the clock on the wall and thought how well behaved it was. It didn't pay attention to itself. It just stayed on the wall and told time." Blum felt that he was looking at everything around him from a new perspective. "It was a very subtle thing," he says. "My ego filter had been pretty much removed. I turned into a very accessible state accessible to myself. I knew when someone was lying to me, and the richness of the experience was such that I didn't want to suffer fools gladly." Twenty-four years later, Blum concludes: "It was undeniably a very important experience for me. It made a difference in my life. It began to move the log jam of my old consciousness. You can't do it with just one blast. It was the beginning of realizing it was safe to love again. Although I wouldn't use them until much later, it gave me a new set of optics. It let me know there was something downstream." [4]

Many student subjects like Blum thought LSD transformed the quality of their lives. Others had no positive feelings, and some would later use the negative memories of their trips to invalidate the whole drug culture and stoned thinking process of the 1960s. In a university city like Boston where both the CIA and the Army were carrying on large testing programs at hospitals connected to Harvard, volunteering for an LSD trip became quite popular in academic circles. Similar reactions, although probably not as pronounced, occurred in other intellectual centers. The intelligence agencies turned to America's finest universities and hospitals to try LSD, which meant that the cream of the country's students and graduate assistants became the test subjects.

In 1969 the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs published a fascinating little study designed to curb illegal LSD use. The authors wrote that the drug's "early use was among small groups of intellectuals at large Eastern and West Coast universities. It spread to undergraduate students, then to other campuses. Most often, users have been introduced to the drug by persons of higher status. Teachers have influenced students; upperclassmen have influenced lower-classmen." Calling this a "trickle-down phenomenon," the authors seem to have correctly analyzed how LSD got around the country. They left out only one vital element, which they had no way of knowing: That somebody had to influence the teachers and that up there at the top of the LSD distribution system could be found the men of MKULTRA. Harold Abramson apparently got a great kick out of getting his learned friends high on LSD. He first turned on Frank Fremont-Smith, head of the Macy Foundation which passed CIA money to Abramson. In this cozy little world where everyone knew everybody, Fremont-Smith organized the conferences that spread the word about LSD to the academic hinterlands. Abramson also gave Gregory Bateson, Margaret Mead's former husband, his first LSD. In 1959 Bateson, in turn, helped arrange for a beat poet friend of his named Allen Ginsberg to take the drug at a research program located off the Stanford campus. No stranger to the hallucinogenic effects of peyote, Ginsberg reacted badly to what he describes as "the closed little doctor's room full of instruments," where he took the drug. Although he was allowed to listen to records of his choice (he chose a Gertrude Stein reading, a Tibetan mandala, and Wagner), Ginsberg felt he "was being connected to Big Brother's brain." He says that the experience resulted in "a slight paranoia that hung on all my acid experiences through the mid-1960s until I learned from meditation how to disperse that."

Anthropologist and philosopher Gregory Bateson then worked at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Palo Alto. From 1959 on, Dr. Leo Hollister was testing LSD at that same hospital. Hollister says he entered the hallucinogenic field reluctantly because of the "unscientific" work of the early LSD researchers. He refers specifically to most of the people who attended Macy conferences. Thus, hoping to improve on CIA and military-funded work, Hollister tried drugs out on student volunteers, including a certain Ken Kesey, in 1960. Kesey said he was a jock who had only been drunk once before, but on three successive Tuesdays, he tried different psychedelics. "Six weeks later I'd bought my first ounce of grass," Kesey later wrote, adding, "Six months later I had a job at that hospital as a psychiatric aide." Out of that experience, using drugs while he wrote, Kesey turned out One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest. He went on to become the counterculture's second most famous LSD visionary, spreading the creed throughout the land, as Tom Wolfe would chronicle in The Electric Kool-Aid Acid Test.

CIA officials never meant that the likes of Leary, Kesey, and Ginsberg should be turned on. Yet these men were, and they, along with many of the lesser-known experimental subjects, like Harvard's Ralph Blum, created the climate whereby LSD escaped the government's control and became available by the early sixties on the black market. No one at the Agency apparently foresaw that young Americans would voluntarily take the drug whether for consciousness expansion or recreational purposes. The MKULTRA experts were mainly on a control trip, and they proved incapable of gaining insight from their own LSD experiences of how others less fixated on making people do their bidding would react to the drug.

It would be an exaggeration to put all the blame on or give all the credit to the CIA for the spread of LSD. One cannot forget the nature of the times, the Vietnam War, the breakdown in authority, and the wide availability of other drugs, especially marijuana. But the fact remains that LSD was one of the catalysts of the traumatic upheavals of the 1960s. No one could enter the world of psychedelics without first passing, unawares, through doors opened by the Agency. It would become a supreme irony that the CIA's enormous search for weapons among drugs fueled by the hope that spies could, like Dr. Frankenstein, control life with genius and machines would wind up helping to create the wandering, uncontrollable minds of the counterculture.

Notes

R. Gordon and Valentina Wasson's mammoth work, Mushrooms, Russia and History, (New York: Pantheon, 1957), was the source for the account of the Empress Agrippina's murderous use of mushrooms. Wasson told the story of his various journeys to Mexico in a series of interviews and in a May 27, 1957 Life magazine article, "Seeking the Magic Mushroom."

Morse Allen learned of piule in a sequence described in document #A/B, I, 33/7, 14 November 1952, Subject: Piule. The sending of the young CIA scientist to Mexico was outlined in #A/B, I, 33/3, 5 December 1952. Morse Allen commented on mushroom history and covert possibilities in #A/B, I, 34/4, 26 June 1953, Subject: Mushrooms Narcotic and Poisonous Varieties. His trip to the American mushroom-growing capital was described in Document Number illegible], 25 June 1953, Subject: Trip to Toughkenamon, Pennsylvania. The failure of TSS to tell Morse Allen about the results of the botanical lab work is outlined in #A/B, I, 39/5, 10 August 1954 Subject: Reports; Request for from TSS [deleted].

James Moore told much about himself in a long interview and in an exchange of correspondence. MKULTRA Subproject 51 dealt with Moore's consulting relationship with the Agency and Subproject 52 with his ties as a procurer of chemicals. See especially Document 51-46, 8 April 1963, Subject: MKULTRA Subproject 51; 51-24, 27 August 1956, Subject: MKULTRA Subproject 51-B; 52-94, 20 February 1963, Subject: (BB) Chemical and Physical Manipulants; 52-19, 20 December 1962; 52-17, 1 March 1963; 52-23, 6 December 1962; 52-64, 24 August 1959. The CIA's arrangements with the Department of Agriculture are detailed in #A/B, I, 34/4, 26 June, 1953, Subject: Mushrooms Narcotic and Poisonous varieties and Document [number illegible], 13 April 1953, Subject: Interview with Cleared Contacts.

Dr. Harris Isbell's work with psilocybin is detailed in Isbell document # 155, "Comparison of the Reaction Induced by Psilocybin and LSD-25 in Man."

Information on the counterculture and its interface with CIA drug-testing came from interviews with Timothy Leary, Allen Ginsburg, Humphrey Osmond, John Lilly, Sidney Cohen, Ralph Blum, Herbert Kelman, Leo Hollister, Herbert DeShon, and numerous others. Ken Kesey described his first trip in Garage Sale (New York: Viking Press, 1973). Timothy Leary's Kamasutra was actually a book hand-produced in four copies and called Psychedelic Theory: Working Papers from the Harvard IFLF Psychedelic Research Project, 1960-1963. Susan Berns Wolf Rothchild kindly made her copy available. The material about Harold Abramson's turning on Frank Fremont-Smith and Gregory Bateson came from the proceedings of a conference on LSD sponsored by the Josiah Macy, Jr. Foundation on April 22, 23, and 24, 1959, pp. 8-22.

Footnotes

1. On their honeymoon, in the summer of 1927, the Wassons were strolling along a mountain path when suddenly Valentina abandoned Gordon's side. "She had spied wild mushrooms in the forest," wrote Wasson, "and racing over the carpet of dried leaves in the woods, she knelt in poses of adoration before one cluster and then another of these growths. In ecstasy she called each kind by an endearing Russian name. Like all good Anglo-Saxons, I knew nothing about the fungal world and felt the less I knew about these putrid, treacherous excrescences the better. For her they were things of grace infinitely inviting to the perceptive mind." In spite of his protests, Valentina gathered up the mushrooms and brought them back to the lodge where she cooked them for dinner. She ate them all alone. Wasson wanted no part of the fungi. While she mocked his horror, he predicted in the face of her laughter he would wake up a widower the next morning. When Valentina survived, the couple decided to find an explanation for "the strange cultural cleavage" that had caused them to react so differently to mushrooms. From then on, they were hooked, and the world became the richer.

2. Within two years, Albert Hofmann would scoop the CIA once again, with some help from Gordon Wasson. In 1960 Hofmann broke down and chemically recreated the active ingredient in hallucinatory ololiuqui seeds sent him by Wasson before the Agency's contractor, William Boyd Cook of Montana State University, could do the job. Hofmann's and Wasson's professional relationship soon grew into friendship, and in 1962 they traveled together on horseback to Huautla de Jimenez to visit Maria Sabina. Hofmann presented the curandera with some genuine Sandoz psilocybin. Wasson recalls: "Of course, Albert Hofmann is so conservative he always gives too little a dose, and it didn't have any effect." The crestfallen Hofmann believed he had duplicated "God's flesh," and he doubled the dose. Then Maria Sabina had her customary visions, and she reported, according to Wasson, the drug was the "same" as the mushroom. States Wasson, whose prejudice for real mushrooms over chemicals is unmistakable, "I don't think she said it with very much enthusiasm."

3. See Chapter 12.

4. Lincoln Clark, a psychiatrist who tested LSD for the Army at Massachusetts General Hospital, reflects a fairly common view among LSD researchers when he belittles drug-induced thinking of the sort described by Blum. "Everybody who takes LSD has an incredible experience that you can look at as having positive characteristics. I view it as pseudo-insight. This is part of the usual response of intellectually pretentious people." On the other hand, psychiatrist Sidney Cohen, who has written an important book on LSD, noted that to experience a visionary trip, "the devotee must have faith in, or at least be open to the possibility of the 'other state.' . . . He must 'let go,' not offer too much resistance to losing his personal identity. The ability to surrender oneself is probably the most important operation of all."

PART III

SPELLSELECTRODES AND HYPNOSIS

Brainwashing

In September 1950, the Miami News published an article by Edward Hunter titled " 'Brain-Washing' Tactics Force Chinese into Ranks of Communist Party." It was the first printed use in any language of the term "brainwashing," which quickly became a stock phrase in Cold War headlines. Hunter, a CIA propaganda operator who worked under cover as a journalist, turned out a steady stream of books and articles on the subject. He made up his coined word from the Chinese hsi-nao "to cleanse the mind" which had no political meaning in Chinese.

American public opinion reacted strongly to Hunter's ideas, no doubt because of the hostility that prevailed toward communist foes, whose ways were perceived as mysterious and alien. Most Americans knew something about the famous trial of the Hungarian Josef Cardinal Mindszenty, at which the Cardinal appeared zombie-like, as though drugged or hypnotized. Other defendants at Soviet "show trials" had displayed similar symptoms as they recited unbelievable confessions in dull, cliché-ridden monotones. Americans were familiar with the idea that the communists had ways to control hapless people, and Hunter's new word helped pull together the unsettling evidence into one sharp fear. The brainwashing controversy intensified during the heavy 1952 fighting in Korea, when the Chinese government launched a propaganda offensive that featured recorded statements by captured U.S. pilots, who "confessed" to a variety of war crimes including the use of germ warfare.

The official American position on prisoner confessions was that they were false and forced. As expressed in an Air Force Headquarters document, "Confessions can be of truthful details.... For purposes of this section, 'confessions' are considered as being the forced admission to a lie." But if the military had understandable reasons to gloss over the truth or falsity of the confessions, this still did not address the fact that confessions had been made at all. Nor did it lay to rest the fears of those like Edward Hunter who saw the confessions as proof that the communists now had techniques "to put a man's mind into a fog so that he will mistake what is true for what is untrue, what is right for what is wrong, and come to believe what did not happen actually had happened, until he ultimately becomes a robot for the Communist manipulator."

By the end of the Korean War, 70 percent of the 7,190 U.S. prisoners held in China had either made confessions or signed petitions calling for an end to the American war effort in Asia. Fifteen percent collaborated fully with the Chinese, and only 5 percent steadfastly resisted. The American performance contrasted poorly with that of the British, Australian, Turkish, and other United Nations prisoners among whom collaboration was rare, even though studies showed they were treated about as badly as the Americans. Worse, an alarming number of the prisoners stuck by their confessions after returning to the United States. They did not, as expected, recant as soon as they stepped on U.S. soil. Puzzled and dismayed by this wholesale collapse of morale among the POWs, American opinion leaders settled in on Edward Hunter's explanation: The Chinese had somehow brainwashed our boys.

But how? At the height of the brainwashing furor, conservative spokesmen often seized upon the very mystery of it all to give a religious cast to the political debate. All communists have been, by definition, brainwashed through satanic forces, they argued thereby making the enemy seem like robots completely devoid of ordinary human feelings and motivation. Liberals favored a more scientific view of the problem. Given the incontrovertible evidence that the Russians and the Chinese could, in a very short time and often under difficult circumstances, alter the basic belief and behavior patterns of both domestic and foreign captives, liberals argued that there must be a technique involved that would yield its secrets under objective investigation.

CIA Director Allen Dulles favored the scientific approach, although he naturally encouraged his propaganda experts to exploit the more emotional interpretations of brainwashing. Dulles and the heads of the other American security agencies became almost frantic in their efforts to find out more about the Soviet and Chinese successes in mind control. Under pressure for answers, Dulles turned to Dr. Harold Wolff, a world-famous neurologist with whom he had developed an intensely personal relationship. Wolff was then treating Dulles' own son for brain damage suffered from a Korean War head wound. Together they shared the trauma of the younger Dulles' fits and mental lapses. Wolff, a skinny little doctor with an overpowering personality, became fast friends with the tall, patrician CIA Director. Dulles may have seen brainwashing as an induced form of brain damage or mental illness. In any case, in late 1953, he asked Wolff to conduct an official study of communist brainwashing techniques for the CIA. Wolff, who had become fascinated by the Director's tales of the clandestine world, eagerly accepted.

Harold Wolff was known primarily as an expert on migraine headaches and pain, but he had served on enough military and intelligence advisory panels that he knew how to pick up Dulles' mandate and expand on it. He formed a working partnership with Lawrence Hinkle, his colleague at Cornell University Medical College in New York City. Hinkle handled the administrative part of the study and shared in the substance. Before going ahead, the two doctors made sure they had the approval of Cornell's president, Deane W. Malott and other high university officials who checked with their contacts in Washington to make sure the project did indeed have the great importance that Allen Dulles stated. Hinkle recalls a key White House aide urging Cornell to cooperate. The university administration agreed, and soon Wolff and Hinkle were poring over the Agency's classified files on brainwashing. CIA officials also helped arrange interviews with former communist interrogators and prisoners alike. "It was done with great secrecy," recalls Hinkle. "We went through a great deal of hoop-dedo and signed secrecy agreements, which everyone took very seriously."

The team of Wolff and Hinkle became the chief brainwashing studiers for the U.S. government, although the Air Force and Army ran parallel programs.[1] Their secret report to Allen Dulles, later published in a declassified version, was considered the definitive U.S. Government work on the subject. In fact, if allowances are made for the Cold War rhetoric of the fifties, the Wolff-Hinkle report still remains one of the better accounts of the massive political re-education programs in China and the Soviet Union. It stated flatly that neither the Soviets nor the Chinese had any magical weaponsno drugs, exotic mental ray-guns, or other fanciful machines. Instead, the report pictured communist interrogation methods resting on skillful, if brutal, application of police methods. Its portrait of the Soviet system anticipates, in dry and scholarly form, the work of novelist Alexander Solzhenitzyn in The Gulag Archipelago. Hinkle and Wolff showed that the Soviet technique rested on the cumulative weight of intense psychological pressure and human weakness, and this thesis alone earned the two Cornell doctors the enmity of the more right-wing CIA officials such as Edward Hunter. Several of his former acquaintances remember that Hunter was fond of saying that the Soviets brainwashed people the way Pavlov had conditioned dogs.

In spite of some dissenters like Hunter, the Wolff-Hinkle model became, with later refinements, the best available description of extreme forms of political indoctrination. According to the general consensus, the Soviets started a new prisoner off by putting him in solitary confinement. A rotating corps of guards watched him constantly, humiliating and demeaning him at every opportunity and making it clear he was totally cut off from all outside support. The guards ordered him to stand for long periods, let him sit, told him exactly the position he could take to lie down, and woke him if he moved in the slightest while sleeping. They banned all outside stimulibooks, conversation, or news of the world.

After four to six weeks of this mind-deadening routine, the prisoner usually found the stress unbearable and broke down. "He weeps, he mutters, and prays aloud in his cell," wrote Hinkle and Wolff. When the prisoner reached this stage, the interrogation began. Night after night, the guards brought him into a special room to face the interrogator. Far from confronting his captive with specific misdeeds, the interrogator told him that he knew his own crimesall too well. In the most harrowing Kafkaesque way, the prisoner tried to prove his innocence to he knew not what. Together the interrogator and prisoner reviewed the prisoner's life in detail. The interrogator seized on any inconsistencyno matter how minuteas further evidence of guilt, and he laughed at the prisoner's efforts to justify himself. But at least the prisoner was getting a response of some sort. The long weeks of isolation and uncertainty had made him grateful for human contact even grateful that his case was moving toward resolution. True, it moved only as fast as he was willing to incriminate himself, but . . . Gradually, he came to see that he and his interrogator were working toward the same goal of wrapping up his case. In tandem, they ransacked his soul. The interrogator would periodically let up the pressure. He offered a cigarette, had a friendly chat, explained he had a job to do making it all the more disappointing the next time he had to tell the prisoner that his confession was unsatisfactory .

As the charges against him began to take shape, the prisoner realized that he could end his ordeal only with a full confession. Otherwise the grueling sessions would go on forever. "The regimen of pressure has created an overall discomfort which is well nigh intolerable," wrote Hinkle and Wolff. "The prisoner invariably feels that 'something must be done to end this.' He must find a way out." A former KGB officer, one of many former interrogators and prisoners interviewed for the CIA study, said that more than 99 percent of all prisoners signed a confession at this stage.

In the Soviet system under Stalin, these confessions were the final step of the interrogation process, and the prisoners usually were shot or sent to a labor camp after sentencing. Today, Russian leaders seem much less insistent on exacting confessions before jailing their foes, but they still use the penal (and mental health) system to remove from the population classes of people hostile to their rule.

The Chinese took on the more ambitious task of reeducating their prisoners. For them, confession was only the beginning. Next, the Chinese authorities moved the prisoner into a group cell where his indoctrination began. From morning to night, he and his fellow prisoners studied Marx and Mao, listened to lectures, and engaged in self-criticism. Since the progress of each member depended on that of his cellmates, the group pounced on the slightest misconduct as an indication of backsliding. Prisoners demonstrated the zeal of their commitment by ferociously attacking deviations. Constant intimacy with people who reviled him pushed the resistant prisoner to the limits of his emotional endurance. Hinkle and Wolff found that "The prisoner must conform to the demands of the group sooner or later." As the prisoner developed genuine changes of attitude, pressure on him relaxed. His cellmates rewarded him with increasing acceptance and esteem. Their acceptance, in turn, reinforced his commitment to the Party, for he learned that only this commitment allowed him to live successfully in the cell. In many cases, this process produced an exultant sense of mission in the prisoner a feeling of having finally straightened out his life and come to the truth. To be sure, this experience, which was not so different from religious conversion, did not occur in all cases or always last after the prisoner returned to a social group that did not reinforce it.

From the first preliminary studies of Wolff and Hinkle, the U.S. intelligence community moved toward the conclusion that neither the Chinese nor the Russians made appreciable use of drugs or hypnosis, and they certainly did not possess the brainwashing equivalent of the atomic bomb (as many feared). Most of their techniques were rooted in age-old methods, and CIA brainwashing researchers like psychologist John Gittinger found themselves poring over ancient documents on the Spanish Inquisition. Furthermore, the communists used no psychiatrists or other behavioral scientists to devise their interrogation system. The differences between the Soviet and Chinese systems seemed to grow out of their respective national cultures. The Soviet brainwashing system resembled a heavy-handed cop whose job was to isolate, break, and then subdue all the troublemakers in the neighborhood. The Chinese system was more like thousands of skilled acupuncturists, working on each other and relying on group pressure, ideology, and repetition. To understand further the Soviet or Chinese control systems, one had to plunge into the subtle mysteries of national and individual character. While CIA researchers looked into those questions, the main thrust of the Agency's brainwashing studies veered off in a different direction. The logic behind the switch was familiar in the intelligence business. Just because the Soviets and the Chinese had not invented a brainwashing machine, officials reasoned, there was no reason to assume that the task was impossible. If such a machine were even remotely feasible, one had to assume the communists might discover it. And in that case, national security required that the United States invent the machine first. Therefore, the CIA built up its own elaborate brainwashing program, which, like the Soviet and Chinese versions, took its own special twist from our national character. It was a tiny replica of the Manhattan Project, grounded in the conviction that the keys to brainwashing lay in technology. Agency officials hoped to use old-fashioned American know-how to produce shortcuts and scientific breakthroughs. Instead of turning to tough cops, whose methods repelled American sensibilities, or the gurus of mass motivation, whose ideology Americans lacked, the Agency's brainwashing experts gravitated to people more in the mold of the brilliant and sometimes mad scientist, obsessed by the wonders of the brain.

In 1953 CIA Director Allen Dulles made a rare public statement on communist brainwashing: "We in the West are somewhat handicapped in getting all the details," Dulles declared. "There are few survivors, and we have no human guinea pigs to try these extraordinary techniques." Even as Dulles spoke, however, CIA officials acting under his orders had begun to find the scientists and the guinea pigs. Some of their experiments would wander so far across the ethical borders of experimental psychiatry (which are hazy in their own right) that Agency officials thought it prudent to have much of the work done outside the United States.

Call her Lauren G. For 19 years, her mind has been blank about her experience. She remembers her husband's driving her up to the old gray stone mansion that housed the hospital, Allan Memorial Institute, and putting her in the care of its director, Dr. D. Ewen Cameron. The next thing she recalls happened three weeks later: They gave me a dressing gown. It was way too big, and I was tripping all over it. I was mad. I asked why did I have to go round in this sloppy thing. I could hardly move because I was pretty weak. I remember trying to walk along the hall, and the walls were all slanted. It was then that I said, "Holy Smokes, what a ghastly thing." I remember running out the door and going up the mountain in my long dressing gown.

The mountain, named Mont Royal, loomed high above Montreal. She stumbled and staggered as she tried to climb higher and higher. Hospital staff members had no trouble catching her and dragging her back to the Institute. In short order, they shot her full of sedatives, attached electrodes to her temples, and gave her a dose of electroshock. Soon she slept like a baby. Gradually, over the next few weeks, Lauren G. began to function like a normal person again. She took basket-weaving therapy and played bridge with her fellow patients. The hospital released her, and she returned to her husband in another Canadian city.

Before her mental collapse in 1959, Lauren G. seemed to have everything going for her. A refined, glamorous horsewoman of 30, whom people often said looked like Elizabeth Taylor, she had auditioned for the lead in National Velvet at 13 and married the rich boy next door at 20. But she had never loved her husband and had let her domineering mother push her into his arms. He drank heavily. "I was really unhappy," she recalls. "I had a horrible marriage, and finally I had a nervous breakdown. It was a combination of my trying to lose weight, sleep loss, and my nerves."

The family doctor recommended that her husband send her to Dr. Cameron, which seemed like a logical thing to do, considering his wide fame as a psychiatrist. He had headed Allan Memorial since 1943, when the Rockefeller Foundation had donated funds to set up a psychiatric facility at McGill University. With continuing help from the Rockefellers, McGill had built a hospital known far beyond Canada's borders as innovative and exciting. Cameron was elected president of the American Psychiatric Association in 1953, and he became the first president of the World Psychiatric Association. His friends joked that they had run out of honors to give him.

Cameron's passion lay in the more "objective" forms of therapy, with which he could more easily and swiftly bring about improvements in patients than with the notoriously slow Freudian methods. An impatient man, he dreamed of finding a cure for schizophrenia. No one could tell him he was not on the right track. Cameron's supporter at the Rockefeller Foundation, Robert Morrison, recorded in his private papers that he found the psychiatrist tense and ill-at-ease, and Morrison ventured that this may account for "his lack of interest and effectiveness in psychotherapy and failure to establish warm personal relations with faculty members, both of which were mentioned repeatedly when I visited Montreal." Another Rockefeller observer noted that Cameron "appears to suffer from deep insecurity and has a need for power which he nourishes by maintaining an extraordinary aloofness from his associates."

When Lauren G.'s husband delivered her to Cameron, the psychiatrist told him she would receive some electroshock, a standard treatment at the time. Besides that, states her husband, "Cameron was not very communicative, but I didn't think she was getting anything out of the ordinary." The husband had no way of knowing that Cameron would use an unproved experimental technique on his wife much less that the psychiatrist intended to "depattern" her. Nor did he realize that the CIA was supporting this work with about $19,000 a year in secret funds.[2]

Cameron defined "depatterning" as breaking up existing patterns of behavior, both the normal and the schizophrenic, by means of particularly intensive electroshocks, usually combined with prolonged, drug-induced sleep. Here was a psychiatrist willing indeed, eager to wipe the human mind totally clean. Back in 1951, ARTICHOKE's Morse Allen had likened the process to "creation of a vegetable." Cameron justified this tabula rasa approach because he had a theory of "differential amnesia," for which he provided no statistical evidence when he published it. He postulated that after he produced "complete amnesia" in a subject, the person would eventually recover memory of his normal but not his schizophrenic behavior. Thus, Cameron claimed he could generate "differential amnesia." Creating such a state in which a man who knew too much could be made to forget had long been a prime objective of the ARTICHOKE and MKULTRA programs.

Needless to say, Lauren G. does not recall a thing today about those weeks when Cameron depatterned her. Afterward, unlike over half of the psychiatrist's depatterning patients, Lauren G. gradually recovered full recall of her life before the treatment, but then, she remembered her mental problems, too.[3] Her husband says she came out of the hospital much improved. She declares the treatment had no effect one way or another on her mental condition, which she believes resulted directly from her miserable marriage. She stopped seeing Cameron after about a month of outpatient electroshock treatments, which she despised. Her relationship with her husband further deteriorated, and two years later she walked out on him. "I just got up on my own hind legs," she states. "I said the hell with it. I'm going to do what I want and take charge of my own life. I left and started over." Now divorced and remarried, she feels she has been happy ever since.

Cameron's depatterning, of which Lauren G. had a comparatively mild version, normally started with 15 to 30 days of "sleep therapy." As the name implies, the patient slept almost the whole day and night. According to a doctor at the hospital who used to administer what he calls the "sleep cocktail," a staff member woke up the patient three times a day for medication that consisted of a combination of 100 mg. Thorazine, 100 mg. Nembutal, 100 mg. Seconal, 150 mg. Veronal, and 10 mg. Phenergan. Another staff doctor would also awaken the patient two or sometimes three times daily for electroshock treatments.[4] This doctor and his assistant wheeled a portable machine into the "sleep room" and gave the subject a local anesthetic and muscle relaxant, so as not to cause damage with the convulsions that were to come. After attaching electrodes soaked in saline solution, the attendant held the patient down and the doctor turned on the current. In standard, professional electroshock, doctors gave the subject a single dose of 110 volts, lasting a fraction of a second, once a day or every other day. By contrast, Cameron used a form 20 to 40 times more intense, two or three times daily, with the power turned up to 150 volts. Named the "Page-Russell" method after its British originators, this technique featured an initial one-second shock, which caused a major convulsion, and then five to nine additional shocks in the middle of the primary and follow-on convulsions. Even Drs. Page and Russell limited their treatment to once a day, and they always stopped as soon as their patient showed "pronounced confusion" and became "faulty in habits." Cameron, however, welcomed this kind of impairment as a sign the treatment was taking effect and plowed ahead through his routine.

The frequent screams of patients that echoed through the hospital did not deter Cameron or most of his associates in their attempts to "depattern" their subjects completely. Other hospital patients report being petrified by the "sleep rooms," where the treatment took place, and they would usually creep down the opposite side of the hall.

Cameron described this combined sleep-electroshock treatment as lasting between 15 to 30 days, with some subjects staying in up to 65 days (in which case, he reported, he awakened them for three days in the middle). Sometimes, as in the case of Lauren G., patients would try to escape when the sedatives wore thin, and the staff would have to chase after them. "It was a tremendous nursing job just to keep these people going during the treatment," recalls a doctor intimately familiar with Cameron's operation. This doctor paints a picture of dazed patients, incapable of taking care of themselves, often groping their way around the hospital and urinating on the floor.

Cameron wrote that his typical depatterning patient usually a woman moved through three distinct stages. In the first, the subject lost much of her memory. Yet she still knew where she was, why she was there, and who the people were who treated her. In the second phase, she lost her "space-time image," but still wanted to remember. In fact, not being able to answer questions like, "Where am I?" and "How did I get here?" caused her considerable anxiety. In the third stage, all that anxiety disappeared. Cameron described the state as "an extremely interesting constriction of the range of recollections which one ordinarily brings in to modify and enrich one's statements. Hence, what the patient talks about are only his sensations of the moment, and he talks about them almost exclusively in highly concrete terms. His remarks are entirely uninfluenced by previous recollections nor are they governed in any way by his forward anticipations. He lives in the immediate present. All schizophrenic symptoms have disappeared. There is complete amnesia for all events in his life."

Lauren G. and 52 other subjects at Allan Memorial received this level of depatterning in 1958 and 1959. Cameron had already developed the technique when the CIA funding started. The Agency sent the psychiatrist research money to take the treatment beyond this point. Agency officials wanted to know if, once Cameron had produced the blank mind, he could then program in new patterns of behavior, as he claimed he could. As early as 1953 the year he headed the American Psychiatric Association Cameron conceived a technique he called "psychic driving," by which he would bombard the subject with repeated verbal messages. From tape recordings based on interviews with the patient, he selected emotionally loaded "cue statements" first negative ones to get rid of unwanted behavior and then positive to condition in desired personality traits. On the negative side, for example, the patient would hear this message as she lay in a stupor:

Madeleine, you let your mother and father treat you as a child all through your single life. You let your mother check you up sexually after every date you had with a boy. You hadn't enough determination to tell her to stop it. You never stood up for yourself against your mother or father but would run away from trouble.... They used to call you "crying Madeleine." Now that you have two children, you don't seem to be able to manage them and keep a good relationship with your husband. You are drifting apart. You don't go out together. You have not been able to keep him interested sexually.

Leonard Rubenstein, Cameron's principal assistant, whose entire salary was paid from CIA-front funds, put the message on a continuous tape loop and played it for 16 hours every day for several weeks. An electronics technician, with no medical or psychological background, Rubenstein, an electrical whiz, designed a giant tape recorder that could play 8 loops for 8 patients at the same time. Cameron had the speakers installed literally under the pillows in the "sleep rooms." "We made sure they heard it," says a doctor who worked with Cameron. With some patients, Cameron intensified the negative effect by running wires to their legs and shocking them at the end of the message.

When Cameron thought the negative "psychic driving" had gone far enough, he switched the patient over to 2 to 5 weeks of positive tapes:

You mean to get well. To do this you must let your feelings come out. It is all right to express your anger.... You want to stop your mother bossing you around. Begin to assert yourself first in little things and soon you will be able to meet her on an equal basis. You will then be free to be a wife and mother just like other women.

Cameron wrote that psychic driving provided a way to make "direct, controlled changes in personality," without having to resolve the subject's conflicts or make her relive past experiences. As far as is known, no present-day psychologist or psychiatrist accepts this view. Dr. Donald Hebb, who headed McGill's psychology department at the time Cameron was in charge of psychiatry, minces no words when asked specifically about psychic driving: "That was an awful set of ideas Cameron was working with.

It called for no intellectual respect. If you actually look at what he was doing and what he wrote, it would make you laugh. If I had a graduate student who talked like that, I'd throw him out." Warming to his subject, Hebb continues: "Look, Cameron was no good as a researcher.... He was eminent because of politics." Nobody said such things at the time, however. Cameron was a very powerful man.

The Scottish-born psychiatrist, who never lost the burr in his voice, kept searching for ways to perfect depatterning and psychic driving. He held out to the CIA front the Society for the Investigation of Human Ecology that he could find more rapid and less damaging ways to break down behavior. He sent the Society a proposal that combined his two techniques with sensory deprivation and strong drugs. His smorgasbord approach brought together virtually all possible techniques of mind control, which he tested individually and together. When his Agency grant came through in 1957, Cameron began work on sensory deprivation.

For several years, Agency officials had been interested in the interrogation possibilities of this technique that Hebb himself had pioneered at McGill with Canadian defense and Rockefeller money. It consisted of putting a subject in a sealed environmental small room or even a large box and depriving him of all sensory input: eyes covered with goggles, ears either covered with muffs or exposed to a constant, monotonous sound, padding to prevent touching, no smells with this empty regime interrupted only by meal and bathroom breaks. In 1955 Morse Allen of ARTICHOKE made contact at the National Institutes of Health with Dr. Maitland Baldwin who had done a rather gruesome experiment in which an Army volunteer had stayed in the "box" for 40 hours until he kicked his way out after, in Baldwin's words, "an hour of crying loudly and sobbing in a most heartrending fashion." The experiment convinced Baldwin that the isolation technique could break any man, no matter how intelligent or strong-willed. Hebb, who unlike Baldwin released his subjects when they wanted, had never left anyone in "the box" for more than six days. Baldwin told Morse Allen that beyond that sensory deprivation would almost certainly cause irreparable damage. Nevertheless, Baldwin agreed that if the Agency could provide the cover and the subjects, he would do, according to Allen's report, "terminal type" experiments. After numerous meetings inside the CIA on how and where to fund Baldwin, an Agency medical officer finally shot down the project as being "immoral and inhuman," suggesting that those pushing the experiments might want to "volunteer their heads for use in Dr. Baldwin's 'noble' project."

With Cameron, Agency officials not only had a doctor willing to perform terminal experiments in sensory deprivation, but one with his own source of subjects. As part of his CIA-funded research, he had a "box" built in the converted stables behind the hospital that housed Leonard Rubenstein and his behavioral laboratory.

Undaunted by the limits set in Hebb's work, Cameron left one woman in for 35 days, although he had so scrambled her mind with his other techniques that one cannot say, as Baldwin predicted to the Agency, if the prolonged deprivation did specific damage. This subject's name was Mary C., and, try as he might, Cameron could not get through to her. As the aloof psychiatrist wrote in his notes: "Although the patient was prepared by both prolonged sensory isolation (35 days) and by repeated depatterning, and although she received 101 days of positive driving, no favorable results were obtained." [5] Before prescribing this treatment, Cameron had diagnosed the 52-year-old Mary C.: "Conversion reaction in a woman of the involuntional age with mental anxiety; hypochondriatic." In other words, Mary C. was going through menopause.

In his proposal to the CIA front, Cameron also said he would test curare, the South American arrow poison which, when liberally applied, kills by paralyzing internal body functions. In nonlethal doses, curare causes a limited paralysis which blocks but does not stop these functions. According to his papers, some of which wound up in the archives of the American Psychiatric Association, Cameron injected subjects with curare in conjunction with sensory deprivation, presumably to immobilize them further.

Cameron also tested LSD in combination with psychic driving and other techniques. In late 1956 and early 1957, one of his subjects was Val Orlikow, whose husband David has become a member of the Canadian parliament. Suffering from what she calls a "character neurosis that started with postpartum depression," she entered Allan Memorial as one of Cameron's personal patients. He soon put her under his version of LSD therapy. One to four times a week, he or another doctor would come into her room and give her a shot of LSD, mixed with either a stimulant or a depressant and then leave her alone with a tape recorder that played excerpts from her last session with him. As far as is known, no other LSD researcher ever subjected his patients to unsupervised trips certainly not over the course of two months when her hospital records show she was given LSD 14 times. "It was terrifying," Mrs. Orlikow recalls. "You're afraid you've gone off somewhere and can't come back." She was supposed to write down on a pad whatever came into her head while listening to the tapes, but often she became so frightened that she could not write at all. "You become very small," she says, as her voice quickens and starts to reflect some of her horror. "You're going to fall off the step, and God, you're going down into hell because it's so far, and you are so little. Like Alice, where is the pill that makes you big, and you're a squirrel, and you can't get out of the cage, and somebody's going to kill you." Then, suddenly, Mrs. Orlikow pulls out of it and lucidly states, "Some very weird things happened." Mrs. Orlikow hated the LSD treatment. Several times she told Cameron she would take no more, and the psychiatrist would put his arm around her and ask, "Lassie," which he called all his women patients, "don't you want to get well, so you can go home and see your husband?" She remembers feeling guilty about not following the doctor's orders, and the thought of disappointing Cameron, whom she idolized, crushed her.

Finally, after Cameron talked her out of quitting the treatment several times, she had to end it. She left the hospital but stayed under his private care. In 1963 he put her back in the hospital for more intensive psychic driving. "I thought he was God," she states. "I don't know how I could have been so stupid.... A lot of us were naive. We thought psychiatrists had the answers. Here was the greatest in the world, with all these titles." In defense of Cameron, a former associate says the man truly cared about the welfare of his patients. He wanted to make them well. As his former staff psychologist wrote:

He abhorred the waste of human potential, seen most dramatically in the young people whose minds were distorted by what was then considered to be schizophrenia. He felt equally strongly about the loss of wisdom in the aged through memory malfunction. For him, the end justified the means, and when one is dealing with the waste of human potential, it is easy to adopt this stance.

Cameron retired abruptly in 1964, for unexplained reasons. His successor, Dr. Robert Cleghorn, made a virtually unprecedented move in the academic world of mutual back-scratching and praise. He commissioned a psychiatrist and a psychologist, unconnected to Cameron, to study his electroshock work. They found that 60 percent of Cameron's depatterned patients complained they still had amnesia for the period 6 months to 10 years before the therapy.[6] They could find no clinical proof that showed the treatment to be any more or less effective than other approaches. They concluded that "the incidence of physical complications and the anxiety generated in the patient because of real or imagined memory difficulty argue against" future use of the technique.

The study-team members couched their report in densely academic jargon, but one of them speaks more clearly now. He talks bitterly of one of Cameron's former patients who needs to keep a list of her simplest household chores to remember how to do them. Then he repeats several times how powerful a man Cameron was, how he was "the godfather of Canadian psychiatry." He continues, "I probably shouldn't talk about this, but Cameron for him to do what he did he was a very schizophrenic guy, who totally detached himself from the human implications of his work . . . God, we talk about concentration camps. I don't want to make this comparison, but God, you talk about 'we didn't know it was happening,' and it was right in our back yard." Cameron died in 1967, at age 66, while climbing a mountain. The American Journal of Psychiatry published a long and glowing obituary with a full-page picture of his not-unpleasant face.

D. Ewen Cameron did not need the CIA to corrupt him. He clearly had his mind set on doing unorthodox research long before the Agency front started to fund him. With his own hospital and source of subjects, he could have found elsewhere encouragement and money to replace the CIA's contribution which never exceeded $20,000 a year. However, Agency officials knew exactly what they were paying for. They traveled periodically to Montreal to observe his work, and his proposal was chillingly explicit. In Cameron, they had a doctor, conveniently outside the United States, willing to do terminal experiments in electroshock, sensory deprivation, drug testing, and all of the above combined. By literally wiping the minds of his subjects clean by depatterning and then trying to program in new behavior, Cameron carried the process known as "brainwashing" to its logical extreme.

It cannot be said how many if any other Agency brainwashing projects reached the extremes of Cameron's work. Details are scarce, since many of the principal witnesses have died, will not talk about what went on, or lie about it. In what ways the CIA applied work like Cameron's is not known. What is known, however, is that the intelligence community, including the CIA, changed the face of the scientific community during the 1950s and early 1960s by its interest in such experiments. Nearly every scientist on the frontiers of brain research found men from the secret agencies looking over his shoulders, impinging on the research. The experience of Dr. John Lilly illustrates how this intrusion came about.

In 1953 Lilly worked at the National Institutes of Health, outside Washington, doing experimental studies in an effort to "map" the body functions controlled from various locations in the brain. He devised a method of pounding up to 600 tiny sections of hypodermic tubing into the skulls of monkeys, through which he could insert electrodes "into the brain to any desired distance and at any desired location from the cortex down to the bottom of the skull," he later wrote. Using electric stimulation, Lilly discovered precise centers of the monkeys' brains that caused pain, fear, anxiety, and anger. He also discovered precise, separate parts of the brain that controlled erection, ejaculation, and orgasm in male monkeys. Lilly found that a monkey, given access to a switch operating a correctly planted electrode, would reward himself with nearly continuous orgasms at least once every 3 minutes for up to 16 hours a day. As Lilly refined his brain "maps," officials of the CIA and other agencies descended upon him with a request for a briefing. Having a phobia against secrecy, Lilly agreed to the briefing only under the condition that it and his work remain unclassified, completely open to outsiders. The intelligence officials submitted to the conditions most reluctantly, since they knew that Lilly's openness would not only ruin the spy value of anything they learned but could also reveal the identities and the interests of the intelligence officials to enemy agents. They considered Lilly annoying, uncooperative possibly even suspicious.

Soon Lilly began to have trouble going to meetings and conferences with his colleagues. As part of the cooperation with the intelligence agencies, most of them had agreed to have their projects officially classified as SECRET, which meant that access to the information required a security clearance.[7] Lilly's security clearance was withdrawn for review, then tangled up and misplaced all of which he took as pressure to cooperate with the CIA. Lilly, whose imagination needed no stimulation to conjure up pictures of CIA agents on deadly missions with remote-controlled electrodes strategically implanted in their brains, decided to withdraw from that field of research. He says he had decided that the physical intrusion of the electrodes did too much brain damage for him to tolerate.

In 1954 Lilly began trying to isolate the operations of the brain, free of outside stimulation, through sensory deprivation. He worked in an office next to Dr. Maitland Baldwin, who the following year agreed to perform terminal sensory deprivation experiments for ARTICHOKE's Morse Allen but who never told Lilly he was working in the field. While Baldwin experimented with his sensory-deprivation "box," Lilly invented a special "tank." Subjects floated in a tank of body-temperature water wearing a face mask that provided air but cut off sight and sound. Inevitably, intelligence officials swooped down on Lilly again, interested in the use of his tank as an interrogation tool. Could involuntary subjects be placed in the tank and broken down to the point where their belief systems or personalities could be altered? It was central to Lilly's ethic that he himself be the first subject of any experiment, and, in the case of the consciousness-exploring tank work, he and one colleague were the only ones. Lilly realized that the intelligence agencies were not interested in sensory deprivation because of its positive benefits, and he finally concluded that it was impossible for him to work at the National Institutes of Health without compromising his principles. He quit in 1958.

Contrary to most people's intuitive expectations, Lilly found sensory deprivation to be a profoundly integrating experience for himself personally. He considered himself to be a scientist who subjectively explored the far wanderings of the brain. In a series of private experiments, he pushed himself into the complete unknown by injecting pure Sandoz LSD into his thigh before climbing into the sensory-deprivation tank.[8] When the counterculture sprang up, Lilly became something of a cult figure, with his unique approach to scientific inquiry though he was considered more of an outcast by many in the professional research community.

For most of the outside world, Lilly became famous with the release of the popular film, The Day of the Dolphin, which the filmmakers acknowledged was based on Lilly's work with dolphins after he left NIH. Actor George C. Scott portrayed a scientist, who, like Lilly, loved dolphins, did pioneering experiments on their intelligence, and tried to find ways to communicate with them. In the movie, Scott became dismayed when the government pounced on his breakthrough in talking to dolphins and turned it immediately to the service of war. In real life, Lilly was similarly dismayed when Navy and CIA scientists trained dolphins for special warfare in the waters off Vietnam.[9]

A few scientists like Lilly made up their minds not to cross certain ethical lines in their experimental work, while others were prepared to go further even than their sponsors from ARTICHOKE and MKULTRA. Within the Agency itself, there was only one final question: Will a technique work? CIA officials zealously tracked every lead, sparing no expense to check each angle many times over.

By the time the MKULTRA program ended in 1963, Agency researchers had found no foolproof way to brainwash another person.[10] "All experiments beyond a certain point always failed," says the MKULTRA veteran, "because the subject jerked himself back for some reason or the subject got amnesiac or catatonic." Agency officials found through work like Cameron's that they could create "vegetables," but such people served no operational use. People could be tortured into saying anything, but no science could guarantee that they would tell the truth. The impotency of brainwashing techniques left the Agency in a difficult spot when Yuri Nosenko defected to the United States in February 1964. A ranking official of the Soviet KGB, Nosenko brought with him stunning information. He said the Russians had bugged the American embassy in Moscow, which turned out to be true. He named some Russian agents in the West. And he said that he had personally inspected the KGB file of Lee Harvey Oswald, who only a few months earlier had been murdered before he could be brought to trial for the assassination of President Kennedy. Nosenko said he learned that the KGB had had no interest in Oswald.

Was Nosenko telling the truth, or was he a KGB "plant" sent to throw the United States off track about Oswald? Was his information about penetration correct, or was Nosenko himself the penetration? Was he acting in good faith? Were the men within the CIA who believed he was acting in good faith themselves acting in good faith? These and a thousand other questions made up the classical trick deck for spieseach card having "true" on one side and "false" on the other.

Top CIA officials felt a desperate need to resolve the issue of Nosenko's legitimacy. With numerous Agency counterintelligence operations hanging in the balance, Richard Helms, first as Deputy Director and then as Director, allowed CIA operators to work Nosenko over with the interrogation method in which Helms apparently had the most faith. It turned out to be not any truth serum or electroshock depatterning program or anything else from the Agency's brainwashing search. Helms had Nosenko put through the tried-and-true Soviet method: isolate the prisoner, deaden his senses, break him. For more than three years, 1,277 days, to be exact, Agency officers kept Nosenko in solitary confinement. As if they were using the Hinkle-Wolff study as their instruction manual and the Cardinal Mindszenty case as their success story, the CIA men had guards watch over Nosenko day and night, giving him not a moment of privacy. A light bulb burned continuously in his cell. He was allowed nothing to read not even the labels on toothpaste boxes. When he tried to distract himself by making a chess set from pieces of lint in his cell, the guards discovered his game and swept the area clean. Nosenko had no window, and he was eventually put in a specially built 12' X 12' steel bank vault.

Nosenko broke down. He hallucinated. He talked his head off to his interrogators, who questioned him for 292 days, often while they had him strapped into a lie detector. If he told the truth, they did not believe him. While the Soviets and Chinese had shown that they could make a man admit anything, the CIA interrogators apparently lacked a clear idea of exactly what they wanted Nosenko to confess. When it was all over and Richard Helms ordered Nosenko freed after three and a half years of illegal detention, some key Agency officers still believed he was a KGB plant. Others thought he was on the level. Thus the big questions remained unresolved, and to this day, CIA men past and present are bitterly split over who Nosenko really is.

With the Nosenko case, the CIA's brainwashing programs had come full circle. Spurred by the widespread alarm over communist tactics, Agency officials had investigated the field, started their own projects, and looked to the latest technology to make improvements. After 10 years of research, with some rather gruesome results, CIA officials had come up with no techniques on which they felt they could rely. Thus, when the operational crunch came, they fell back on the basic brutality of the Soviet system.

Notes

Edward Hunter's article " 'Brain-Washing' Tactics Force Chinese into Ranks of Communist Party" appeared in the Miami News on September 24, 1950. His book was Brainwashing in Red China (New York: Vanguard Press, 1951). Other material came from several interviews with Hunter just before he died in June 1978.

The Air Force document cited on brainwashing was called "Air Force Headquarters Panel Convened to Record Air Force Position Regarding Conduct of Personnel in Event of Capture," December 14, 1953. Researcher Sam Zuckerman found it and showed it to me.

The figures on American prisoners in Korea and the quote from Edward Hunter came from hearings before the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, 84th Congress, June 19, 20, 26, and 27, 1956.

The material on the setting up of the Cornell-Hinkle-Wolff study came from interviews with Hinkle, Helen Goodell, and several CIA sources. Hinkle's and Wolff's study on brainwashing appeared in classified form on 2 April 1956 as a Technical Services Division publication called Communist Control Techniques and in substantially the same form but unclassified as "Communist Interrogation and Indoctrination of 'Enemies of the State' An Analysis of Methods Used by the Communist State Police." AMA Archives of Neurology and Psychiatry, August, 1956, Vol. 76.

Allen Dulles spoke on "Brain Warfare" before the Alumni Conference of Princeton University, Hot Springs, Virginia on April 10, 1953, and the quote on guinea pigs came from that speech.

The comments of Rockefeller Foundation officials about D. Ewen Cameron and the record of Rockefeller funding were found in Robert S. Morrison's diary, located in the Rockefeller Foundation Archives, Pocantico Hills, New York.

The key articles on Cameron's work on depatterning and psychic driving were "Production of Differential Amnesia as a Factor in the Treatment of Schizophrenia," Comprehensive Psychiatry, 1960, 1, p. 26 and "Effects of Repetition of Verbal Signals upon the Behavior of Chronic Psychoneurotic Patients" by Cameron, Leonard Levy, and Leonard Rubenstein, Journal of Mental Science, 1960, 106, 742. The background on Page-Russell electroshocks came from "Intensified Electrical Convulsive Therapy in the Treatment of Mental Disorders" by L. G. M. Page and R. J. Russell, Lancet, Volume 254, Jan.June, 1948. Dr. John Cavanagh of Washington, D.C. provided background on the use of electroshock and sedatives in psychiatry. Cameron's MKULTRA subproject was #68. See especially document 68-37, "Application for Grant to Study the Effects upon Human Behavior of the Repetition of Verbal Signals," January 21, 1957.

Part of Cameron's papers are in the archives of the American Psychiatric Association in Washington, and they provided considerable information on the treatment of Mary C., as well as a general look at his work. Interviews with at least a dozen of his former colleagues also provided considerable information.

Interviews with John Lilly and Donald Hebb provided background on sensory deprivation. Maitland Baldwin's work in the field was discussed in a whole series of ARTICHOKE documents including #A/B, I, 76/4, 21 March 1955, Subject: Total Isolation; #A/B, I, 76/12, 19 May 1955, Subject: Total Isolation; Additional Comments; and #A/B, I, 76/17, 27 April 1955, Subject: Total Isolation, Supplemental Report #2. The quote from Aldous Huxley on sensory deprivation is taken from the book of his writings, Moksha: Writings on Psychedelics and the Visionary Experience (1931-1963), edited by Michael Horowitz and Cynthia Palmer (New York: Stonehill, 1978). The material on Val Orlikow's experiences with Dr. Cameron came from interviews with her and her husband David and from portions of her hospital records, which she furnished.

Cameron's staff psychologist Barbara Winrib's comments on him were found in a letter to the Montreal Star, August 11, 1977.

The study of Cameron's electroshock work ordered by Dr. Cleghorn was published as "Intensive Electroconvulsive Therapy: A Follow-up Study," by A. E. Schwartzman and P. E. Termansen, Canadian Psychiatric Association, Volume 12, 1967.

In addition to several interviews, much material on John Lilly came from his autobiography, The Scientist (Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott Company, 1978).

The CIA's handling of Yuri Nosenko was discussed at length in hearings before the House Assassinations Committee on September 15, 1978. The best press account of this testimony was written by Jeremiah O'Leary of the Washington Star on September 16, 1978: "How CIA Tried to Break Defector in Oswald Case."

Footnotes

1. Among the Air Force and Army project leaders were Dr. Fred Williams of the Air Force Psychological Warfare Division, Robert Jay Lifton, Edgar Schein, Albert Biderman, and Lieutenant Colonel James Monroe (an Air Force officer who would later go to work full time in CIA behavioral programs).
2. Cameron himself may not have known that the Agency was the ultimate source of these funds which came through a conduit, the Society for the Investigation of Human Ecology. A CIA document stated he was unwitting when the grants started in 1957, and it cannot be said whether he ever found out.

3. Cameron wrote that when a patient remembered his schizophrenic symptoms, the schizophrenic behavior usually returned. If the amnesia held for these symptoms, as Cameron claimed it often did, the subject usually did not have a relapse. Even in his "cured" patients, Cameron found that Rorschach tests continued to show schizophrenic thinking despite the improvement in overt behavior. To a layman, this would seem to indicate that Cameron's approach got only at the symptoms, not the causes of mental problems. Not deterred, however, Cameron dismissed this inconsistency as a "persistent enigma."

4. Cameron wrote in a professional journal that he gave only two electroshocks a day, but a doctor who actually administered the treatment for him says that three were common at the beginning of the therapy.

5. In his proposal to the Human Ecology group, Cameron wrote that his subjects would be spending only 16 hours a day in sensory deprivation, while they listened to psychic driving tapes (thus providing some outside stimuli). Nevertheless, one of Cameron's colleagues states that some patients, including Mary C. were in continuously. Always looking for a better way, Cameron almost certainly tried both variations.

6. Cleghorn's team found little loss of memory on objective tests, like the Wechsler Memory Scale but speculated that these tests measured a different memory function short-term recall than that the subjects claimed to be missing.

7. Lilly and other veterans of government-supported research note that there is a practical advantage for the scientist who allows his work to be classified: it gives him an added claim on government funds. He is then in a position to argue that if his work is important enough to be SECRET, it deserves money.

8. As was the case with LSD work, sensory deprivation research had both a mind control and a transcendental side. Aldous Huxley wrote thusly about the two pioneers in the field: "What men like Hebb and Lilly are doing in the laboratory was done by the Christian hermits in the Thebaid and elsewhere, and by Hindu and Tibetan hermits in the remote fastness of the Himalayas. My own belief is that these experiences really tell us something about the nature of the universe, that they are valuable in themselves and, above all, valuable when incorporated into our world-picture and acted upon [in] normal life."

9. In a program called "swimmer nullification," government scientists trained dolphins to attack enemy frogmen with huge needles attached to their snouts. The dolphins carried tanks of compressed air, which when jabbed into a deepdiver caused him to pop dead to the surface. A scientist who worked in this CIA-Navy program states that some of the dolphins sent to Vietnam during the late 1960s got out of their pens and displayed unheard of behavior for trained dolphins. John Lilly confirms that a group of the marine mammals stationed at Cam Ranh Bay did go AWOL, and he adds that he heard that some eventually returned with their bodies and fins covered with attack marks made by other dolphins.

10. After 1963 the Agency's Science and Technology Directorate continued brain research with unknown results. See Chapter 12.

Human Ecology

Well before Harold Wolff and Lawrence Hinkle finished their brainwashing study for Allen Dulles in 1956, Wolff was trying to expand his role in CIA research and operations. He offered Agency officials the cooperation of his colleagues at Cornell University, where he taught neurology and psychiatry in the Medical College. In proposal after proposal, Wolff pressed upon the CIA his idea that to understand human behavior and how governments might manipulate it one had to study man in relationship to his total environment. Calling this field "human ecology," Wolff drew into it the disciplines of psychology, medicine, sociology, and anthropology. In the academic world of the early 1950s, this cross-disciplinary approach

h was somewhat new, as was the word "ecology," but it made sense to CIA officials. Like Wolff, they were far in advance of the trends in the behavioral sciences

Wolff carved out vast tracts of human knowledge, some only freshly discovered, and proposed a partnership with the Agency for the task of mastering that knowledge for operational use. It was a time when knowledge itself seemed bountiful and promising, and Wolff was expansive about how the CIA could harness it. Once he figured out how the human mind really worked, he wrote, he would tell the Agency "how a man can be made to think, 'feel,' and behave according to the wishes of other men, and, conversely, how a man can avoid being influenced in this manner."

Such notions, which may now appear naive or perverse, did not seem so unlikely at the height of the Cold War. And Wolff's professional stature added weight to his ideas. Like D. Ewen Cameron, he was no obscure academic.

He had been President of the New York Neurological Association and would become, in 1960, President of the American Neurological Association. He served for several years as editor-in-chief of the American Medical Association's Archives of Neurology and Psychiatry. Both by credentials and force of personality, Wolff was an impressive figure. CIA officials listened respectfully to his grand vision of how spies and doctors could work symbiotically to help if not save the world. Also, the Agency men never forgot that Wolff had become close to Director Allen Dulles while treating Dulles' son for brain damage.

Wolff's specialized neurological practice led him to believe that brain maladies, like migraine headaches, occurred because of disharmony between man and his environment. In this case, he wrote to the Agency, "The problem faced by the physician is quite similar to that faced by the Communist interrogator." Both would be trying to put their subject back in harmony with his environment whether the problem was headache or ideological dissent. Wolff believed that the beneficial effects of any new interrogation technique would naturally spill over into the treatment of his patients, and vice versa. Following the Soviet model, he felt he could help his patients by putting them into an isolated, disoriented state from which it would be easier to create new behavior patterns. Although Russian-style isolation cells were impractical at Cornell, Wolff hoped to get the same effect more quickly through sensory deprivation. He told the Agency that sensory-deprivation chambers had "valid medical reason" as part of a treatment that relieved migraine symptoms and made the patient "more receptive to the suggestions of the psychotherapist." He proposed keeping his patients in sensory deprivation until they "show an increased desire to talk and to escape from the procedure." Then, he said, doctors could "utilize material from their own past experience in order to create psychological reactions within them." This procedure drew heavily on the Stalinist method. It cannot be said what success, if any, Wolff had with it to the benefit of his patients at Cornell.

Wolff offered to devise ways to use the broadest cultural and social processes in human ecology for covert operations. He understood that every country had unique customs for child rearing, military training, and nearly every other form of human intercourse. From the CIA's point of view, he noted, this kind of sociological information could be applied mainly to indoctrinating and motivating people. He distinguished these motivating techniques from the "special methods" that he felt were "more relevant to subversion, seduction, and interrogation." He offered to study those methods, too, and asked the Agency to give him access to everything in its files on "threats, coercion, imprisonment, isolation, deprivation, humiliation, torture, 'brainwashing,' 'black psychiatry,' hypnosis, and combinations of these with or without chemical agents." Beyond mere study, Wolff volunteered the unwitting use of Cornell patients for brainwashing experiments, so long as no one got hurt. He added, however, that he would advise the CIA on experiments that harmed their subjects if they were performed elsewhere. He obviously felt that only the grandest sweep of knowledge, flowing freely between scholar and spy, could bring the best available techniques to bear on their respective subjects.

In 1955 Wolff incorporated his CIA-funded study group as the Society for the Investigation of Human Ecology, with himself as president.[1] Through the Society, Wolff extended his efforts for the Agency, and his organization turned into a CIA-controlled funding mechanism for studies and experiments in the behavioral sciences. In the early days of the Society, Agency officials trusted Wolff and his untried ideas with a sensitive espionage assignment. In effect, the new specialty of human ecology was going to telescope the stages of research and application into one continuing process.

Speeding up the traditional academic method was required because the CIA men faced an urgent problem. "What was bothering them," Lawrence Hinkle explains, "was that the Chinese had cleaned up their agents in China.... What they really wanted to do was come up with some Chinese [in America], steer them to us, and make them into agents." Wolff accepted the challenge and suggested that the Cornell group hide its real purpose behind the cover of investigating "the ecological aspects of disease" among Chinese refugees. The Agency gave the project a budget of $84,175 (about 30 percent of the money it put into Cornell in 1955) and supplied the study group with 100 Chinese refugees to work with. Nearly all these subjects had been studying in the United States when the communists took over the mainland in 1949, so they tended to be dislocated people in their thirties.

On the Agency side, the main concern, as expressed by one ARTICHOKE man, was the "security hazard" of bringing together so many potential agents in one place. Nevertheless, CIA officials decided to go ahead. Wolff promised to tell them about the inner reaches of the Chinese character, and they recognized the operational advantage that insight into Chinese behavior patterns could provide. Moreover, Wolff said he would pick out the most useful possible agents. The Human Ecology Society would then offer these candidates "fellowships" and subject them to more intensive interviews and "stress producing" situations. The idea was to find out about their personalities, past conditioning, and present motivations, in order to figure out how they might perform in future predicaments such as finding themselves back in Mainland China as American agents. In the process, Wolff hoped to mold these Chinese into people willing to work for the CIA. Mindful of leaving some cover for Cornell, he was adamant that Agency operators not connected with the project make the actual recruitment pitch to those Chinese whom the Agency men wanted as agents.

As a final twist, Wolff planned to provide each agent with techniques to withstand the precise forms of hostile interrogation they could expect upon returning to China. CIA officials wanted to "precondition" the agents in order to create long lasting motivation "impervious to lapse of time and direct psychological attacks by the enemy." In other words, Agency men planned to brainwash their agents in order to protect them against Chinese brainwashing.

Everything was covered in theory, at least. Wolff was going to take a crew of 100 refugees and turn as many of them as possible into detection-proof, live agents inside China, and he planned to do the job quickly through human ecology. It was a heady chore for the Cornell professor to take on after classes.

Wolff hired a full complement of psychologists, psychiatrists, and anthropologists to work on the project. He bulldozed his way through his colleagues' qualms and government red tape alike. Having hired an anthropologist before learning that the CIA security office would not give her a clearance, Wolff simply lied to her about where the money came from. "It was a function of Wolff's imperious nature," says his partner Hinkle. "If a dog came in and threw up on the rug during a lecture, he would continue." Even the CIA men soon found that Harold Wolff was not to be trifled with. "From the Agency side, I don't know anyone who wasn't scared of him," recalls a longtime CIA associate. "He was an autocratic man. I never knew him to chew anyone out. He didn't have to. We were damned respectful. He moved in high places. He was just a skinny little man but talk about mind control! He was one of the controllers."

In the name of the Human Ecology Society, the CIA paid $1,200 a month to rent a fancy town house on

Manhattan's East 78th Street to house the Cornell group and its research project. CIA technicians traveled to New York in December 1954 to install eavesdropping microphones around the building. These and other more obvious security devices, guards, and the like made the town house look different from the academic center it was supposed to be. CIA liaison personnel held meetings with Wolff and the staff in the secure confines of the town house, and they all carefully watched the 100 Chinese a few blocks away at the Cornell hospital. The Society paid each subject $25 a day so the researchers could test them, probe them, and generally learn all they could about Chinese people or at least about middle-class, displaced, anti-Communist ones.

It is doubtful that any of Wolff's Chinese ever returned to their homeland as CIA agents, or that all of Wolff's proposals were put into effect. In any case, the project was interrupted in midstream by a major shake-up in the CIA's entire mind-control effort. Early in 1955, Sid Gottlieb and his Ph.D. crew from TSS took over most of the ARTICHOKE functions, including the Society, from Morse Allen and the Pinkerton types in the Office of Security. The MKULTRA men moved quickly to turn the Society into an entity that looked and acted like a legitimate foundation. First they smoothed over the ragged covert edges. Out came the bugs and safes so dear to Morse Allen and company. The new crew even made some effort (largely unsuccessful) to attract non-CIA funds. The biggest change, however, was the Cornell professors now had to deal with Agency representatives who were scientists and who had strong ideas of their own on research questions. Up to this point, the Cornellians had been able to keep the CIA's involvement within bounds acceptable to them. While Harold Wolff never ceased wanting to explore the furthest reaches of behavior control, his colleagues were wary of going on to the outer limits at least under Cornell cover.

No one would ever confuse MKULTRA projects with ivory-tower research, but Gottlieb's people did take a more academic and sophisticated approach to behavioral research than their predecessors. The MKULTRA men understood that not every project would have an immediate operational benefit, and they believed less and less in the existence of that one just-over-the-horizon technique that would turn men into puppets. They favored increasing their knowledge of human behavior in relatively small steps, and they concentrated on the reduced goal of influencing and manipulating their subjects. "You're ahead of the game if you can get people to do something ten percent more often than they would otherwise," says an MKULTRA veteran.

Accordingly, in 1956, Sid Gottlieb approved a $74,000 project to have the Human Ecology Society study the factors that caused men to defect from their countries and cooperate with foreign governments. MKULTRA officials reasoned that if they could understand what made old turncoats tick, it might help them entice new ones. While good case officers instinctively seemed to know how to handle a potential agent or thought they did, the MKULTRA men hoped to come up with systematic, even scientific improvements. Overtly, Harold Wolff designed the program to look like a follow-up study to the Society's earlier programs, noting to the Agency that it was "feasible to study foreign nationals under the cover of a medical-sociological study." (He told his CIA funders that "while some information of general value to science should be produced, this in itself will not be a sufficient justification for carrying out a study of this nature.") Covertly, he declared the purpose of the research was to assess defectors' social and cultural background, their life experience, and their personality structure, in order to understand their motivations, value systems, and probable future reactions.

The 1956 Hungarian revolt occurred as the defector study was getting underway, and the Human Ecology group, with CIA headquarters approval, decided to turn the defector work into an investigation of 70 Hungarian refugees from that upheaval.

By then, most of Harold Wolff's team had been together through the brainwashing and Chinese studies. While not all of them knew of the CIA's specific interests, they had streamlined their procedures for answering the questions that Agency officials found interesting. They ran the Hungarians through the battery of tests and observations in six months, compared to a year and a half for the Chinese project.

The Human Ecology Society reported that most of their Hungarian subjects had fought against the Russians during the Revolution and that they had lived through extraordinarily difficult circumstances, including arrest, mistreatment, and indoctrination. The psychologists and psychiatrists found that, often, those who had survived with the fewest problems had been those with markedly aberrant personalities. "This observation has added to the evidence that healthy people are not necessarily 'normal,' but are people particularly adapted to their special life situations," the group declared.

While CIA officials liked the idea that their Hungarian subjects had not knuckled under communist influence, they recognized that they were working with a skewed sample. American visa restrictions kept most of the refugee left-wingers and former communist officials out of the United States; so, as a later MKULTRA document would state, the Society wound up studying "western-tied rightist elements who had never been accepted completely" in postwar Hungary. Agency researchers realized that these people would "contribute little" toward increasing the CIA's knowledge of the processes that made a communist official change his loyalties.

In order to broaden their data base, MKULTRA officials decided in March 1957 to bring in some unwitting help. They gave a contract to Rutgers University sociologists Richard Stephenson and Jay Schulman "to throw as much light as possible on the sociology of the communist system in the throes of revolution." The Rutgers professors started out by interviewing the 70 Hungarians at Cornell in New York, and Schulman went on to Europe to talk to disillusioned Communists who had also fled their country. From an operational point of view, these were the people the Agency really cared about; but, as socialists, most of them probably would have resisted sharing their experiences with the CIA if they had known. [2]

Jay Schulman would have resisted, too. After discovering almost 20 years later that the Agency had paid his way and seen his confidential interviews, he feels misused. "In 1957 I was myself a quasi-Marxist and if I had known that this study was sponsored by the CIA, there is really, obviously, no way that I would have been associated with it," says Schulman. "My view is that social scientists have a deep personal responsibility for questioning the sources of funding; and the fact that I didn't do it at the time was simply, in my judgment, indication of my own naiveté and political innocence, in spite of my ideological bent."

Deceiving Schulman and his Hungarian subjects did not bother the men from MKULTRA in the slightest. According to a Gottlieb aide, one of the strong arguments in side the CIA for the whole Human Ecology program was that it gave the Agency a means of approaching and using political mavericks who could not otherwise get security clearances. "Sometimes," he chuckles, "these left-wing social scientists were damned good." This MKULTRA veteran scoffs at the displeasure Schulman expresses: "If we'd gone to a guy and said, 'We're CIA,' he never would have done it.

They were glad to get the money in a world where damned few people were willing to support them.... They can't complain about how they were treated or that they were asked to do something they wouldn't have normally done."

The Human Ecology Society soon became a conduit for CIA money flowing to projects, like the Rutgers one, outside Cornell. For these grants, the Society provided only cover and administrative support behind the gold-plated names of Cornell and Harold Wolff. From 1955 to 1958, Agency officials passed funds through the Society for work on criminal sexual psychopaths at Ionia State Hospital, [3] a mental institution located on the banks of the Grand River in the rolling farm country 120 miles northwest of Detroit. This project had an interesting hypothesis: That child molesters and rapists had ugly secrets buried deep within them and that at their stake in not admitting their perversions approached that of spies not wanting to confess. The MKULTRA men reasoned that any technique that would w ork on a sexual psychopath would surely have a similar effect on a foreign agent . Using psychologists and psychiatrists connected to the Michigan mental health and the Detroit court systems, they set up a program to test LSD and marijuana, wittingly and unwittingly, alone and in combination with hypnosis. Because of administrative delays, the Michigan doctors managed to experiment only on 26 inmates in three years all sexual offenders committed by judges without a trial under a Michigan law, since declared unconstitutional. The search for a truth drug went on, under the auspices of the Human Ecology Society, as well as in other MKULTRA channels.

The Ionia project was the kind of expansionist activity that made Cornell administrators, if not Harold Wolff, uneasy. By 1957, the Cornellians had had enough. At the same time, the Agency sponsors decided that the Society had outgrown its dependence on Cornell for academic credentials that in fact the close ties to Cornell might inhibit the Society's future growth among academics notoriously sensitive to institutional conflicts. One CIA official wrote that the Society "must be given more established stature in the research community to be effective as a cover organization." Once the Society was cut loose in the foundation world, Agency men felt they would be freer to go anywhere in academia to buy research that might assist covert operations. So the CIA severed the Society's formal connection to Cornell.

The Human Ecology group moved out of its East 78th Street town house, which had always seem a little too plush for a university program, and opened up a new headquarters in Forest Hills, Queens, which was an inappropriate neighborhood for a well-connected foundation. [4] Agency officials hired a staff of four led by Lieutenant Colonel James Monroe, who had worked closely with the CIA as head of the Air Force's study of Korean War prisoners. Sid Gottlieb and the TSS hierarchy in Washington still made the major decisions, but Monroe and the Society staff, whose salaries the Agency paid, took over the Society's dealings with the outside world and the monitoring of several hundred thousand dollars a year in research projects. Monroe personally supervised dozens of grants, including Dr . Ewen Cameron's brainwashing work in Montreal. Soon the Society was flourishing as an innovative foundation, attracting research proposals from a wide variety of behavioral scientists, at a time when these people particularly the unorthodox ones were still the step-children of the fund-granting world.

After the Society's exit from Cornell, Wolff and Hinkle stayed on as president and vice-president, respectively, of the Society's board of directors. Dr. Joseph Hinsey, head of the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center also remained on the board. Allen Dulles continued his personal interest in the Society's work and came to one of the first meetings of the new board, which, as was customary with CIA fronts, included some big outside names. These luminaries added worthiness to the enterprise while playing essentially figurehead roles. In 1957 the other board members were John Whitehorn, chairman of the psychiatry department at Johns Hopkins University, Carl Rogers, professor of psychology and psychiatry at the University of Wisconsin, and Adolf A. Berle, onetime Assistant Secretary of State and chairman of the New York Liberal Party. [5] Berle had originally put his close friend Harold Wolff in touch with the CIA, and at Wolff's request, he came on the Society board despite some reservations. "I am frightened about this one," Berle wrote in his diary. "If the scientists do what they have laid out for themselves, men will become manageable ants. But I don't think it will happen."

There was a lot of old-fashioned back-scratching among the CIA people and the academics as they settled into the work of accommodating each other. Even Harold Wolff, the first and the most enthusiastic of the scholar-spies, had made it clear from the beginning that he expected some practical rewards for his service. According to colleague Hinkle, who appreciated Wolff as one the great grantsman of his time, Wolff expected that the Agency "would support our research and we would be their consultants." Wolff bluntly informed the CIA that some of his work would have no direct use "except that it vastly enhances our value . . . as consultants and advisers." In other words, Wolff felt that hi s worth to the CIA increased in proportion to his professional accomplishments and importance which in turn depended partly on the resources he commanded. The Agency men understood, and over the last half of the 1950s, they were happy to contribute almost $300,000 to Wolff's own research on the brain and central nervous system. In turn, Wolff and his reputation helped them gain access to other leading lights in the academic world.

Another person who benefited from Human Ecology funds was Carl Rogers, whom Wolff had also asked to serve on the board. Rogers, who later would become famous for his nondirective, nonauthoritarian approach to psychotherapy, respected Wolff's work, and he had no objection to helping the CIA. Although he says he would have nothing to do with secret Agency activities today, he asks for understanding in light of the climate of the 1950s. "We really did regard Russia as the enemy," declares Rogers, "and we were trying to do various things to make sure the Russians did not get the upper hand." Rogers received an important professional reward for joining the Society board. Executive Director James Monroe had let him know that, once he agreed to serve, he could expect to receive a Society grant. "That appealed to me because I was having trouble getting funded," says Rogers. "Having gotten that grant [about $30,000 over three years], it made it possible to get other grants from Rockefeller and NIMH." Rogers still feels grateful to the Society for helping him establish a funding "track record," but he emphasizes that the Agency never had any effect on his research.

Although MKULTRA psychologist John Gittinger suspected that Rogers' work on psychotherapy might provide insight into interrogation methods, the Society did not give Rogers money because of the content of his work. The grant ensured his services as a consultant, if desired, and, according to a CIA document, "free access" to his project. But above all, the grant allowed the Agency to use Rogers' name. His standing in the academic community contributed to the layer of cover around the Society that Agency officials felt was crucial to mask their involvement.

Professor Charles Osgood's status in psychology also improved the Society's cover, but his research was more directly useful to the Agency, and the MKULTRA men paid much more to get it. In 1959 Osgood, who four years later became president of the American Psychological Association, wanted to push forward his work on how people in different societies express the same feelings, even when using different words and concepts. Osgood wrote in "an abstract conceptual framework," but Agency officials saw his research as "directly relevant" to covert activities. They believed they could transfer Osgood's knowledge of "hidden values and cues" in the way people communicate into more effective overseas propaganda. Osgood's work gave them a tool called the "semantic differential" to choose the right words in a foreign language to convey a particular meaning.

Like Carl Rogers, Osgood got his first outside funding for what became the most important work of his career from the Human Ecology Society. Osgood had written directly to the CIA for support, and the Society soon contacted him and furnished $192,975 for research over five years. The money allowed him to travel widely and to expand his work into 30 different cultures. Also like Rogers, Osgood eventually received NIMH money to finish his research, but he acknowledges that the Human Ecology grants played an important part in the progress of his work. He stresses that "there was none of the feeling then about the CIA that there is now, in terms of subversive activities," and he states that the Society had no influence on anything he produced. Yet Society men could and did talk to him about his findings. They asked questions that reflected their own covert interests, not his academic pursuits, and they drew him out, according to one of them, "at great length." Osgood had started studying cross-cultural meaning well before he received the Human Ecology money, but the Society's support ensured that he would continue his work on a scale that suited the Agency's purposes, as well as his own. A whole category of Society funding, called "cover grants," served no other purpose than to build the Society's false front. These included a sociological study of Levittown, Long Island (about $4,500), an analysis of the Central Mongoloid skull ($700), and a look at the foreign-policy attitudes of people who owned fallout shelters, as opposed to people who did not ($2,500). A $500 Human Ecology grant went to Istanbul University for a study of the effects of circumcision on Turkish boys. The researcher found that young Turks, usually circumcised between the ages of five and seven, felt "severe emotional impact with attending symptoms of withdrawal." The children saw the painful operations as "an act of aggression" that brought out previously hidden fears so the Human Ecology Society reported. In other instances, the Society put money into projects whose covert application was so unlikely that only an expert could see the possibilities. Nonetheless, in 1958 the Society gave $5,570 to social psychologists Muzafer and Carolyn Wood Sherif of the University of Oklahoma for work on the behavior of teen-age boys in gangs. The Sherifs, both ignorant of the CIA connection,[6] studied the group structures and attitudes in the gangs and tried to devise ways to channel antisocial behavior into more constructive paths. Their results were filtered through clandestine minds at the Agency. "With gang warfare," says an MKULTRA source, "you tried to get some defectors-in-place who would like to modify some of the group behavior and cool it. Now, getting a juvenile delinquent defector was motivationally not all that much different from getting a Soviet one." MKULTRA officials were clearly interested in using their grants to build contacts and associations with prestigious academics. The Society put $1,500 a year into the Research in Mental Health Newsletter published jointly at McGill University by the sociology and psychiatric departments. Anthropologist Margaret Mead, an international culture heroine, sat on the newsletter's advisory board (with, among others, D. Ewen Cameron), and the Society used her name in its biennial report. Similarly, the Society gave grants of $26,000 to the well-known University of London psychologist, H. J. Eysenck, for his work on motivation. An MKULTRA document acknowledged that this research would have "no immediate relevance for Agency needs," but that it would "lend prestige" to the Society. The grants to Eysenck also allowed the Society to take funding credit for no less than nine of his publications in its 1963 report. The following year, the Society managed to purchase a piece of the work of the most famous behaviorist of all, Harvard's B. F. Skinner. Skinner, who had tried to train pigeons to guide bombs for the military during World War II, received a $5,000 Human Ecology grant to pay the costs of a secretary and supplies for the research that led to his book, Freedom and Dignity. Skinner has no memory of the grant or its origins but says, "I don't like secret involvement of any kind. I can't see why it couldn't have been open and aboveboard."

A TSS source explains that grants like these "bought legitimacy" for the Society and made the recipients "grateful." He says that the money gave Agency employees at Human Ecology a reason to phone Skinner or any of the other recipients to pick his brain about a particular problem. In a similar vein, another MKULTRA man, psychologist John Gittinger mentions the Society's relationship with Erwin Goffman of the University of Pennsylvania, whom many consider today's leading sociological theorist. The Society gave him a small grant to help finish a book that would have been published anyway. As a result, Gittinger was able to spend hours talking with him about, among other things, an article he had written earlier on confidence men. These hucksters were experts at manipulating behavior, according to Gittinger, and Goffman unwittingly "gave us a better understanding of the techniques people use to establish phony relationships" a subject of interest to the CIA. To keep track of new developments in the behavioral sciences, Society representatives regularly visited grant recipients and found out what they and their colleagues were doing. Some of the knowing professors became conscious spies. Most simply relayed the latest professional gossip to their visitors and sent along unpublished papers. The prestige of the Human Ecology grantees also helped give the Agency access to behavioral scientists who had no connection to the Society. "You could walk into someone's office and say you were just talking to Skinner," says an MKULTRA veteran. "We didn't hesitate to do this. It was a way to name-drop."

The Society did not limit its intelligence gathering to the United States. As one Agency source puts it, "The Society gave us a legitimate basis to approach anyone in the academic community anywhere in the world." CIA officials regularly used it as cover when they traveled abroad to study the behavior of foreigners of interest to the Agency, including such leaders as Nikita Khrushchev. The Society funded foreign researchers and also gave money to American professors to collect information abroad. In 1960, for instance, the Society sponsored a survey of Soviet psychology through the simple device of putting up $15,000 through the official auspices of the American Psychological Association to send ten prominent psychologists on a tour of the Soviet Union. Nine of the ten had no idea of the Agency involvement, but CIA officials were apparently able to debrief everyone when the group returned. Then the Society sponsored a conference and book for which each psychologist contributed a chapter. The book added another $5,000 to the CIA's cost, but $20,000 all told seemed like a small price to pay for the information gathered. The psychologists except perhaps the knowledgeable ones did nothing they would not ordinarily have done during their trip, and the scholarly community benefited from increased knowledge on an important subject. The only thing violated was the openness and trust normally associated with academic pursuits. By turning scholars into spies even unknowing ones CIA officials risked the reputation of American research work and contributed potential ammunition toward the belief in many countries that the U.S. notion of academic freedom and independence from the state is self-serving and hypocritical. Secrecy allowed the Agency a measure of freedom from normal academic restrictions and red tape, and the men from MKULTRA used that freedom to make their projects more attractive. The Society demanded "no stupid progress reports," recalls psychologist and psychiatrist Martin Orne, who received a grant to support his Harvard research on hypnotism. As a further sign of generosity and trust, the Society gave Orne a follow-on $30,000 grant with no specified purpose.[7] Orne could use it as he wished. He believes the money was "a contingency investment" in his work, and MKULTRA officials agree. "We could go to Orne anytime," says one of them, "and say, 'Okay, here is a situation and here is a kind of guy. What would you expect we might be able to achieve if we could hypnotize him?' Through his massive knowledge, he could speculate and advise." A handful of other Society grantees also served in similar roles as covert Agency consultants in the field of their expertise.

In general, the Human Ecology Society served as the CIA's window on the world of behavioral research. No phenomenon was too arcane to escape a careful look from the Society, whether extrasensory perception or African witch doctors. "There were some unbelievable schemes," recalls an MKULTRA veteran, "but you also knew Einstein was considered crazy. You couldn't be so biased that you wouldn't leave open the possibility that some crazy idea might work." MKULTRA men realized, according to the veteran, that "ninety percent of what we were doing would fail" to be of any use to the Agency. Yet, with a spirit of inquiry much freer than that usually found in the academic world, the Society took early stabs at cracking the genetic code with computers and finding out whether animals could be controlled through electrodes placed in their brains.

The Society's unrestrained, scattershot approach to behavioral research went against the prevailing wisdom in American universities both as to methods and to subjects of interest. During the 1950s one school of thought so called "behaviorism," was accepted on campus, virtually to the exclusion of all others. The "behaviorists," led by Harvard's B. F. Skinner, looked at psychology as the study of learned observable responses to outside stimulation. To oversimplify, they championed the approach in which psychologists gave rewards to rats scurrying through mazes, and they tended to dismiss matters of great interest to the Agency: e.g., the effect of drugs on the psyche, subjective phenomena like hypnosis, the inner workings of the mind, and personality theories that took genetic differences into account. By investing up to $400,000 a year into the early, innovative work of men like Carl Rogers, Charles Osgood, and Martin Orne, the CIA's Human Ecology Society helped liberate the behavioral sciences from the world of rats and cheese. With a push from the Agency as well as other forces, the field opened up. Former iconoclasts became eminent, and, for better or worse, the Skinnerian near-monopoly gave way to a multiplication of contending schools. Eventually, a reputable behavioral scientist could be doing almost anything: holding hands with his students in sensitivity sessions, collecting survey data on spanking habits, or subjectively exploring new modes of consciousness. The CIA's money undoubtedly changed the academic world to some degree, though no one can say how much.

As usual, the CIA men were ahead of their time and had started to move on before the new approaches became established. In 1963, having sampled everything from palm reading to subliminal perception, Sid Gottlieb and his colleagues satisfied themselves that they had overlooked no area of knowledge however esoteric that might be promising for CIA operations. The Society had served its purpose; now the money could be better spent elsewhere. Agency officials transferred the still-useful projects to other covert channels and allowed the rest to die quietly. By the end of 1965, when the remaining research was completed, the Society for the Investigation of Human Ecology was gone.

Notes

MKULTRA subprojects 48 and 60 provided the basic documents on the Society for the Investigation of Human Ecology. These were supplemented by the three biennial reports of the Society that could be found: 1957, 1961, and 1961-1963. Wolff's own research work is MKULTRA subproject 61. Wolff's proposals to the Agency are in #A/B, II, 10/68, undated "Proposed Plan for Implementing [deleted]" in two documents included in 48-29, March 5, 1956, "General Principles Upon Which these Proposals Are Based." The Agency's plans for the Chinese Project are described in #A/B, II, 10/48, undated, Subject: Cryptonym [deleted] A/B, II 10/72, 9 December, 1954, Subject: Letter of Instructions, and #A/B, II, 10/110, undated, untitled. Details of the logistics of renting the Human Ecology headquarters and bugging it are in #A/B, II, 10/23, 30 August, 1954, Subject: Meeting of Working Committee of [deleted], No. 5 and #A/B, II, 10/92, 8 December, 1954, Subject: Technical Installation.

The Hungarian project, as well as being described in the 1957 biennial report, was dealt with in MKULTRA subprojects 65 and 82, especially 65-12, 28 June 1956, Subject: MKULTRA subproject 65; 65-11, undated, Subject: Dr. [deleted]'s Project Plans for the Coming Year, July, 1957-June, 1958; and 82-15, 11 April 1958, Subject: Project MKULTRA, Subproject 82.

The Ionia State sexual psychopath research was MKULTRA Subproject 39, especially 39-4, 9 April 1958, Subject: Trip Report, Visit to [deleted], 7 April 1958. Paul Magnusson of the Detroit Free Press and David Pearl of the Detroit ACLU office both furnished information. Carl Rogers' MKULTRA subproject was # 97. He also received funds under Subproject 74. See especially 74256, 7 October 1958, Supplement to Individual Grant under MKULTRA, Subproject No. 74 and 97-21, 6 August 1959, Subject: MKULTRA Subproject 97.

H. J. Eysenck's MKULTRA subproject was #111. See especially 111-3, 3 April 1961, Subject: Continuation of MKULTRA Subproject 111. The American Psychological Association-sponsored trip to the Soviet Union was described in Subproject 107. The book that came out of the trip was called Some Views on Soviet Psychology, Raymond Bauer (editor), (Washington: American Psychological Association; 1962).

The Sherifs' research on teenage gangs was described in Subproject # 102 and the 1961 Human Ecology biennial report. Dr. Carolyn Sherif also wrote a letter to the American Psychological Association Monitor, February 1978. Dr. Sherif talked about her work when she and I appeared on an August 1978 panel at the American Psychological Association's convention in Toronto.

Martin Orne's work for the Agency was described in Subproject 84. He contributed a chapter to the Society-funded book, The Manipulation of Human Behavior, edited by Albert Biderman and Herbert Zimmer-(New York: John Wiley & Sons; 1961), pp. 169-215. Financial data on Orne's Institute for Experimental Psychiatry came from a filing with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Attachment to Form 1023.

The quote from John Gittinger came from an interview with him conducted by Dr. Patricia Greenfield. Dr. Greenfield also interviewed Jay Schulman, Carl Rogers, and Charles Osgood for an article in the December 1977 issue of the American Psychological Association Monitor, from which my quotes of Schulman's comments are taken. She discussed Erving Goffman's role in a presentation to a panel of the American Psychological Association convention in Toronto in August 1978. The talk was titled "CIA Support of Basic Research in Psychology: Policy Implications."

Footnotes

1. In 1961 the Society changed its name to the Human Ecology Fund, but for convenience sake it will be called the Society throughout the book.
2. Also to gain access to this same group of leftist Hungarian refugees in Europe, the Human Ecology Society put $15,000 in 1958 into an unwitting study by Dr. A. H. M. Struik of the University of Nijmegen in the Netherlands. An Agency document extolled this arrangement not only as a useful way of studying Hungarians but because it provided "entree" into a leading European university and psychological research center, adding "such a connection has manifold cover and testing possibilities as well as providing a base from which to take advantage of developments in that area of the world."
3. Professor Laurence Hinkle states that it was never his or Cornell's intention that the Society would be used as a CIA funding conduit. When told that he himself had written letters on the Ionia project, he replied that the Society's CIA-supplied bookkeeper was always putting papers in front of him and that he must have signed without realizing the implications.
4. By 1961 the CIA staff had tired of Queens and moved the Society back into Manhattan to 201 East 57th Street. In 1965 as the Agency was closing down the front, it switched its headquarters to 183i Connecticut Avenue N.W. in Washington, the same building owned by Dr. Charles Geschickter that housed another MKULTRA conduit, the Geschickter Fund for Medical Research.

5. Other establishment figures who would grace the Human Ecology board over the years included Leonard Carmichael, head of the Smithsonian Institution, Barnaby Keeney, president of Brown University, and George A. Kelly, psychology professor and Society fund recipient at Ohio State University.

6. According to Dr. Carolyn Sherif, who says she and her husband did not share the Cold War consensus and would never have knowingly taken CIA funds Human Ecology executive director James Monroe lied directly about the source of the Society's money, claiming it came from rich New York doctors and Texas millionaires who gave it for tax purposes. Monroe used this standard cover story with other grantees.

7. A 1962 report of Orne's laboratory, the Institute for Experimental Psychiatry, showed that it received two sizable grants before the end of that year: $30,000 from Human Ecology and $30,000 from Scientific Engineering Institute, another CIA front organization. Orne says he was not aware of the latter group's Agency connection at the time, but learned of it later. He used its grant to study new ways of using the polygraph.

The Gittinger Assessment System

With one exception, the CIA's behavioral research whether on LSD or on electroshock seems to have had more impact on the outside world than on Agency operations.

That exception grew out of the work of the MKULTRA program's resident genius, psychologist John Gittinger. While on the CIA payroll, toiling to find ways to manipulate people, Gittinger created a unique system for assessing personality and predicting future behavior. He called his method appropriately the Personality Assessment System (PAS). Top Agency officials have been so impressed that they have given the Gittinger system a place in most agent-connected activities. To be sure, most CIA operators would not go nearly so far as a former Gittinger aide who says, "The PAS was the key to the whole clandestine business."

Still, after most of the touted mind controllers had given up or been sent back home, it was Gittinger, the staff psychologist, who sold his PAS system to cynical, anti-gimmick case officers in the Agency's Clandestine Services. And during the Cuban missile crisis, it was Gittinger who was summoned to the White House to give his advice on how Khrushchev would react to American pressure.

A heavy-set, goateed native of Oklahoma who in his later years came to resemble actor Walter Slezak, Gittinger looked much more like someone's kindly grandfather than a calculating theoretician. He had an almost insatiable curiosity about personality, and he spent most of his waking hours tinkering with and trying to perfect his system. So obsessed did he become that he always had the feeling even after other researchers had verified large chunks of the PAS and after the CIA had put it into operational use that the whole thing was "a kind of paranoid delusion."

Gittinger started working on his system even before he joined the CIA in 1950. Prior to that, he had been director of psychological services at the state hospital in Norman, Oklahoma. His high-sounding title did not reflect the fact that he was the only psychologist on the staff. A former high school guidance counselor and Naval lieutenant commander during World War II, he was starting out at age 30 with a master's degree. Every day he saw several hundred patients whose mental problems included virtually everything in the clinical textbooks.

Numerous tramps and other itinerants, heading West in search of the good life in California, got stuck in Oklahoma during the cold winter months and managed to get themselves admitted to Gittinger's hospital. In warmer seasons of the year, quite a few of them worked, when they had to, as cooks or dishwashers in the short-order hamburger stands that dotted the highways in the days before fast food. They functioned perfectly well in these jobs until freezing nights drove them from their outdoor beds. The hospital staff usually called them "seasonal schizophrenics" and gave them shelter until spring.

Gittinger included them in the psychological tests he was so fond of running on his patients.

As he measured the itinerants on the Wechsler intelligence scale, a standard IQ test with 11 parts,[1]

Gittinger made a chance observation that became, he says, the "bedrock" of his whole system. He noticed that the short-order cooks tended to do well on the digit-span subtest which rated their ability to remember numbers. The dishwashers, in contrast, had a poor memory for digits. Since the cooks had to keep track of many complex orders with countless variations of medium rare, onions, and hold-the-mayo their retentive quality served them well.

Gittinger also noticed that the cooks had different personality traits than the dishwashers. The cooks seemed able to maintain a high degree of efficiency in a distracting environment while customers were constantly barking new orders at them. They kept their composure by falling back on their internal resources and generally shutting themselves off from the commotion around them.

Gittinger dubbed this personality type, which was basically inner-directed, an "Internalizer" (abbreviated

"I"). The dishwashers, on the other hand, did not have the ability to separate themselves from the external world. In order to perform their jobs, they had to be placed off in some far corner of the kitchen with their dirty pots and pans, or else all the tumult of the place diverted them from their duty. Gittinger called the dishwasher type an "Externalizer" (E). He found that if he measured a high digit span in any person not just a short-order cook he could make a basic judgment about personality.

From observation, Gittinger concluded that babies were born with distinct personalities which then were modified by environmental factors. The Internalized or I baby was caught up in himself and tended to be seen as a passive child; hence, the world usually called him a "good baby." The E tot was more interested in outside stimuli and attention, and thus was more likely to cause his parents problems by making demands. Gittinger believed that the way parents and other authority figures reacted to the child helped to shape his personality. Adults often pressured or directed the I child to become more outgoing and the E one to become more self-sufficient. Gittinger found he could measure the compensations, or adjustments, the child made on another Wechsler subtest, the one that rated arithmetic ability.

He noticed that in later life, when the person was subject to stress, these compensations tended to disappear, and the person reverted to his original personality type. Gittinger wrote that his system "makes possible the assessment of fundamental discrepancies between the surface personality and the underlying personality structured discrepancies that produce tension, conflict, and anxiety."

Besides the E-I dimensions, Gittinger identified two other fundamental sets of personality characteristics that he could measure with still other Wechsler subtests. Depending on how a subject did on the block design subtest, Gittinger could tell if he were Regulated (R) or Flexible (F). The Regulated person had no trouble learning by rote but usually did not understand what he learned. The Flexible individual, on the other hand, had to understand something before he learned it. Gittinger noted that R children could learn to play the piano moderately well with comparatively little effort. The F child most often hated the drudgery of piano lessons, but Gittinger observed that the great concert pianists tended to be Fs who had persevered and d mastered the instrument.

Other psychologists had thought up personality dimensions similar to Gittinger's E and I, R and F. even if they defined them somewhat differently. Gittinger's most original contribution came in a third personality dimension, which revealed how well people were able to adapt their social behavior to the demands of the culture they lived in. Gittinger found he could measure this dimension with the picture arrangement Wechsler subtest, and he called it the Role Adaptive (A) or Role Uniform

(U). It corresponded to "charisma," since other people were naturally attracted to the A person while they tended to ignore the U. All this became immensely more complicated as Gittinger measured compensations and modifications with other Wechsler subtests. This complexity alone worked against the acceptance of his system by the outside world, as did the fact that he based much of it on ideas that ran contrary to accepted psychological doctrines such as his heretical notion that genetic differences existed.

It did not help, either, that Gittinger was a non-Ph.D. whose theory sprang from the kitchen habits of vagrants in Oklahoma.

Any one of these drawbacks might have stifled Gittinger in the academic world, but to the pragmatists in the CIA, they were irrelevant. Gittinger's strange ideas seemed to work. With uncanny accuracy, he could look at nothing more than a subject's Wechsler numbers, pinpoint his weaknesses, and show how to turn him into an Agency spy. Once Gittinger's boss, Sid Gottlieb, and other high CIA officials realized how Gittinger's PAS could be used to help case officers handle agents, they gave the psychologist both the time and money to improve his system under the auspices of the Human Ecology Society.

Although he was a full-time CIA employee, Gittinger worked under Human Ecology cover through the 1950s. Agency officials considered the PAS to be one of the Society's greatest triumphs, definitely worth continuing after the Society was phased out. In 1962 Gittinger and his co-workers moved their base of operations from the Human Ecology headquarters in New York to a CIA proprietary company, set up especially for them in Washington and called Psychological Assessment Associates. Gittinger served as president of the company, whose cover was to provide psychological services to American firms overseas. He personally opened a branch office in Tokyo (later moved to Hong Kong) to service CIA stations in the Far East.

The Washington staff, which grew to about 15 professionals during the 1960s, handled the rest of the world by sending assessment specialists off for temporary visits.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars in Human Ecology grants and then even more money in Psychological Assessment contracts all CIA funds flowed out to verify and expand the PAS. For example, the Society gave about $140,000 to David Saunders of the Educational Testing Service, the company that prepares the College Board exams. Saunders, who knew about the Agency's involvement, found a correlation between brain (EEG) patterns and results on the digit-span test, and he helped Gittinger apply the system to other countries. In this regard, Gittinger and his colleagues understood that the Wechsler battery of subtests had a cultural bias and that a Japanese E had a very different personality from, say, a Russian E. To compensate, they worked out localized versions of the PAS for various nations around the world.

While at the Human Ecology group, Gittinger supervised much of the Society's other research in the behavioral sciences, and he always tried to interest Society grantees in his system. He looked for ways to mesh their research with his theories and vice versa. Some, like Carl Rogers and Charles Osgood, listened politely and did not follow up. Yet Gittinger would always learn something from their work that he could apply to the PAS. A charming man and a skillful raconteur, Gittinger convinced quite a few of the other grantees of the validity of his theories and the importance of his ideas. Careful not to threaten the egos of his fellow professionals, he never projected an air of superiority. Often he would leave people even the skeptical openmouthed in awe as he painted unnervingly accurate personality portraits of people he had never met. Indeed, people frequently accused him of somehow having cheated by knowing the subject in advance or peeking at his file.

Gittinger patiently and carefully taught his system to his colleagues, who all seem to have views of him that range from great respect to pure idolatry. For all his willingness to share the PAS, Gittinger was never able to show anyone how to use the system as skillfully as he did. Not that he did not try; he simply was a more talented natural assessor than any of the others. Moreover, his system was full of interrelations and variables that he instinctively understood but had not bothered to articulate. As a result, he could look at Wechsler scores and pick out behavior patterns which would be valid and which no one else had seen. Even after Agency officials spent a small fortune trying to computerize the PAS, they found, as one psychologist puts it, the machine "couldn't tie down all the variables" that Gittinger was carrying around in his head.

Some Human Ecology grantees, like psychiatrist Robert Hyde, were so impressed with Gittinger's system that they made the PAS a major part of their own research.

Hyde routinely gave Wechslers to his subjects before plying them with liquor, as part of the Agency's efforts to find out how people react to alcohol. In 1957 Hyde moved his research team from Boston Psychopathic Hospital, where he had been America's first LSD tripper, to Butler Health Center in Providence. There, with Agency funds, Hyde built an experimental party room in the hospital, complete with pinball machine, dartboard, and bamboo bar stools. From behind a two-way mirror, psychologists watched the subjects get tipsy and made careful notes on their reaction to alcohol. Not surprisingly, the observers found that pure Internalizers became more withdrawn after several drinks, and that uncompensated Es were more likely to become garrulous in essence, sloppy drunks. Thus Gittinger was able to make generalizations about the different ways an I or an E responded to alcohol.[2] Simply by knowing how people scored on the Wechsler digit-span test, he could predict how they would react to liquor. Hyde and Harold Abramson at Mount Sinai Hospital made the same kind of observations for LSD finding, among other things, that an E was more likely than an I to have a bad trip. (Apparently, an I is more accustomed than an E to "being into his own head" and losing touch with external reality.)

At Gittinger's urging, other Human Ecology grantees gave the Wechsler battery to their experimental subjects and sent him the scores. He was building a unique data base on all phases of human behavior, and he needed samples of as many distinct groups as possible. By getting the scores of actors, he could make generalizations about what sort of people made good role-players. Martin Orne at Harvard sent in scores of hypnosis subjects, so Gittinger could separate the personality patterns of those who easily went into a trance from those who could not be hypnotized. Gittinger collected Wechslers of businessmen, students, high-priced fashion models, doctors, and just about any other discrete group he could find a way to have tested. In huge numbers, the Wechslers came flowing in, 29,000 sets in all by the early 1970s each one accompanied by biographic data. With the 10 subtests he used and at least 10 possible scores on each of those, no two Wechsler results in the whole sample ever looked exactly the same. Gittinger kept a computer printout of all 29,000 on his desk, and he would fiddle with them almost every day looking constantly for new truths that could be drawn out of them.

John Gittinger was interested in all facets of personality, but because he worked for the CIA, he emphasized deviant forms. He particularly sought out Wechslers of people who had rejected the values of their society or who had some vice hidden or otherwise that caused others to reject them. By studying the scores of the defectors who had come over to the West, Gittinger hoped to identify common characteristics of men who had become traitors to their governments. If there were identifiable traits, Agency operators could look for them in prospective spies. Harris Isbell, who ran the MKULTRA drug-testing program at the Lexington, Kentucky detention Hospital, sent in the scores of heroin addicts. Gittinger wanted to know what to look for in people susceptible to drugs. The Human Ecology project at Ionia State Hospital in Michigan furnished Wechslers of sexual psychopaths. These scores showed that people with uncontrollable urges have different personality patterns than so-called normals. Gittinger himself journeyed to the West Coast to test homosexuals, lesbians, and the prostitutes he interviewed under George White's auspices in the San Francisco safehouse. With each group, he separated out the telltale signs that might be a future indicator of their sexual preference in others. Gittinger understood that simply by looking at the Wechsler scores of someone newly tested, he could pick out patterns that corresponded to behavior of people in the data base.

The Gittinger system worked best when the TSS staff had a subject's Wechsler scores to analyze, but Agency officials could not very well ask a Russian diplomat or any other foreign target to sit down and take the tests. During World War II, OSS chief William Donovan had faced a similar problem in trying to find out about Adolf Hitler's personality, and Donovan had commissioned psychoanalyst Walter Langer to make a long-distance psychiatric profile of the German leader. Langer had sifted through all the available data on the Führer, and that was exactly what Gittinger's TSS assessments staff did when they lacked direct contact (and when they had it, too). They pored over all the intelligence gathered by operators, agents, bugs, and taps and looked at samples of a man's handwriting.[3] The CIA men took the process of "indirect assessment" one step further than Langer had, however. They observed the target's behavior and looked for revealing patterns that corresponded with traits already recorded among the subjects of the 29,000 Wechsler samples.

Along this line, Gittinger and his staff had a good idea how various personality types acted after consuming a few drinks. Thus, they reasoned, if they watched a guest at a cocktail party and he started to behave in a recognizable way by withdrawing, for instance, they could make an educated guess about his personality type. In this case, that he was an I. In contrast, the drunken Russian diplomat who became louder and began pinching every woman who passed by probably was an E. Instead of using the test scores to predict how a person would behave, the assessments staff was, in effect, looking at behavior and working backward to predict how the person would have scored if he had taken the test. The Gittinger staff developed a whole checklist of 30 to 40 patterns that the skilled observer could look for. Each of these traits reflected one of the Wechsler subtests, and it corresponded to some insight picked up from the 29,000 scores in the data base.

Was the target sloppy or neat? Did he relate to women stiffly or easily? How did he hold a cigarette and put it into his mouth? When he went through a receiving line, did he immediately repeat the name of each person introduced to him? Taken as a whole, all these observations allowed Gittinger to make a reasoned estimate about a subject's personality, with emphasis on his vulnerabilities. As Gittinger describes the system, "If you could get a sample of several kinds of situations, you could begin to get some pretty good information." Nevertheless, Gittinger had his doubts about indirect assessment. "I never thought we were good at this," he says.

The TSS assessment staff, along with the Agency's medical office, used the PAS indirectly to keep up the OSS tradition of making psychological portraits of world leaders like Hitler. Combining analytical techniques with gossipy intelligence, the assessors tried to give high-level U.S. officials a better idea of what moved the principal international political figures.[4] One such study of an American citizen spilled over into the legally forbidden domestic area when in 1971 the medical office prepared a profile of Daniel Ellsberg at the request of the White House. To get raw data for the Agency assessors, John Ehrlichman authorized a break-in at Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office in California. John Gittinger vehemently denies that his staff played any role in preparing this profile, which the White House planners intended to use as a kind of psychological road map to compromise Ellsberg just as CIA operators regularly worked from such assessments to exploit the weaknesses of foreigners.

Whether used directly or indirectly, the PAS gave Agency case officers a tool to get a better reading of the people with whom they dealt. CIA field stations overseas routinely sent all their findings on a target, along with indirect assessment checklists, back to Washington, so headquarters personnel could decide whether or not to try recruitment. The TSS assessment staff contributed to this process by attempting to predict what ploys would work best on the man in the case officers' sights. "Our job was to recommend what strategy to try," says a onetime Gittinger colleague.

This source states he had direct knowledge of cases where TSS recommendations led to sexual entrapment operations, both hetero- and homosexual. "We had women ready-called them a stable," he says, and they found willing men when they had to. One CIA psychologist stresses that the PAS only provided "clues" on how to compromise people. "If somebody's assessment came in like the sexual psychopaths', it would raise red flags," he notes. But

TSS staff assessors could only conclude that the target had a potentially serious sex problem. They could by no means guarantee that the target's defenses could be broken. Nevertheless, the PAS helped dictate the best weapons for the attack. "I've heard John [Gittinger] say there's always something that someone wants," says another former Agency psychologist. "And with the PAS you can find out what it is. It's not necessarily sex or booze. Sometimes it's status or recognition or security."

Yet another Gittinger colleague describes this process as "looking for soft spots." He states that after years of working with the system, he still bridled at a few of the more fiendish ways "to get at people" that his colleagues dreamed up. He stayed on until retirement, however, and he adds, "None of this was personal. It was for national security reasons."

A few years ago, ex-CIA psychologist James Keehner told reporter Maureen Orth that he personally went to New York in 1969 to give Wechsler tests to an American nurse who had volunteered her body for her country. "We wanted her to sleep with this Russian," explained Keehner. "Either the Russian would fall in love with her and defect, or we'd blackmail him. I had to see if she could sleep with him over a period of time and not get involved emotionally. Boy, was she tough!" Keehner noted that he became disgusted with entrapment techniques, especially after watching a film of an agent in bed with a "recruitment target." He pointed out that Agency case officers, many of whom "got their jollies" from such work, used a hidden camera to get their shots. The sexual technology developed in the MKULTRA safehouses in New York and San Francisco had been put to work. The operation worked no better in the 1960s, however, than TSS officials predicted such activities would a decade earlier. "You don't really recruit agents with sexual blackmail," Keehner concluded. "That's why I couldn't even take reading the files after a while. I was sickened at seeing people take pleasure in other people's inadequacies. First of all, I thought it was just dumb. For all the money going out, nothing ever came back."

Keehner became disgusted by the picking-at-scabs aspect of TSS assessment work. Once the PAS had identified a target as having potential mental instabilities, staff members sometimes suggested ways to break him down, reasoning that by using a ratchet-like approach to put him under increased pressure, they might be able to break the lines that tied him to his country, if not to his sanity. Keehner stated, "I was sent to deal with the most negative aspects of the human condition. It was planned destructiveness. First, you'd check to see if you could destroy a man's marriage. If you could, then that would be enough to put a lot of stress on the individual, to break him down. Then you might start a minor rumor campaign against him. Harass him constantly. Bump his car in traffic. A lot of it is ridiculous, but it may have a cumulative effect." Agency case officers might also use this same sort of stress-producing campaign against a particularly effective enemy intelligence officer whom they knew they could never recruit but whom they hoped to neutralize.

Most operations including most recruitments did not rely on such nasty methods. The case officer still benefited from the TSS staffs assessment, but he usually wanted to minimize stress rather than accentuate it. CIA operators tended to agree that the best way to recruit an agent was to make the relationship as productive and satisfying as possible for him, operating from the old adage about catching more flies with honey than vinegar. "You pick the thing most fearful to him the things which would cause him the most doubt," says the source. "If his greatest fear is that he can't trust you to protect him and his family, you overload your pitch with your ability to do it. Other people need structure, so you tell them exactly what they will need to do. If you leave it open-ended, they'll be scared you'll ask them to do things they're incapable of." [5]

Soon after the successful recruitment of a foreigner to spy for the CIA, either a CIA staff member or a specially trained case officer normally sat down with the new agent and gave him the full battery of Wechsler subtests a process that took several hours. The tester never mentioned that the exercise had anything to do with personality but called it an "aptitude" test which it also is. The assessments office in Washington then analyzed the results. As with the polygraph, the PAS helped tell if the agent were lying. It could often delve deeper than surface concepts of true and false. The PAS might show that the agent's motivations were not in line with his behavior. In that case, if the gap were too great, the case officer could expect to run up against considerable deception resulting either from espionage motives or psychotic tendencies.

The TSS staff assessors sent a report back to the field on the best way to deal with the new agent and the most effective means to exploit him. They would recommend whether his case officer should treat him sternly or permissively. If the agent were an Externalizer who needed considerable companionship, the assessors might suggest that the case officer try to spend as much time with him as possible. [6] They would probably recommend against sending this E agent on a long mission into a hostile country, where he could not have the friendly company he craved.

Without any help from John Gittinger or his system, covert operators had long been deciding matters like these, which were, after all, rooted in common sense. Most case officers prided themselves on their ability to play their agents like a musical instrument, at just the right tempo, and the Gittinger system did not shake their belief that no thing could beat their own intuition. Former CIA Deputy Director Ray Cline expresses a common view when he says the PAS "was part of the system kind of a check-and-balance supposedly scientific tool that was not weighed very heavily. I never put as much weight on the psychological assessment reports as on a case officer's view.... In the end, people went with their own opinion." Former Director William Colby found the assessment reports particularly useful in smoothing over that "traumatic" period when a case officer had to pass on his agent to a replacement. Understandably, the agent often saw the switch as a danger or a hardship. "The new guy has to show some understanding and sympathy," says Colby, who had 30 years of operational experience himself, "but it doesn't work if these feelings are not real."

For those Agency officers who yearned to remove as much of the human element as possible from agent operations, Gittinger's system was a natural. It reduced behavior to a workable formula of shorthand letters that, while not insightful in all respects, gave a reasonably accurate description of a person. Like Social Security numbers, such formulas fitted well with a computerized approach. While not wanting to overemphasize the Agency's reliance on the PAS, former Director Colby states that the system made dealing with agents "more systematized, more professional."

In 1963 the CIA's Inspector General gave the TSS assessment staff high marks and described how it fit into operations:

The [Clandestine Services] case officer is first and foremost, perhaps, a practitioner of the art of assessing and exploiting human personality and motivations for ulterior purposes. The ingredients of advanced skill in this art are highly individualistic in nature, including such qualities as perceptiveness and imagination. [The PAS] seeks to enhance the case officer's skill by bringing the methods and disciplines of psychology to bear.... The prime objectives are control, exploitation, or neutralization. These objectives are innately anti-ethical rather than therapeutic in their intent.

In other words, the PAS is directed toward the relationship between the American case officer and his foreign agent, that lies at the heart of espionage. In that sense, it amounts to its own academic discipline the psychology of spying complete with axioms and realms of empirical data. The business of the PAS, like that of the CIA, is control.

One former CIA psychologist, who still feels guilty about his participation in certain Agency operations, believes that the CIA's fixation on control and manipulation mirrors, in a more virulent form, the way Americans deal with each other generally. "I don't think the CIA is too far removed from the culture," he says. "It's just a matter of degree. If you put a lot of money out there, there are many people who are lacking the ethics even of the CIA. At least the Agency had an ideological basis." This psychologist believes that the United States has become an extremely control-oriented society from the classroom to politics to television advertising. Spying and the PAS techniques are unique only in that they are more systematic and secret.

Another TSS scientist believes that the Agency's behavioral research was a logical extension of the efforts of American psychologists, psychiatrists, and sociologists to change behavior which he calls their "sole motivation." Such people manipulate their subjects in trying to make mentally disturbed people well, in turning criminals into law-abiding citizens, in improving the work of students, and in pushing poor people to get off welfare. The source cites all of these as examples of "behavior modification" for socially acceptable reasons, which, like public attitudes toward spying, change from time to time. "Don't get the idea that all these behavioral scientists were nice and pure, that they didn't want to change anything, and that they were detached in their science," he warns. "They were up to their necks in changing people. It just happened that the things they were interested in were not always the same as what we were." Perhaps the saving grace of the behavioral scientists is summed up by longtime MKULTRA consultant Martin Orne: "We are sufficiently ineffective so that our findings can be published." With the PAS, CIA officials had a handy tool for social engineering. The Gittinger staff found one use for it in the sensitive area of selecting members of foreign police and intelligence agencies. All over the globe, Agency operators have frequently maintained intimate working relations with security services that have consistently mistreated their own citizens. The assessments staff played a key role in choosing members of the secret police in at least two countries whose human-rights records are among the world's worst.

In 1961, according to TSS psychologist John Winne, the CIA and the Korean government worked together to establish the newly created Korean Central Intelligence Agency (KCIA). The American CIA station in Seoul asked headquarters to send out an assessor to "select the initial cadre" of the KCIA. Off went Winne on temporary duty. "I set up an office with two translators," he recalls, "and used a Korean version of the Wechsler." The Agency psychologist gave the tests to 25 to 30 police and military officers and wrote up a half-page report on each, listing their strengths and weaknesses. Winne wanted to know about each candidate's "ability to follow orders, creativity, lack of personality disorders, motivation why he wanted out of his current job. It was mostly for the money, especially with the civilians." The test results went to the Korean authorities, whom Winne believes made the personnel decisions "in conjunction with our operational people."

"We would do a job like this and never get feedback, so we were never sure we'd done a good job," Winne complains. Sixteen years after the end of his mission to Seoul and after news of KCIA repression at home and bribes to American congressmen abroad, Winne feels that his best efforts had "boomeranged." He states that

Tongsun Park was not one of the KCIA men he tested. In 1966 CIA staffers, including Gittinger himself, took part in selecting members of an equally controversial police unit in Uruguay: the anti-terrorist section that fought the Tupamaro urban guerrillas. According to John Cassidy, the CIA's deputy station chief there at the time, Agency operators worked to set up this special force together with the Agency for International Development's Public Safety Mission (whose members included Dan Mitrione, later kidnapped and killed by the Tupamaros). The CIA-assisted police claimed they were in a life-and-death struggle against the guerrillas, and they used incredibly brutal methods, including torture, to stamp out most of the Uruguayans left along with the guerrillas. While the special police were being organized, "John [Gittinger] came down for three days to get the program underway," recalls Cassidy. Then Hans Greiner, a Gittinger associate, ran Wechsler tests on 20 Uruguayan candidates. One question on the information subtest was "How many weeks in the year?" Eighteen of the 20 said it was 48, and only one man got the answer right. (Later he was asked about his answer, and he said he had made a mistake; he meant 48.) But when Greiner asked this same group of police candidates, "Who wrote Faust?" 18 of the 20 knew it was Goethe. "This tells you something about the culture," notes Cassidy, who served the Agency all over Latin America. It also points up the difficulty Gittinger had in making the PAS work across cultural lines. In any case, CIA man Cassidy found the assessment process most useful for showing how to train the antiterrorist section. "According to the results, these men were shown to have very dependent psychologies and they needed strong direction," recalls the now-retired operator. Cassidy was quite pleased with the contribution Gittinger and Greiner made. "For years I had been dealing with Latin Americans," says Cassidy, "and here, largely by psychological tests, one of [Gittinger's] men was able to analyze people he had no experience with and give me some insight into them.... Ordinarily, we would have just selected the men and gone to work on them." In helping countries like South Korea and Uruguay pick their secret police, TSS staff members often inserted a devilish twist with the PAS. They could not only choose candidates who would make good investigators, interrogators, or whatever, but they could also spot those who were most likely to succumb to future CIA blandishments. "Certain types were more recruitable," states a former assessor. "I looked for them when I wrote my reports.... Anytime the Company [the CIA] spent money for training a foreigner, the object was that he would ultimately serve our control purposes." Thus, CIA officials were not content simply to work closely with these foreign intelligence agencies; they insisted on penetrating them, and the PAS provided a useful aid. In 1973 John Gittinger and his longtime associate John Winne, who picked KCIA men, published a basic description of the PAS in a professional journal. Although others had written publicly about the system, this article apparently disturbed some of the Agency's powers, who were then cutting back on the number of CIA employees at the order of short-time Director James Schlesinger. Shortly thereafter, Gittinger, then 56, stopped being president of Psychological Assessment Associates but stayed on as a consultant. In 1974 I wrote about Gittinger's work, albeit incompletely, in Rolling Stone magazine. Gittinger was disturbed that disclosure of his CIA connection would hurt his professional reputation. "Are we tarred by a brush because we worked for the CIA?" he asked during one of several rather emotional exchanges. "I'm proud of it." He saw no ethical problems in "looking for people's weaknesses" if it helped the CIA obtain information, and he declared that for many years most Americans thought this was a useful process. At first, he offered to give me the Wechsler tests and prepare a personality assessment to explain the system, but Agency officials prohibited his doing so. "I was given no explanation," said the obviously disappointed Gittinger. "I'm very proud of my prof essional work, and I had looked forward to being able to explain it." In August 1977 Gittinger publicly testified in Senate hearings. While he obviously would have preferred talking about his psychological research, his most persistent questioner, Senator Edward Kennedy, was much more interested in bringing out sensational details about prostitutes and drug testing. A proud man, Gittinger felt "humiliated" by the experience, which ended with him looking foolish on national television. The next month, the testimony of his former associate, David Rhodes, further bruised Gittinger. Rhodes told the Kennedy subcommittee about Gittinger's role in leading the "Gang that Couldn't Spray Straight" in an abortive attempt to test LSD in aerosol cans on unwitting subjects. Gittinger does not want his place in history to be determined by this kind of activity. He would like to see his Personality Assessment System accepted as an important contribution to science.

Tired of the controversy and worn down by trying to explain the PAS, Gittinger has moved back to his native Oklahoma. He took a copy of the 29,000 Wechsler results with him, but he has lost his ardor for working with them. A handful of psychologists around the country still swear by the system and try to pass it on to others. One, who uses it in private practice, says that in therapy it saves six months in understanding the patient. This psychologist takes a full reading of his patient's personality with the PAS, and then he varies his treatment to fit the person's problems. He believes that most American psychologists and psychiatrists treat their patients the same whereas the PAS is designed to identify the differences between people. Gittinger very much hopes that others will accept this view and move his system into the mainstream. "It means nothing unless I can get someone else to work on it," he declares. Given the preconceptions of the psychological community, the inevitable taint arising from the CIA's role in developing the system, and Gittinger's lack of academic credentials and energy, his wish will probably not be fulfilled.

Notes

The material on the Gittinger Personality Assessment System (PAS) comes from "An Introduction to the Personality Assessment System" by John Winne and John Gittinger, Monograph Supplement No. 38, Clinical Psychology Publishing Co., Inc. 1973; an interview with John Winne; interviews with three other former CIA psychologists; 1974 interviews with John Gittinger by the author; and an extended interview with Gittinger by Dr. Patricia Greenfield, Associate Professor of Psychology at UCLA. Some of the material was used first in a Rolling Stone article, July 18, 1974, "The CIA Won't Quite Go Public." Robert Hyde's alcohol research at Butler Health Center was MKULTRA Subproject 66. See especially 66-17, 27 August, 1958. Subject: Proposed Alcohol Study 1958-1959 and 66-5. undated, Subject: Equipment Ecology Laboratory. The 1963 Inspector General's report on TSS, as first released under the Freedom of Information Act, did not include the section on personality assessment quoted from in the chapter. An undated, untitled document, which was obviously this section, was made available in one of the CIA's last releases.

MKULTRA subproject 83 dealt with graphology research, as did part of Subproject 60, which covered the whole Human Ecology Society. See especially 83-7, December 11, 1959, Subject: [deleted] Graphological Review and 60-28, undated, Subject [deleted] Activities Report, May, 1959 April, 1960.

Information on the psychological profile of Ferdinand Marcos came from a U.S. Government source who had read it. Information on the profile of the Shah of Iran came from a column by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten "CIA Study Finds Shah Insecure," Washington Post, July 11, 1975.

The quotes from James Keehner came from an article in New Times by Maureen Orth, "Memoirs of a CIA Psychologist," June 25, 1975.

For related reports on the CIA's role in training foreign police and its activities in Uruguay, see an article by Taylor Branch and John Marks, "Tracking the CIA," Harper's Weekly, January 25, 1975 and Philip Agee's book, Inside the Company: CIA Diary (London: Penguin; 1975).

The quote from Martin Orne was taken from Patricia Greenfield's APA Monitor arti cle cited in the last chapter's notes.

Gittinger's testimony before the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence and the Kennedy subcommittee on August 3, 1977 appeared on pages 50-63. David Rhodes' testimony on Gittinger's role in the abortive San Francisco LSD spraying appeared in hearings before the Kennedy subcommittee, September 20, 1977, pp. 100-110.

Footnotes

1. Developed by psychologist David Wechsler, this testing system is called, in different versions, the Wechsler-Bellevue and the Wechsler Adult Intelligence Scale. As Gittinger worked with it over the years, he made modifications that he incorporated in what he named the Wechsler-Bellevue-G. For simplicity's sake, it is simply referred to as the Wechsler system throughout the book.

2. As with most of the descriptions of the PAS made in the book, this is an oversimplification of a more complicated process. The system, as Gittinger used it, yielded millions of distinct personality types. His observations on alcohol were based on much more than a straight I and E comparison. For the most complete description of the PAS in the open literature, see the article by Gittinger and Winne cited in the chapter notes.

3. Graphology (handwriting analysis) appealed to CIA officials as a way of supplementing PAS assessments or making judgments when only a written letter was available. Graphology was one of the seemingly arcane fields which the Human Ecology Society had investigated and found operational uses for. The Society wound up funding handwriting research and a publication in West Germany where the subject was taken much more seriously than in the United States, and it sponsored a study to compare handwriting analyses with Wechsler scores of actors (including some homosexuals), patients in psychotherapy, criminal psychopaths, and fashion models. Gittinger went on to hire a resident graphologist who could do the same sort of amazing things with handwriting as the Oklahoma psychologist could do with Wechsler scores. One former colleague recalls her spotting accurately a stomach ailment in a foreign leader simply by reading one letter. Asked in an interview about how the Agency used her work, she replied, "If they think they can manipulate a person, that's none of my business. I don't know what they do with it. My analysis was not done with that intention.... Something I learned very early in government was not to ask questions."

4. A profile of Ferdinand Marcos found the Filipino president's massive personal enrichment while in office to be a natural outgrowth of his country's tradition of putting loyalty to one's family and friends ahead of all other considerations. Agency assessors found the Shah of Iran to be a brilliant but dangerous megalomaniac whose problems resulted from an overbearing father, the humiliation of having served as a puppet ruler, and his inability for many years to produce a male heir.

5. This source reports that case officers usually used this sort of nonthreatening approach and switched to the rougher stuff if the target decided he did not want to spy for the CIA. In that case, says the ex-CIA man, "you don't want the person to say no and run off and tattle. You lose an asset that way not in the sense of the case officer being shot, but by being nullified." The spurned operator might then offer not to reveal that the target was cheating on his wife or had had a homosexual affair, in return for the target not disclosing the recruitment attempt to his own intelligence service.

6. While Agency officials might also have used the PAS to select the right case officer to deal with the E agent one who would be able to sustain the agent's need for a close relationship over a long period of time they almost never used the system with this degree of precision. An Agency office outside TSS did keep Wechslers and other test scores on file for most case officers, but the Clandestine Services management was not willing to turn over the selection of American personnel to the psychologists.

Hypnosis

No mind-control technique has more captured popular imagination and kindled fears than hypnosis. Men have long dreamed they could use overwhelming hypnotic powers to compel others to do their bidding. And when CIA officials institutionalized that dream in the early Cold War Days, they tried, like modern-day Svengalis, to use hypnosis to force their favors on unwitting victims. One group of professional experts, as well as popular novelists, argued that hypnosis would lead to major breakthroughs in spying. Another body of experts believed the opposite. The Agency men, who did not fully trust the academics anyway, listened to both points of view and kept looking for applications which fit their own special needs. To them, hypnosis offered too much promise not to be pursued, but finding the answers was such an elusive and dangerous process that 10 years after the program started CIA officials were still searching for practical uses.

The CIA's first behavioral research czar, Morse Allen of ARTICHOKE, was intrigued by hypnosis. He read everything he could get his hands on, and in 1951 he went to New York for a four-day course from a well-known stage hypnotist. This hypnotist had taken the Svengali legend to heart, and he bombarded Allen with tales of how he used hypnosis to seduce young women. He told the ARTICHOKE chief that he had convinced one mesmerized lady that he was her husband and that she desperately wanted him. That kind of deception has a place in covert operations, and Morse Allen was sufficiently impressed to report back to his bosses the hypnotist's claim that "he spent approximately five nights a week away from home engaging in sexual intercourse."

Apart from the bragging, the stage hypnotist did give Morse Allen a short education in how to capture a subject's attention and induce a trance. Allen returned to Washington more convinced than ever of the benefits of working hypnosis into the ARTICHOKE repertory and of the need to build a defense against it. With permission from above, he decided to take his hypnosis studies further, right in his own office. He asked young CIA secretaries to stay after work and ran them through the hypnotic paces proving to his own satisfaction that he could make them do whatever he wanted. He had secretaries steal SECRET files and pass them on to total strangers, thus violating the most basic CIA security rules. He got them to steal from each other and to start fires. He made one of them report to the bedroom of a strange man and then go into a deep sleep. "This activity clearly indicates that individuals under hypnosis might be compromised and blackmailed," Allen wrote.

On February 19, 1954, Morse Allen simulated the ultimate experiment in hypnosis: the creation of a

"Manchurian Candidate," or programmed assassin. Allen's "victim" was a secretary whom he put into a deep trance and told to keep sleeping until he ordered otherwise. He then hypnotized a second secretary and told her that if she could not wake up her friend, "her rage would be so great that she would not hesitate to 'kill.'" Allen left a pistol nearby, which the secretary had no way of knowing was unloaded. Even though she had earlier expressed a fear of firearms of any kind, she picked up the gun and "shot" her sleeping friend. After Allen brought the "killer" out of her trance, she had apparent amnesia for the event, denying she would ever shoot anyone.

With this experiment, Morse Allen took the testing as far as he could on a make-believe basis, but he was neither satisfied nor convinced that hypnosis would produce such spectacular results in an operational setting. All he felt he had proved was that an impressionable young volunteer would accept a command from a legitimate authority figure to take an action she may have sensed would not end in tragedy. She presumably trusted the CIA enough as an institution and Morse Allen as an individual to believe he would not let her do anything wrong. The experimental setting, in effect, legitimated her behavior and prevented it from being truly antisocial.

Early in 1954, Allen almost got his chance to try the crucial test. According to a CIA document, the subject was to be a 35-year-old, well-educated foreigner wh o had once worked for a friendly secret service, probably the CIA itself. He had now shifted his loyalty to another government, and the CIA was quite upset with him. The Agency plan was to hypnotize him and program him into making an assassination attempt. He would then be arrested at the least for attempted murder and "thereby disposed of." The scenario had several holes in it, as the operators presented it to the ARTICHOKE team. First, the subject was to be involuntary and unwitting, and as yet no one had come up with a consistently effective way of hypnotizing such people. Second, the ARTICHOKE team would have only limited custody of the subject, who was to be snatched from a social event. Allen understood that it would probably take months of painstaking work to prepare the man for a sophisticated covert operation. The subject was highly unlikely to perform after just one command. Yet, so anxious were the ARTICHOKE men to try the experiment that they were willing to go ahead even under these unfavorable conditions: "The final answer was that in view of the fact that successful completion of this proposed act of attempted assassination was insignificant to the overall project; to wit, whether it was even carried out or not, that under 'crash conditions' and appropriate authority from Headquarters, the ARTICHOKE team would undertake the problem in spite of the operational limitations."

This operation never took place. Eager to be unleashed, Morse Allen kept requesting prolonged access to operational subjects, such as the double agents and defectors on whom he was allowed to work a day or two. Not every double agent would do. The candidate had to be among the one person in five who made a good hypnotic subject, and he needed to have a dissociative tendency to separate part of his personality from the main body of his consciousness. The hope was to take an existing ego state such as an imaginary childhood playmate and build it into a separate personality, unknown to the first. The hypnotist would communicate directly with this schizophrenic offshoot and command it to carry out specific deeds about which the main personality would know nothing. There would be inevitable leakage between the two personalities, particularly in dreams; but if the hypnotists were clever enough, he could build in cover stories and safety valves which would prevent the subject from acting inconsistently.

All during the spring and summer of 1954, Morse Allen lobbied for permission to try what he called "terminal experiments" in hypnosis, including one along the following scenario:

CIA officials would recruit an agent in a friendly foreign country where the Agency could count on the cooperation of the local police force. CIA case officers would train the agent to pose as a leftist and report on the local communist party. During training, a skilled hypnotist would hypnotize him under the guise of giving him medical treatment (the favorite ARTICHOKE cover for hypnosis). The hypnotist would then provide the agent with information and tell him to forget it all when he snapped out of the trance. Once the agent had been properly conditioned and prepared, he would be sent into action as a CIA spy. Then Agency officials would tip off the local police that the man was a dangerous communist agent, and he would be arrested. Through their liaison arrangement with the police, Agency case officers would be able to watch and even guide the course of the interrogation. In this way, they could answer many of their questions about hypnosis on a live guinea pig who believed his life was in danger. Specifically, the men from ARTICHOKE wanted to know how well hypnotic amnesia held up against torture. Could the amnesia be broken with drugs? One document noted that the Agency could even send in a new hypnotist to try his hand at cracking through the commands of the first one. Perhaps the most cynical part of the whole scheme came at the end of the proposal: "In the event that the agent should break down and admit his connection with US intelligence, we a) deny this absolutely and advise the agent's disposal, or b) indicate that the agent may have been dispatched by some other organ of US intelligence and that we should thereafter run the agent jointly with [the local intelligence service]."

An ARTICHOKE team was scheduled to carry out field tests along these lines in the summer of 1954. The planning got to an advanced stage, with the ARTICHOKE command center in Washington cabling overseas for the "time, place, and bodies available for terminal experiments." Then another cable complained of the "diminishing numbers" of subjects available for these tests. At this point, the available record becomes very fuzzy. The minutes of an ARTICHOKE working group meeting indicate that a key Agency official probably the station chief in the country where the experiments were going to take place had second thoughts. One participant at the meeting, obviously rankled by the obstructionism, said if this nay-sayer did not change his attitude, ARTICHOKE officials would have the Director himself order the official to go along.

Although short-term interrogations of unwitting subjects with drugs and hypnosis (the "A" treatment)

continued, the more complicated tests apparently never did get going under the ARTICHOKE banner. By the end of the year, 1954, Allen Dulles took the behavioral-research function away from Morse Allen and gave it to Sid Gottlieb and the men from MKULTRA. Allen had directly pursued the goal of creating a Manchurian Candidate, which he clearly believed was possible. MKULTRA officials were just as interested in finding ways to assert control over people, but they had much less faith in the frontal-assault approach pushed by Allen. For them, finding the Manchurian Candidate became a figurative exercise. They did not give up the dream. They simply pursued it in smaller steps, always hoping to increase the percentages in their favor. John Gittinger, the MKULTRA case officer on hypnosis, states, "Predictable absolute control is not possible on a particular individual. Any psychologist, psychiatrist, or preacher can get control over certain kinds of individuals, but that's not a predictable, definite thing." Gittinger adds that despite his belief to this effect, he felt he had to give "a fair shake" to people who wanted to try out ideas to the contrary.

Gottlieb and his colleagues had already been doing hypnosis research for two years. They did a few basic experiments in the office, as Morse Allen did, but they farmed out most of the work to a young Ph.D. candidate at the University of Minnesota, Alden Sears. Sears, who later moved his CIA study project to the University of Denver, worked with student subjects to define the nature of hypnosis. Among many other things, he looked into several of the areas that would be building blocks in the creation of a Manchurian Candidate. Could a hypnotist induce a totally separate personality? Could a subject be sent on missions he would not remember unless cued by the hypnotist? Sears, who has since become a Methodist minister, refused to talk about methods he experimented with to build second identities.[1] By 1957, he wrote that the experiments that needed to be done "could not be handled in the University situation." Unlike Morse Allen, he did not want to perform the terminal experiments.

Milton Kline, a New York psychologist who says he also did not want to cross the ethical line but is sure the intelligence agencies have, served as an unpaid consultant to Sears and other CIA hypnosis research. Nothing Sears or others found disabused him of the idea that the Manchurian Candidate is possible. "It cannot be done by everyone," says Kline, "It cannot be done consistently, but it can be done."

A onetime president of the American Society for Clinical and Experimental Hypnosis, Kline was one of many outside experts to whom Gittinger and his colleagues talked. Other consultants, with equally impressive credentials, rejected Kline's views. In no other area of the behavioral sciences was there so little accord on basic questions. "You could find an expert who would agree with everything," says Gittinger. "Therefore, we tried to get everybody."

The MKULTRA men state that they got too many unsolicited suggestions on how to use hypnosis in covert operations. "The operators would ask us for easy solutions," recalls a veteran. "We therefore kept a laundry list of why they couldn't have what they wanted. We spent a lot of time telling some young kid whose idea we had heard a hundred times why it wouldn't work. We would wind up explaining why you couldn't have a free lunch." This veter an mentions an example: CIA operators put a great deal of time and money into servicing "dead drops" (covert mail pickup points, such as a hollow tree) in the Soviet Union. If a collector was captured, he was likely to give away the locations. Therefore Agency men suggested that TSS find a way to hypnotize these secret mailmen, so they could withstand interrogation and even torture if arrested. Morse Allen had wanted to perform the "terminal experiment" to see if a hypnotically induced amnesia would stand up to torture. Gittinger says that as far as he knows, this experiment was never carried out. "I still like to think we were human beings enough that this was not something we played with," says Gittinger. Such an experiment could have been performed, as Allen suggested, by friendly police in a country like Taiwan or Paraguay. CIA men did at least discuss joint work in hypnosis with a foreign secret service in 1962.[2] Whether they went further simply cannot be said.

Assuming the amnesia would hold, the MKULTRA veteran says the problem was how to trigger it. Perhaps the Russian phrase meaning "You're under arrest" could be used as a preprogrammed cue, but what if the police did not use these words as they captured the collector? Perhaps the physical sensation of handcuffs being snapped on could do it, but a metal watchband could have the same effect. According to the veteran, in the abstract, the scheme sounded fine, but in practicality, a foolproof way of triggering the amnesia could not be found. "You had to accept that when someone is caught, they're going to tell some things," he says. MKULTRA officials, including Gittinger, did recommend the use of hypnosis in operational experiments on at least one occasion. In 1959 an important double agent, operating outside his homeland, told his Agency case officer that he was afraid to go home again because he did not think he could withstand the tough interrogation that his government used on returning overseas agents. In Washington, the operators approached the TSS men about using hypnosis, backed up with drugs, to change the agent's attitude. They hoped they could instill in him the "ability or the necessary will" to hold up under questioning.

An MKULTRA official almost certainly Gittinger held a series of meetings over a two-week period with the operators and wrote that the agent was "a better than average" hypnotic subject, but that his goal was to get out of intelligence work: The agent "probably can be motivated to make at least one return visit to his homeland by application of any one of a number of techniques, including hypnosis, but he may redefect in the process." The MKULTRA official continued that hypnosis probably could not produce an "operationally useful" degree of amnesia for the events of the recent past or for the hypnotic treatment itself that the agent "probably has the native ability to withstand ordinary interrogation . . . provided it is to his advantage to do so."

The MKULTRA office recommended that despite the relatively negative outlook for the hypnosis, the Agency should proceed anyway. The operation had the advantage of having a "fail-safe" mechanism because the level of hypnosis could be tested out before the agent actually had to return. Moreover, the MKULTRA men felt "that a considerable amount of useful experience can be gained from this operation which could be used to improve Agency capability in future applications." In effect, they would be using hypnosis not as the linchpin of the operation, but as an adjunct to help motivate the agent. Since the proposed operation involved the use of hypnosis and drugs, final approval could only be given by the high-level Clandestine Services committee set up for this purpose and chaired by Richard Helms. Permission was not forthcoming. In June 1960 TSS officials launched an expanded program of operational experiments in hypnosis in cooperation with the Agency's Counterintelligence Staff. The legendary James Angleton the prototype for the title character Saxton in Aaron Latham's Orchids for Mother and for Wellington in Victor Marchetti's The Rope Dancer headed Counterintelligence, which took on some of the CIA's most sensitive missions (including the illegal Agency spying against domestic dissidents).

Counterintelligence officials wrote that the hypnosis program could provide a "potential breakthrough in clandestine technology." Their arrangement with TSS was that the MKULTRA men would ld develop the technique in the laboratory, while they took care of "field experimentation."

The Counterintelligence program had three goals: (1) to induce hypnosis very rapidly in unwitting subjects;

(2) to create durable amnesia; and (3) to implant durable and operationally useful posthypnotic suggestion.

The Agency released no information on any "field experimentation" of the latter two goals, which of course are the building blocks of the Manchurian Candidate. Agency officials provided only one heavily censored document on the first goal, rapid induction. In October 1960 the MKULTRA program invested $9,000 in an outside consultant to develop a way of quickly hypnotizing an unwitting subject. John Gittinger says the process consisted of surprising "somebody sitting in a chair, putting your hands on his forehead, and telling the guy to go to sleep." The method worked "fantastically" on certain people, including some on whom no other technique was effective, and not on others. "It wasn't that predictable," notes Gittinger, who states he knows nothing about the field testing.

The test, noted in that one released document, did not take place until July 1963a full three years after the Counterintelligence experimental program began, during which interval the Agency is claiming that no other field experiments took place. According to a CIA man who participated in this test, the Counterintelligence Staff in Washington asked the CIA station in Mexico City to find a suitable candidate for a rapid induction experiment. The station proposed a low-level agent, whom the Soviets had apparently doubled. A Counterintelligence man flew in from Washington and a hypnotic consultant arrived from California.

Our source and a fellow case officer brought the agent to a motel room on a pretext. "I puffed him up with his importance," says the Agency man. "I said the bosses wanted to see him and of course give him more money." Waiting in an adjoining room was the hypnotic consultant. At a prearranged time, the two case officers gently grabbed hold of the agent and tipped his chair over until the back was touching the floor. The consultant was supposed to rush in at that precise moment and apply the technique. Nothing happened. The consultant froze, unable to do the deed. "You can imagine what we had to do to cover-up," says the official, who was literally left holding the agent. "We explained we had heard a noise, got excited, and tipped him down to protect him. He was so grubby for money he would have believed any excuse."

There certainly is a huge difference between the limited aim of this bungled operation and one aimed at building a Manchurian Candidate. The MKULTRA veteran maintains that he and his colleagues were not interested in a programmed assassin because they knew in general it would not work and, specifically, that they could not exert total control. "If you have one hundred percent control, you have one hundred percent dependency," he says. "If something happens and you haven't programmed it in, you've got a problem. If you try to put flexibility in, you lose control. To the extent you let the agent choose, you don't have control." He admits that he and his colleagues spent hours running the arguments on the Manchurian Candidate back and forth. "Castro was naturally our discussion point," he declares. "Could you get somebody gung-ho enough that they would go in and get him?" In the end, he states, they decided there were more reliable ways to kill people. "You can get exactly the same thing from people who are hypnotizable by many other ways, and you can't get anything out of people who are not hypnotizable, so it has no use," says Gittinger.

The only real gain in employing a hypnotized killer would be, in theory, that he would not remember who ordered him to pull the trigger. Yet, at least in the Castro case, the Cuban leader already knew who was after him. Moreover, there were plenty of people around willing to take on the Castro contract. "A well-trained person could do it without all this mumbo-jumbo," says the MKULTRA veteran. By going to the Mafia for hitmen, CIA officials in any case found killers who had a built-in amnesia mechanism that had nothing to do with hypnosis.[3]

The MKULTRA veteran gives many reasons why he believes the CIA never actually tr ied a Manchurian

Candidate operation, but he acknowledges that he does not know.[4] If the ultimate experiments were performed, they would have been handled with incredible secrecy. It would seem, however, that the same kind of reasoning that impelled Sid Gottlieb to recommend testing powerful drugs on unwitting subjects would have led to experimentation along such lines, if not to create the Manchurian Candidate itself, on some of the building blocks, or lesser antisocial acts. Even if the MKULTRA men did not think hypnosis would work operationally, they had not let that consideration prevent them from trying out numerous other techniques. The MKULTRA chief could even have used a defensive rationale: He had to find out if the Russians could plant a "sleeper" killer in our midst, just as Richard Condon's novel discussed.

If the assassin scenario seemed exaggerated, Gottlieb still would have wanted to know what other uses the Russians might try. Certainly, he could have found relatively "expendable" subjects, as he and Morse Allen had for other behavior control experiments. And even if the MKULTRA men really did restrain themselves, it is unlikely that James Angleton and his counterintelligence crew would have acted in such a limited fashion when they felt they were on the verge of a "breakthrough in clandestine technology."

Notes

Morse Allen's training in hypnosis was described in Document #A/B, V, 28/1, 9 July 1951, Subject [Deleted]. His hypnosis experiments in the office are described in a long series of memos. See especially #A/B, III, 2/18, 10 February 1954, Hypnotic Experimentation and Research and #A/B, II, 10/71, 19 August 1954, Subject: Operational/Security [deleted] and unnumbered document, 5 May 1955, Subject: Hypnotism and Covert Operations.

The quote on U.S. prisoners passing through Manchuria came from document #19, 18 June 1953, ARTICHOKE Conference.

Alden Sears' hypnosis work was the subject of MKULTRA subprojects 5, 25, 29, and 49. See especially 49-28, undated, Proposal for Research in Hypnosis at the [deleted], June 1, 1956 to May 31, 1957, 49-34, undated, Proposals for Research in Hypnosis at the [deleted], June 1, 1956 to May 31, 1957; 5-11, 28 May 1953, Project MKULTRA, Subproject 5 and 5-13, 20 April 1954, Subject: [deleted]. See also Patrick Oster's article in the Chicago Sun-Times, September 4, 1977, "How CIA 'Hid' Hypnosis Research."

General background on hypnosis came from interviews with Alden Sears, Martin Orne, Milton Kline, Ernest Hilgard, Herbert Spiegel, William Kroger, Jack Tracktir, John Watkins, and Harold Crasilneck. See Orne's chapter on hypnosis in The Manipulation of Human Behavior, edited by Albert Biderman and Herbert Zimmer (New York: John Wiley & Sons; 1961), pp. 169-215.

The contemplated use of hypnosis in an operation involving a foreign intelligence service is referred to in the Affidavit by Eloise R. Page, in the case John D. Marks v. Central Intelligence Agency et al., Civil Action no. 76-2073.

The 1959 proposed use of hypnosis that was approved by TSS is described in documents #433, 21 August 1959, Possible Use of Drugs and Hypnosis in [deleted] Operational Case; #434, 27 August 1959, Comments on [deleted]; and #435, 15 September 1959, Possible Use of Drugs and Hypnosis in [deleted] Operational Case.

MKULTRA Subproject 128 dealt with the rapid induction technique. See especially 128-1, undated, Subject: To test a method of rapid hypnotic induction in simulated and real operational settings (MKULTRA 128).

A long interview with John Gittinger added considerably to this chapter. Mr. Gittinger had refused earlier to be interviewed directly by me for this book. Our conversation was limited solely to hypnosis.

Footnotes

1. Sears still maintains the fiction that he thought he was dealing only with a private foundation, the Geschickter Fund, and that he knew nothing of the CIA involvement in funding his work. Yet a CIA document in his MKULTRA subproject says he was "aware of the real purpose" of the project." Moreover, Sid Gottlieb brought him to Washington in 1954 to demonstrate hypnosis to a select group of Agency officials.

2. Under my Freedom of Information suit, the CIA specifically denied access to the documents concerning the testing of hypnosis and psychedelic drugs in cooperation with foreign intelligence agencies. The justification given was that releasing such documents would reveal intelligence sources and methods, which are exempted by law. The hypnosis experiment was never carried out, according to the generic description of the document which the Agency had to provide in explaining why it had to be withheld.

3. Referring to this CIA-mob relationship, author Robert Sam Anson has written, "It was inevitable:

Gentlemen wishing to be killers gravitated to killers wishing to be gentlemen."

4. The veteran admits that none of the arguments he uses against a conditioned assassin would apply to a programmed "patsy" whom a hypnotist could walk through a series of seemingly unrelated events: a visit to a store, a conversation with a mailman, picking a fight at a political rally. The subject would remember everything that happened to him and be amnesic only for the fact the hypnotist ordered him to do these things. There would be no gaping inconsistency in his life of the sort that can ruin an attempt by a hypnotist to create a second personality. The purpose of this exercise is to leave a circumstantial trail that will make the authorities think the patsy committed a particular crime. The weakness might well be that the amnesia would not hold up under police interrogation, but that would not matter if the police did not believe his preposterous story about being hypnotized or if he were shot resisting arrest. Hypnosis expert Milton Kline says he could create a patsy in three months- an assassin would take him six.

170 PART IV CONCLUSIONS

The Search for the Truth

I'm a professional and I just don't talk about these things. Lots of things are not fit for the public. This has nothing to do with democracy. It has to do with common sense.

GRATION H. YASETEVITCH, 1978 (explaining why he did not want to be interviewed for this book)

To hope that the power that is being made available by the behavioral sciences will be exercised by the scientists, or by a benevolent group, seems to me to be a hope little supported by either recent or distant history. It seems far more likely that behavioral scientists, holding their present attitudes, will be in the position of the German rocket scientists specializing in guided missiles. First they worked devotedly for Hitler to destroy the USSR and the United States. Now, depending on who captured them they work devotedly for the USSR in the interest of destroying the United States, or devotedly for the United States in the interest of destroying the USSR. If behavioral scientists are concerned solely with advancing their science it seems most probable that they will serve the purpose of whatever group has the power.

CARL ROGERS, 1961

Sid Gottlieb was one of many CIA officials who tried to find a way to assassinate Fidel Castro. Castro survived, of course, and his victory over the Agency in April 1961 at the Bay of Pigs put the Agency in the headlines for the first time, in a very unfavorable light. Among the fiasco's many consequences was Gottlieb's loss of the research part of the CIA's behavior-control programs. Still, he and the others kept trying to kill Castro.

In the aftermath of the Bay of Pigs, President Kennedy reportedly vowed to splinter the CIA into a thousand pieces. In the end, he settled for firing Allen Dulles and his top deputies. To head the Agency, which lost none of its power, Kennedy brought in John McCone, a defense contractor and former head of the Atomic Energy Commission. With no operational background, McCone had a different notion t han Dulles of how to manage the CIA, particularly in the scientific area. "McCone never felt akin to the covert way of doing things," recalls Ray Cline, whom the new Director made his Deputy for Intelligence. McCone apparently believed that science should be in the hands of the scientists, not the clandestine operators, and he brought in a fellow Californian, an aerospace "whiz kid" named Albert "Bud" Wheelon to head a new Agency Directorate for Science and Technology. Before then, the Technical Services Staff (TSS), although located in the Clandestine Services, had been the Agency's largest scientific component. McCone decided to strip TSS of its main research functions including the behavioral one and let it concentrate solely on providing operational support. In 1962 he approved a reorganization of TSS that brought in Seymour Russell, a tough covert operator, as the new chief. "The idea was to get a close interface with operations," recalls an ex-CIA man. Experienced TSS technicians remained as deputies to the incoming field men, and the highest deputyship in all TSS went to Sid Gottlieb, who became number-two man under Russell. For Gottlieb, this was another significant promotion helped along by his old friend Richard Helms, whom McCone had elevated to be head of the Clandestine Services.

In his new job, Gottlieb kept control of MKULTRA. Yet, in order to comply with McCone's command on research programs, Gottlieb had to preside over the partial dismantling of his own program. The loss was not as difficult as it might have been, because, after 10 years of exploring the frontiers of the mind, Gottlieb had a clear idea of what worked and what did not in the behavioral field. Those areas that still were in the research stage tended to be extremely esoteric and technical, and Gottlieb must have known that if the Science Directorate scored any breakthroughs, he would be brought back into the picture immediately to apply the advances to covert operations.

"Sid was not the kind of bureaucrat who wanted to hold on to everything at all costs," recalls an admiring colleague. Gottlieb carefully pruned the MKULTRA lists, turning over to the Science Directorate the exotic subjects that showed no short-term operational promise and keeping for himself those psychological, chemical, and biological programs that had already passed the research stage. As previously stated, he moved John Gittinger and the personality-assessment staff out of the Human Ecology Society and kept them under TSS control in their own proprietary company. While Gottlieb was effecting these changes, his programs were coming under attack from another quarter.

In 1963 the CIA Inspector General did the study that led to the suspension of unwitting drug testing in the San Francisco and New York safehouses. This was a blow to Gottlieb, who clearly intended to hold on to this kind of research. At the same time, the Inspector General also recommended that Agency officials draft a new charter for the whole MKULTRA program, which still was exempt from most internal CIA controls. He found that many of the MKULTRA subprojects were of "insufficient sensitivity" to justify bypassing the Agency's normal procedures for approving and storing records of highly classified programs. Richard Helms, still the protector of unfettered behavioral research, responded by agreeing that there should be a new charter on the condition that it be almost the same as the old one. "The basic reasons for requesting waiver of standardized administrative controls over these sensitive activities are as valid today as they were in April, 1953," Helms wrote. Helms agreed to such changes as having the CIA Director briefed on the programs twice a year, but he kept the approval process within his control and made sure that all the files would be retained inside TSS. And as government officials so often do when they do not wish to alter anything of substance, he proposed a new name for the activity. In June 1964 MKULTRA became MKSEARCH. [1]

Gottlieb acknowledged that security did not require transferring all the surviving MKULTRA subprojects over to MKSEARCH. He moved 18 subprojects back into regular Agency funding channels, including ones dealing with the sneezing powders, stink bombs, and other "harassment substances." TSS officials had encouraged the d development of these as a way to make a target physically uncomfortable and hence to cause short-range changes in his behavior.

Other MKULTRA subprojects dealt with ways to maximize stress on whole societies. Just as Gittinger's Personality Assessment System provided a psychological road map for exploiting an individual's weaknesses, CIA "destabilization" plans provided guidelines for destroying the internal integrity of target countries like Castro's Cuba or Allende's Chile. Control whether of individuals or nations has been the Agency's main business, and TSS officials supplied tools for the "macro" as well as the "micro" attacks.

For example, under MKULTRA Subproject #143, the Agency gave Dr. Edward Bennett of the University of Houston about $20,000 a year to develop bacteria to sabotage petroleum products. Bennett found a substance that, when added to oil, fouled or destroyed any engine into which it was poured. CIA operators used exactly this kind of product in 1967 when they sent a sabotage team made up of Cuban exiles into France to pollute a shipment of lubricants bound for Cuba. The idea was that the tainted oil would "grind out motors and cause breakdowns," says an Agency man directly involved. This operation, which succeeded, was part of a worldwide CIA effort that lasted through the 1960s into the 1970s to destroy the Cuban economy. [2] Agency officials reasoned, at least in the first years, that it would be easier to overthrow Castro if Cubans could be made unhappy with their standard of living. "We wanted to keep bread out of the stores so people were hungry," says the CIA man who was assigned to anti-Castro operations. "We wanted to keep rationing in effect and keep leather out, so people got only one pair of shoes every 18 months."

Leaving this broader sort of program out of the new structure, Gottlieb regrouped the most sensitive behavioral activities under the MKSEARCH umbrella. He chose to continue seven projects, and the ones he picked give a good indication of those parts of MKULTRA that Gottlieb considered important enough to save. These included none of the sociological studies, nor the search for a truth drug. Gottlieb put the emphasis on chemical and biological substances not because he thought these could be used to turn men into robots, but because he valued them for their predictable ability to disorient, discredit, injure, or kill people. He kept active two private labs to produce such substances, funded consultants who had secure ways to test them and ready access to subjects, and maintained a funding conduit to pass money on to these other contractors. Here are the seven surviving MKSEARCH subprojects: First on the TSS list was the safehouse program for drug testing run by George White and others in the Federal Bureau of Narcotics. Even in 1964, Gottlieb and Helms had not given up hope that unwitting experiments could be resumed, and the Agency paid out $30,000 that year to keep the safehouses open. In the meantime, something was going on at the "pad" or at least George White kept on sending the CIA vouchers for unorthodox expenses $1,100 worth in February 1965 alone under the old euphemism for prostitutes, "undercover agents for operations." What White was doing with or to these agents cannot be said, but he kept the San Francisco operation active right up until the time it finally closed in June. Gottlieb did not give up on the New York safehouse until the following year. [3]

MKSEARCH Subproject #2 involved continuing a $150,000-a-year contract with a Baltimore biological laboratory. This lab, run by at least one former CIA germ expert, gave TSS "a quick-delivery capability to meet anticipated future operational needs," according to an Agency document. Among other things, it provided a private place for "large-scale production of microorganisms." The Agency was paying the Army Biological Laboratory at Fort Detrick about $100,000 a year for the same services. With its more complete facilities, Fort Detrick could be used to create and package more esoteric bacteria, but Gottlieb seems to have kept the Baltimore facility going in order to have a way of producing biological weapons without the Army's germ warriors knowing about it. This secrecy-within secrecy was not unusual when TSS men were dealing with subjects as sensitive as infecting targets with diseases. Except on the most general level, no written records were kept on the subject. Whenever an operational unit in the Agency asked TSS about obtaining a biological weapon, Gottlieb or his aides automatically turned down the request unless the head of the Clandestine Services had given his prior approval.

Gottlieb handled these operational needs personally, and during the early 1960s (when CIA assassination attempts probably were at their peak) even Gottlieb's boss, the TSS chief, was not told what was happening.

With his biological arsenal assured, Gottlieb also secured his chemical flank in MKSEARCH. Another subproject continued a relationship set up in 1959 with a prominent industrialist who headed a complex of companies, including one that custom-manufactured rare chemicals for pharmaceutical producers. This man, whom on several occasions CIA officials gave $100 bills to pay for his products, was able to perform specific lab jobs for the Agency without consulting with his board of directors. In 1960 he supplied the Agency with 3 kilos (6.6 pounds) of a deadly carbamate the same poison OSS's Stanley Lovell tried to use against Hitler. [4] This company president also was useful to the Agency because he was a ready source of information on what was going on in the chemical world.

The chemical services he offered, coupled with his biological counterpart, gave the CIA the means to wage "instant" chemical and biological attacks a capability that was frequently used, judging by the large numbers of receipts and invoices that the CIA released under the Freedom of Information Act. With new chemicals and drugs constantly coming to their attention through their continuing relations with the major pharmaceutical companies, TSS officials needed places to test them, particularly after the safehouses closed. Dr. James Hamilton, the San Francisco psychiatrist who worked with George White in the original OSS marijuana days, provided a way. He became MKSEARCH Subproject #3.

Hamilton had joined MKULTRA in its earliest days and had been used as a West Coast supervisor for Gottlieb and company. Hamilton was one of the renaissance men of the program, working on everything from psychochemicals to kinky sex to carbon-dioxide inhalation. By the early 1960s, he had arranged to get access to prisoners at the California Medical Facility at Vacaville. [5] Hamilton worked through a nonprofit research institute connected to the Facility to carry out, as a document puts it, "clinical testing of behavioral control materials" on inmates. Hamilton's job was to provide "answers to specific questions and solutions to specific problems of direct interest to the Agency." In a six-month span in 1967 and 1968, the psychiatrist spent over $10,000 in CIA funds simply to pay volunteers which a normal rates meant he experimented on between 400 to 1,000 inmates in that time period alone.

Another MKSEARCH subproject provided $20,000 to $25,000 a year to Dr. Carl Pfeiffer. Pfeiffer's Agency connection went back to 1951, when he headed the Pharmacology Department at the University of Illinois Medical School. He then moved to Emory University and tested LSD and other drugs on inmates of the Federal penitentiary in Atlanta. From there, he moved to New Jersey, where he continued drug experiments on the prisoners at the Bordentown reformatory. An internationally known pharmacologist, Pfeiffer provided the MKSEARCH program with data on the preparation, use, and effect of drugs. He was readily available if Gottlieb or a colleague wanted a study made of the properties of a particular substance, and like most of TSS's contractors, he also was an intelligence source. Pfeiffer was useful in this last capacity during the latter part of the 1960s because he sat on the Food and Drug Administration committee that allocated LSD for scientific research in the United States. By this time, LSD was so widely available on the black market that the Federal Government had replaced the CIA's informal controls of the 1950s with laws and procedures forbidding all but the most strictly regulated research. With Pfeiffer on the governing committee, the CIA could keep up its traditional role of monitoring above-ground LSD experimentation around the United States.

To cover some of the more exotic behavioral fields, another MKSEARCH program continued TSS's relationship with Dr. Maitland Baldwin, the brain surgeon at the Na tional Institutes of Health who had been so willing in 1955 to perform "terminal experiments" in sensory deprivation for Morse Allen and the ARTICHOKE program. After Allen was pushed aside by the men from MKULTRA, the new TSS team hired Baldwin as a consultant. According to one of them, he was full of bright ideas on how to control behavior, but they were wary of him because he was such an "eager beaver" with an obvious streak of "craziness." Under TSS auspices, Baldwin performed 1 lobotomies on apes and then put these simian subjects into sensory deprivation presumably in the same "box" he had built himself at NIH and then had to repair after a desperate soldier kicked his way out. There is no information available on whether Baldwin extended this work to humans, although he did discuss with an outside consultant how lobotomized patients reacted to prolonged isolation. Like Hamilton, Baldwin was a jack-of-all trades who in one experiment beamed radio frequency energy directly at the brain of a chimpanzee and in another cut off one monkey's head and tried to transplant it to the decapitated body of another monkey. Baldwin used $250 in Agency money to buy his own electroshock machine, and he did some kind of unspecified work at a TSS safehouse that caused the CIA to shell out $1450 to renovate and repair the place.

The last MKSEARCH subproject covered the work of Dr. Charles Geschickter, who served TSS both as researcher and funding conduit. CIA documents show that Geschickter tested powerful drugs on mental defectives and terminal cancer patients, apparently at the Georgetown University Hospital in Washington. In all, the Agency put $655,000 into Geschickter's research on knockout drugs, stress-producing chemicals, and mind-altering substances. Nevertheless, the doctor's principal service to TSS officials seems to have been putting his family foundation at the disposal of the CIA both to channel funds and to serve as a source of cover to Agency operators. About $2.1 million flowed through this tightly controlled foundation to other researchers.[6] Under MKSEARCH, Geschickter continued to provide TSS with a means to assess drugs rapidly, and he branched out into trying to knock out monkeys with radar waves to the head (a technique which worked but risked frying vital parts of the brain). The Geschickter Fund for Medical Research remained available as a conduit until 1967. [7]

As part of the effort to keep finding new substances to test within MKSEARCH, Agency officials continued their search for magic mushrooms, leaves, roots, and barks. In 1966, with considerable CIA backing, J. C. King, the former head of the Agency's Western Hemisphere Division who was eased out after the Bay of Pigs, formed an ostensibly private firm called Amazon Natural Drug Company. King, who loved to float down jungle rivers on the deck of his houseboat with a glass of Scotch in hand, searched the backwaters of South America for plants of interest to the Agency and/or medical science. To do the work, he hired Amazon men and women, plus at least two CIA paramilitary operators who worked out of Amazon offices in Iquitos, Peru. They shipped back to the United States finds that included Chondodendron toxicoferum, a paralytic agent which is "absolutely lethal in high doses," according to Dr. Timothy Plowman, a Harvard botanist who like most of the staff was unwitting of the CIA involvement. Another plant that was collected and grown by Amazon employees was the hallucinogen known as yage, which author William Burroughs has described as "the final fix."

MKSEARCH went on through the 1960s and into the early 1970s, but with a steadily decreasing budget. In 1964 it cost the Agency about $250,000. In 1972 it was down to four subprojects and $110,000. Gottlieb was a very busy man by then, having taken over all TSS in 1967 when his patron, Richard Helms finally made it to the top of the Agency. In June 1972 Gottlieb decided to end MKSEARCH, thus bringing down the curtain on the quest he himself had started two decades before. He wrote this epitaph for the program: As a final commentary, I would like to point out that, by means of Project MKSEARCH, the Clandestine Service has been able to maintain contact with the leading edge of developments in the field of biological and chemical control of human behavior. It has become increasingly obvious over the last several years that this general area had less and less relevance to current clandestine operations. The reasons for this are many and complex, but two of them are perhaps worth mentioning briefly. On the scientific side, it has become very clear that these materials and techniques are too unpredictable in their effect on individual human beings, under specific circumstances, to be operationally useful. Our operations officers, particularly the emerging group of new senior operations officers, have shown a discerning and perhaps commendable distaste for utilizing these materials and techniques. They seem to realize that, in addition to moral and ethical considerations, the extreme sensitivity and security constraints of such operations effectively rule them out. About the time Gottlieb wrote these words, the Watergate break-in occurred, setting in train forces that would alter his life and that of Richard Helms. A few months later, Richard Nixon was reelected. Soon after the election, Nixon, for reasons that have never been explained, decided to purge Helms. Before leaving to become Ambassador to Iran, Helms presided over a wholesale destruction of documents and tapes presumably to minimize information that might later be used against him. Sid Gottlieb decided to follow Helms into retirement, and the two men mutually agreed to get rid of all the documentary traces of MKULTRA. They had never kept files on the safehouse testing or similarly sensitive operations in the first place, but they were determined to erase the existing records of their search to control human behavior. Gottlieb later told a Senate committee that he wanted to get rid of the material because of a "burgeoning paper problem" within the Agency, because the files were of "no constructive use" and might be "misunderstood," and because he wanted to protect the reputations of the researchers with whom he had collaborated on the assurance of secrecy. Gottlieb got in touch with the men who had physical custody of the records, the Agency's archivists, who proceeded to destroy what he and Helms thought were the only traces of the program. They made a mistake, however, the archivists did. Seven boxes of substantive records and reports were incinerated, but seven more containing invoices and financial records survived apparently due to misfiling.

Nixon named James Schlesinger to be the new head of the Agency, a post in which he stayed only a few months before the increasingly beleaguered President moved him over to be Secretary of Defense at the height of Watergate. During his short stop at CIA, Schlesinger sent an order to all Agency employees asking them to let his office know about any instances where Agency officials might have carried out any improper or illegal actions. Somebody mentioned Frank Olson's suicide, and it was duly included in the many hundreds of pages of misdeeds reported which became known within the CIA as the "family jewels."

Schlesinger, an outsider to the career CIA operators, had opened a Pandora's box that the professionals never managed to shut again. Samples of the "family jewels" were slipped out to New York Times reporter Seymour Hersh, who created a national furor in December 1974 when he wrote about the CIA's illegal spying on domestic dissidents during the Johnson and Nixon years. President Gerald Ford appointed a commission headed by Vice-President Nelson Rockefeller to investigate the past CIA abuses and to limit the damage. Included in the final Rockefeller report was a section on how an unnamed Department of the Army employee had jumped out of a New York hotel window after Agency men had slipped him LSD. That revelation made headlines around the country. The press seized upon the sensational details and virtually ignored two even more revealing sentences buried in the Rockefeller text: "The drug program was part of a much larger CIA program to study possible means for controlling human behavior. Other studies explored the effects of radiation, electric-shock, psychology, psychiatry, sociology, and harassment substances."

At this point, I entered the story. I was intrigued by those two sentences, and I filed a Freedom of Information request with the CIA to obtain all the documents the Agency had furnished the Rockefeller Commission on behavior control. Although the law requires a government agency to respond within 10 days, it took the Agency more than a year to send me the first 50 documents on the subject, which turned out to be heavily censored.

In the meantime, the committee headed by Senator Frank Church was looking into the CIA, and it called in Sid Gottlieb, who was then spending his retirement working as a volunteer in a hospital in India. Gottlieb secretly testified about CIA assassination programs. (In describing his role in its final report, the Church Committee used a false name, "Victor Scheider.") Asked about the behavioral-control programs, Gottlieb apparently could not remember most of the details. The committee had almost no documents to work with, since the main records had been destroyed in 1973 and the financial files had not yet been found.

The issue lay dormant until 1977, when, about June 1, CIA officials notified my lawyers that they had found the 7 boxes of MKULTRA financial records and that they would send me the releasable portions over the following months. As I waited, CIA Director Stansfield Turner notified President Carter and then the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence that an Agency official had located the 7 boxes. Admiral Turner publicly described MKULTRA as only a program of drug experimentation and not one aimed at behavior control. On July 20 I held a press conference at which I criticized Admiral Turner for his several distortions in describing the MKULTRA program. To prove my various points, I released to the reporters a score of the CIA documents that had already come to me and that gave the flavor of the behavioral efforts. Perhaps it was a slow news day, or perhaps people simply were interested in government attempts to tamper with the mind. In any event, the documents set off a media bandwagon that had the story reported on all three network television news shows and practically everywhere else.

The Senate Select Committee on Intelligence and Senator Edward Kennedy's Subcommittee on Health and Scientific Research soon announced they would hold public hearings on the subject. Both panels had looked into the secret research in 1975 but had been hampered by the lack of documents and forthcoming witnesses. At first the two committees agreed to work together, and they held one joint hearing. Then, Senator Barry Goldwater brought behind-the-scenes pressure to get the Intelligence panel, of which he was vice-chairman, to drop out of the proceedings. He claimed, among other things, that the committee was just rehashing old programs and that the time had come to stop dumping on the CIA. Senator Kennedy plowed ahead anyway. He was limited, however, by the small size of the staff he assigned to the investigation, and his people were literally buried in paper by CIA officials, who released 8,000 pages of documents in the weeks before the hearings. As the hearings started, the staff still not having read very much alone put it all in context.

As Kennedy's staff prepared for the public sessions, the former men from MKULTRA also got ready. According to one of them, they agreed among themselves to "keep the inquiry within bounds that would satisfy the committee." Specifically, he says that meant volunteering no more information than the Kennedy panel already had. Charles Siragusa, the narcotics agent who ran the New York safehouse, reports he got a telephone call during this period from Ray Treichler, the Stanford Ph.D. who specialized in chemical warfare for the MKULTRA program. "He wanted me to deny knowing about the safehouse," says Siragusa. "He didn't want me to admit that he was the guy.... I said there was no way I could do that." Whether any other ex-TSS men also suborned perjury cannot be said, but several of them appear to have committed perjury at the hearings. [8] As previously noted, Robert Lashbrook denied firsthand knowledge of the safehouse operation when, in fact, he had supervised one of the "pads" and been present, according to George White's diary, at the time of an "LSD surprise" experiment. Dr. Charles Geschickter testified he had not tested stress-producing drugs on human subjects while both his own 1960 proposal to the Agency and the CIA's documents indicate the opposite. Despite the presence of a key aide who constantly cued him during the hearings, Senator Kennedy was not prepared to deal with these and other inconsistencies. He took no action to follow up obviously perjured testimony, and he seemed content to win headlines with reports of "The Gang That Couldn't Spray Straight." Although that particular testimony had been set up in advance by a Kennedy staffer, the Senator still managed to act surprised when ex-MKULTRA official David Rhodes told of the ill-fated LSD experiment at the Marin County safehouse.

The Kennedy hearings added little to the general state of knowledge on the CIA's behavior-control programs. CIA officials, both past and present, took the position that basically nothing of substance was learned during the 25-odd years of research, the bulk of which had ended in 1963, and they were not challenged. That proposition is, on its face, ridiculous, but neither Senator Kennedy nor any other investigator has as yet put any real pressure on the Agency to reveal the content of the research what was actually learned as opposed to the experimental means of carrying it out. In this book, I have tried to get at some of the substantive questions, but I have had access to neither the scientific records, which Gottlieb and Helms destroyed, nor the principal people involved. Gottlieb, for instance, who moved from India to Santa Cruz, California and then to parts unknown, turned down repeated requests to be interviewed. "I am interested in very different matters than the subject of your book these days," he wrote, "and do not have either the time or the inclination to reprocess matters that happened a long time ago."

Faced with these obstacles, I have tried to weave together a representative sample of what went on, but having dealt with a group of people who regularly incorporated lying into their daily work, I cannot be sure. I cannot be positive that they never found a technique to control people, despite my definite bias in favor of the idea that the human spirit defeated the manipulators. Only a congressional committee could compel truthful testimony from people who have so far refused to be forthcoming, and even Congress' record has not been good so far. A determined investigative committee at least could make sure that the people being probed do not determine the "bounds" of the inquiry.

A new investigation would probably not be worth the effort just to take another stab at MKULTRA and ARTICHOKE. Despite my belief that there are some skeletons hidden literally the public probably now knows the basic parameters of these programs. The fact is, however, that CIA officials actively experimented with behavior-control methods for another decade after Sid Gottlieb and company lost the research action. The Directorate of Science and Technology specifically its Office of Research and Development (ORD) did not remain idle after Director McCone transferred the behavioral research function in 1962.

In ORD, Dr. Stephen Aldrich, a graduate of Amherst and Northwestern Medical School, took over the role that Morse Allen and then Sid Gottlieb had played before him. Aldrich had been the medical director of the Office of Scientific Intelligence back in the days when that office was jockeying with Morse Allen for control of ARTICHOKE, so he was no stranger to the programs. Under his leadership, ORD officials kept probing for ways to control human behavior, and they were doing so with space-age technology that made the days of MKULTRA look like the horse-and-buggy era. If man could get to the moon by the end of the 1960s, certainly the well-financed scientists of ORD could make a good shot at conquering inner space.

They brought their technology to bear on subjects like the electric stimulation of the brain. John Lilly had done extensive work in this field a decade earlier, before concluding that to maintain his integrity he must find another field. CIA men had no such qualms, however. They actively experimented with placing electrodes in the brain of animals and probably men. Then they used electric and radio signals to move their subjects around. The field went far beyond giving monkeys orgasms, as Lilly had done. In the CIA itself, Sid Gottlieb and the MKULTRA crew had made some preliminary studies of it. They started in 1960 by having a contractor search all the available literature, and then they had mapped out the parts of animals' brains that produced reactions when stimulated.

By April 1961 the head of TSS was able to report "we now have a 'production capability' " in brain stimulation and "we are close to having debugged a prototype system whereby dogs can be guided along specific courses." Six months later, a CIA document noted, "The feasibility of r emote control of activities in several species of animals has been demonstrated.... Special investigations and evaluations will be conducted toward the application of selected elements of these techniques to man." Another six months later, TSS officials had found a use for electric stimulation: this time putting electrodes in the brains of cold-blooded animals presumably reptiles. While much of the experimentation with dogs and cats was to find a way of wiring the animal and then directing it by remote control into, say, the office of the Soviet ambassador, this cold-blooded project was designed instead for the delivery of chemical and biological agents or for "executive action-type operations," according to a document. "Executive action" was the CIA's euphemism for assassination.

With the brain electrode technology at this level, Steve Aldrich and ORD took over the research function from TSS. What the ORD men found cannot be said, but the open literature would indicate that the field progressed considerably during the 1960s. Can the human brain be wired and controlled by a big enough computer? Aldrich certainly tried to find out.

Creating amnesia remained a "big goal" for the ORD researcher, states an ex-CIA man. Advances in brain surgery, such as the development of three-dimensional, "stereotaxic" techniques, made psychosurgery a much simpler matter and created the possibility that a precisely placed electrode probe could be used to cut the link between past memory and present recall. As for subjects to be used in behavioral experiments of this sort, the ex-CIA man states that ORD had access to prisoners in at least one American penal institution. A former Army doctor stationed at the Edgewood chemical laboratory states that the lab worked with CIA men to develop a drug that could be used to help program in new memories into the mind of an amnesic subject. How far did the Agency take this research? I don't know.

The men from ORD tried to create their own latter-day version of the Society for the Investigation of Human Ecology. Located outside Boston, it was called the Scientific Engineering Institute, and Agency officials had set it up originally in 1956 as a proprietary company to do research on radar and other technical matters that had nothing to do with human behavior. Its president, who says he was a "figurehead," was Dr. Edwin Land, the founder of Polaroid. In the early 1960s, ORD officials decided to bring it into the behavioral field and built a new wing to the Institute's modernistic building for the "life sciences." They hired a group of behavioral and medical scientists who were allowed to carry on their own independent research as long as it met Institute standards. These scientists were available to consult with frequent visitors from Washington, and they were encouraged to take long lunches in the Institute's dining room where they mixed with the physical scientists and brainstormed about virtually everything. One veteran recalls a colleague joking, "If you could find the natural radio frequency of a person's sphincter, you could make him run out of the room real fast." Turning serious, the veteran states the technique was "plausible," and he notes that many of the crazy ideas bandied about at lunch developed into concrete projects.

Some of these projects may have been worked on at the Institute's own several hundred-acre farm located in the Massachusetts countryside. But of the several dozen people contacted in an effort to find out what the Institute did, the most anyone would say about experiments at the farm was that one involved stimulating the pleasure centers of crows' brains in order to control their behavior. Presumably, ORD men did other things at their isolated rural lab.

Just as the MKULTRA program had been years ahead of the scientific community, ORD activities were similarly advanced. "We looked at the manipulation of genes," states one of the researchers. "We were interested in gene splintering. The rest of the world didn't ask until 1976 the type of questions we were facing in 1965.... Everybody was afraid of building the supersoldier who would take orders without questioning, like the kamikaze pilot. Creating a subservient society was not out of sight." Another Institute man describes the work of a colleague who bombarded bacteria with ultraviolet radiation in order to create deviant strains. ORD also sponsored work in parapsychology. Along with the military services, Agen cy officials wanted to know whether psychics could read minds or control them from afar (telepathy), if they could gain information about distant places or people (clairvoyance or remote viewing), if they could predict the future (precognition), or influence the movement of physical objects or even the human mind (photokinesis). The last could have incredibly destructive applications, if it worked. For instance, switches setting off nuclear bombs would have to be moved only a few inches to launch a holocaust. Or, enemy psychics, with minds honed to laser-beam sharpness, could launch attacks to burn out the brains of American nuclear scientists. Any or all of these techniques have numerous applications to the spy trade.

While ORD officials apparently left much of the drug work to Gottlieb, they could not keep their hands totally out of this field. In 1968 they set up a joint program, called Project OFTEN, with the Army Chemical Corps at Edgewood, Maryland to study the effects of various drugs on animals and humans. The Army helped the Agency put together a computerized data base for drug testing and supplied military volunteers for some of the experiments. In one case, with a particularly effective incapacitating agent, the Army arranged for inmate volunteers at the Holmesburg State Prison in Philadelphia. Project OFTEN had both offensive and defensive sides, according to an ORD man who described it in a memorandum. He cited as an example of what he and his coworkers hoped to find "a compound that could simulate a heart attack or a stroke in the targeted individual." In January 1973, just as Richard Helms was leaving the Agency and James Schlesinger was coming in, Project OFTEN was abruptly canceled.

What if any success the ORD men had in creating heart attacks or in any of their other behavioral experiments simply cannot be said. Like Sid Gottlieb, Steve Aldrich is not saying, and his colleagues seem even more closemouthed than Gottlieb's. In December 1977, having gotten wind of the ORD programs, I filed a Freedom of Information request for access to ORD files "on behavioral research, including but not limited to any research or operational activities related to bioelectrics, electric or radio stimulation of the brain, electronic destruction of memory, stereotaxic surgery, psychosurgery, hypnosis, parapsychology, radiation, microwaves, and ultrasonics." I also asked for documentation on behavioral testing in U.S. penal institutions, and I later added a request for all available files on amnesia. The Agency wrote back six months later that ORD had "identified 130 boxes (approximately 130 cubic feet) of material that are reasonably expected to contain behavioral research documents."

Considering that Admiral Turner and other CIA officials had tried to leave the impression with Congress and the public that behavioral research had almost all ended in 1963 with the phase-out of MKULTRA, this was an amazing admission. The sheer volume of material was staggering. This book is based on the 7 boxes of heavily censored MKULTRA financial records plus another 3 or so of ARTICHOKE documents, supplemented by interviews. It has taken me over a year, with significant research help, to digest this much smaller bulk. Clearly, greater resources than an individual writer can bring to bear will be needed to get to the bottom of the ORD programs.

A free society's best defense against unethical behavior modification is public disclosure and awareness.

The more people understand consciousness-altering technology, the more likely they are to recognize its application, and the less likely it will be used. When behavioral research is carried out in secret, it can be turned against the government's enemies, both foreign and domestic. No matter how pure or defense-oriented the motives of the researchers, once the technology exists, the decision to use it is out of their hands. Who can doubt that if the Nixon administration or J. Edgar Hoover had had some foolproof way to control people, they would not have used the technique against their political foes, just as the CIA for years tried to use similar tactics overseas?

As with the Agency's secrets, it is now too late to put behavioral technology back in the box. Researchers are bound to keep making advances. The technology has already spread to our schools, prisons, and mental hospitals, not to mention th e advertising community, and it has also been picked up by police forces around the world. Placing hoods over the heads of political prisoners a modified form of sensory deprivation has become a standard tactic around the world, from Northern Ireland to Chile. The Soviet Union has consistently used psychiatric treatment as an instrument of repression. Such methods violate basic human rights just as much as physical abuse, even if they leave no marks on the body.

Totalitarian regimes will probably continue, as they have in the past, to search secretly for ways to manipulate the mind, no matter what the United States does. The prospect of being able to control people seems too enticing for most tyrants to give up. Yet, we as a country can defend ourselves without sending our own scientists mad or otherwise into a hidden war that violates our basic ethical and constitutional principles. After all, we created the Nuremberg Code to show there were limits on scientific research and its application. Admittedly, American intelligence officials have violated our own standard, but the U.S. Government has now officially declared violations will no longer be permitted. The time has come for the United States to lead by example in voluntarily renouncing secret government behavioral research. Other countries might even follow suit, particularly if we were to propose an international agreement which provides them with a framework to do so.

Tampering with the mind is much too dangerous to be left to the spies. Nor should it be the exclusive province of the behavioral scientists, who have given us cause for suspicion. Take this statement by their most famous member, B. F. Skinner: "My image in some places is of a monster of some kind who wants to pull a string and manipulate people. Nothing could be further from the truth. People are manipulated; I just want them to be manipulated more effectively." Such notions are much more acceptable in prestigious circles than people tend to think: D. Ewen Cameron read papers about "depatterning" with electroshock before meetings of his fellow psychiatrists, and they elected him their president. Human behavior is so important that it must concern us all. The more vigilant we and our representatives are, the less chance we will be unwitting victims.

Notes

The reorganization of TSS was described in document #59, 26 July 1963, Report of the Inspection of MKULTRA and in interviews with Ray Cline, Herbert Scoville, and several other former CIA officials.

Richard Helms' recommendations for a new MKULTRA charter were described in document #450, 9 June, 1964, Sensitive Research Programs (MKULTRA).

Admiral Stansfield Turner's statement on the MKULTRA program was made before a joint session of the Kennedy subcommittee and the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, August 3, 1977, pp. 4-8.

MKSEARCH programs and their origins in MKULTRA are described in documents #449, 8 April 1964, Revision of Project MKULTRA and #S-1-7, untitled, undated.

Dr. Edward Bennett's work is the subject of MKULTRA subprojects 104 and 143. See especially 143-23, 11

December 1962, Subject: MKULTRA Subproject 143. Other information on the CIA's economic sabotage program against Cuba came from interviews with Major General Edward Lansdale, Ray Cline, William Colby, Lincoln Gordon, Covey Oliver, Charles Meyer, Richard Goodwin, Roger Morris, several former CIA and State Department officials, and Cuban government officials.

The continued safehouse operation is MKSEARCH subproject 4. See especially S-12-1, bank statements and receipts of safehouse. The CIA's dealings with the Treasury Department over the Long committee's investigations of wiretaps are detailed in documents #451, 30 January 1967, A Report on a Series of Meetings with Department of the Treasury officials and #452, undated, Meeting with Department of Treasury Official.

The biological laboratory is the subject of MKULTRA subprojects 78 and 110 and MKSEARCH 2. See especially Documents 78-28, September 28, 1962, Subject: PM Support and Biological [deleted] and S-5-6, 8 September 1965, Subject: Hiring by Chief TSD/BB of [deleted], Former Staff Employee in a Consultant Capacity on an Agency Contract. The costs of the Fort Detrick operations came from p. 18 and p. 204 of the Church committee hearings on Unauthorized Storage of Toxic Agents Septem ber 16,17, and 18,1975. The description of TSS's procedures for dealing with biological weapons came from Document 78-28 (cited above) and document #509, undated (but clearly June 1975), Subject: Discussions of MKNAOMI with [deleted] The chemical company subproject is MKULTRA subproject 116 and MKSEARCH 5. See especially 116-57,30 January 1961, Subject: MKULTRA, Subproject 116; 116-62, October 28, 1960, shipping invoice- and 116-61,4 November 1960, Subject: MKULTRA Subproject 116. Also see James Moore's subproject, MKULTRA 52; especially 52-53, invoice # 3, 1125-009-19 02, April 27, 1960.

James Hamilton's work is the subject of MKULTRA subprojects 124 and 140 and MKSEARCH Subproject 3. See especially 140-57, 6 May 1965, Subject: Behavioral Control and 140-83, 29 May 1963, Subject: MKULTRA Subproject 140.

Carl Pfeiffer's subprojects are MKULTRA 9, 26, 28, and 47 and MKSEARCH 7. See especially S-7-4, undated, Subject: Approval of Project [deleted].

Maitland Baldwin's Subprojects are MKULTRA 62 and MKSEARCH 1. See especially 62-2, undated [deleted] Special Budget and 62-3, undated, 1956, Subject: Re: Trip to [deleted], October 10-14, 1956.

Charles Geschickter's subprojects are MKULTRA 23, 35, and 45 and MKSEARCH 6. See especially 35-10, May 16, 1955, Subject- To provide for Agency-Sponsored Research Involving Covert Biological and Chemical Warfare; 45-78, undated, Research Proposal: 1960, 45-104 undated, Subject: Research Proposal: 1958-1959; 45-95, 26 January 1959, Continuation of MKULTRA, Subproject No.45; 45104,21

January 1958, Continuation of MKULTRA, Subproject No.45; 45-52,8 February 1962, Continuation of MKULTRA, Subproject No. 45; S-13-7,13 August Subject, Approval of [deleted]; and S-13-9, 13 September 1967, Subject: Approval of [deleted]. See also Geschickter's testimony before the Kennedy subcommittee, September 20, 1977, pp. 44-49.

The lack of congressional or executive branch knowledge of CIA behavioral activities was mentioned on

p. 386, Church Committee Report, Book I. Amazon Natural Drug's CIA connection was described by an ex-CIA official and confirmed by the mother of another former Agency man. Several former employees described its activities in interviews.

Gottlieb's termination of MKSEARCH came from Document S-14-3 10 July 1972, Termination of MKSEARCH.

The destruction of MKULTRA documents was described in Document #419, 3 October, 1975, Subject: Destruction of Drug and Toxin Related Files and 460, 31 January, 1973, Subject: Project Files: (19511967).

The MKULTRA subprojects on electric stimulation of the brain are 106 and 142. See especially 106-1, undated, Subject: Proposal; 142-14, 22 May 1962, Subject: Project MKULTRA, Subproject No. 142; and document #76 (MKDELTA release), 21 April 1961, Subject: "Guided Animal" Studies.

The list of parapsychology goals was taken from an excellent article by John Wilhelm in the August 2, 1977 Washington Post: "Psychic Spying?"

Project OFTEN information was taken from document #455,6 May 1974, Subject: Project OFTEN and Memorandum for the Secretary of Defense from Deanne P. Siemer, September 20, 1977, Subject: Experimentation Programs Conducted by the Department of Defense That Had CIA Sponsorship or Participation and That Involved the Administration to Human Subjects of Drugs Intended for Mind-control or Behavior-modification Purposes.

The quote from B. F. Skinner was taken from Peter Schrag's book, Mind Control (New York: Pantheon, 1978) p. 10.

Footnotes

1. At 1977 Senate hearings, CIA Director Stansfield Turner summed up some of MKULTRA's accomplishments over its 11-year existence: The program contracted out work to 80 institutions, which included 44 colleges or universities, 15 research facilities or private companies, 12 hospitals or clinics, and 3 penal institutions. I estimate that MKULTRA cost the taxpayers somewhere in the neighborhood of $ 10 million.

2. This economic sabotage program started in 1961, and the chain of command "ran up to the President,"

according to Kennedy adviser Richard Goodwin. On the CIA side, Agency Director John McCone "was very strong on it," says his former deputy Ray Cline. Cline notes that McCone had the standing orders to all CIA stations abroad rewritten to include "a sentence or two" authorizing a continuing program to disrupt the Cuban economy. Cuba's trade thus became a standing target for Agency operators, and with the authority on the books, CIA officials apparently never went back to the White House for renewed approval after Kennedy died, in Cline's opinion. Three former Assistant Secretaries of State in the Johnson and Nixon administrations say the sabotage, which included everything from driving down the price of Cuban sugar to tampering with cane-cutting equipment, was not brought to their attention. Former CIA Director William Colby states that the Agency finally stopped the economic sabotage program in the early 1970s. Cuban government officials counter that CIA agents were still working to create epidemics among Cuban cattle in 1973 and that as of spring 1978, Agency men were committing acts of sabotage against cargo destined for Cuba.

3. In 1967 a Senate committee chaired by Senator Edward Long was inquiring into wiretapping by government agencies, including the Narcotics Bureau. The Commissioner of Narcotics, then Harry Giordano told a senior TSS man almost certainly Gottlieb that if CIA officials were "concerned" about its dealings with the Bureau involving the safehouses coming out during the hearings, the most "helpful thing" they could do would be to "turn the Long committee off." How the CIA men reacted to this not very subtle blackmail attempt is unclear from the documents, but what does come out is that the TSS man and another top-level CIA officer misled and lied to the top echelon of the Treasury Department (the Narcotics Bureau's parent organization) about the safehouses and how they were used.

4. James Moore of the University of Delaware, who also produced carbamates when he was not seeking the magic mushroom, served at times as an intermediary between the industrialist and the CIA.

5. During the late 1960s and early 1970s, it seemed that every radical on the West Coast was saying that the CIA was up to strange things in behavior modification at Vacaville. Like many of yesterday's conspiracy theories, this one turned out to be true.

6. Geschickter was an extremely important TSS asset with connections in high places. In 1955 he convinced Agency officials to contribute $375,000 in secret funds toward the construction of a new research building at Georgetown University Hospital. (Since this money seemed to be coming from private sources, unwitting Federal bureaucrats doubled it under the matching grant program for hospital construction.) The Agency men had a clear understanding with Geschickter that in return for their contribution, he would make sure they received use of one-sixth of the beds and total space in the facility for their own "hospital safehouse." They then would have a ready source of "human patients and volunteers for experimental use," according to a CIA document, and the research program in the building would provide cover for up to three TSS staff members. Allen Dulles personally approved the contribution and then, to make sure, he took it to President Eisenhower's special committee to review covert operations. The committee also gave its assent, with the understanding that Geschickter could provide "a reasonable expectation" that the Agency would indeed have use of the space he promised. He obviously did, because the CIA money was forthcoming. (This, incidentally, was the only time in a whole quarter-century of Agency behavior-control activities when the documents show that CIA officials went to the White House for approval of anything. The Church committee found no evidence that either the executive branch or Congress was informed of the programs.)

7. In 1967, after Ramparts magazine exposed secret CIA funding of the National Student Association and numerous nonprofit organizations, President Johnson forbade CIA support of foundations or educational institutions. Inside the Agency there was no notion that this order meant ending relationships, such as the one with Geschickter. In his case, the agile CIA men simply transferred the funding from m the foundation to a private company, of which his son was the secretary-treasurer.

8. Lying to Congress followed the pattern of lying to the press that some MKULTRA veterans adopted after the first revelations came out. For example, former Human Ecology Society director James Monroe told The New York Times on August 2, 1977 that "only about 25 to 30 percent" of the Society's budget came from the CIA. A statement he knew to be false since the actual figure was well over 90 percent.

His untruth allowed some other grantees to claim that their particular project was funded out of the non-Agency part of the Society.

Copyright 2010 NSA Transmissions. All rights reserved.

Web Hosting by Yahoo! An expert witness, Certified Hypnotist trained in CIA Neuro Linguistic Programming techniques with NASA software and Military Patents.

NSA Transmissions-Mind Control, Death Rays for Planes, Cancer, Synthetic ills- Topplings ELF & Seismic Waves + Behind Scenes Focused on Wrong Weapon Mass Destruction TERRORISTS WITHIN, 1973 2nd Level CIA, Cryptocracy's Plan to Psycho-civilize You, Emulating Scriptures! ---How & Why 911, Economy. ALL from your minds! MA CROCOSM. Millions including America's Corp Leaders & Officials! "The Process." Israel Framed-engineered to go down.
Have you figured it out yet!

- â ¢ NSA Tice-Hero under God
- â ¢ US Supreme Court Case
- â ¢ Israel-CIA Agenda- Press Releases
- â ¢ Synthetic Telepathy-ills-TAXES
- â ¢ Cancer 911 CIA
- â ¢ Resources to Expose
- â ¢ Interviews-Exhibits-Documents
- â ¢ Lawsuit-Synthetic ills in America

Resources-WHAT'S NOT in the FOIA Documents after experiments

Staged, framed, weeks in ADVANCE to discredit ME, cover ups- 2008 Rewriting History-in the making and since lawsuit 2010. BUILDING DISCREDIT and Character Assassination.

IMPEDING TO GET TO THE TRUTH and TECHNOLOGY WEAPON HIDING BEHIND SSP- FOCUSED ON THE WRONG WEAPONS! AGENTS LEFT UNAWARE AND MISINFORMED! See the Facts below: Please Listen to the interviews to ending statements Operation 2008.

GUIDED, MISGUIDED, BLOCKED, emails, packages, mail, papers, appointments, unfriendly, as SCIENCE SUPPRESSED AND MEDIA FOR DECADES, etc

NO freedom of information FLOW and communication FLOW to BLOCK, redirect calls and mail, selectively and INFILTRATED in the AUSPICES of 911. It's only getting WORSE by DESIGN!

Do something! AMERICAN HEALTH-Michael Moore. Dr. NICK BEGICH below:

Cryptocracy's Plans to Psycho-civilize you-1973 CIA 2nd LEVEL

Operation Mind Control

by Dr. Walter Bowart, New York: Dell Publishing Co., 1978 www.mireilletorjman.com 3/2011

Please keep fearfully in mind that the astonishing information published in this seminal work of investigative reporting, concerning avenues taken to decision and execution by our secret police to fracture or dissolve human minds, then to operate those minds as a small boy, might operate a Yo-Yo, for purposes of counter-intelligence military efficiency, and the destruction of democratic institutions, was drawn directly from federal records and from official laboratory archives of the highest educational purposes as well as from the reviving memories of those who had already undergone the dehumanizing process. ... [p. 14]

Zombie is a quaint, old-fashioned folklore word but its meaning becomes obscene when our childrens minds are being controlled ... [p. 17][Note:1]

It may have been the biggest story since the atom bomb. The headline, however, was small and ignored the larger issue. Drug Tests by CIA Held More Extensive Than Reported in 75, said the New York Times on July 16, 1977. ...

The testing of drugs by the CIA was just a part of the United States governments top-secret mind-control project, a project which had spanned thirty-five years and had involved tens of thousands of individuals. It involved techniques of hypnosis, narcohypnosis, electronic brain stimulation, behavioral effects of ultrasonic, microwave, and low-frequency sound, aversive and other behavior modification therapies. In fact, there was virtually no aspect of human behavioral control that was not explored in their search for the means to control the memory and will of both individuals and whole masses of people.

The CIA succeeded in developing a whole range of psycho-weapons to expand its already ominous psychological warfare arsenal. With these capabilities, it was now possible to wage a new kind of war: a war which would take place invisibly, upon the battlefield of the human mind... [p. 19]

The psychological techniques described in The Manchurian Candidate were to become a reality less than a decade after Condon saw his story set in type. As if Condons fiction had been used as the blueprint, a group of hypno-programmed zombies were created. Some were assassins prepared to kill on cue. Others were informers, made to remember minute details under hypnosis. Couriers carried illegal messages outside the chain of command, their secrets secured behind posthypnotic blocks. Knowledge of secret information was removed from the minds of those who no longer had the need to know they were given posthypnotic amnesia. ... [p. 21]

The objective of Operation Mind Control during this period has been to take human beings, both citizens of the United States and citizens of friendly and unfriendly nations, and transform them into unthinking, subconsciously programmed zombies, motivated without their knowledge and against their wills to perform in a variety of ways in which they would not otherwise willingly perform. This is accomplished through the use of various techniques called by various names, including brainwashing, thought reform, behavior modification, hypnosis, and conditioned reflex therapy. For the purpose of this book the term mind control will be used to describe these techniques generically. REF

Mind control is the most terrible imaginable crime because it is committed not against the body, but against the mind and the soul. Dr. Joost A. M. Meerloo expresses the attitude of the majority of psychologists in calling it mind rape, and warns that it poses a great danger of destruction of the spirit which can be compared to the threat of total physical destruction [p. 23]

I can hypnotize a man without his knowledge or consent into committing treason against the United States, boasted Dr. George Estabrooks in the early 1940s. Estabrooks, chairman of the Department of Psychology at Colgate University, ... [p. 58]

From one such think tank, the Rand Corporation, came a report [1949] ... [p. 67]

... a hypnotized subject will often accept and confess to an implanted memory as a real event in his own past life. ... A number of experienced hypnotists had been able to train their subjects to perform in such a way that observers could not tell that the subject was in a trance or that he was acting under hypnotic suggestions. ... [p. 69]

To induce hypnosis in an unwilling subject, the report suggested any of three possibilities which were then well supported by research findings:

1. As part of a medical examination, talk relaxation to the subject, thus disguise sing the hypnotic induction. For example, the person could be given a blood pressure test, told that he must relax completely in order to give an adequate test record, and then be given suggestions to go to sleep which would result in a hypnotic trance.

2. Induce hypnosis while the person is actually asleep from normal fatigue. This could be done by simply talking softly into the sleeper's ear.

3. Use injections of drugs to induce hypnosis. The hypnotic drugs would relax the subject and put him in a twilight state where the subconscious mind is very susceptible to suggestion. Subjects who refuse or resist the simple talking methods of hypnotic induction could be given a few grams of paraldehyde or an intravenous injection of sodium pentothal or sodium amytal. ... Subsequently the subject could be allowed to practice carrying out posthypnotic suggestions. He could then be re-hypnotized, still without his conscious cooperation, but this time without the use of drugs. ...

Another important use of hypnosis ... the report said, would be the induction of amnesia: Once a deep hypnotic trance is achieved, it is possible to introduce posthypnotic amnesia so that [a subject] . . . would not know . . . that he had been subjected to hypnosis, to drugs, or to any other treatment.

The report then said, Conceivably, electroshock convulsions might be used as an adjunctive device to achieve somnambulism in a very high percentage of the cases . . . It is conceivable, therefore, that electroshock treatments might be used to weaken difficult cases in order to produce a hypnotic trance of great depth. In 1958 the Bureau of Social Science Research (BSSR), a subcontractor to the Rand Corporation, issued a technical report on hypnosis to the air force ...

it is conceivable . . . that these techniques could have been used and covered up so successfully that they might be impossible to recognize . . .

All of these techniques, involving drug-induced hypnosis and electroshock convulsions, were eventually developed and used to reduce some of our own citizens to a zombie state in which they would blindly serve the government. Regardless of the Constitution and the laws which supposedly protect the individual against government coercion, zombies were covertly created to do the governments more unsavory bidding. Such zombies asked no questions about the legality of their assignments.

Often their assignments were never consciously known. And if they were ever questioned about their own actions, amnesia protected them from self-incrimination. ... [p. 70-73]

In 1951, a former naval officer described a secret of certain military and intelligence organizations. He called it Pain-Drug-Hypnosis and said it is a vicious war weapon ... The extensiveness of the use of this form of hypnotism in espionage work is now so widespread that it is long past the time when people should have become alarmed about it.... [p. 75]

Mind control arranges that slaves of the intelligence community witnesses, couriers, and assassins are protected from their own memories and guilt by amnesia.

These slaves may be left alive, but the knowledge they possess is buried deep within the tombs of their own minds by techniques which can keep the truth hidden even from those who have witnessed it. It is the ultimate debriefing, the final security measure short of assassination...[p. 148]

Jos Delgado was a neurophysiologist at the Yale University School of Medicine. By 1964, ... he had already been experimenting with electronic stimulation of the brain (ESB) for nearly two decades. His work, supported by the Office of Naval Research, ... [p. 250]

A number of government agencies were actually at work on projects similar to Delgados, and through these projects the cryptocracy had gained the technology for direct access to the control of the brain and through it, the mind. ... [p. 251]

ESB, however, used in conjunction with psycho-surgery and behavior modification, offered unlimited possibilities. After experiments on laboratory animals met with success, human experimentation was enthusiastically undertaken in quest of the most reliable and absolute method of remote control of the mind. ... [p. 253]

ESB has, meanwhile, been strikingly successful in other areas. It has been used to modify mental mechanisms, to produce changes in mood and feelings, to reinforce behavior both positively and negatively. It has been used to activate sensory and motor regions of the brain in order to produce elementary or complex experiences or movements, to summon memories, and to induce hallucinations. It also has been used to suppress or inhibit behavior and experience and memory outside of the conscious control of the owner of the brain.... [p. 256]

And, in 1974, the first victim of Parkinsons disease treated by ESB walked gracefully out of a San Francisco hospital under his own power, thanks to portable ESB. He had a stimoceiver implanted in his brain ... The stimoceiver which weighed only a few grams and was small enough to implant under his scalp, permitted both remote stimulation of his brain and the instantaneous telemetric recording of his brain waves. ... [p. 256-257]

And by the late 1960s, the remote control of the human brain accomplished without the implantation of electrodes was well on its way to being realized.

A research and development team at the Space and Biology Laboratory of the University of California at the Los Angeles Brain Research Institute found a way to stimulate the brain by creating an electrical field completely outside the head.

Dr. W. Ross Adey stimulated the brain with electric pulse levels which were far below those thought to be effectual in the old implanting technique. ... [p. 257]

In 1975 a primitive mind reading machine was tested at the Stanford Research Institute. The machine is a computer which can recognize a limited amount of words by monitoring a persons silent thoughts. This technique relies upon the discovery that brain wave tracings taken with an electroencephalograph (EEG) show distinctive patterns that correlate with individual words whether the words are spoken aloud or merely subvocalized (thought of).

The computer initially used audio equipment to listen to the words the subject spoke. (At first the vocabulary was limited to up, down, left, and right.) At the same time the computer heard the words, it monitored the EEG impulses coming from electrodes pasted to the subjects head and responded by turning a camera in the direction indicated. After a few repetitions of the procedure, the computers hearing was turned off and it responded solely to the EEG thoughts. It moved a television camera in the directions ordered by the subjects thoughts alone! ... [p. 258]

While Dr. Reed conceded that it was conceivable that thoughts could be injected into a persons mind by the government, he indicated that he did not believe it had already been done. ... [p. 259]

Typically, the scientists have not been vigilant enough, for the cryptocracy already has developed remote-controlled men who can be used for political assassination and other dangerous work, [p. 260]

In 1967 a writer named Lincoln Lawrence published a book ... [Were We Controlled? presented] a sophisticated technique known as RHICEDOM ... Radio Hypnotic Intr a-Cerebral ControlElectronic Dissolution of Memory. ...

Under RHIC, a sleeper can be used years later with no realization that the sleeper is even being controlled! He can be made to perform acts that he will have no memory of ever having carried out. In a manipulated kind of kamikaze operation where the life of the sleeper is dispensable, RHIC processing makes him particularly valuable because if he is detected and caught before he performs the act specified . . . nothing he says will implicate the group or government which processed and controlled him. ...

... according to Lawrence, ... during the operation a small electrode was implanted inside ... [the persons] mastoid sinus. The electrode responded to a radio signal which would make audible, inside ... [the persons] head, certain electronic commands to which he had already been posthypnotically conditioned to respond. ...

In 1975 the RHIC-EDOM story surfaced again. ... The journalist, James L. Moore, said that the papers in his possession described the details of a military technique of mind-control called Radio-Hypnotic Intra-Cerebral ControlElectronic Dissolution of Memory. ...

According to Moore, in the initial (RHIC) stage of programming the ... [person] is put into a deep hypnotic trance, and conditioned to go into trance at the sound of a specific tone. A person may be placed under this control with or without his knowledge, programmed to perform certain actions and maintain certain attitudes whenever he hears the tone. ...

The second part of the process, electronic dissolution of memory (EDOM), Moore said, ... By electronically jamming the brain, acetylcholine creates static which blocks out sights and sounds. You would then have no memory of what you saw or heard; your mind would be a blank. ...

The claims of James L. Moore would sound fantastic were it not for the abundance of information to support the possibility of their validity. ... [p. 261-264]

The cryptocracy has gone to absurd lengths to develop remote-controlled beings. Victor Marchetti revealed that the CIA had once tried to create a cyborg cat. He said that the Agency wired a live feline for sound in an attempt to use the pet for eavesdropping purposes. The cat was first altered electronically so that it would function as a listening device in areas where potential enemy agents would be discussing covert plots.[Note:2] ...

After the electronic feline was at last ready for its assignment, it was turned loose on the street and was followed by a CIA support van loaded with electronic monitoring gear. ... [p. 273]

The cryptocracy has used mind control for the past thirty years. It has used it on its own agents and employees, on enemies and friends alike. It has used it on thousands of Americans without their knowledge or consent. The CIA has programmed assassins and couriers by it. The CIA has even openly confessed to its conspiracy of mind control.

Many people will believe that since the CIA has publicly disclosed its interest in mind control, it has now ceased its activities. The earlier CIA records, however, contain a number of termination dates for aspects of Operation Mind Control, yet evidence clearly suggests that it continued past those dates.

In 1975, following the release of the Rockefeller Commission Report and the subsequent investigations by Senator Church and Congressman Pike's committees, a public accounting was given and apologies were made. The intelligence community was reprimanded and small changes made. ... [p. 275]

Recent history documents the fact that the CIA, as the whipping boy of the cryptocracy, covers up and routinely lies about its activities, heaping one lie on another, in a labyrinthine network of falsehood. It stretches credibility to believe, therefore, that the CIA and especially lower-profile members of the cryptocracy have terminated the mind-control research and development that has been going on for thirty years. ... If it has ceased, it has ceased only because it is obsolete and the new technology of radiation and electronic brain stimulation has given the cryptocracy a more powerful form of control. ... [p. 276] With advancements in electronic technology increasingly sophisticated microphones, transmitters, and surveillance devices the erosion of privacy becomes a mudslide. ... [p. 280]

Mind control remains above United States law, making it a most attractive tool for clandestine operators. [p. 281]

[Note:1] Richard Condon, author of The Manchurian Candidate (1958), the forward to Operation Mind Control (1978).

REF ... The mind control examined in this book is the control of one individual's mind by another.

[Note:2] Jos Delgado, M.D., conducted experiments (circa 1961) that attached an electrode to the eardrum (middle ear) of a cat. The device picked-up people's whispered conversations and transmitted them to a receiver for monitoring. The CIA attached their tiny radio implant to the cat's cochlea (inner ear).

OPERATION MIND CONTROL:

"a synopsis" By W.H. BOWART

Notes on this synopsis: Bowart's 1st release of Operation Mind Control was back in 1978. In an interview, in 1995 [Richardson, TX] Walter said, "It went into print and made it to the where houses (we think) few made it to the book stores - I got paid <chuckle> nice of them, to pay me for what they took." --Then Mr. Bowart went on to other books and a life of a pretty hip journalist -one of the few people that Frank Zappa gave an interview to! Many say Bowart forgot more than most now know! About the Format --These are e-mail down loads, that I later cleaned up for this format. Amicus humani generis, Eric Heimstadt

Date: Thu, 24 Aug 1995 00:52:21 +0000 From: Freedom of Thought Foundation Subject: (Fwd) OPERATION MIND CONTROL-2

OPERATION MIND CONTROL: THE CRYPTOCRACY'S PLAN TO PSYCHOCIVILIZE YOU
By W.H. BOWART

In response to demand here is a synopsis of W.H. Bowart's seminal work without notes, illustrations and additional material. This synopsis is composed of the first few paragraphs (some abridged) of each of the 42 chapters of Operation Mind Control, the "Limited Researcher's Edition" which has been published in a numbered edition of 500 copies signed by the author.

1. THE CRYPTORIAN CANDIDATE

It may have been the biggest story since the atom bomb. The headline, however, was small and ignored the larger issue. "Drug Tests by CIA Held More Extensive Than Reported in '75,"----- said the New York Times on July 16, 1977. What it should have said is "U.S. Develops Invisible Weapons to Enslave Mankind."

The testing of drugs by the CIA was just a part of the United States government's top-secret mind-control project, a project which had spanned thirty-five years and had involved tens of thousands of individuals. It involved techniques of hypnosis, narcohypnosis, electronic brain stimulation, behavioral effects of ultrasonic, microwave, and low-frequency sound, aversive and other behavior modification therapies. In fact, there was virtually no aspect of human behavioral control that was not explored in their search for the means to control the memory and will of both individuals and whole masses of people...

2. ONLY ONE MIND FOR MY COUNTRY

Through the gray waters of amnesia he drifted, coming back from blind coma. First the echoes, like electronically amplified voices speaking from a deep, deep well... then, far off, the dim pink molecules of light... David's body lay still in the military hospital bed. Only his eyes rolled beneath the lids. For several hours he lay that way, perfectly still -just eyes fluttering. The fluttering became more intense. Then his eyes opened. "When I woke up," David said, "I couldn't remember anything. I couldn't remember how I'd gotten there or why I was in the hospital." He asked nurses and aides why he was there. They told him he'd have to ask his doctor. When David finally saw him, the doctor said, "You tried to commit suicide..."

3. THE MIND LAUNDRY MYTH

David's own assessment of his mental confusion after his air force experience was that he had not been "brainwashed." By the time David had his mind controlled, "brainwashing" had become a catchall phrase, but what David had suffered was a much more subtle and hideous form of tyranny. George E. Smith was a POW during the early days of the Vietnam War. Unlike David, George did not have a good education. It can even be said that he was a little naive, and therefore a good candidate for brainwashing of both the American and the NLF (Viet Cong) varieties. He was one of the first of the Green Berets captured in the Vietnam conflict in 1963...

4. WITHOUT KNOWLEDGE OR CONSENT

"I can hypnotize a man --without his knowledge or consent --into committing treason against the United States," boasted Dr. George Estabrooks in the early 1940s. Estabrooks, chairman of the Department of Psychology at Colgate University, was called to Washington by the War Department shortly after Pearl Harbor. Since he was the ranking authority on hypnosis at the time, they wanted his opinion on how the enemy might be planning to use hypnotism. "Two hundred trained foreign operators, working in the United States," Estabrooks told the military leaders, "could develop a uniquely dangerous army of hypnotically controlled Sixth Columnists..."

5. HOLY ACID WARS

In 1951, a former naval officer described "a secret" of certain military and intelligence organizations. He called it "Pain-Drug-Hypnosis" and said it "is a vicious war weapon and may be of considerably more use in conquering a society than the atom bomb. This is no exaggeration. The extensiveness of the use of this form of hypnotism in espionage work is now so widespread that it is long past the time when people should have become alarmed about it... Pain-Drug-Hypnosis is a wicked extension of narcosynthesis, the drug hypnosis used in America only during and since the last war..." That naval officer was none other than L. Ron Hubbard. Before the war an explorer and prolific science fiction writer he went on to found one of America's fastest growing if controversial religions, Scientology. (In an exchange of letters, Hubbard told me that he had written a book called Excaliber which had been stolen. The information in the book, he said, had all been subsequently published in his many other books. Excaliber, was, he intimated, the guts of what would be published as Dianetics, a work which takes all the mind control insights Hubbard was exposed to both in his travels in the east and in Naval Intelligence, and applies them to empower the human spirit --the exact opposite of mind control as it came to be. He was subsequently kidnapped, and of course we know that he, and The Church of Scientology were hounded by the government much as others like Willhelm Reich had been hounded, for spreading the truth about technologies which may have the potential to liberate, rather than enslave. Several years after Hubbard's death, The Church of Scientology was granted, in 1993, official recognition by the Internal Revenue Service. It finally granted them the tax-deductible status which run-of-the-mill religious groups have little trouble obtaining.)

6. THE GUINEA PIG ARMY

In June, 1975, it was revealed publicly for the first time what many had suspected --that the CIA and a number of government agencies under its direction had actually been giving behavior-influencing drugs to citizens within the United States for more than twenty years. I was in Washington at the time, searching the catalogue card files at the National Technical Information Service. A previous search by friends in military intelligence of the M.I. Classified Index had revealed nothing but peripheral references to the object of my study: government research in drugs, hypnosis, behavior modification, and related subjects. The NTIS file is supposed to contain a complete numerical listing of all government contracts, by contract number, whether or not they are classified. The contract cards were indeed numbered in consecutive order, but the ones I was looking for were missing; the index simply skipped over them and continued on in numerical sequence. Other cards in the index were marked "classified," and I would not have been able to obtain the papers to which they referred. But the reports I was looking for were not even cited in the index, although references to them in scientific journals indicated that they had once existed. Classified or not, these documents had been removed from the record...

7. THE MKULTRANS

Following the release of the Rockefeller Report, John D. Marks, author and former staff assistant to the State Department Intelligence Director, filed a Freedom of Information Act appeal on behalf of the Center for National Security Studies requesting documentation from the CIA. I filed an identical request at about the same time. Marks and I both requested documentation for the evidence cited in the Rockefeller Report on the CIA's mind-control activities conducted within the United States. Seven months later, Marks was given more than 2,000 pages of top-secret and "eyes only" documents by the CIA's Information Review Committee. A short time later I began to receive what Marks had gotten. These pages were said to be the bulk of the information upon which the Rockefeller Commission had based its report. Exempted from release were portions of or entire documents which contained information said by CIA officials to pertain to "intelligence sources and methods which the Director of the Central Intelligence has the responsibility to protect from unauthorized disclosure pursuant to section 102 (d) (3) of the National Security Act of 1947." But in the photo-copied pages obtained was a statement to the effect that within a few hours of his resignation (forced by the disclosures of the Watergate and Church Committees), Director Richard Helms ordered the records shredded and burned...

8. THE MATA HARI OF MIND CONTROL

Candy Jones was a sex symbol during World War II. Born Jessica Wilcox, with her catchy stage name and shapely legs she rose to a standing second only to Betty Grable as America's most popular pinup girl. She was a favorite of the troops at the front, and she felt it a duty to entertain them near the battlefields. After her advertised beauty faded and she could no longer serve to raise the morale of the troops with her appearance, she served her country in another way. She served under MKULTRA as a hypnoprogrammed CIA courier for twelve years. While on a USO tour in the Pacific in 1945

Candy contracted a case of undulant fever and, shortly thereafter, malaria. On top of that, she caught the contagious fungus known as "jungle Rot." Within a week, her hair had begun to fall out, and her complexion had turned a sickly yellow. The combination of these diseases sent her to a military hospital in Manila, where she met a young medical officer whom she identifies only by the pseudonym "Gilbert Jensen." Later, he would offer her the opportunity to become a CIA courier...

9. THE STORY OF O

Due to the volatile nature of the information contained in her story, I am withholding this victim's identity. The evidence is still being uncovered. Others are coming forward with corroborating information. While details of her testimony is still being checked, we do know, that what she describes in her story is entirely possible, so, from the perspective of students of mind control this story has great value as it is here presented. Future editions may contain more. We'll call her O. She was born in 1957. Her first memories are of being suffocated by her father's penis in what was to be a childhood of continual sexual abuse. After six years of deprogramming" with Mark Phillips, O has come to reintegrate her fragmented personality and has gained access to most of the shocking memories of her abuse by, among others, high government officials...

10. MINDWAR

In 1981, Major Michael A. Aquino collaborated with Colonel Paul E. Vallely to produce a paper entitled From PSYOP to MindWar: The Psychology of Victory. The paper was submitted to Military Review and Parameter, the publication of the U.S. Army War College. It was widely circulated among the psyop community and among mind control researchers without a copyright notice. Finally it appeared in its entirety in Milton William Cooper's Behold A Pale Horse, a 1991 work that deals largely with the question of Unidentified Flying Objects. LTC John Alexander's Military Review article in support of "psychotronics" --intelligence and operational employment of ESP--was decidedly provocative. Criticism of research in this area, based as it is on 'existing frontiers of scientific law, brings to mind the laughter that greeted the Italian scientist Spallanzani in 1794 when he suggested that bats navigate in the dark by means of what we now call sonar. "If they see with their ears, then do they hear with their eyes?" went the joke, but I suspect that the U.S. Navy is glad someone took the idea seriously enough to pursue it...

11. PROJECT MONARCH?

Project Monarch, according to Mark Phillips, is a U.S. Defense Department project begun in the 1960's. He says its code name was assigned to a subsection of the CIA's Operation Artichoke which later became Project MKULTRA... So-called "Presidential Models", the most highly prized products of the Project Monarch mind control factories have a distinct (conditioned) habit of sitting very erect with t heir legs daintily perched. They serve kings and presidents and high ranking government officials as sex slaves. They are controlled by invisible reins. The Presidential Models have "fluttered about the White House" and European hideaways which, in another day, would have been the "courts." While they appear to be "lighthearted" and "inconstant" sex slaves, they are trained at the art of pillow talk and do, in fact, have memories like human tape-recorders...

12. THANKS FOR THE MEMORIES

I met Lois first in Palm Springs, when I was the editor of Palm Springs Life. She was sitting, looking pretty, at one of the many events that bear Bob Hope's name, the Bob Hope Classic golf tournament or the Hope Center which houses the Palm Desert opera. Her real name was not Lois and I was not introduced to her, but when I saw her again, several years later, she had come along with a Project Monarch survivor just to watch the interview I was doing with their deprogrammer. I knew I'd seen her before, but at first, couldn't remember where or when..

13. MONARCH CORROBORATION

A number of friends and fellow researchers can't bring themselves to believe the story of "O" nor Lois. Neither in the beginning could I. Both dropped too many famous names. Both had witnessed too many important events in history. Both told hideous stories of abuse. How could our high government officials fall to such low perversions? Would they violate the human spirit just for lust? Greed? After a little thought, once one has processed the horror, one realizes that in each case, celebrities and high government official's vices were fed by the cryptocracy using one of Project Monarch's programmed "presidential models." In this case Ms. O's remarkable gifts, which were the invisible reins of control the cryptocracy held over Senators, Presidents, and Kings. In fact, it looked as if our executive branch of government is now controlled by new innovations in the usual Machiavellian options: bribery, blackmail, threat of death, and/or ultimately assassination. Then, again come the doubts. Here we are taking the word of a "reintegrated" person who's suffered a lifetime of Multiple Personality Disorder (MPD) which is a relatively new idea in itself. One doesn't want to believe this...

14. HIMMLER'S GUINEA KIDS

Heinrich Himmler's Lebensborn program may have been the grandparent of Project Monarch. Monarch sought to create junior Manchurian Candidates with multiple personalities, each trained to perform a specific specialty. The kids were programmed to respond to codes, mnemonic cues, and audio-reversed triggers and tones. They were trained in killing techniques and the rapid assembly and de-assembly of exotic weapons. They were educated about poisons, explosives, languages and computers, then programmed to forget it all or remember only selected areas upon command. Monarch produced a cadre of child spies who were directed to prey upon high placed military, government and high society paedophiles, sometimes hauling them into blackmail situations. As in the Nazi Lebensborn program there is evidence of selected breeding, adoption of the children, and a peculiarly large number of twins among them. There is mounting evidence that the directors of Project Monarch were former Nazis, and that, like Nazism, the Monarch program was interlaced with Satanism...

15. FINDERS, KIDNAPPERS, NAZIS

According to a Customs Service memorandum, the CIA and FCIA (Foreign Counter Intelligence Agency a distinct and autonomous organization within the FBI) were both involved in a mysterious group with behaviors similar to the one in Nebraska.

Known as the Finders, CIA ownership of this organization was kept secret for seven years after local law enforcement uncovered its practice of child abduction, kiddie-porn, ritual abuse, and slavery. In early February 1987, an anonymous ti p to the Tallahassee, Florida police brought cops out like bloodhounds. The caller said two "well dressed men" seemed to be "supervising" six disheveled and hungry children in a local park. The two men were identified as members of the Finders. They were charged with child abuse in Florida. In Washington, D.C., police and U.S. Customs Service agents raided a duplex apartment building and a warehouse connected to the group. Among the evidence seized were detailed instructions on obtaining children for unknown purposes. Several photos of nude children were found, one of which appeared "to accent the child's genitals..."

16. TUNED IN TO A MENTAL RADIO?

Had I not heard this story, in essence, from a half dozen other survivors of this kind of mind control, I would not have included it here. But we video taped a number of credible people talking about these "voices" in their heads. People who experience this are what Martin Cannon referred to in his book The Controllers as "wavies." Cannon wrote: Every Senator and Congressional representative has a "wavie" file. So do many state representatives. Wavies have even pled their case to private institutions such as The Christic Institute. And who are the wavies? They claim to be the victims of clandestine bombardment with non-ionizing radiation --or microwaves. They report sudden changes in psychological states, alteration of sleep patterns, intracerebral voices and other sounds, and physiological effects.

Most people never realize how many wavies there are in this country. I've spoken to a number of wavies myself. I don't like the term "Wavie." It's a hard-hearted term which does not show any sympathy for the people who are suffering this way. They're suffering just as much as the people who have survived the so-called Project Monarch. Giving them the benefit of the doubt, I'll term them E-M Targets, E-M for electromagnetic spectrum, since the technical possibilities exist that they are experiencing bombardment by ELF, VLF, SHF microwaves, magnetic waves and other radiation of the electromagnetic spectrum which can be modulated so that voices can be heard inside the head, without implants, without speakers. Most of them have been diagnosed as being "Paranoid Schizophrenic..."

17. THE SLAVES WHO BURIED THE PHARAOH

The CIA uses thought reform, programming, and indoctrination on its own employees. Patrick J. McGarvey, a veteran of fourteen years in U.S. intelligence service, described the cryptocracy's more ordinary indoctrination procedures in his book CIA: The Myth and the Madness. McGarvey said that his indoctrination was carried out in a classroom which was "right out of The Manchurian Candidate. It was a cavernous room not unlike a nineteenth century surgical exhibition pit." That training, he said, consisted of "an admixture of common sense, insanity, old-time religion, and some of the weirdest lectures you can imagine." The most important result of this early training, as far as the CIA was concerned, McGarvey said, "was the attitudes they managed to inculcate" among the recruits...

18. BRAVE NEW WORLD IN A SKINNER BOX

The cryptocracy's search for reliable mind control methods was one of the most far-reaching secret projects ever undertaken. In addition to research and development in drugs and hypnosis, CIA funds and cryptocracy guidance gave impetus to a number of behavior modification projects carried out in federal prisons and mental institutions. Most of the projects were arranged secretly so recipients of the funds would have no way of knowing that the CIA was backing the research. Even if they had known of the CIA's involvement, their interest in behavior modification probably would not have been dampened. Previously called conditioned reflex therapy, behavior modification, in the sixties and seventies, was becoming the most popular tool of psycho science since Sigmund Freud asked his first patient to lie down on the couch. Behavior modification is based on conditioning, but c conditioning is a big word for a simple form of learning in which a reaction is evoked by an outside action. The reaction is called a response; the outside action is called a stimulus. In 1927 Pavlov won the Nobel Prize for his discovery of a method of making dogs salivate at the ringing of a bell. Salivating dogs were not much good to anyone, and it was not for making dogs drool that Pavlov was so honored.

He was honored with the world's most prestigious award for making dogs drool on cue. He called his process "conditioning". The dogs' involuntary response, he called a "reflex." Pavlov's discoveries provided the breakthrough which behavioral science needed to begin to control the human mind...

19. A SCHOOL FOR ASSASSINS

The cryptocracy recruited their assassins from among people who had already demonstrated a violent nature, people who had few reservations about taking human life. No homicidal maniacs were recruited because they could not be controlled. The cryptocracy needed killers who would not murder on impulse, but only upon command. Once selected, the assassin candidates were turned over to the military, where, under the guise of "combat readiness" training, they underwent a complete program of conditioning. Graduates of the program would forever after act with ruthless efficiency. They would eliminate local political leaders in a foreign country, or undertake "search and destroy" missions in violation of national and international laws. They would be given a cover allowing them to enter the Foreign Service; or they would pose as embassy marine guards. In July, 1975, the Sunday Times in London quoted a U.S. Navy psychologist who admitted that U.S. Naval Intelligence had taken convicted murderers from military prisons, conditioned them as political assassins, and then placed them in American embassies around the world. This admission came shortly after the Senate Intelligence Committee had scolded the CIA for plotting a number of political assassinations around the world. From the congressional reports, however, one got the feeling the cryptocracy was being chastised not for the assassinations it had successfully accomplished, but for those which it had attempted, but failed. The attempts on the life of Fidel Castro drew the greatest notice from the congressional committees and the press...

20. THE FOUR FACES OF A ZOMBIE

On March 2, 1967, Luis Angel Castillo, age twenty-four, was arrested by the Philippine National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) on suspicion of conspiring to assassinate President Ferdinand Marcos in Manila. In a series of interrogation sessions, the NBI and Philippine Army investigators gave him truth serum (at his request) and put him under hypnosis. During one of these sessions, Castillo revealed he had been involved in an assassination four years earlier. Castillo told the NBI, both under hypnosis and truth serum and also in a normal state, that he had been hypnoprogrammed to kill a man riding in an open car. Although Castillo did not know the identity of his target, the scene of his supposed "hit" was Dallas, Texas. The date was November 22, 1963...

21. THE LONE NUTS

MKULTRA was fully operational when Luis Castillo was programmed. It was active that same decade when events blamed on three "lone assassins" changed the course of history. In a well executed, mass indoctrination campaign employing all the honor, prestige, and power of the U.S. government, Americans were told over and over again the lives of John Kennedy, Martin Luther King, and Robert Kennedy were all taken by lone assassins --men operating without political motivation. These three assassins --Lee Harvey Oswald, James Earl Ray, and Sirhan Sirhan--conveniently left diaries, underlinings in various books, and other self-incriminating clues to establish their guilt. The evidence gathered on the assassinations remains fragmented and incomplete. Any event of such magnitude as political assassina tion is bound to invite a large number of interpretations. While in 1978 when the first edition of this book appeared there was not any conclusive proof of a conspiracy, more than eighty percent of the American public then believed there was a conspiracy. Today, after Oliver Stone's masterful film JFK, more than ninety percent of the public believe that John F. Kennedy was murdered by conspirators working with the U.S. intelligence agencies. While Congress did cite Richard Helms for contempt, and declared that the FBI and the CIA did not cooperate with the Warren Commission, the murders of Kennedy, Kennedy and King remain unsolved mysteries in the public's opinion. A string of circumstantial evidence, and a knowledge of the fundamentals of mind control invites further speculation. In each case the method was the same --death by the bullet. In each case the circumstances were the same --murder in a public place in view of many witnesses. All three assassins were men whose personal histories can be interpreted to indicate they were mentally unstable. Evidence suggests all three had been hypnotized at one time or another...

22. THE IGNORED CONFESSIONS

Only an understanding of the techniques and applications of mind control could begin to bring meaning to the fragmented ramblings of Jack Ruby. On June 7, 1964, Jack Ruby was questioned in jail in Dallas, Texas, by Earl Warren and Gerald Ford. In that session Ruby continually pleaded for a lie-detector test or for sodium pentothal. He desperately wanted to prove his honesty so Warren and the commission would know he was telling the truth. Said Ruby: "I would like to be able to get a lie-detector test or truth serum of what motivated me to do what I did at that particular time, and it seems as you get further into something, even though you know what you did, it operates against you somehow, brainwashes you, that you are weak in what you want to tell the truth about, and what you want to say which is the truth..."

23. ANOTHER HYPNO-PATSY?

On April 4, 1968, Nobel laureate Dr. Martin Luther King was murdered on a second floor balcony of the Lorraine Motel in Memphis Tennessee. Half of the six thousand man FBI force was assigned to the task of bringing the killer to justice. The FBI should have had an easy job. There was an abundance of evidence left behind on the second floor of a rooming house a block from the Lorraine Motel. There were fingerprints on the window ledge of a bathroom next to a room which had been rented to an "Eric S. Galt." On the sidewalk in front of the house was a weapon, a high powered assault rifle with telescopic sight. Neighbors said they had seen a white Mustang roar away moments after the shooting...

24. CONFESSION BY AUTOMATIC WRITING

The circumstances of Robert Kennedy's death are well known. On June 5, 1968, at 12:15 a.m., Sen. Robert Kennedy was shot in the pantry of the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles. Karl Uecker grabbed the gun, a .22 caliber Iver-Johnson revolver. It was smoking in the hand of Sirhan Beshara Sirhan, a Palestinian refugee. The Los Angeles police immediately took Sirhan into custody. At first they appeared to be taking every precaution so they wouldn't make the same mistakes the Dallas police had made. They taped every interrogation session with the suspect and kept him under surveillance through a closed-circuit TV camera in his cell. They took every measure to protect the life of this man, the second "lone nut" to gun down a Kennedy. Trying to avoid anything which would be an infringement on the rights of the alleged assassin, the police carefully informed Sirhan of his legal rights before trying to interrogate him. They did not inform him of his personal liberties of their rights, however. Through the first hours of questioning, Sirhan chose to remain silent. For some time, no one knew who the curly-haired, swarthy man in custody was... Police immediately went to his house and searched his bedroom. On the floor next to Sirhan's bed was a large spiral notebook. On the de sk was another notebook. There was a third small notebook, a good deal of occult literature, a brochure advertising a book on mental projection, and a large brown envelope from the Internal Revenue Service on which someone had written, "RFK must be disposed of like his brother was." At the bottom of the envelope was scrawled "Reactionary." In one of the notebooks there was a page which was used later in the trial to prove premeditation: "May 18, 9:45 a.m. --68. My determination to eliminate RFK is becoming more the more of an unshakable obsession... RFK must die --RFK must be killed Robert F. Kennedy must be assassinated... Robert F. Kennedy must be assassinated before 5 June 68 Robert F. Kennedy must be assassinated I have never heard please pay to the order of this or that please pay to the order of..." Also drawn on the page were spirals, diamonds, and doodles. While Los Angeles mayor Sam Yorty ignorantly told the press Sirhan was a "member of numerous Communist organizations, including the Rosicrucians," Sirhan's neighbors told a different story. One said he was "very religious." Another reported that he was "just a normal kid." He took cars and bikes apart and put them back together again." Neighborhood kids said he was "nice." When asked if Sirhan was the angry type, a black girl in his Neighborhood said, "He didn't show it." Arthur Bean, another neighbor said, "Someone talked that kid into gunning down Kennedy." When Irwin Garfinkel, a deputy attorney in the public defender's office, asked Sirhan about the shooting, he said, "I don't remember much about the shooting, Sir. Did I do it?

Well, yes, I am told I did it.

I remember being at the Ambassador. I was drinking tom collinses. I got dizzy. I went back to my car so I could go home. But I was too drunk to drive. I thought I'd better find some coffee. The next thing I remember I was being choked and a guy was twisting my knee." George Plimpton, editor of the Paris Review, was in the hotel pantry when Kennedy was shot. He was one of the men who wrestled Sirhan down. According to Newsweek, Plimpton "offered some eloquent testimony that appeared to some to support the defense's contention that Sirhan Beshara Sirhan had, in fact, been in a 'trance' during the shooting. 'He was enormously composed,' recalled Plimpton. 'Right in the midst of this hurricane of sound and feeling, he seemed to be almost the eye of the hurricane. He seemed purged...'"

25. THE PATRIOTIC ASSASSIN

All the assassins in the cryptocracy's army of hit men are not, by any means, programmed. There are other ways besides mind control to motivate the commission of murder. In 1298 Marco Polo returned from his Asiatic travels with a tale of assassins who were motivated by an unusually clever technique. Polo described a fortress he had visited in the valley of Alamut in Persia. He said the valley was the headquarters of a notorious group known as the Ashishin, from which the word "assassin" evolved. Polo's story echoed numerous legends about an "Old Man of the Mountain," named Allahudin, who used subtle and elaborate psychological tricks to motivate simple country boys to undertake fearless acts of murder. The Old Man had created an inescapable valley between two mountains by building up high walls at both ends. He turned the valley into a beautiful garden, the largest and most beautiful that had ever been seen. In this valley he planted every kind of fruit tree and built several elaborate, ornamented pavilions and palaces which were said to be of such elegance they could not be described in words. Everything that could be, was covered with gold. The buildings housed the most exquisite collection of paintings and sculpture in the known world. Man-made streams flowed wine, milk, honey, and water...

26. SLEEPER AGENT

Joe called me one day from Australia. I was still working on Grub Street as editor of Palm Springs Life. He told me what most of the victims of mind control have told me: "I read your book. You saved my sanity. I know now that I'm not crazy. Thanks so much for writing it." That was reward enough for doing it, I suppose

, but I didn't want to do it again. I wanted nothing more to do with mind control. I was burned out on the subject, so Joe got a polite but disinterested reception from me. He kept up a correspondence with me anyway from the outback. At first his letters were fragmented, disjointed, mine were polite, encouraging, brief. I couldn't tell where he was coming from, but, what do you expect from a victim whose mind has been scrambled? He began by talking about some missing British Scientists...

27. DEEP PROBE

Jose Delgado stood sweating in the center of a bull ring in Madrid. He was sweating from the heat of the sun reflected on the sand. He felt a twinge of natural fear as the door at one end of the walled ring swung open, and a huge black bull lunged forth from the darkness into the plaza de toros. This was a very good bull, one the best matador would have desired. It charged as if on rails, straight at Delgado. In front of a ton of black beef, two sharp horns aimed to gore the vital parts of his body. Delgado stood face to face with the charging Andalusian toro. But Delgado was no matador. He stood in the ring alone in his shirtsleeves. He wore no "suit of lights" and he carried no cape. Instead of a sword, he held only a little black box. He wanted to wait until the last possible moment, but he could not contain his fear. When the bull was thirty feet away, he pressed the button on the box. The bull immediately quit his attack and skidded to a halt. Toro looked right, then left. Then, as if bewildered, he turned his broad side toward Delgado and trotted away...

28. FROM BIONIC WOMAN TO STIMULATED CAT

In 1967 a writer named Lincoln Lawrence published a book which asked the question: Was Lee Harvey Oswald a robot-assassin programmed by a sophisticated technique known as RHIC-EDOM? The letters stood for Radio Hypnotic Intra-Cerebral Control-Electronic Dissolution of Memory. Lawrence speculated that Oswald had been behavior-controlled and prepared during his "defection" to the Soviet Union as a "sleeper" agent programmed to return to the United States and murder on cue. It was the Manchurian Candidate theme, with one exception. Lawrence insisted that the Russians had not masterminded the RHIC-EDOM plan. It had been masterminded, he thought, by an international cartel of commodities merchants who sought to make millions by driving the market with the assassination of a president --any president. Lawrence wrote, "Lee Harvey Oswald was to be utilized as... (and now you must clear your brain and put aside your preconceived notions of what espionage and sabotage are today)... an RHIC controlled person... somewhat like a mechanical toy. An RHIC controlled person can be processed (as Oswald was in Minsk, allowed to travel to any country... and be put to use even years later by the application of RHIC controls. In short, like the toy, he can in a sense be 'wound up' and made to perform acts without any possibility of the controller being detected ...

29. INVISIBLE WARFARE

Since this book first appeared in 1978 there has been a rapid acceleration in public awareness about mind control. It has largely replaced the term "brainwashing" in the press, appearing with some regularity on the front pages of your local daily newspaper. If you are laboring under the impression that the Church Committee hearings stopped Operation Mind Control, in these pages you have learned of evidence to the contrary. Instead of halting mind control, a whole new kind of warfare as developed around it. The new technology makes the old "Project Monarch" style classical conditioning obsolete. It is the reason so many survivors are remembering and are allowed to talk. They are no longer needed, and there's a better way to control minds. Public awareness has been outrun by the progress in mind control technology. It has gone from drugs and hypnosis to the effects of microwaves, ELF waves, gravity waves, and modulated signals of all kinds. The bas ics are the same in all techniques --the government programmers sneak into the subconscious mind of individuals and the masses and influence them without their knowledge or consent...

30. MAY THE FORCE BE WITH US!

The first evidence of the use of hypnosis as a reliable operational tool of the cryptocracy, according to John Marks, can be found in the work of Morse Allen in 1954. Of course hypnosis itself had been used by shamans and fakirs to manipulate and control people for centuries. Marks explains that Allen's work came at the height of the Project ARTICHOKE explorations in which the spooks attempted to use hypnosis to "programme" an assassin. CIA documents also reveal that in 1959 John Gittinger recommended the use of hypnosis in operational experiments. (Of course our latest evidence shows that Navy Intelligence had been using mind control in the 1940's, at least.) The CIA files contain a translation of a Soviet research project entitled Unperceived Manifestations of Mental Processes in Deep Hypnosis which described the success of their psychoscientists: "We succeeded in programming not only the subject of dreams (I would like to visit Africa in my dream...), but to program color perception (let my dream be blue...), as well as inducing a specific mood after sleepin..."

31. THE WARRIOR'S TONGUE

John Alexander is a busy man these days, not only is he one of the moving forces behind PSITECH, a company that sells military developed remote viewing skills (RVS) to private enterprise, he is the program manager for nonlethal defense at the Los Alamos (N.M.) National Laboratory, an author (The Warrior's Edge), and a practitioner of the gem of mind control arts --Neuro-linguistics Programming. To day, after 32 years of military service this retired Colonel has the responsibility of drawing together and nurturing many nonlethal weapons devices which could disable key electronic equipment, blind weapons sensors or shut off the power to a capital city. He has drawn upon a variety of disciplines involving polymer chemistry, microbics, kinetics, acoustics, electrical engineering, materials science and information science, just to demonstrate their feasibility," in the burgeoning science called Nonlethal defense, at least so said Aviation Week & Space Technology. "As the concept has evolved," Alexander is reported as saying, " we have come to focus our efforts on anti-material systems. If you can stop the machines of war, you can inhibit the prosecution of conflict."

32. CULT CONTROL

In 1990 psychiatrist Dr. Louis Jolyon West, M.D., Professor of Psychiatry, University of California, pet shrink of the cryptocracy gave a speech on cults. As usual it was soft on fact and hard on the cryptocracy line: It is estimated that there are more than 2500 cults in the United States... Now there must be a lot more "cults" than that since, the Oxford English Dictionary said the word cult meant: "1. worship --2. a particular form of religious worship; esp. in reference to its external rites and ceremonies --3. devotion to a particular person or thing..." Some would say that includes the Moose, Elks, Shriners, Optimists, Boy Scouts, certain football teams, religions of all denominations, hang gliding clubs, sky diving clubs, James Joyce reading groups and on and on. But without further argument, West's comments on "CULTS-PSYCHIATRIC ASPECTS"

33. THE FIRE IN WACO

Perhaps not since the Reichstag fire in Nazi Germany have flames leaped so visibly onto the pages of history. The flames in both Waco and the Reichstag fires we re fueled by mind control. At least that's the impression you get when you read attorney Paul D. Wilcher's letter to Attorney General Janet Reno... Dated May 21 st, 1993 the letter begins with no salutation, the phone numbers of Ms. Reno, Justice Department Communications Director Carl Stern, Appointments Secretary Melissa Muller, Assistant Attorney General Richard Scruggs, and James Kramarsic, Special Ops--CIA. With a typical lawyerly lack of style the letter begins: RE: (1) Vital NEW information concerning the conflagration at David Koresh's Branch Davidian compound, "Ranch Apocalypse," outside Waco, Texas, on Monday, April 19th, 1993, which is now being kept from you and covered up _ i.e., that what happened was NOT a "mass suicide," but rather a MASS MURDER... the letter then reads:"

DEAR ATTORNEY GENERAL RENO" in caps.

The purpose of this letter... is for me to deliver to you extremely sensitive information about the deaths of the 86 men, women, and children who perished at the Branch Davidian compound on Monday, April 19th, 1993, and the truth about how it all happened... But even more important, my purpose here is to demonstrate how the Waco tragedy fits into a much bigger (and far uglier) The subject of mind control is introduced on page four when Wilcher writes: "David Koresh had an extensive CIA background...he was known in CIA circles as a "sleeper" _ someone who had been subjected to extensive CIA "mind control" training and programming..." Wilcher said that it was not a coincidence that all these events were occurring in or near Waco, Texas _ "since Waco is a major center for such CIA "mind control" experimentation and programming _ with much of this activity occurring at the CIA's Leadership Management Institute in Waco." Wilcher pointed out that "similar CIA-sponsored "cults" are located across the country including in such places as Salt Lake City, Utah; Provo, Utah; Logan, Utah; Boise, Idaho; and San Francisco, California," and that one or all of these other "cults can likewise 'explode' onto the front pages of the press at any time the CIA deems appropriate, in order to accomplish its pre-determined, hidden, right-wing political agenda."...

Mind Control and Memory Blocks to Ease the Consciences of the CIA's PROFESSIONAL killers: Thus far, we have been discussing mind control and memory blocks in the context of the CIA's 'Manchurian-Candidate-type' robot assassins _ those low-level individuals _ like Sirhan Sirhan, David Hinckley, Mark David Chapman (who assassinated the Beatles' lead singer/songwriter John Lennon), and the six (6) Black men murdered in Pershing Park _ persons who are programmed by the Agency to be used only once then 'thrown away' and discarded _ i.e., persons who are destined either to be killed or imprisoned for the rest of their lives, once they have performed their pre-ordained secret mission. In other words, these low-level individuals are highly expendable _ particularly when getting rid of them will preserve the 'plausible deniability' that the Agency had anything to do with their training, conduct, or activities. In the context of these low-level individuals, the mind control programming we have been discussing is used not only to condition the desired robotic response to a pre-ordained secret signal, but also to prevent the subject from remembering anything to do with their training, conduct, or activities. In the context of these low-level individuals, the mind control programming we have been discussing is used not only to condition the desired robotic response to a pre-ordained secret signal, but also to prevent the subject from remembering anything...

34. HAVE BUCK ROGERS' RAY GUN -WILL TRAVEL

Not far from the melted sand and globs of green Trinitite at the Trinity site -- beneath the tower that exploded the first atomic bomb, just across the desert sands from the Los Alamos National Laboratories where Invisible Weaponry is being developed at an alarming rate, is a private company, Consumertronics, which specializes in all things electronic. Headed by a "weapons engineer", John J. Williams, the company offers for sale all sorts of VLF, SHF, VHF, ELF devices and designs for devices to produce a variety of waves. It sells both offensive generators and defensive countermeasures "for research purposes only." It is the only com pany in the world which advertises this kind of expertise. His ads might as well say: "Have Buck Rogers Ray Gun, Will Travel," because Williams will travel to your home with a van full of scanners, meters, measurers and monitors and tell you what your electromagnetic environment looks like 24 hours a day. All it takes is money...

35. HUMAN EM TARGETS

Harlan E. Girard, one of the most level-headed researchers into the lore of mind control has, himself, been an E.M. target for years. He doesn't like to talk about his personal experiences because he'd rather let others tell their stories, but he admits he still has "handlers" and hears disembodied voices. Like so many of the other so-called "Wavies" Girard is no wild-eyed maniac. He is distinguished, affluent and quietly articulate. The brief abstract printed below sets the overview for this chapter and offers a look at the high quality of the human beings reporting this E.M. Target phenomenon. I'll introduce Girard to you, the way I met him, through his paper: OFFENSIVE MICROWAVE WEAPONS: Developments in the Technology of Political Control: The Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) has developed a technology which can make the blind see, the deaf hear, and the lame walk.

It will never be used this way because the technology is central to the domestic policy and foreign ambitions of the United States Government, whether that government is nominally headed by George Herbert Walker Bush, William Jefferson Clinton, or any possible successor. The effects of these microwave weapons are many and varied, but the most insidious couple with the central nervous system to produce effects which might be described as Satanic possession. remote motor control of human locomotion and movement (including speech) has become possible. Remote motor control can be used to murder by suicide, "accident", suffocation, asphyxiation and heart attack, or to simply neutralize the victim by making words come out of his/her mouth which he/she had no intention of speaking... Consequently, a situation is created in which the victim appears to be free to uninformed third parties, but at the same time is incarcerated as securely as if he/she had been confined to a maximum security prison. In this manner, human beings can be and are being sadistically tortured in the privacy of their own homes. The bizarre objective of this treatment is to mentally and physically torture the victim until his/her own personality collapses, and he/she becomes something lower than a slave. In science fiction, this computer driven human being is called a cyborg...

36. A SATANIC-UFO REICH?

Operation Mind Control has brought the mental health profession to the verge of a nervous breakdown. Attacked by cryptocratic peers in such organizations as the Cult Awareness Network and False Memory Syndrome Foundation on the one hand, and grappling with the techniques of psychiatry and psychology which the cryptocracy has leapfrogged with new technology on the other, the profession can only make the mentally tortured comfortable while it looks desperately for a way to heal them. The healing techniques are in the hands of a few. Some of them are "deprogrammer"s who once worked for the cryptocracy, learned the codes, cues, and triggers, and know practically how the classical conditioning technology of the cryptocracy comes to work like hypnosis. The mental health professionals, as we know them, are learning to completely rethink their approaches to healing the victims of the cryptocracy's mind control projects. While insights into what is state-of-the-art mind control today begins with a study of physics, it is still built upon well-tested patterns of brain functions. But, the traditional "let's get in touch with our feelings" kinds of therapy are not especially helpful...

37. THE COM-12 BRIEFING

Almost simultaneous with the founding of the modern cryptocracy and the passing of the National Security Act in 1947, if the rumors are to be believed, there ca me to be a faction working within the secret agencies of government to restore the Constitution. It is claimed that this group has been fighting a resistance from within the cryptocracy against the Nazi group known as the Aquarius Group (AG) which came to cluster around the Gehlen/Nazis taken to the breast of the American intelligence community at the end of World War II. While our sources beg for anonymity, they tell us they have been known as the Guardians of the Eternal Flame or The Rowboat Magicians. To my knowledge, only twice has this group communicated with the general public, then not "officially" but through documents "leaked" or "planted" in the samisdat. Then they called themselves Com-12...

38. PROJECT GREENSTAR?

As early as 1961, advisors to the late President Kennedy recommended that with the threat of nuclear war hanging over the future, civilized nations could no longer risk overt confrontations that would lead to war, since even conventional war could escalate to Armageddon. If war was necessary it would have to be invisible. It was either invisible warfare or peace, and everyone seemed to agree the economy would "suffer" from peace. Without war, it was believed, the economy would falter and depression would be the dividend of peace. Thus the advisors to the president began to think about what might motivate the U.S. economy as well as war did. They came up with several possibilities, the most fantastic of which was to fake an invasion from outer space...

39. FALSE MEMORY SPINDROME

Memory is illusive in some cases, vivid in others. A Roper poll conducted in 1993 suggested that up to 20 million people in North America may have memories of "alien" abductions. In 1994 Dr. Colin Ross said that he heard someone on a CBC radio broadcast say that they had evidence that 750,000 babies had been ritually sacrificed. FBI ritual abuse "debunker" Kenneth Lanning in 1992 said that there were 50,000 missing children in the U.S., which law enforcement reports said people believed were "being murdered in human sacrifices..." Incest and child sexual abuse reached epidemic proportions. The generally accepted statistics in 1993 were as follows: * One out of three girls and one of five boys would be sexually molested before the age of eighteen. * A child was sexually abused every 2 minutes with over 95% of the abusers being someone the child knows and trusts. * For every case reported, there were twenty-five cases that went unreported. * Only 5% of all sexual abuse cases ever went to court. In 50% of those cases the child was returned to the abuser. * Approximately 97% of child prostitutes were incest victims. * Child sexual abuse was a major cause of teenage suicide. * One in ten homes were involved in child sexual abuse. * A high percentage of abused children develop dissociative identity disorders. Then, just as the legions of abused children (now grown to adulthood) were beginning to remember satanic abuse, (the ranks of diagnosed cases of Multiple Personality Disorder had reached 25,000 in the U.S.) and Harvard University's Dr. John Mack was enjoying celebrity as the author of a book on alien abductions, and about twenty percent of those diagnosed as suffering from Multiple Personality Disorder (MPD) were being discovered to have military or intelligence backgrounds, a "robust and adroit" public relations effort was mounted against those who were beginning to remember all sorts of details which related to their abuse as children. Groups were quickly formed to debunk such "nonsense." One was spearheaded by a woman who was herself named by her daughter as a child abuser. Her name was Pamela Freyd and her organization was the False Memory Syndrome Foundation (FMSF) which sprang suddenly up from nowhere...

40. DANGEROUS FREE THINKING

In an undisclosed location, at a secret conference, an emergency panel of five psychiatrists and clinical psychologists met to discuss the alarming data they were re gathering about mind control, satanic ritual abuse, and alien programming from patients diagnosed as suffering from Multiple Personality Disorder (MPD) also called Dissociative Identity Disorder (DID). Due to what is, by the standards of a conservative profession, the controversial content of this conference, and due to the fact that many of the doctors have already received the strongest criticism from their peers and threats on their lives, their identities must remain undisclosed --you'll understand why as you read more. Although delivered in a conversational tone without footnotes and scientific documentation, there is a lot of technical information in this round-table conference which should be of great use to therapists. For the lay reader a study of the works of Milton Erickson or at least NLP would be helpful in explaining what the doctors are talking about. The term "bloodline" refers to the practice of satanic ritual abuse which carries on generation after generation under the belief that after several generations of "conditioning" a "genetic memory" or a "blood memory" carries on the information which has been programmed. This belief in "blood memory" can be found in a variety of secret societies and not just in satanic cults. A person who is of the "bloodline" is the offspring of parents who are in the cult, and often the great, great, great, great grandchildren of cult members. Some survivors have reported that the sophisticated form of programming described in this conversation goes back more than 100 years and has been co-opted by the intelligence agencies only within the past fifty-odd years. Suffice it to know that the assembled doctors, men and women, are among the most qualified in their profession. They are recipients of the top honors, awards and degrees, members of all the most prestigious societies, editors of the most influential journals. Researchers who are aware of the literature may think they are able to identify some of the doctors by the content of their speeches, but it's important that they just ignore any failing on my part as an editor, overlooking any speech patterns which may reveal their identities. For the sake of their safety, and at their request, I have done my best to re-write this transcript --not for content, but for style --so that these doctors can never be identified. After some preliminary remarks the host of the conference, Dr. A, began:

Dr A: I have been looking forward to this exchange for quite some time and I hope we can cut right to the chase and talk specifically about ritual abuse and about mind-control programming and brainwashing --how it's done, how to get on the inside of it.

Dr. B: Until only recently I didn't believe it. I wasn't willing to discuss it with colleagues such as you before, and I'm still not willing to speak about it publicly.

Dr. C: I have done that in small groups and in consultations, but recently I decided that it's time that somebody started doing something about it.

Dr. D: So we're going to talk about specifics today?

Dr. E: At the international congress I heard about these details for the first time. I thought, "how weird." "Interesting but weird."

41. A REPEALING THOUGHT

I watched C-SPAN once again to celebrate the birth of our country. It was the first time I'd watched C-SPAN since the Clinton campaign. I watched just for a couple of synchronistic hours. They were showing programs they'd taped on June 28 and 29. First there was a program called "Project for the Republican Future". On that program the famous "political consultant and pollster, Dr. Frank Luntz told us that his polls showed that the people in the U.S. today believe the quality of life has gone down since the previous generation and, the majority believe that at the next generation will have even a lower standard of living. He said that the polls showed that the average American believed that there was a moral decline in this country. He said, "For the first time in American history, Americans are pessimistic about their future..."

Is the profession of psychiatry beginning to rival the legal profession as having the most useless information, the most know-nothing, corrupt and mercenary practitioners of any profession?

The proof of the psychiatric pudding might be that doctors who once easily earned $300,000 or more a year are having a hard time pulling in $100,000 a year these days. This could be due to the cuts in national health care payments, to the competition that has been created by the lower prices of the HMO's, and/or it could be partly caused by the accumulative effects of the CIA's fifty years of covert manipulation of that profession.

Almost every psychiatrist of the aged generation (especially those who also hold diplomas in psychology) worked for the CIA or another branch of the cryptocracy in one or another dirty project which tested drugs, hypnosis, brain stimulation and a variety of other things on unwitting humans --often employees of the government who'd already signed their lives away. These psychiatrists were hell-bent on seeing that this government chattel would, since they hadn't given their lives for their country, give their minds and souls and too often their children's minds and souls for it.

In any of the professions it's hard to find a whistle blower. Seldom will one lawyer speak ill of a peer. Even harder is it to find justice in the self-regulated profession of health --especially mental health. Doctor's seldom bear witness against other doctors. A good example of the insular attitude which sees regulatory board members looking the other way was the case of Dr. William Jennings Bryan III (WJB3). Great grandson of the great orator William Jennings Bryan, WJB3 was the director of the American Institute of Hypnosis in Los Angeles from the fifties to his death in the seventies. P 1 of 9 Mind Control: (Please be aware mind control is all thoughts to the 5 senses in suggestions 24/7 and not all physical effect of ELF/EMF, but have been nefariously abused secretly before patents.

The Ultimate Brave New World

Technologies for stimulating the brain and controlling the mind can have benefits, but they have a dark side that military and intelligence planners have been exploiting for decades.

Extracted from Nexus Magazine, Volume 13, Number 2
(February - March 2006 & April-May 2006) PO Box 30, Mapleton Qld 4560 Australia.
editor@nexusmagazine.com www.nexusmagazine.com

by Nick Begich, MD 2006 Extracted from: "Controlling the Human Mind 2006

It would also appear possible to create high fidelity speech in the human body, raising the possibility of covert suggestion and psychological direction... Thus, it may be possible to "talk" to selected adversaries in a fashion that would be most disturbing to them.

US Air Force, New World Vistas: Air and Space Power for the 21st Century
The idea that the brain can be made to function at a more efficient and directed level has been the subject of research by scientists, mystics, health practitioners and others for as long as mankind has contemplated such matters. In the last decade, advances in the science of the brain have begun to yield significant results. The results of the research are startling, challenging and, if misused, will be frightening. The certainty to be expected from the research is that it will continue to proceed. The idea that people can be impacted by external signal

